LIBRARY OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN
070.5
ED
v.57
no. 27-52
incompl.

NEWSPAPER

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

THIS ISSUE:—THREE NEWSPAPERS FIGHT FOR PRESS FREEDOM.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1924

SUITE 1117 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Offie at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879
Issued Every Saturday

Vol. 57. No. 27 | NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 29, 1924 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

Chicago People Have More Money

this year than last—and some of it's in the savings banks.

On October 10, 1924, according to official bank statements, savings deposits in Chicago banks amounted to $615,556,000—as against $572,973,080 on September 14th last year.

These accumulations represent in large part the savings of thrifty, intelligent, well paid industrial citizens of Chicago—people who are able to respond to legitimate investment offerings brought to their attention.

The Daily News, with 400,000 circulation—1,200,000 daily readers—reaches these very people, the people who represent the great majority of the financially competent citizens of Chicago and its immediate suburbs.

If you have anything to sell to the people, and wish to approach them most effectually, follow the lead of experienced and successful advertisers in the Chicago field* and advertise in

The Chicago Daily News

FIRST IN CHICAGO

The Daily News, year after year, carries a greater volume of display advertising than any other daily newspaper in Chicago.*

The KEYSTONE STATE is the Key State for National Advertisers

National Advertisers who would open up new trade contacts or increase the volume of trade already established, will find Pennsylvania a state well worth careful consideration.

The chief implement of construction in any line of business is the newspaper. To advertise in Pennsylvania newspapers is to construct business. To construct business is the definite aim of every National Advertiser and Manufacturer.

Pennsylvania newspapers rank very high, not only journalistically but as "pullers" for advertisers. The listed dailies are the leaders that get into the homes of the buying public every day.

The demand for merchandise throughout Pennsylvania is persistent. Goods sell easily and every favorable advantage may be found in this tremendously productive territory.

National Advertisers giving intensive attention to Pennsylvania make wonderful progress. Persistent newspaper advertising promotes and maintains business supremacy.

These listed dailies will give you leadership

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Allentown Call	(M)	29,446	.10	.10
*Allentown Call	(S)	19,425	.10	.10
†††Beaver Falls Tribune	(E)	5,702	.025	.025
†Bloomsburg Press	(M)	7,189	.029	.029
†Carbondale Leader	(E)	5,664	.025	.025
*Chester Times	(E)	15,507	.055	.055
†Coatesville Record	(E)	6,529	.035	.03
*Connellsville Courier	(E)	6,212	.02	.02
*Easton Express	(E)	21,439	.07	.07
Easton Free Press	(E)	12,711	.05	.05
*Erie Times	(E)	26,258	.08	.08
*Harrisburg Telegraph	(E)	40,487	.095	.095
*Oil City Derrick	(M)	6,375	.035	.035
*Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper	(E&M)	16,284	.08	.07
*Scranton Times	(E)	41,414	.12	.11
*Sharon Herald	(E)	6,568	.0285	.0285
*Sunbury Daily Item	(E)	4,564	.025	.021
*Warren Times-Mirron	(E&M)	7,579	.036	.036
†Washington Observer and Reporter	(M&E)	17,358	.06	.06
†West Chester Local News	(E)	10,883	.04	.04
*Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader	(E)	23,775	.08	.05
*Williamsport Sun	(E)	19,766	.07	.07
†York Dispatch	(E)	18,527	.05	.05
†York Gazette and Daily	(M)	17,604	.05	.05

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

0705
ED
V.57
no.28-52 Incomp

EDITORS: Cut this column out and paste it up in a convenient place. These may be purchased as a whole or separately.

CENTRAL PRESS DIRECTORY OF FEATURES

NEWS PICTURES—The rock upon which the service is founded. Many more than 3,000 of them are sent every year to subscribers to the full service of the Central Press, with its established reputation for covering every news event of importance thoroughly and immediately. Central Press works every minute in the year. Just one recent example of its enterprise was its Lorain tornado picture scoop. (See ad in this page.)

NEWS FEATURES—Illustrated stories from staff correspondents in Washington, New York, London, and from a corps of special correspondents all over the United States.

PREPAREDNESS—Central Press prepares its clients in advance for all big approaching news events. "Couldn't be better." That's what editors say about our pre-election, pre-world's series, pre-convention services. Special art is sent out in advance for use on all holidays.

EDITORIAL CARTOONS—The daily editorial cartoons of Jess Cargill are one of the most distinguished features of the Central Press service. Cargill is one of America's greatest cartoonists.

PICTURE PAGE—The daily picture page of Central Press is the outstanding feature of many newspapers. (See ad in this page.)

SPORTS—None better. The graphically illustrated stories of Norman E. Brown, sporting editor of Central Press, covering every phase of the major sports, are augmented by dispatches from our staff of special correspondents. Brown is one of the three or four most widely read sports writers in the United States.

SPORT CARTOONS—By John Sords. The leader in its field. Three columns, three times a week, with stories by Norman E. Brown. (See ad in this page.)

SPORTS DONE BROWN—A daily column of current comment by Norman E. Brown, sporting editor of Central Press.

MORGUE SERVICE—Twice a month. Pictures of persons and places that should be in every newspaper morgue. Central Press' morgue service is the best way to build up your pictorial library to what it should be.

FASHIONS—A daily and twice-a-week feature. Daily illustration with comment by Mme. Lisbeth, fashion authority. Three column illustration, also with up-to-the-minute comment, twice-a-week.

THE BEST OF ADVICE—A daily column for thoughtful people, by Clark Kinnaird. It presents the wisdom of the ages in easily understandable form.

PICTORIAL CROSS WORD PUZZLE FOR CHILDREN—Something entirely new. The pictures around the puzzle help the children solve them. Three times a week. (See ad in this page.)

SERIAL STORIES—Fiction of particular interest to women, released for daily use in instalments of convenient lengths.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS—A daily column by Mrs. Mary Morton. Used by more than 250 newspapers.

WITH THE WOMEN OF TODAY—All of the news of what women the world over are doing, presented in terse and attractive form by Mrs. Lilian Campbell. Illustrated. Three times a week.

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND—A bright and breezy column on the doings of the film players, by Daisy Dean. Illustrated. Three times a week.

DINNER STORIES—A daily column of anecdotes. Illustrated.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS—A popular column of advice to the lovelorn and the friendless, by Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson.

TIMELY VIEWS ON WORLD TOPICS—What leaders of world thought have to say about current events and problems. Daily.

WHO'S WHO IN THE DAY'S NEWS—Brief biographies of men in the public eye. Daily.

SUNSHINE PELLETS—A daily column of remarks on health, full of common sense, by Dr. W. J. Thomson.

POEMS THAT LIVE—The classics of the ages. Daily.

MISCELLANY—Central Press is constantly presenting innovations in its service in the form of features for local tie-ups, weather cartoons, daily Do Your Christmas Shopping Early cartoons, feature headings for newspapers, illustrations for farm and radio pages, etc.

SORDS-BROWN SPORT CARTOONS

The leader in its field. It's just the feature you need to keep your sport pages out of the rut this winter.

The cartoons, drawn by John Sords, with stories by Norman E. Brown, sports editor of Central Press, are assured to Central Press clients exclusively for the next three years by contracts just signed.

The Boston Post, with a number of cartoons of this type to choose from, picked the Sords-Brown feature as the best, and will make it a feature of its sport section from now on.

The Sords-Brown cartoons are three columns wide, and run three times a week.

NEWS MATS and FEATURE STORIES

The Central Press general service is second to none. It pours a wealth of news pictures, illustrated feature stories, cartoons, sports, fashions, preparedness, art, women's and editorial features into more than 325 newspaper offices.

The widely reproduced editorial cartoons of JESS CARGILL are a part of the Central Press general service.

The Paris (France) Times, after looking over all American pictorial services, contracted for the full service of Central Press.

"A Central Press client is 'covered' on everything."

A DELIGHT FOR CHILDREN PICTORIAL CROSS WORD PUZZLE

A big hit. The pictures help the children guess the words. The puzzles are one column in size, making them easy to get in. More than 200 newspapers are on our lists for this feature, but some choice territories are still open. The Cleveland News and the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph are the latest to close for it.

"BEST OF ALL PICTURE PAGES"

This is the tribute paid to the Central Press daily picture page by newspapers who count it their best feature.

Central Press' picture page is used by more newspapers than any other. Within the last two weeks, the editors of three large dailies have cancelled their orders for other pictorial pages in order to contract for the Central Press page.

And with the Central Press page you get the best advertising tie-up opportunity ever offered with a newspaper feature. We supply you with as many extra proofs of the page on glazed paper as you want, at cost. Placed in shop windows and public places, they force attention to your newspaper. The Cleveland Plain Dealer is now using 100 proofs daily; and the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph the same number.

The Central Press Association

CENTRAL PRESS BUILDING CLEVELAND

It takes 16 miles of tooth paste to start the "Big Fellows'" day—

Tooth paste is a mighty small item in the daily budget—but 16 miles of it would be necessary to supply each Bulletin Reader and his family tomorrow morning.

His wife and daughters, being natives of a city famed for feminine charm, spend many times the tooth paste budget for the many kinds of cosmetics, perfumes and toilet articles used by the woman of today.

There's no magic to the Bulletin's circulation—which is one of the largest in America—but there is a reader-acceptance that smoothes the way for those who divert sufficient of their funds to talk to Philadelphians in the paper nearly every one of the half-million Philadelphia families read.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

516,609

Average Daily Net Circulation for Six Months Ending Sept. 31, 1924

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 — NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 29, 1924 — No. 27

Three Newspapers In Court Fight For Freedom of the Press

Baltimore Post, New York Herald Tribune, and Kansas City Journal-Post Indicted for Printing Income Tax Returns—Other Newspaper Indictments Expected—All Welcome Challenge to Represent Public

THREE newspapers have been indicted by Federal Grand Juries on charges of unlawfully "printing and publishing" parts of income tax returns for 1923.

They are the Baltimore Post, the New York Herald Tribune, and the Kansas City Journal-Post.

The Department of Justice in Washington, Nov. 25, declined to say whether other indictments will be returned, because they were then pending before different Federal Grand Juries.

The Post, first to be indicted, will go on trial in Baltimore, Dec. 9, according to the date tentatively fixed this week. Trial dates for the other two newspapers had not been announced when EDITOR & PUBLISHER went to press.

Both the New York Herald-Tribune and the Kansas City Journal-Post were indicted Nov. 25.

The indictment returned against the Kansas City daily differed from those returned against the other two newspapers, in that it represented the only one of the three Federal proceedings thus far indicted which involve individuals in the effort to clear up through court action the conflicting provisions of the revenue act affecting publication of income tax returns.

Walter S. Dickey, owner and publisher of the Journal-Post, and Ralph Ellis, managing editor, were the individuals indicted.

In the case of the New York Herald Tribune, the indictment was brought against the New York Tribune, Inc., which publishes the newspaper. None of its officers were named.

A plea of not guilty will be entered, it was learned, but the newspaper, in an editorial Nov. 26, announced it "will do everything to secure the repeal of the present law" in so far as the publicity section is involved.

"The threat involved in this attempt by Congress to restrain the printing of public records attacks the freedom of the press at its very foundations," the Herald Tribune declared in its editorial.

"The Herald-Tribune will insist to the limit of its power that the freedom of the press, guaranteed under the Constitution, shall not be abridged.

"It welcomes this challenge to represent the public and has full confidence it will succeed in this fight to protect the public from publicity which is improper and to guarantee it news to which it is entitled."

Penalties for violation of the law by individuals are a fine of $1,000, or a year in prison, or both.

In the instances of the Baltimore Post and the New York Herald Tribune, where the corporations are named, only a fine will be imposed if a verdict of guilty is returned.

Ogden Reid, president of New York Tribune, Inc., stated that in its defense it would raise two contentions. The first is that the act of Congress on which the indictment was based did not prohibit the publication of income taxes paid. The second contention is that the statute, even if susceptible of this interpretation, was unconstitutional, for the reason that it violated the freedom of the press.

Attorney General Stone at a conference he had with Washington newspaper correspondents Tuesday, suggested many newspapers appeared not only willing but anxious to be indicted.

"I have received applications for that privilege from any number of newspapers throughout the country," he added smiling.

In the meanwhile the stage is all set for the battle sure to be waged during the forthcoming "short session" of Congress for the repeal of the publicity clause of the revenue law.

Representative Henry W. Watson, of Pennsylvania, one of the ranking Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee, announced this week he would introduce a "repealer" just as soon as Congress got down to business.

Both Senators and Representatives of all parties have been deluged by protests against the publicity clause, and demands for its repeal, and in the first flood of bills upon the opening of the session there are certain to be many proposals for the elimination of the clause.

Mr. Watson, who opposed the clause originally, will offer an amendment to strike out thte words, "together with the amount of the income tax paid by such person," which, he pointed out, would prevent further income tax publicity.

The indictment against the Herald Tribune contains three counts. These charge that the Herald Tribune on Oct. 25 published the income tax payments made by Archer M. Huntington, M. M. Belding and John T. Underwood. None of the taxpayers named complained to the Government, it was learned. The names were picked at random from thousands published.

It was on Oct. 23 that the income tax payments were made public records. In its issue of Oct. 24, the Herald Tribune did not publish any payments.

"In obedience to the law," it announced on that day, "The Herald Tribune is refraining from printing the lists."

On Oct. 25, however, the paper changed its position and published the payments. The explanatory statement accompanying the publication on the 25th read:

> The Herald Tribune yesterday omitted the income tax figures from its news columns in the conviction that they should not be made public and in compliance with the ruling of the Treasury Department. On the legality of that ruling the Attorney General of the United States yesterday declined to give an opinion. In practice collectors of internal revenue are still allowing newspaper reporters access to the income tax returns. The facts, which never should have been made known, have become general news of immediate importance. The Herald Tribune recognized that the Treasury ruling has become ineffective. It therefore prints today the figures made public by the Collectors of Internal Revenue without vouching for their accuracy.

After the indictment had been returned, the Herald Tribune gave out the following editorial as explaining its position in the proceedings:

"This newspaper has been indicted by the local Federal Grand Jury on the charge that it unlawfully published amounts of income taxes paid. The individuals whose taxes were published made no complaint. Their names were selected entirely at random. The indictment was found solely for the purpose of testing the question as to the legality of any such publication. The Herald Tribune welcomes this litigation as an opportunity to assist the Administration in ascertaining the intent of Congress and not less to protect the constitutional right of newspapers to print the news.

"The publicity provisions of the income tax law were perhaps the most egregious blunder of the late lamentable session of Congress and are so ambiguous in terms that the Attorney General publicly declared that the intent of Congress in enacting them could only be 'surmised.' The Herald Tribune believes that this statute on which the indictmnet is founded did not prohibit the publication of the figures.

"But the question of far greater importance is whether the Government has a constitutional right to prohibit the publication of facts made public by the mandatory provisions of an act of Congress. Can Congress say: 'You may talk, but you may not write?' The indictment itself charges that the figures which this newspaper published were 'a public record.' They unquestionably were. By express direction of Congress the Collectors' records were thrown open to inspection by all comers. They were published in newspapers generally throughout the country.

"The threat involved in this attempt by Congress to restrain the printitng of public records attacks the freedom of the press at its very foundations. The First Amendment to the Federal Constitution declares:

"'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petittion the Government for a redress of grievances.'

"It is of the essence of the freedom thereby guaranteed to the press of America that there shall be no governmental suppression of news. If Congress could restrain the press from printing the amount of taxes paid after they had been made accessible to the general public, could it not be urged that it might equally restrain the press from publishing any other public event? In a democracy the newspapers are the eyes and ears of the people. Only a small percentage of the voters may by personal presence head the proceedings in their Legislatures and their courts and examine the records in their collectors' offices. That knowledge there obtainable by the few may be kept from the many by suppression of newspaper publication is an unthinkable proposition.

"The Herald Tribune will do everything it can to secure the repeal of the present law so that the names of the taxpayers and the amounts they pay shall be made available only to Government officials who have duties relating thereto. The Herald Tribune will also insist to the limit of its power that the freedom of the press guaranteed under the Constitution shall not be abridged. It welcomes this challenge to represent the public, and has full confidence that it will succeed in this fight to protect the public from publicity which is improper and to guarantee it news to which it is entitled."

The Attorney General's program does not provide that a half dozen indictments shall be returned on a fixed series of dates. After studying the reports collected by his assistants from virtually every city in the country, Mr. Stone selected those which to his mind present most squarely all the issues involved in the tangled situation.

PRINCIPLE OF TAX PUBLICITY WILL PREVAIL BALTIMORE POST DECLARES

THE Baltimore Post, first newspaper in the country to be indicted for publishing income tax returns, printed the following editorial regarding its position in the issue of Nov. 21:

"The indictment is intended to test the law governing income tax publicity. The Government contends the Post had no right to publish the returns; the Post contends it did. The question will be fought out in the courts.

"Regardless of the outcome of this case, income tax publicity is with us to stay. Attorney-General Stone may obtain a favorable court decision despite the plain purpose of Congress in enacting the publicity law, but this avoidance will be only temporary. Sooner or later the public, now being confused by propaganda, will recognize that the benefits of publicity vastly outweigh the inconveniences and then no Secretary of the Treasury will dare dodge his duty to enforce it.

"The opponents of publicity are endeavoring to make the average citizen feel his privacy is being invaded unnecessarily by the Government. They proceed on the theory the citizen regards his private income as something shameful and a thing to be hidden from his neighbors. For a little while citizens may accept this curious view, but not for long. Ultimately they will realize publicity is their best protection. They will realize that without publicity the Government never will be able to obtain from the rich and the powerful a full and fair share of the costs of government.

"The present propaganda, no doubt, must run its course, but in the end the principle of publicity will prevail, because it is wise and fair."

NEW MAKES NO RECOMMENDATIONS IN ANNUAL POSTAL REPORT

Passes to Congress Responsibility of Deciding How Postal Conditions Shall Be Remedied—Second Class Poundage Up 5.24 Per Cent During Year

By J. BART CAMPBELL

(Washington Correspondent EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

NO recommendations are made by Postmaster General Harry S. New in the exhaustive report of the Postoffice Department on the ascertainment of the cost of carrying and handling the mails which has finally been completed for submission to Congress.

Upon Congress will devolve the responsibility of deciding how the postal conditions described in great detail in the report should be met.

Congress may either formulate its own recommendations on the basis of the report, or it may call upon the Postmaster General to make whatever recommendations he may deem necessary to provide legislative or departmental remedies.

The report was prepared under the personal direction of Joseph Stewart, who holds the dual position of executive assistant to the Postmaster General and special assistant to the Attorney General.

Its completion has been awaited with natural interest by the newspaper and magazine interests, which have been aware for some time it would deal extensively with the moot question of second class postal rates.

Representatives of these interests have conferred with President Coolidge on the subject recently. On one occasion spokesmen for the American Publishers Conference spent considerable time at the White House and with the Postmaster General. On a later occasion officers of the A. N. P. A. expressed to the President views reported to have been at variance with those of certain magazine publishers.

In anticipation of the fresh drive now under way to secure the re-passage of the bill to increase postal employes' wages which President Coolidge vetoed upon the close of the last session of Congress, the suggestion has been advanced in some quarters that the revenue necessary to swell the pay roll of the Postoffice Department might be obtained by raising mail rates, particularly those of the second class.

Such a proposal would be certain to encounter stiff opposition from a number of leaders of Congress, notably Representative Martin B. Madden, of Illinois, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and a candidate for Speaker of the next House, who has already declared himself unalterably opposed to it.

President Coolidge has indicated if the necessary revenue can be found he will not again veto a postal pay increase bill, but how Congress can find this revenue in a way satisfactory to the taxpayers is a question considered likely to lead to a wide divergence of opinion among its members at the forthcoming "short session."

Members of Congress have already been swamped with appeals for the repassage of the postal pay increase bill, over the President's veto, if necessary, and whatever the fate ultimately of the proposed legislation the problem of providing postal employes with increased wages is regarded as bound to be the storm center again of considerable debate in both Senate and House.

It would not be surprising, therefore, if the problem were linked with the report of the Postoffice Department on the ascertainment of mail costs, including the first, second, third and fourth classes, and the special services.

In discussing second-class matter in his latest annual report, the Postmaster General states:

"The mailings of newspapers and periodicals as second-class matter at the pound rates of postage and free in the county of publication during the fiscal year weighed in the aggregate 1,396,516,845 pounds, an increase of 69,569,288 pounds, or 5.24 per cent, over the mailings for the previous year. The postage collected on the mailings at the pound rates amounted to $29,258,254.95, which was an increase of $656,912.75, or 2.29 per cent, as compared with the preceding year.

"The total weight of the advertising portions of publications subject to the zone rates mailed during the year was 513,218,692 pounds, on which $17,626,925.03 was collected, this being an average of 3.43 cents per pound. The reading portions of such publications weighed 604,223,355 pounds and the postage collected thereon amounted to $9,069,132.07. The average rates per pound on second-class matter mailed under the various conditions during the fiscal year 1924 were as follows:

	Average rates per pound 1924 Cents
"All mailings both at the pound rates and free in the county of publication	2.09
Mailings at the pound rates, exclusive of free-in-county matter.	2.2
Mailings of publications whose advertising portions were subject to the zone rates, including both reading and advertising portions, but excluding copies mailed at the cent-a-pound rate and free of postage in the county of publication	2.38
Mailings of publications subject to zone rates, including both the reading and advertising portions and the copies mailed at the cent-a-pound rate and free of postage in county of publication	2.19

"On June 30, 1924, there were 10,010 post offices at which publications were entered as second-class matter. Of the total postage paid at the pound rates 79.67 per cent was collected at the 50 offices having the largest mailings.

"Applications to the number of 4,236 for admission of publications to the second class of mail matter or change in title, frequency of issue or office of publication were received during the year, of which 3,823 were favorably acted upon and 413 denied. During the same period 3,540 publications were discontinued, leaving 28,265 having a second-class status at the close of the year, an increase of 283 as compared with the previous year. There were outstanding at the close of the year 1,120 news agents' permits to mail second-class matter at the pound rates.

"The campaign inaugurated during the previous year to secure the co-operation of publishers of newspapers and periodicals entered as second-class matter in the proper preparation of their publications for mailing has been continued and is resulting in more uniformity in the placing of proper and legible addresses on second-class matter and thereby facilitating and expediting its handling in the mails.

"In foreshadowing the submission to Congress of the special report on mail costs, the Postmaster General reviewed the history of the events in Congress leading up to it, and explained the period from September 21 to October 20, 1923, was selected for the assembling of the data upon which the report is based.

"During the year 1921 questions arose before the Committee on the Postoffice and Post Roads of the House as to the rates for mail matter of the second class, and also as to the adequacy of the rates for mail matter of the fourth class (parcel post)," Mr. New stated. "The fact developed at the hearings that on account of the lack of information upon which to make estimates it was impracticable at that time to make an intelligent comparison between the revenue and the cost of carrying and handling the several classes of mail matter per unit of service. The last official ascertainment had been made by the department in 1909 and carried forward by the Hug Commission in 1911. Much of the secured for this ascertainment was f the special weighing of the mails of 1 authorized by Congress. Since the fi ings of the Hughes Commission tension of estimates had been made the department from time to time but become unsatisfactory because of radical changes in the conditions of service, both with reference to increa expenditures and increases in the wei and volume of the mails as a whole a of particular classes, which had radica affected their relations to each other. F these reasons the Joint Commission Congress on Postal Service agreed w the Postmaster General to undertake t inquiry with the understanding that t work of gathering the statistical da completing their preparation for use, a preparing an estimate of revenue a cost would be conducted by officers of t Post Office Department.

"Most careful consideration was giv to the plans necessary for the collecti of adequate statistics and special stu was bestowed upon the preparation the necessary forms and instructions.

"A statistical period beginning wi September 15, 1922, was first selecte but on account of the conditions of th mail service as well as of busine generally throughout the country, resul ing from the railroad and coal strikes, was found inadvisable to proceed durin that period and a postponement becam necessary. When first undertaken it wa the opinion of the department that th work in the post offices could be done b the regular employees, but because o changed conditions in the service it wa afterwards decided that the work coul not be absorbed by the regular force, bu would require temporary clerks and ad ditional expenditures. Under these cir cumstances the work could not proceed without increasing deficiencies and was therefore suspended awaiting appropriate authority or appropriation by Congress and the facts were reported to the joint commission.

"Thereafter the department submitted to its budget officer an estimate of the appropriation necessary to carry on the work.

"The Joint Postal Commission went out of existence on June 30, 1924, but the Congress included in the appropriation bill for the Post Office Department for that fiscal year an item of $500,000 for the purpose of completing the work of determining the cost to the department of handling the different classes of mail matter.

"Accordingly and in pursuance of that direction, the department resumed work upon the project, employing also the efficiency experts who had been theretofore employed by the Joint Postal Commission to continue their work in co-operation.

"The period from September 21 to October 20, 1923, was selected, during which time the statistics were reported. The postmasters and employees of the Railway Mail Service were especially instructed by a corps of post-office inspectors and officers of the Railway Mail Service, who were called to the department to thoroughly familiarize themselves with the plan, the forms to be used, and the instructions therefor.

"The information so reported has been received, checked, tabulated, arranged, and consolidated for use in the making of the ascertainment of costs and revenues by the specially organized force in the department and such ascertainment has been completed. The whole matter is made the subject of a special report otherwise transmitted to Congress."

PRESS SHOULD DISCARD UGLY "XMAS"

A Bad Word Which Should Be Eliminated from Public Print

By JOHN H. A. KELLY

THE days of the week are known by proper names. Holidays and holydays alike bear names that are pregnant with meaning. They are neither numbered nor lettered in the order of their occurence or for any other reason. There is one outstanding exception. One day—the day of all days in each year—is sadly miscalled, disgracefully designated.

It's up to the newspapers to correct the evil that is crowded into that one little expression:

"XMAS."

It's bad enough for CHRISTMAS to be written Xmas on any flimsy pretext; but now, largely through free use of the abortive abbreviation in newspapers—chiefly in advertising—that day that is so dear to us is being given widespread pronunciation in accordance with its shortened spelling. Christmas Spirit doesn't mean near so much when it is called Ecksmas Spirit.

The "X" is borrowed—or stolen—from the Greek, in which language it is a symbol equivalent to the name of the Saviour.

But how many of us own restaurants or candy kitchens? How many of us would know what it was all about if the menus were printed in Greek instead of English?

X in algebra equals the unknown.

Perhaps it's all right for unbelievers to whom Christ is unknown to call it Xmas; but Christians who prefer to be known as such rather than as Xians will keep Christmas sacredly known by its right name so that none of its significance be lost.

We don't call Easter Sunday Alarm Clock Day because that mechanism is closely identified with rising. We don't call Good Friday Zday because the letter Z occupies a symbolic position in the alphabet.

"Xmas" is no more excusable, no less sacrilegious.

It might be O.K. in shorthand to use X to designate Christ; but as long as we're not writing shorthand, it's neither nice, necessary nor appropriate. Let's forget the lazy, irreverent abbreviate mixture of Grecian symbolism and Saxon suffixism and stick to Christian English.

It's CHRISTMAS we are preparing to celebrate. It hasn't any other name.

DON'T write it "Xmas." DON'T call it Ecksmas.

Newspapers are guilty of the malpractice chiefly by omission rather than commission. It's in the advertising columns that Xmas most frequently appears. But the newspapers can correct that easily enough.

Editors contemplating editorial calls to the public for elimination of the undignified X are cautioned to see that their newspapers in entirety set the example. Don't permit a repetition of what happened last year to one newspaper.

The editor published an editorial calling for the public execution of the X in Xmas. The editorial was very well received by readers. Some of them said so, writing letters of commendation. Advertisements in the next day's issue had Xmas smeared all over every page.

Exeunt X!

Print Tribute to Balmer

An appreciation of the services rendered advertising by the late Thomas Balmer, for many years Western advertising manager of the Curtis Publishing Company, has been issued in booklet form by Frank M. Comrie. The material was first used in the form of an address before the Agate Club of Chicago, of which Mr. Balmer was one of the founders.

PLAYS MAY BE DULL, BUT CRITICS DARE NOT BE

So Declares John Anderson of the New York Evening Post, Gotham's Youngest Dramatic Critic—Drama as Newsy as Murder or Divorce, He Holds

By HARLAN S. MILLER

IT costs a nickel to read the views of Manhattan's youngest critic of the drama, in the oldest of the city's newspapers.

He is John Anderson, founded about 1897; and his verdicts appear in the New York Evening Post, founded 1801, the most expensive of the afternoon dailies.

Yet Fred Stone and other spendthrifts with a fondness for real estate investment have been seen to plank down five cents, cash, for a copy of the Post. Most of Broadway is curious to see what Anderson has to say about the new play.

Anderson is that millionth journalist who rides down Park Row on a white horse, a la fairy tale. He is exemplar for the dreams of city hall reporters from Penobscot to San Pedro. He has out-Gallaghered Richard Harding Davis.

For John Anderson is the young man who came to New York at 22 and now, at 27, gets two seats in the fifth row at every first night performance, yawns at all the wisecracks if the blond beauty in the lower box happens to be looking his way, and waves to Jack Dempsey, that inveterate first nighter, over near the trap drummer.

Then he drinks a cherry phosphate with Flo Ziegfeld, tells Ethel Barrymore her hat is on crooked, slaps Dave Belasco on the back, and strolls to the office to chisel his prejudices in print.

After five years, all told, of newspaper work, he is the enfant terrible of New York criticism. Actors remain awake after a premiere until noon, to read his dicta. The elder heads are apprehensive lest he tweak a dramatic nose to which they kow-tow. Percy Hammond quotes the bright thing young Mr. Anderson said after that second act. And young Mr. Anderson remains unperturbed.

He has reached this high estate by riding two dissimilar, if twin, philosophies.

First, he regards himself, in this role of drama critic, as a diplomat, maintaining a delicate liaison between the stage and the public.

Second, he regards himself, in his role of newspaper writer, as a reporter, describing a murder, a robbery, a cyclone or a divorce, whichever the play figuratively chances to resemble, and describing it interestingly.

"A first night performance," says Anderson, "when it is observed objectively, is as full as news as a railroad disaster or a political convention.

"But a good share of the news about a play that gets into print is, inevitably, the opinions of the critic. These are the major facts.

"To bolster them, however, the critic should tell enough about the play to aid the reader to form his own opinion. Even this, of course, filters through the opinions of the critic."

The critic's most difficult function, Anderson finds, is to maintain at a nicety the balance between indignation against shoddy work and fairness to a spectacle which, though it leaves him cold, may attract audiences.

"Newspaper criticism," says he, "can scarcely persevere daily as the adventures of a soul among the masterpieces.

"None the less, it must not become the adventures of a sorehead in search of the epochal."

On Broadway much more than in road towns, he finds, producers and managers welcome harsh treatment of a weak play, because ordinarily they saw its weakness first.

Anderson might have become a lumber king. His family numbered among them some lumber barons. In fact, when he was born, down at St. Petersburg, Fla., just in time to watch the soldiers march away towards Key West and Cuba, he did not regard them as so much material for drama, but merely as potential users of lumber.

Even in his 'teens, when he attended the correct schools in the South, he did not evince that passionate interest in things dramatic which should preface a critic's career. In fact, when he was given a role in a senior play, as Laertes or Peter Pan or something, he flunked out completely, or almost did, because, according to his estimates he had too many words to learn by heart. As the legend goes, he got even with his successor by reviewing the performance in the campus paper.

Then something happened to lumber; it all burned up, or people were not burning enough of it or using bricks instead, or whatnot, and Anderson, like Sir Walter Scott, rolled up his sleeves to retrieve his fortunes with his pen. Here the war intervened.

Fresh from school, an astonishingly slender young man with powerful eyeglasses, he was bitter for a time because recruiting officers persistently discounted his potential military prowess. Then he went to work for the Post in the exciting days of 1918, when city editors were constantly on the alert lest a submarine appear at the battery and catch them napping.

But there is nothing in the record to indicate that young Anderson, strolling moodily around the Aquarium, looking longingly toward France and Flanders, discerned a U-boat snooping through the fog off Governors Island, scoring a beat and winning the critic's berth. Instead, he won promotion through sheer merit, interviewing Colonel House and Scotch bayonet instructors and canteen workers and landing eventually, a job on the rewrite desk. Occasionally, on busy nights, he reviewed a play.

When Cyrus H. K. Curtis purchased the Post and Merritt Bond became its managing editor, Anderson became the regular critic, early in 1924.

By a quaint coincidence, the Post musters also the oldest metropolitan critic emeritus. He is J. Rankin Towse, that venerable magistrate of the American stage, who has completed a half century or so in its service. They are the Nestor and Ulysses of the theatrical bench, classical and topical consultants, respectively

In a first night throng, Anderson, the most literate Floridan on Broadway, is easily distinguishable from Alexander Woollcott or Heywood Broun, because he occupies only one seat. His wife, who is the Post's art editor, usually sits in the other. Anderson is between six and seven feet tall, a triple-threat man, equally dangerous with epigrams, puns or metaphors in an open field.

As a result his play reviews and his column of theatre chat, called "Two on the Aisle," are among the most readable theatrical prose in the big city. His age, or lack of it, is his most sensitive point; he usually calls it "A little under thirty."

Now to let the precocious young man tell his theories himself, so that Stark Young and Kenneth MacGowan and other graybeards may read as they run.

"A drama critic," says he, "as any other reporter, must get the facts.

"Elsewhere these are reasonably ascertainable. But in the theatre, the facts, most of them, are the crystallizations in the reviewer's mind.

"Although these may be stigmatized as opinions, the only safe thing to do is to report them.

"But while a reviewer must give, in the main, his opinions, he needn't make everybody sore when he does it. When a show is bad, the management usually knows it and respects a reviewer for saying so.

"Nobody resents a panning, even in the smaller cities, unless it is unfair or malicious, and then, of course, they do so rightly.

"Naturally, the reporter ought to let the play speak for itself. In other words he is, as I see it, obligated to tell enough about it to let the intelligent reader form an independent opinion if he feels like it. Often enough a play which arouses no sympathy in the reviewer, he realizes clearly enough, has qualities which will commend it to many playgoers. He can honestly enough confess his dislikes and still own the qualities that may be alluring to ticket buyers.

"But this is no loop-hole through which the reviewer can side-step his more brutal duties, and does not justify any quarter for cheapness or vulgarity. It is as much his job to warn his readers against worthless plays as it is to indicate the deserving entertainments.

"To sum up: The critic must keep his temper; he mustn't get angry. There is temptation enough, heaven knows, to throw things at some of the productions that clutter the stages; but in saner moments one knows that these aren't worth losing your temper over.

"That expenditure is justifiable only when a fine talent is wasted or when a great art stoops to something mean and cheap.

"I call play reviewers reporters, because the play is news, and extremely important news. Nearly everyone goes to the theatre, and everyone talks about it. It is make-believe, as much a part of the life of grown-ups as play is a part of the life of a child. The theatre is the grown-up's box of toys.

"But the things that happen in this world of imagination are as real to many people as the happenings of the front page, in the world of subway accidents, holdups and murders.

"This has been more clearly realized recently; both newspapers and readers accent the view that what happens in the stage ought to form part of the day's news, and not be treated as a remote, other-worldly phenomenon.

"And so the reviewer must write for the casual reader, too; he must compete with the divorces and cross-word puzzles; the play may be dull but the reviewer dare not be.

"There must be no such thing as kindness to weak shows. Not even kindness will save a weak show. Rarely a bad show will outlive a good one; but the weak fall by the wayside."

"The critic must keep his temper; he mustn't get angry. Losing your temper is justifiable only when a fine talent is wasted, or when great art stoops to something mean and cheap."

* * *

"A drama critic, like any other reporter, must get the facts. Elsewhere they are easily ascertainable, but in the theater most of them are the crystallizations of in the reviewer's mind."

* * *

"Nobody resents a panning, even in the smaller cities, unless it is unfair or malicious."

* * *

"The reviewer must write for the casual reader, too; he must compete with the divorces and cross word puzzles; the play may be dull but he dare not be."

Picture Dailies Use Much Copper

Consumption of copper has increased proportionately with the inception and wide circulation of the illustrated tabloid newspapers in this country, according to a survey just completed by the Copper and Brass Research Association, which shows that more than 4,000,000 pounds of copper are consumed annually in the photoengraving and electrotyping industries. At the present rate of consumption, between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 pounds are used each year in the manufacture of photoengravings, while more than 1,300,000 pounds go into the making of electrotypes. This is the first complete survey the association has made, the facts of the increase being determined from a partial report made two years ago.

Ads Boost Football Spirit

Newspaper advertising, and plenty of it, was used to "buck up" the spirit of the University of Wisconsin football team previous to their contest with Chicago last Saturday. One hundred and sixteen Madison business firms purchased two double trucks in the Nov. 20 issue of the Madison Wisconsin State Journal, to impress the team with the fact that they were not a party to adverse criticism launched at the team and the coach. "Go Get Chicago" was the streamer caption to the advertisements, which were printed in red. "Win or lose we are for you" was the theme of the text. The pages were signed by the merchants. Incidentally, Wisconsin tied Chicago.

Resignation Causes A. P. Shifts

R. J. Dustman, chief of the Associated Press bureau at Columbus, O., has resigned effective Dec. 1, causing many changes throughout the Central Division. W. J. Reck, correspondent at Des Moines, Ia., replaces Dustman. J. A. Rallings, correspondent at Omaha, Neb., will replace Reck in Des Moines, P. R. Mickelson, Fargo, N. D., correspondent, being transferred to Omaha, with Richard L. Spry of Lincoln going to Fargo. Stuart B. Goodfellow will be sent from the A. P. Chicago office to succeed Spry at Lincoln, his place being taken by C. W. Grange, night wire editor at Omaha. F. R. Robertson, night pony editor at Oklahoma City, will succeed Grange.

A. P. LAWYERS CONSIDER POSSIBLE BROADCASTING TEST CASE

Attorney Cannon Discloses the Matter Is Under Advisement —Association Officials Decline to Issue Statement —Executive Committee Meets

LAWYERS of the Associated Press have under advisement a possible test case which may develop between a member newspaper and the press association, regarding alleged violation of A. P. by laws to broadcast election returns.

This was learned this week from William C. Cannon, member of the law firm of Stetson, Jennings, Russell & Davis, the A. P. attorneys. Mr. Cannon is the lawyer in charge of this particular legal question.

He declined to state any details, however, referring all questions to Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the Associated Press.

"Nothing definite has been done about the matter yet," Mr. Cannon declared.

When EDITOR & PUBLISHER called on Mr. Martin, he refused to discuss Mr. Cannon's announcement.

The possibility of a test case is the latest development in the A. P.'s radio news broadcasting problem and became public following a meeting of the Associated Press executive committee held at New York headquarters, Nov. 24.

At this meeting the evident step appeared to be that all members suspected of violating the A. P. by-laws with respect to broadcasting the recent election returns would be summoned before the association's board of directors for hearing Jan. 28.

Frank B. Noyes, Washington Star, president, Melville E. Stone, secretary, and Frederick Roy Martin, assistant secretary and general manager, all declined to issue statements when the meeting adjourned.

Although details of their deliberations were not divulged, it was learned that radio was brought under close scrutiny of executive committee members.

The entire matter, it was said, was placed in the hands of the board of directors who will treat the radio cases along with other alleged violations of rules at their forthcoming meeting the first of next year.

According to the Associated Press by-laws it is the duty of the secretary to cite any member suspected of violating an association ruling to appear before the board of directors, who will act as judges of their respective cases.

If it is proved that the member newspapers under suspicion were guilty of broadcasting A. P. returns, the board of directors may take disciplinary action.

Precedent of punishment for the use of A. P. news for broadcasting was established at the last meeting of the A. P. directors, when the Chicago Daily News and the Boston Herald were fined $100 each for putting news of the return of the world flyers to their respective cities on the air.

Two men, not publishers or A. P. members, whose identity or business was not revealed attended the executive committee meeting. They insisted upon keeping their names and mission secret, when questioned by EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

C. P. J. Mooney, editor of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, second vice-president, was the only official absent at the meeting, and Elbert H. Baker, of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, was the only executive committee member who failed to attend.

Those attending in addition to Mr. Noyes, Mr. Stone and Mr. Martin were E. H. Butler, of the Buffalo News, first vice-president; J. R. Youatt, treasurer; Clark Howell, Atlanta Constitution; Charles Hopkins Clark, Hartford Courant; Adolph S. Ochs, New York Times; Robert McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin; and E. Lansing Ray, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, all members of the executive committee; and Kent Cooper and Jackson S. Elliott, assistant general managers. B. H. Anthony, of the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard, a member of the board of directors, also was present.

RADIO FIRED AS REPORTER

Tex Rickard Won't Allow Bouts to Be Broadcast

Radio will no longer vie with newspapers as reporter of fights, so far as Tex Rickard is concerned, it was learned this week, when Madison Square Garden officials declared they would ban radio broadcasting of boxing bouts.

The officials said radio listeners had not paid for support of the sport, that broadcasting had kept down attendance.

Title boxing matches for the past three years have been fought before microphones, the thud of gloves and shouts of fans being plainly distinguishable.

Expert critics have described the contests, and owners of receiving sets, wishing to tune in, have been given everything except the actual view of the combatants.

Baseball contests, especially the world series, and the leading football games have been also played on the air, but apparently attendance has not suffered.

20,000 Chicago Tribune Books Sold

The Public Service Bureau of the Chicago Tribune during 1924 has sold more than 20,000 copies of ten different books and booklets published by the Tribune or written about Tribune characters. The most popular booklet is the "Line Book," of Richard Henry Little's, a small volume of contributions to his morning column. Fifty thousand of these have been sold. "Fish and Fishing" by Bob Becker, sports writer, enjoys second sale with 2,673.

To Build Hearst Hall Soon

Construction work on Hearst Hall, University of California, Berkeley, Cal., planned as a memorial to the late Phoebe Apperson Hearst, will commence within four weeks, it was announced Nov. 24, at Berkeley. William Randolph Hearst, son of the late benefactress of the university, has informed President W. W. Campbell that he has completed a plan for financing a $1,000,000 structure instead of a $350,000 building as originally proposed. Hearst Hall will be the women's gymnasium and center of women's activities at the university.

Adolph Ochs Makes $100,000 Gift

Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, has given $100,000 to the Mizpah Temple of Chattanooga, Tenn., for the purpose of enlarging or rebuilding the temple. The gift was made in memory of Mr. Och's father, the late Julius Ochs, who acted as volunteer minister of the Mizpah congregation for many years and caused its first building to be erected.

Publish 24-Page Gravure Section

The Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier published an art gravure edition Sunday, Nov. 16, carrying three 8-page gravure sections.

VIRGINIA EDITORS MEI TO BOOST STATE

Representatives of Daily Newspap Convene in Richmond With Sta Chamber of Commerce Officials —Pledge Their Support

Editors representing the principal V ginia daily newspapers will support work of the Virginia State Chamber Commerce in its five-year campaign the betterment of Virginia. This was forth in resolutions adopted at Richmo Monday, by the publishers, meeting joint session with the directors of State Chamber at their request, to wo out plans for joint co-operation betwe the two organizations.

Col. Le Roy Hodges, managing direct of the State Chamber, outlined plans f the development of Virginia's commerc agriculture, industry, and a fair, no political study of State, city and coun government, and of taxation in Virgini

In formal resolutions the publishe agreed to support on every opportuni this program, editorially, and the Vi ginia Press Association will be asked f similar co-operation by the editors. Co W. S. Copeland, publisher of the New port News-Press and Times-Herald, wa named chairman of the committee to see the co-operation of the press body at i meeting in Charlottesville in January.

Details of the manner in which th "five-five" program of the State Chambe can be presented to the public properl will be worked out by a committee head ed by Col. H. L. Opie, of Staunton, wh was re-elected chairman of the daily pub lishers group, and by Junius P. Fishburn Jr., who was re-elected secretary.

PLEDGE VIRGINIA DAILIES TO STATE IMPROVEMENT

The above Virginia newspaper men conferred in Richmond Monday with the State Chamber of Commerce to devise plans for the betterment of Virginia. They are from left to right, front row: C. P. Hasbrook, representing the Richmond Times-Dispatch, Ledger Dispatch, Index-Progress and Portsmouth Star; Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, the News Leader; Colonel C. E. Greene, Clifton Forge Review; Colonel H. L. Opie, Staunton Leader and News-Leader; B. E. Berry, representing the Harrisonburg News-Record and Winchester Star; and Col. Richard F. Beirne, Covington Virginian.

Second row: Louis Jaffe (handkerchief in corner of pocket), Virginian Pilot; Junius P. Fishburn, of the Roanoke Times and World-News; Carter Glass, Jr., Lynchburg News and Lynchburg Advance; Lee Long, of Dante, vice-president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Third row: A. P. Rowe, Fredericksburg Star and Free Lance; Dr. Joseph H. Smith, of Petersburg, president, State Chamber of Commerce; A. B. Carrington, of Danville, vice-president, State Chamber of Commerce; Colonel W. S. Copeland, Newport News Press and Times-Herald.

Above third row, from left to right, are: Dan Wine, secretary, Shenandoah Valley, Inc.; R. F. Nelson, State Chamber publicity director; C. S. Anderson, State Chamber director of Hot Springs; H. H. Harris; State Chamber vice-president of Lynchburg; Colonel LeRoy Hodges, managing director, State Chamber; J. L. Fray, of Culpeper; George H. Judd, vice-president of the Northern Virginia Park Association, of Washington; D. B. Ryland, State Chamber secretary, and Major Allen Potts, of the Richmond News Leader.

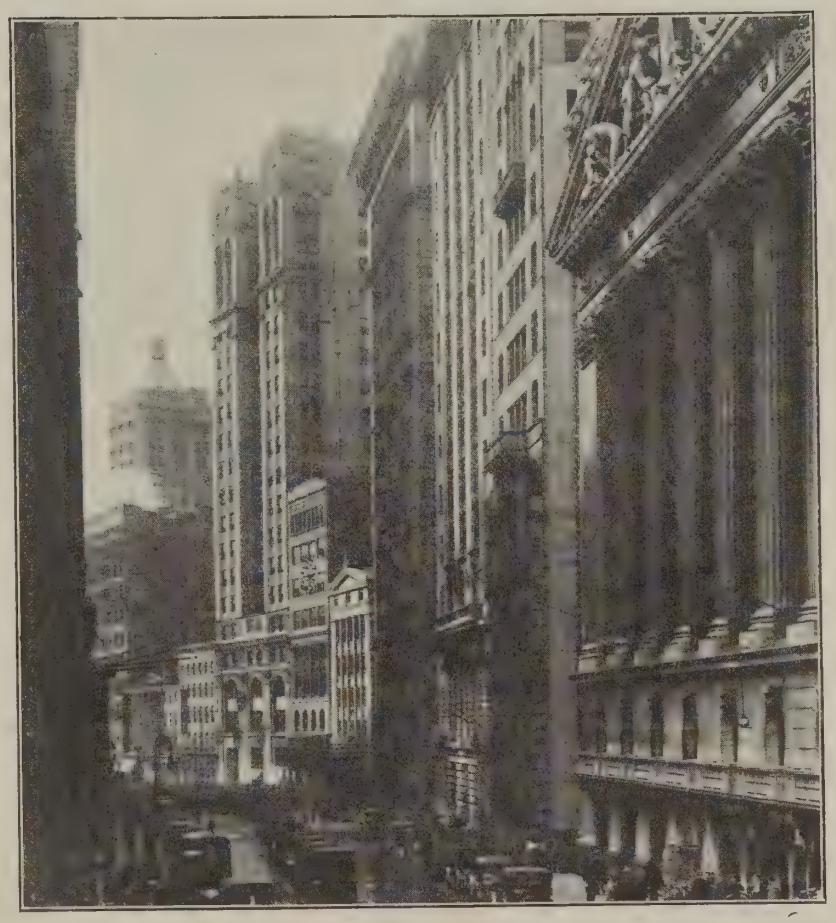
GETTING THE REAL NEWS OF WALL STREET

Business Secrets Closely Guarded In Country's Financial Center, Where News "Leaks" May Mean Huge Losses—Reporters Must Be "Good Mixers" And Have a Sound Economic Sense—Technique of Covering the "Street" Told

By BRUCE GOULD

WALL STREET dislikes to divulge its secrets, because its "news" can be translated, almost invariably, into money. Time is the essence of many of the most gainful operations in the Street. The "insiders" want the public to remain in happy ignorance until they have skimmed off the cream. A "leak" to the financial reporter, which results in the premature publication of plans for a new financial enterprise, a railroad consolidation, or an industrial merger, may cause the engineers of the deal to lose millions of dollars.

Consequently, the door often is barred and closely guarded against the penetrating nose of the inquiring reporter. Much, indeed, of the real news of Wall Street never reaches the financial pages. The substantial amount that does appear in the newspaper columns is obtained by some reporter's winning the confidence of a director, president of a company, broker, or banker "in the know." Do not understand that the reporter violates such confidence. Like the political reporter, the financial man often knows more that he publishes; because he prints only what is told him for release.



"Make friends!" says the veteran Wall Street reporter when you ask him how to go about getting the news of Wall Street. "Every friend means a story; every important friend means a 'beat.'"

The financial reporter, to really fill his job, should combine the qualities of a "good mixer," economic expert, financier, judge of men and their intentions, political prophet, and first class newspaper man. He ought to have the knack of knowing where the news will happen; and being on the spot first. Foresight, judgment, and intuition are his guides.

Financial editors employ various methods of obtaining news by means of the back door, when the front door is closed to their men. The most popular method is the employment of a "gossip man," who writes, under various heads, what is known in the Street as a "gossip column." If the reporter is a good "gossip man," the reader of the paper will find in his column the real "meat" of the news which formally makes its appearance, under the official approval, weeks and perhaps months later. The "gossip man" may not know how to write the King's English; he may not know the difference between a one-alarm fire and a four-alarm front page spread; he may not know how to write a news story; but he knows a long list of important persons in Wall Street who trust him and supply him with information long before the public would normally learn it. In a sense, all financial reporters are "gossip men." They would fail to get the news if they were not.

In a general way, every Wall Street reporter is a specalist. He must of necessity be intimately acquainted with his field in order to deliver full value to the newspaper. A few men, gifted with greater comprehension and perspective than their fellow workers, manage to include the entire financial world in their survey. But the names of these men could be listed in a very short galley. It is not too much, perhaps, to say that the average financial editor knows less about his men's specialty than do the men themselves. Indeed, it would be possible for him to have but the haziest idea about the reporter's field without detriment to the worth of the financial pages, as long as his specialists functioned properly.

In the financial office of a metropolitan newspaper will be found reporters who cover the Stock Exchanges, the New York Stock Exchange, the Consolidated Exchange, and the Curb Market; the bond field; the banks, the Produce Exchange; the Cotton Exchange; the Coffee and Sugar Exchange; railroads, industrials; oil companies; shipping companies; foreign exchange, and unlisted markets. Depending on the size of the staff, the list can be added to at will or cut down to a bare minimum of half a dozen versatile and well-trained financial reporters who range over the entire field.

Miles of ticker tape carry to New York newspaper offices the results of Bull and Bear operations on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange (right), located at Broad and Wall streets, in the heart of the financial district. The scene is looking down Broad street from Wall.

The news gathered by these reporters is supplemented by the two financial news ticker services in Wall street. The financial offices rely on the ticker services to supply them with all routine news just as the city desk depends upon its press services for all but the exceptional stories. Reporters in the Street attain reputations as "steel men," "oil men," "bank men," "gossip men," "railroad men," "grain men," "cotton men." It merely indicates that the reporter, theoretically at least, knows all about a particular financial field, and knows all the important men in the Street who control operations in his field.

When a story "breaks" for the city staff, the normal action of the city editor is to send a staff reporter to the scene of action. If the staff man has no bad luck, he shortly returns with the facts gathered where the news happened. In the financial office, the situation is quite often entirely reversed.

The first intimation that there is a story in a certain company often appears in the fluctuations of prices registered on the stock ticker. When the price of a stock rises or drops, there is some reason for it. The reason is usually "news." If the fluctuation is wide, either up or down, the news is probably big. The financial editor assigns a reporter to get the story. Usually, the last place he would suggest the reporter to go would be to the offices of the company whose stock is fluctuating. He would probably be unwelcome there.

That is where the "friend" comes in. Someone, among the list of the reporter's acquaintances, knows, for instance, why United States Pipe has risen $10 a share in two days. This friend may be a broker, a banker, a director in a rival company, a professional stock speculator. But he knows most of the facts, and the reporter's general information and knowledge of his field can piece out the rest. In this manner the story is constructed, verified, and printed without perhaps so much as attempting to get the information from the source to which the city staff man would directly go.

An exaggerated example of the type of story suggested by the ticker tape was that of the famous "Stutz Corner" in 1920. Early in the year it became apparent that the stock was in demand. Shares were limited. The stock began a steady rise, and then started to soar in increasingly higher flights. It happened that Tracy Sutliff, formerly financial editor in the New York Herald, and now of the New York Herald-Tribune, broke the story of the "corner." He discovered the "corner," because the ticker told him it was there, and his "friends" supplied him the additional information he needed. Three days after his beat occurred, on March 31, 1920, the New York Stock Exchange suspended trading in the stock, after it has risen from $100 to $391 a share. On the Curb Market, prices for the stock later rose as from $100 to $391 a share.

The job of the financial reporter is not alone to get the news as it comes up day by day, but to move about in the financial field he covers, and be "a good mixer." Sooner or later, every man he meets in the Street will be just the man who can furnish him with information he desires. The reporter must know him well enough so that the news will be furnished on demand, or even, in rarer cases, voluntarily divulged. It is important for him to know where large industrial companies do their banking. Often a banker wishes facts known which the president of a company would not willingly make public, and vice versa. He ought to know what financial groups in the Street are friendly, and what financial groups are constantly warring. It often happens that an enemy will make himself more closely acquainted with the affairs of a rival than would a friend. It behooves the reporter to know who the enemy is when the rival and his friend prove close-mouthed.

Wall Street is said to be the only place where a newspaper man never dies of poverty. If some philanthropist ever does establish a home for aged and decrepit journalists, there will be few inmates who "mind the time they were reporting in Wall Street." The longer a financial reporter stays in Wall Street the greater his value. What is perhaps more important, the greater his experience the more opportunity is presented him legitimately to turn his knowledge into money on the Stock Exchange. Opportunity knocks, not once, but innumerable times. Sooner or later he opens the door.

The mechanical news-gathering in Wall Street is not less interesting than the human side. One of the amazing achievements is the publishing of the sale of stocks and bonds on the Stock Exchange almost as soon as the Exchange closes at 3 o'clock.

Let us follow a stock from the Stock Exchange to a New York newspaper. On the floor of the Exchange, at the corner of Wall and Broad streets, just opposite the great banking house of Morgan, two brokers of the hundreds on the floor get together to trade in a certain stock. One buys and one sells. Standing beside the brokers is an attendant, who notes down the fact that United States Pipe sold at 75. On the transaction 300 shares were sold. He hands the notation to a messenger boy, who takes the slip to one of the four ticker telegraph operators on the floor. The operator transmits the message to the tape. Let us say that the abbreviation for United States Pipe is UP. There is a ticker in the stock room of the newspaper uptown. The sale appears on the tape there, thus: UP 3:75. Each compositor in the stock room handles a certain list of stocks. The compositor handling UP in the stock table adds 300 to the total number of shares sold; changes the final prices of the stock to 75; changes the high or low price if necessary, and takes the next quotation off the tape. Stock prices are usually set by hand, and sufficient compositors are put on the job so that at all times the compositors are even with the tape. When the market closes at 3:00 o'clock, therefore, all that is required is that the type be set in the form, the form justified and moved on to the stereotypers. A few minutes later the paper is on the street.

Most of the other tables on the financial pages are set by hand, because the majority of them depend on the closing prices of the particular market for their worth. Those that do not are set on the linotype. However, they are of small size and the main body of the tables remain the same. Only a few changes in figures, requiring less than a minute, are necessary. These changes are made the special duty of a designated compositor. By arrangement with the Wall Street reporter, the final prices are telephoned to the compositor at a stated time.

It must be said that at the present time, there is a decided change for the better in the matter of newsgathering in Wall Street, from the standpoint of the newspaper and the reporter. More and more widely in the financial district, the attitude is being taken that the public is entitled to know what is happening. There are several reasons for this change in attitude, which is making the job of the Wall Street reporter not only easier, but more pleasant.

The outstanding one, perhaps, is that the public is becoming, in astonishingly increasing numbers, stockholders in all the largest and most powerful corporations. Many industrial companies devote large sums in campaigns to increase the number of shareholders. Newspapers aid them in this campaign by bringing the company to the attention of prospective stockholders. They wish the newspaper to play up the news of their company attractively, and so they become less secretive. In brief, the newspaper is found to be useful, and being so, is cultivated.

Another reason, which particularly relates to the railroads, is the fact that newspapers wield a tremendous influence with the public. The public in turn votes for the legislators, who make the laws which regulate the railroads and business generally. By taking the newspaper into its confidence, a better understanding of the business situation is gained by both public and business. Railroads especially, and business in general, are coming to take this fact into consideration. It would be too much to say, perhaps, that the sight of a newspaper man is cause for rejoicing, but he is tolerated in many places where formerly he was anathema.

The financial reporter often finds the job of getting the news most difficult when the company about which the story centers employs a "press agent." If the gentleman in question calls himself a "director of publicity," the difficulty is augmented. If the title is made so august as that of "public relations counsel," the reporter utterly despairs. Quite often this gentleman will offer the unprintable, though true, information that he "used to be a newspaper man himself." In case he does, the wise reporter walks out of the door. He is not going to get his story from that man. The best he may obtain will be a "statement"; a dry evasion of all questions asked. The reason for this is that the publicity man is over cautious; is not always himself entirely aware of the latest developments, and wishes to save himself from blundering. Despite the fact that he maintains a historical connection with the newspaper world, he often doesn't know what constitutes a story. Enough has, perhaps, been said in disparagement of the publicity man. There are many bright and shining exceptions, who do everything possible to aid the financial reporter. Curiously enough, these exceptions, as a rule, really were newspaper men, and good ones.

But despite this slowly increasing tendency to take the newspaper man into consideration, on the basis that the public should be both informed and pleased, instead of ignored and damned, the task of getting the news in Wall Street still requires an entirely different technique from that employed in any other department of the paper. Except for the sake of propaganda, and I have chosen to ignore that, Wall Street would prefer to have the news kept out of the newspapers.

There is plenty of pressure, monetary and otherwise, brought to bear on the reporter by unscrupulous business men, shady financial operators, and tipsters, to influence the financial reporter into printing propaganda. Because the sources of news are often known only to the reporter, himself, he is peculiarly open to bribing. Moreover, the ethics of the city room do not necessarily obtain in the financial field. The financial reporter, more often than not, comes from the outside into the newspaper world, and may never see a city room. In a few cases, doubtless, the reporter does sell out. Money talks in Wall Street, where it has no voice at all in the city room. Such a man, however, is soon spotted.

But the important news, the reporter has to unearth with patient investigation. Specialized knowledge, deduction from slight phenomena, alertness to changes in the financial atmosphere, interpretation of political and social events in the light of their effect on the Street, aid him. But, above all, he must have "good friends."

TOLEDO REALTOR GETTING RESULTS WITH HALF-PAGE SCHEDULE DAILY

George B. Ricaby Startles Profession by Launching Day-By-Day Campaign—Says Average Real Estate Ads Placed Haphazardly

By KARL W. KESSLER

WHEN George B. Ricaby, Toledo and Buffalo realtor, was 19 years old, he was owner and editor of the Galien (Mich.) Advocate. Michigan hailed him as its youngest editor.

GEORGE B. RICABY

After stirring the rising Galien Metropolis with the strong editorials that only youth is bold enough to print (and which the average editorial writer only thinks about writing) the young Mr. Ricaby decided that there was no reward to journalism. He made this decision when his biggest advertiser offered him forty bushels of potatoes in settlement of a bill.

And so Mr. Ricaby, the youngest editor in Michigan, pulled stakes. And the newspaper world lost what the editor's successor called "a young man with great talent."

All that happened 21 years ago.

Today Ricaby is at the head of two of the largest and most aggressive real estate organizations in the country and what he learned while "Michigan's youngest editor" has paid him dividends, according to his own confession, far beyond his expectations.

"I learned that newspaper advertising actually paid in tangible results," Ricaby said. "And I believe that when a business man learns that, he is in a fair way to make a success of his business."

Two months ago Ricaby startled the real estate profession by launching into daily newspaper advertising, using two Toledo newspapers, the Toledo Blade and the Times. Even the newspapers were jarred when Ricaby's advertising agency (he uses an agency, by the way, and has ever since he started in business, despite the fact that he flings a mean editorial pen) announced the program.

"How long will the campaign run—four weeks?" Ricaby was asked in an interview with advertising managers.

"It isn't a campaign," Ricaby replied, "it's just a new advertising schedule. I imagine that it may run forever—because I'm sure that it will pay."

"About 20 inches a day, I suppose?" one advertising manager queried.

"No, a half page every day," Ricaby returned. "Enough space to give us a chance to say something intelligently."

And that's about all there was to it—despite the fact that for the first time in history, a real estate operator sat down and looked his business square in the face.

"We real estate men have been pikers with newspaper space," Ricaby told the writer late one evening. "We haven't figured our appropriation on anything but guess. We've splashed away in full pages when we felt we had a message, and then we've closed up and let things run themselves. I believe that everybody is interested in real estate. People are interested in homes. Business men are interested in investments. On more than one occasion we have been called 'The Department Store of Real Estate.' And why not? There are ten or more departments here, just as there are departments in any big store. In volume of business we run far ahead of the average big department store. We are manufacturers, taking crude, undeveloped land and turning it into home sites—into cities.

"My belief is that everybody will read intelligently prepared real estate advertisements and I believe such advertisements can be made interesting and appealing enough to command daily attention. Let's try it."

The writer happens to be at the head of the advertising agency that has handled the Ricaby advertising for six years. He has seen Ricaby spend great sums of money in the newspapers—and he has seen amazing results. In the two months that the Ricaby company has been appearing daily before the Toledo public in half-page advertisements, absolute domination of this territory has come to the organization.

"I am convinced that this advertising is getting results," Ricaby said in a conference of department heads a few days ago. "Every department feels the power of this new plan and every department is benefitting. It is not unlikely that we will increase the space a little later, and I do not want you to feel that you are necessarily limited to a half page now. When you have something to say, say it. Advertising, intelligently done, is an investment as safe as real estate!"

The precedent established by Ricaby, whose Toledo and Buffalo organizations have smashed one real estate sales record after another, and which include 300 of the best trained men and women in the profession, is of great interest to newspapers generally, since it opens a new field of exploitation.

To the advertising manager Ricaby makes these points:

Real estate operators have never figured their advertising appropriations on a proper basis. They have advertised in a "hit-or-miss" fashion, without a definite plan of procedure. Such advertising, while effective at the time, loses its punch as quickly as the sound has disappeared.

Real estate is closer to the general public than the movies, automobiles, politics or radio. Every man, woman and child is interested in the home—every one wants to make money, Real estate provides the home—and the profits which often run into fortunes.

Through newspaper advertising the realtor proves his right to serve the public. His "copy" indicates his knowledge of the community.

The real estate business has been stabilized—it is permanent. In order to create a 12-month in the year market, it must do as the merchant did years ago when he started to advertise and break down "seasonable" spurts.

Here are some of the Ricaby achievements, helped to materialization through generous use of full and double-page newspaper advertisements:

In 22 days of June, 1924, the Toledo organization sold $620,000 worth of homesites in a new development.

In seven days completely sold out a homesite.

In less than six weeks sold out another homesite for $768,000.

In one month (May, 1924) piled up a business in excess of $2,000,000.

Lambasted the life out of a "mental business depression" that was threatening business and industry and created a new atmosphere throughout the city.

Took the bull by the horns and showed Toledo that, when frowns and long faces were most in evidence, a $40,000,000 BUILDING PROGRAM WAS UNDER WAY, proof of fundamental prosperity.

And a dozen cases of equal significance.

The Ricaby advertisements are laid out six columns by fifteen and one-half inches. They carry a 6-column streamer over an editorial signed by Ricaby. In this editorial Ricaby discusses any subject in which there is general interest. A new skyscraper is erected—and he points to the confidence of business men in the city. The railroads announce a $20,000,000 building program for the city, and he points out what the railroads mean to Toledo. Every day an editorial of widest interest!

Then the departments follow. Department heads fight for space, just as they do in department stores. Sub-divisions residents, downtown business property bonds, investments, loans, insurance, leases property management, etc. In addition officers of the Ricaby company operate a string of apartment buildings in which there are public dining rooms. Here again the appeal to the general public.

Ricaby, briefly, believes in newspaper advertising because it pays. He believes in TOO MUCH space rather than TOO LITTLE. And he believes in using space regularly.

"No matter how loud the explosion people remember it only until the sound disappears," he says.

CRESSY REORGANIZES BRIDGEPORT TIMES

Becomes President of Publishing Company Succeeding Wilson—Blanche Cressy, His Wife, Is Secretary —Details of Transfer Divulged

The Times Publishing Company publishers of the Bridgeport Times, under the new management of Kendall B. Cressy, has reorganized. Mr. Cressy becomes president, to succeed Lynn W. Wilson, now directing managing editor of the Bridgeport Star. He succeeds John Rose as treasurer.

The secretary is Mrs. Blanche G. Cressy, wife of the new business manager who succeeds James L. McGovern. The directors are Cressy, Mrs. Cressy and Lillian F. Clark, Cressy's secretary. Wilson and McGovern are thus off the directorate. McGovern is the new managing editor.

In a story relating the processes by which these changes were accomplished published in the Star, it was stated that Wilson withdrew from the meeting of stockholders when he saw what was to transpire. The Star says further that the stock is now held as follows: Wilson 499 shares; McGovern, 496 shares; Kendall B. Cressy, Blanche G. Cressy and Lillian F. Clark, one share each; Thomas M. Cullinan, lawyer, two shares. It cites the par value of the shares as $100.

The Times has been considerably livened up in make-up since the advent of Cressy. The use of signed stories on page one is part of the change. The editorial page has been given a marked new dress. Its upper half deals with straight editorials; its lower part is devoted to digests of the day and night news separated into classified columns.

TABLOID FOR MIAMI

Vanderbilt Definitely Announces New Daily for Southern City

MIAMI, Nov. 27.—Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., here for a conference with his executives who have been in Miami for three weeks, definitely announced that he will establish a tabloid paper in this city on the same plans as on the Pacific Coast.

The Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., now publishes the Los Angeles News and San Francisco Herald, both illustrated tabloids.

Daily Wins Libel Suit

After one hour's deliberation the jury in the $10,000 libel suit of E. A. Koen against the Marshfield (Ore.) Daily Times returned a verdict in favor of the defendant Nov. 20. Koen based his complaint upon the grounds that owing to statements made in the Times he had lost a prospective position with the Marshfield Daily News, which statements had to do largely with Koen's alleged affiliations with the K. K. K. and were for the most part taken from other newspapers, according to the line of defense taken by the Times.

See Page 36: New Feature—"Them Was the Good Ol' Days," by Chet Johnson. First of a Series of Three.

ADS MUST FOLLOW, NOT LEAD, BUYING HABITS

Much Money Wasted in Trying to Change the Public, Says McMurtrie—Importance of "Position" Exaggerated—Women's Instinct to Buy Keeps Advertising Alive

By JOHN H. McMURTRIE

SIR CHARLES HIGHAM, the well known English authority on advertising recently said that advertising was in its infancy. He predicted that advertising in the future would play an important part in civic and political life. He contended that advertising some day could be employed in bringing about world peace.

"A simple advertisement of 20 words placed before the eyes of the world will do more to bring about peace than anything else," he said.

The only exception I take to the idea of the simple message is that simplicity is reserved for individuals and will never be accepted by the great majority. Few men are capable of simplicity, and for that reason Sir Charles' idea of good copy for establishing world peace will never bring about the results he predicts.

Advertising like any profession lends itself to complication. The successful lawyer wins cases by practicing complicated presentation in every branch of his work. The physician often traces his big practice to a combination of assets independent of his simple knowledge of medicine. The complicated search is always necessary when a man buys a house. Complicated politics are kept alive by constant change of administration. Advertising agencies deal in a variety of complication to maintain their business profitably.

To succeed on a simple basis a man must be a genius. For a business to operate simply it must represent an outstanding success.

Few problems in advertising represent more complication and lack of understanding than the question of position. About the nearest to a prevailing standard of good position is: following and next to reading on a righthand page well forward in the paper. This is the first thing an advertising man learns. How advertising is read is the last thing he learns.

The present confusion over the position question is due to the belief that advertising is read by chance. News reading and ad reading are two separate actions. If this is not so and the perfect position is the vital thing, why do solid groups of advertising in newspapers and magazines continue to be occupied by successful advertisers. As a general rule it is not the successful advertiser who occupies the preferred position. It is the failure. Thousands of new accounts start every year in the best positions only to die before the year is over.

A solid page of advertising is like an avenue lined on both sides with shops. We have all had the experience of walking down such an avenue without the slightest intention of stopping at any shop window and without any fixed purchase in mind, yet upon display of a certain article in a window we have been led to make a purchase. Under such a circumstance we would not admit that we were looking for this purchase. An analysis of such a condition would prove that an unconscious buying instinct was developed into a state of consciousness by reason of association on such an avenue where purchases were displayed.

The shopping avenue has a created interest that makes buyers of us all. Every store in the crowded block has a following and the high rent for the occasional vacant one is the price you pay for the possibility of reaching that following. These stores have not developed their clientele over-night—it has taken years to do it.

Groups of stores in a city create certain types of shoppers in proportion to which they locate conveniently for shopping. In New York City many thousands more people pass the corner of 34th street and Fifth Avenue but it would not be as good a location for an automobile sales room as 57th and Broadway. The prospective buyer for any article by reason of convenience goes where he can shop to his manner of broader selection.

Shopping through the convenience of a newspaper is just the same. Thousands of men and women turn an occasional page and without any definite display in mind are led from a subconscious to a conscious state of buying, and the nearer a newspaper makes up its copy along the same lines as shops themselves naturally group together, the greater will be the results from the advertising. Just as certain stores along a shopping avenue build up a big following, so do daily advertisements running over a period of years develop a created interest among readers. Why shouldn't the occasional "empty space" in the newspaper, among the atmosphere of such created interest be an ideal location in reaching out for business developed by competitors?

It makes no difference whether an advertisement is in the form of the faker on the midway, the display window on the avenue, or the display columns of a newspaper, the main thing is to tell your story where the interest is already created. Display your goods where the crowds are receptive. For argument sake we will admit that it may be better to have an attractive corner or have your copy on top of the page, but above all keep your sales message where the buyer would naturally look for it.

The only reader of a newspaper worth reaching for an advertiser is the regualr reader— the man or woman who likes that paper to the point of reading it every day and familiarizing himself or herself with every part of it. Tastes differ in people—thousands of regular readers never read certain pages, so any advertiser is sure to miss a big part of any circulation, but be sure your copy is associated with buying appeal similar to yours.

If a man told me he never read advertising I would be inclined to believe him; if a woman told me she never read advertising I would be inclined to doubt her. Advertising, after all, depends on men's and women's responsiveness in the proportions of about 70 to 30—in favor of women. It is women's instinct and spontaneity in buying that keeps advertising alive.

Whether it is men or women, it is the instinctive buyer that crowds the store, that rides in the automobile, that fills the theatre, that wears furs and fineries—that leads in advertising responsiveness.

So it is quite natural that a man, even an educated advertising man, should have confused ideas about position unless he eliminates his mental idea in favor of this instinctive influence.

The big army of men and women who buy classified advertising finds occasion to select newspapers carrying the greatest volume of a particular classification. In nine times out of ten the best results from classified ads come from a newspaper with the best showing in that classification, due to the created interest already established.

There is no question about position in classified advertising. Its simplicity eliminates it. Display advertising is merely classified advertising in a bigger graduated form. The principal difference lies in the complicated form of display as against the simplicity of the classified.

A newspaper, like men, must rank above the average to operate along simple lines. The crowd always pulls for the challenger—never the champion. A newspaper that practices the simple policy of make-up along the lines of grouping advertising of similar appeal is sure to engage itself in the severest competition. Strangely enough, however, the few papers that are doing this are outstanding successes, both from a standpoint of circulation and amount of advertising carried.

The distinction between local and national advertising is technical. The best gauge to determine advertising value is the extent to which a medium is used by the small retail store. Through necessity the fifty-line retail advertiser must use the medium which creates the greatest number of sales at the least cost.

The seasoned advertising salesman never wastes time selling a small retailer unless his newspaper is strong enough to hold the business. For the most part the small retailer buys advertising. His cash drawer is limited and he is fool proof on value. Good position, good promises, good anything—are all forgotten in favor of good results.

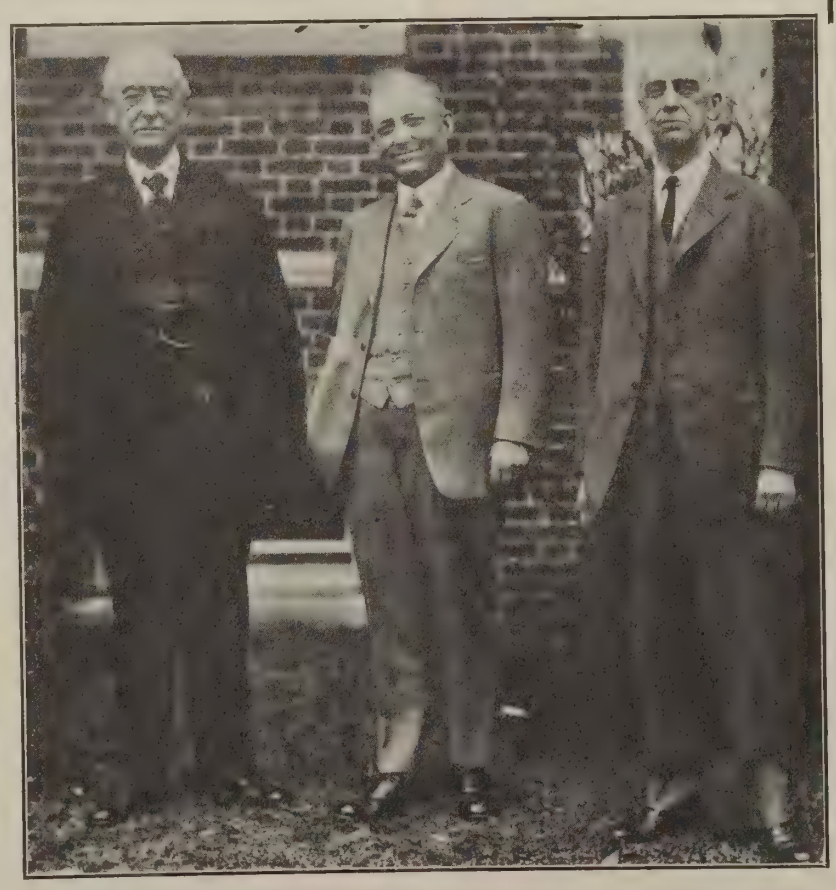
It is the big advertiser that must be sold. His financial resources permit of occasional waste and for that reason a variety of substitutes for circulation are attractively presented to offset and complicate his judgment.

It has been said that "for good advertising there is no substitute for big circulation." This should be changed to read, "for the best advertising there is no substitute for big circulation and proper advertising association."

It is the combination of big circulation and advertising association that wins success. It is comparatively easy to measure the circulation phase, but it is quite different with advertising association. You cannot analyze or explain it—you must sense it.

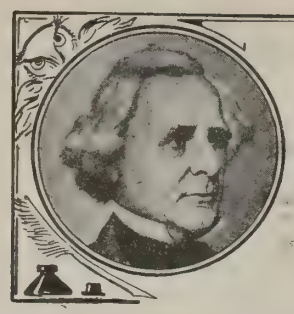
When Sir Charles Higham said advertising was in its infancy he had reference to its age from a mechanical and superficial standpoint. The association side of advertising has always been represented by youth.

When a man says "they don't do this," or "they don't do that like they used to" it merely means that his vision on life is dulled, his capacity for thrills has died with maturity.



It doesn't always follow that this happens with an old man. Last summer I had occasion to go to a ball game at the Yankee Stadium when the game between the Yankees and Washington ran extremely close for 11 innings and the score stood 3-3. As the game began to run into extra innings I noticed a man about 35 years of age sitting next to me sound asleep. He remained in this state until the 12th inning when the game ended in a roar through Babe Ruth making a home run. As the crowd began to file out this man finally opened his eyes, and in a kidding mood I asked him how he liked the game. His reply was "all right" but when I asked him the score he simply dropped his head and lost himself in the crowd. No doubt this man played ball as a boy but he had allowed the interest in the game to pass out of his life. Whether it's pleasure or business you can get more out of it by absorbing the spirit of youth.

Too often the big executive fails to make a pal of his son. And then he wonders why he could not follow in his father's footsteps. A man can't expect his boy to come up to his vision—it is up to the father to go back to boyhood and come up with him and share his young dreams and ambitions and give him the counsel and direction born of experience.



The trouble with advertising men with regard to advertising association is that the grind of business and too close contact with advertising practice has dulled the sensitive touch and appreciation of the traits common to advertising impulse. You can't see the thrill of a motor ride in a taxi driver's face; the doctor's pulse does not register horror at the sight of blood; the stage hand "sets" a comedy and tragedy with blank emotion.

(Continued on page 32)

IMMORTALS OF THE N. E. A.

National Editorial Association Presidents enjoy Biblical life spans, and every now and then the camera catches three generations of them at a meeting. Here we have, left to right, O. W. Stephens, Columbia, Mo., president 35 years ago; George W. Marble, Fort Scott, Kan., now president, and Dean Walter Williams, of the Missouri School of Journalism, also a former president.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN-41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER - ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Return of the Younger Bennett from Europe Eager to Enter Journalism—His Early Yachting Record

JAMES GORDON BENNETT, Jr., to an almost unexampled degree, had lavished upon him the wealth of his mother's affection. More especially was this the case, after the untimely death of her second son, Cosmo, of whom also she was extremely fond. Passing away at the age of five, an aching void was left in her heart, and she was once heard to remark, upon seeing one of two twin boys of about the age of Cosmo.

"I would like to adopt that little boy for he so reminds me of Cosmo."

The younger Bennett received a thorough education imparted by private tutors under his mother's supervision, and at the age of 16 was very well equipped mentally for the responsible duties that would eventually devolve upon him. He was then eager to enter journalism, and in fact had acquired a good idea of newspaper work by his frequent visits to the Herald office, where in babyhood he had made his "mark" on the journalistic records.

While still pursuing his studies, in continuation of his tuition abroad, he was given ample time for wholesome recreation, and became an excellent shot, making many excursions after small game along the forest-covered slopes of the Heights; while boat sailing on the Hudson River, near his home, was a favorite pastime. He soon became an amateur sailor of skill and courage, and his father approving of his son's ambition, enabled him to become the proud owner of the sloop yacht "Rebecca" in 1857. He entered the sport with characteristic impetuousity and enthusiasm, and was enrolled as the youngest member of the New York Yacht Club. His membership dated from Aug. 12, 1857, and he was one of the most popular and active of the junior yachtsmen.

The "Rebecca," of a little over 77 tons register, and modelled on fine lines, was notably fast in beating to windward, while in reaching and running before the wind, few yachts of her class were her equal.

Early Yachting Record of Bennett, Jr.

The members of the New York Yacht Club, eager for nautical sport, and proud of the speed and seaworthiness of their craft, engaged, in what was then termed a "Great Ocean Race," around Long Island in June, 1858. Among the fleet that sailed from off the club house at Hoboken, were the sloop "Rebecca," owned by James Gordon Bennett, Jr.; the "Minnie," owned by a Mr. Thomas; the "Una," owned by Mr. Duncan, and the "Madgie," owned by Capt. Loper. The race was for a sweepstakes of $800.

The "Una" and the "Rebecca" led the fleet on the ocean run to Montauk Point, and later the "Minnie" and the "Rebecca" had a close contest.

The sailing master of the "Rebecca" was Jack Ferris, a famous coast and Sound pilot, who knew every channel however difficult and dangerous, and subject to young Bennett's consent, he steered the yacht through the crooked Plum Island Gut channel, instead of going through the Race thus saving five or six miles, while the "Minnie" and the rest of the fleet went by way of the Race. The "Rebecca" arrived at Fort Schuyler four hours ahead of the "Minnie," yet the latter was declared the winner by the Club Committee, due to Mr. Thomas' protest. It appears that the master of the "Rebecca" had not read the printed directions and had only received verbal instructions from one of the Committee. There was nothing said to him as to the course to be followed after rounding Montauk Point, and therefore the master took the route to which he had been accustomed. Considerable hard feeling developed over taking the victory away from the real winner, and the Herald said:

"These matters are all arbitrary, and the winning boat often loses the prize through a technicality of this kind."

In one of the baseless stories circulated about Mr. Bennett, 2nd., it was alleged that he recklessly ordered his yacht to be steered through the perilous Gut, endangering the lives of all on board. As a boy of 17 and as an inexperienced sailor with no knowledge of the channels, it is absurd to presume that he did more than accept his sailing master's decision. Later he declared that the "Rebecca" owed her victory in a great measure to Jack Ferris and his assistant, Luke Rustin, "two navigators that would make old Palinurus blush for his laurels."

On Oct. 1, of that year, young Mr. Bennett entered the "Rebecca" in the fall regatta of the New York Yacht Club, and she again proved her superiority, winning the prize for her class in a race from Staten Island around the lightship and return.

During the summer season of 1859, young Bennett proved himself an ardent follower of the sport, and among many races in which the "Rebecca" took part, was one from Newport up Long Island Sound to Throggs' Neck, in which she was defeated by 12 minutes, in a very exciting contest with the "Restless."

However, fired with patriotic zeal, he ordered constructed a much larger and more powerful yacht, and named after his mother, the "Henrietta." She was built by Henry Steers, the most famous shipbuilder of that period, from designs by William Tucker, and was 108 feet long, 23 feet beam, and 10 feet depth of hold. Of an extreme clipper model, with fine lines, she was a remarkably fast schooner yacht, and under command of her owner she performed good service during the war, against the rebels on the Florida coast. His log book was one of the cherished treasures of the Herald office and was among the effects of the "Commodore," as Mr. Bennett was termed, when the Herald Building passed into the hands of Mr. Munsey.

At the end of the war, Mr. Bennett, Jr., was an experienced master mariner and navigator, and re-entered the sport of yachting with fresh zeal and energy.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Mr. Bennett, Jr., Inaugurates Ocean Yacht Racing—Story of the Famous Winter Race—Bennett As Winner Greatly Honored

IT is to Mr. James Gorden Bennett, 2nd, that the honor is due for the inauguration of ocean yacht racing in American waters, for at the age of 25, as owner and commander of his fast schooner yacht "Henrietta," he challenged Mr. George A. Osgood (son-in-law of Commodore Vanderbilt), and owner of the yacht "Fleetwing" to a race from Sandy Hook lightship to Cape May and return for nominal stakes, though the late Mr. Townshend informed the writer that there was heavy betting "on the side."

The yacht's were towed to the Hook on Sept. 10, 1865, arriving at the anchorage during a heavy rainstorm that kept reporters and friends of the yatchsmen below decks. Mr. Bennett however in a waterproof coat and sou'wester hat remained on deck actively supervising preparations for the race. He had a crew of 28 men, under Captain Richard Brown, who had been the sailing master of the famous yacht "America." With him were his brother, Ben and son, Charley Brown, also Captain Lyman Beebe, all experienced pilots. Next morning the yachts were towed to the lightship, Billy Travers giving the starting signal. The winds were unfortunately light and baffling and the race developed into "a drifting match," much to everyone's disgust. The "Fleetwing" won by one hour and forty-one minutes, and a large amount of money changed hands.

(To be continued next week)

A National Christmas Institution

The Shop-o-scope

TRADE MARK

One out of every four persons in this country has the Shop-o-scope service handy to make holiday buying both pleasant and economical. The combined circulation of the newspapers using this sixth and greatest of our annual "Christmas Gift Suggestions" campaigns is over 6,000,000. Allowing four readers to a paper, this means that approximately twenty-five million people are served by the 1924 Shop-o-scope. The list of users of this Campaign shows an increase of almost 50% over last year's record. The following newspapers are carrying the 1924 Shop-o-scope:

ARIZONA
Tucson Star
ARKANSAS
El Dorado News
CALIFORNIA
Hollywood News
San Francisco Call
Santa Barbara Press
Whittier News
COLORADO
Denver Post
Pueblo Star Journal
CONNECTICUT
Hartford Courant
New Britain Record
New Haven Register
New London Day
So. Norwalk Sentinel
Stamford Advocate
Waterbury Republican
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Washington Times & Herald
FLORIDA
Daytona News
Jacksonville Journal
Miami News-Metropolis
Orlando Sun
Sanford Herald
Tampa Tribune
West Palm Beach Post
GEORGIA
Atlanta Constitution
Columbus Ledger
Macon Telegraph
Rome News
ILLINOIS
Alton Telegraph
Belleville Advocate
Cairo Bulletin
Chicago Herald & Examiner
Clinton Journal
Danville Press
Decatur Review
E. St. Louis Journal
Evanston News-Index
Moline Dispatch
Ottawa Republican-Times
Peoria Journal-Transcript
Quincy Herald
Rockford Republic
Rock Island Argus
Springfield Register
Sterling Gazette
Streator Independent-Times
Waukegan Sun
INDIANA
Evansville Courier
Gary Post-Tribune
Hammond Lake Co. Times
Huntington Press
Indianapolis News
Logansport Pharos-Tribune
Marion Leader-Tribune
Richmond Palladium
So. Bend News-Times
Vincennes Commercial
IOWA
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Sioux City Tribune
Waterloo Tribune
KANSAS
Kansas City Kansan
Parsons Sun
Pittsburg Sun
Wichita Eagle
KENTUCKY
Ashland Independent
Bowling Green News
Henderson Gleaner-Journal
Hopkinsville New Era
Owensboro Messenger
Paducah News-Democrat
LOUISIANA
Lake Charles American Press
New Orleans State
MAINE
Augusta Kennebec Journal
Lewiston Journal
Portland Evening Express
Waterville Sentinel
MARYLAND
Baltimore Sun
Cumberland Times
Hagerstown Herald-Mail
MASSACHUSETTS
Boston Advertiser
Brockton Times
Gardner News
Haverhill Gazette
Holyoke Telegram
Marlboro Enterprise
New Bedford Standard
North Adams Transcript
Pittsfield Berkshire Eagle
Southbridge News
Springfield Union
Taunton Gazette
Westfield Journal
MICHIGAN
Ann Arbor Times-News
Battle Creek Moon-Journal
Bay City Times-Tribune
Flint Journal
Grand Rapids Press
Hillsdale News
Ironwood Globe
Kalamazoo Gazette
Lansing State Journal
Marquette Mining Journal
Monroe News
Mt. Clemens Leader
Saginaw News-Courier
St. Joseph Herald-Press
Wyandotte Record
MINNESOTA
Duluth News-Tribune
Faribault News
Mankato Free Press
Minneapolis Journal
Rochester Post-Record
MISSISSIPPI
Meridian Star
MISSOURI
Moberly Monitor-Index
Richmond Missourian
Sedalia Democrat-Capital
Springfield Republican
NEBRASKA
Fremont Tribune
Lincoln Star
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Concord Monitor-Patriot
Manchester Union Leader
NEW JERSEY
Atlantic City Press-Union
Bayonne News
Camden Courier
Elizabeth Journal
Hackensack Bergen Record
Passaic News
Paterson Press-Guardian
Trenton Times
Union Hill Hudson Dispatch
NEW YORK
Albany Knickerbocker Press
Amsterdam Recorder
Auburn Advertiser-Journal
Batavia News
Binghamton Press
Brooklyn Eagle
Buffalo News
Elmira Star-Gazette
Glens Falls Post-Star
Gloversville Leader-Repub.
Ithaca Journal-News
Jamestown Post
Newburgh News
New York City American
Olean Times
Poughkeepsie Star
Rochester Times-Union
Rockville Center Review
Schenectady Union-Star
Syracuse Post-Standard
Utica Observer-Dispatch
Watertown Standard
Yonkers Herald
NORTH CAROLINA
Asheville Times
Charlotte News
Durham Sun
Elizabeth City Advance
Fayetteville Observer
Goldsboro News
Greensboro News
Raleigh Times
Rocky Mount Telegram
[illegible] Post
Winston-Salem Sentinel
OHIO
Akron Beacon Journal
Alliance Review
Ashland Times-Gazette
Athens Messenger
Bowling Green Sentinel-Tribune
Canton News
Chillicothe Gazette
Cincinnati Enquirer
Columbus Dispatch
Coshocton Tribune
Dayton News
Dover Reporter
Hamilton News
Lima Republican-Gazette
Mansfield News
Marietta Times
New Philadelphia Times
Pomeroy News
Portsmouth Times
Sandusky Register
Springfield News
Xenia Gazette-Republican
OKLAHOMA
McAlester News-Capital
OREGON
Portland Journal
PENNSYLVANIA
Allentown Call
Altoona Mirror
Bethlehem Globe
Connellsville News
Du Bois Courier
Erie Dispatch-Herald
Greensburg Tribune Review
Harrisburg Telegraph
Jeannette News-Dispatch
Lancaster New Era
Lewistown Sentinel
New Castle News
Pottsville Journal
Reading Eagle
Scranton Republican
Sharon Herald
Tamaqua Courier
Warren Times Mirror
Wilkes-Barre Telegram
Williamsport Sun
RHODE ISLAND
Pawtucket Times
Providence Journal
Westerly Sun
SOUTH CAROLINA
Anderson Mail
Charleston News & Courier
Greenville Piedmont
Rock Hill Herald
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga News
Johnson City Chronicle
Knoxville Journal-Tribune
Nashville Tennesseean
TEXAS
Amarillo News
Beaumont Enterprise
Dallas Times-Herald
El Paso Herald
Houston Chronicle
Port Arthur News
San Angelo Standard
San Antonio Express
Wichita Falls Record-News
UTAH
Salt Lake City Telegram
VERMONT
Burlington Free Press
VIRGINIA
Charlottesville Progress
Danville News
Richmond News-Leader
WASHINGTON
Port Angeles News
Seattle Union Record
Spokane Spokesman Review
WEST VIRGINIA
Charleston Gazette
Clarksburg Telegram
Grafton Sentinel
Huntington Herald-Dispatch
Parkersburg Sentinel
WISCONSIN
Appleton Post-Crescent
Beloit News
Green Bay Press-Gazette
Janesville Gazette
Kenosha News
Manitowoc Herald-News
Milwaukee Sentinel
Sheboygan Press-Telegram
WYOMING
Casper Tribune
CANADA
Brantford, Ont., Expositor
Chatham, Ont., News
Hamilton, Ont., Herald
Kingston, Ont., British Whig
London, Ont., Free Press
Montreal, Que., La Patrie
Quebec, Que., Telegraph
Regina, Sask., Leader-Post
Sarnia, Ont., Canadian Observer
St. Catharines, Ont., Standard
Stratford, Ont., Beacon Herald
St. Thomas, Ont., Times Journal
Windsor, Ont., Star
Winnipeg, Man., Tribune
Woodstock, Ont., Sentinel-Review

Watch for the Shop-o-scope's new companion campaign, the "Ben Franklin Thrift Sale" for the promotion of Merchandise Classified Advertising. It is scheduled to open on Franklin's Birthday, January 17th, the start of National Thrift Week.

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, INC.

International Classified Advertising Counsellors

Otis Building Philadelphia

PRESS FREEDOM PASSING BEFORE INROADS OF COMMERCIALISM

Newspapers Exchanging Ability to Lead People for the Ability to Lead Buyers, Says Samuel Strauss, Former Globe Editor

SAMUEL STRAUSS, formerly of the New York Globe has contributed to the November issue of the Atlantic Monthly a paper of personal philosophy under the title "Things Are In the Saddle" in which he charts the change "which has stolen across the path of American democracy and is already altering Americanism." He names it "Consumptionism" and defines it as "the science of compelling men to use more and more things." It is bringing about a situation under which the American citizen's first importance to his country is no longer that of citizen but that of consumer.

The Press is succumbing to Consumptionism, he declares, with the result that the newspapers are losing their ability to lead people; each year they are exchanging this ability more and more for the ability to lead buyers. And because of this the freedom of the press is going.

In diagnosing the position of newspapers today Mr. Strauss says:

"'The Press is the chief democratic instrument of freedom,' wrote de Toequeville. Americans have truly believed it.

"Something has happened to the Press. All have remarked it. What is it? Radicals have no difficulty in putting their finger on it; they can tell you that the advertisers and the 'Interests' control the newspapers, that is what the trouble is. The Radicals are a generation behind their time. The conservative citizens have their own way of saying it; they say the whole trouble is that the Press has become commercialized, and by 'commercialized' they mean that greedy men have used the newspapers to make great fortunes for themselves. And this explanation is, on the whole, no more accurate than the explanations from the soap-boxes. It is obvious to anybody who turns over the forty pages of his morning newspaper, nearly every page half advertising, that the newspapers do make a great deal of money. In scores of communities the newspaper is now as profitable as the department store, while in former days one could count on the fingers of the hands the number which made more than a decent livelihood for the publisher. But this change has not come about because men with itching palms saw the newspapers as their opportunity. It has come about because the movement of the time, the movement of the industrial forces, has had need to make use of the Press, and is adapting the Press to its own necessities.

"Advertising is part of the circulatory system of twentieth-century industry; without it the system chokes up. Industry's need to make use of advertising is forcing certain changes in the newspapers, certain developments, additions, improvements, a certain new kind of progress by which the newspaper is rapidly tending to become another sort of institution. It is because this has not yet begun to be generally recognized, because they would describe to-day's newspapers in terms of yesterday's newspapers, that those who criticize the Press make irrelevant criticisms. They see that something is not as it should be, but they give only the old, old reasons.

"The Palladium of our liberties" was the way of describing interchangeably the Constitution and the newspapers. And the people meant just that. So long as Americans might publish without first having obtained the permission of somebody in authority, and so long as there were no unlighted corners in the nation, Government was safe. It would seem, then, as if the newspapers should be doing the work of freedom better now than ever before. Certainly few corners of the nation are left unlighted, and never have so many readers read so many newspapers. To say nothing of the news of events which was never before gathered with such completeness, the views and prejudices of the community have never been given such generous publicity. Whatever is spoken at meetings that has any news value at all, whatever is said in pulpits, put forward in statements, embellished in interviews, is printed for millions to read. By all the rules, the newspapers should be more than ever capable to lead the citizens; compared to those pitiful, biased, limited, amateurish sheets of 1850, of 1830, how magnificent seems the newspaper of the twentieth century, how fit to inform and incline, to direct and guide!

"Yet what is the fact? Many and many have observed how little of late the people are influenced in their political decisions by what they read in newspapers, how often a candidate or a policy succeeds in face of opposition from substantially all the largest and most important newspapers; or just the other way about—how often a measure or a nominee supported by all the newspapers fails utterly. The most striking instance was the League-of-Nations affair; here the voice of the people on the editorial page and the voice of the people at the polls were two flatly different matters; the preponderating newspaper influence of the country was thrown for the League and the preponderating will of the country was registered dead against it.

"The newspapers are losing the ability to lead citizens. They are exchanging it, more of it each year, for the ability to lead buyers. To business, a newspaper strike has come to be of grave consequence. A week's interruption of a city's newspapers, and business is damaged. Without the facilities for daily advertising, the custom of stores, of places of amusement, falls off dangerously. The power of the Press is not growing less; the power is being shifted; the Press is powerful still, but not so much to direct men how to think, how to feel, how to vote, as to direct them how to buy.

"America's newspapers used to be, before all else, the expression of the tempers and beliefs which set small groups of citizens apart from one another. Newspapers are coming to be, before all else, instruments for those needs and desires men have most in common. Large communities which formerly had a dozen newspapers are being reduced to two or three newspapers; what logical reason eventually to have even so many as two or three?

"Industry did not set out to deprive the nation's thousand opinions and prejudices of their means of expression. Industry set out to reduce overhead. Industry set out to substitute for the many financially uncertain newspapers a few financially certain newspapers. Small groups of readers, those who happened to feel alike in regard to the tariff or immigration or vivisection, did not efficiently serve the advertiser. The advertiser needed readers to be centralized; he needed the largest possible number of readers divided into the smallest possible number of groups—divided, that is to say, not according to what readers believe, but according to what readers are likely to buy. The advertiser has small interest to know whether the circulation of a newspaper is composed of Republicans or Democrats; but to pursue his advertising efficiently he must know whether the newspaper's readers buy on the main floor or in the basement.

"A half-dozen newspapers, one for each stripe of belief in the community, was good democracy. It was bad business. Why a separate building and machinery for each newspaper? Why not a single plant for the half-dozen? Why not one newspaper to include all opinions, instead of several newspapers, each excluding all beliefs save its own?

"The newspapers to-day is a mammonth institution. It requires prodigious capital. No newspaper publisher with little means can possibly get his head above water now. Where formerly it needed thousands of dollars to run a newspaper, it takes hundreds of thousands, even millions now. Rich men? Of course the publishers are rich men. They have to be.

And the public is not in the least disturbed that this is so. Recently a publisher in New York City, announcing another merger, stated that now at last all the metropolitan newspapers ar owned by very rich men—which, he saic is a most desirable consummation. An the public acquiesces. Once such a con dition would have seemed impossible i America, or, if it had secretly devel oped, any publisher would have bee thought demented who openly boasted o it. The public would have been in panic of fear and indignation. To-da no one is even perturbed; the people se what the publisher means, and they ar willing it should be so. They see i must be so. Formerly men would have demanded to know what was to becom of the freedom of the Press, the safety o democracy, in such a circumstance; they would have cried out against having al measured to them by a millionaire's bushel. But now they make no demur They see it must be; if it were not, how could there be the comics, the rotogravure supplements, the folded-in-pictures for framing, the songs and puzzles, the magazine sections, the cutouts, the 'features,' the extravagant rations of news, all the great variety which gives every sort of reader something to his particular taste, all the great quantity which 'carries' the ever mounting volume of the advertising that must lead buyers to buy. The readers understand very well that it takes wealth to provide such a wealth.

"Consumption is steadily substituting rich newspapers for poor newspapers, inclusive newspapers for clannish newspapers, forty-page newspapers for eight-page sheets. And what of it? Is not this all advantage? Is not all that was of value still here? Fourteen editors in one place instead of fourteen editors in fourteen places: what has gone save waste, and inefficiency, and instability, and poverty? Has nothing gone then? Is the freedom of the Press nothing? For it is no less than the freedom of the Press that is going."

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

By Henry Edward Warner

FOR A' THAT AN' SOME O' THIS

(As Mr. R. Burns remarked in his Watchacallit to What'sisname: "A chiel's amang ye takin' notes, and, faith, he'll prent it," or words to that effect.)

A cub and a stub and a nose for news
And a pad and a jab at Truth;
A toss of the coin to win or lose,
And a plunge in the full of youth.
The growl of the Desk, and a pencil blue
Bites into a work of Art—
A Number Two head and the stuff goes through Right straight from a young cub's heart.

A chop and a take; the matrices click
As they fall into line, and then
It's down to the stone on the double-quick—
To the stone and the make-up men.
A slap and a dash, and a cut and fill!—
It's in with an ad, and out
With a hunk of bang that comes down kill.
Of bang that is fat and stout.

A race down the aisle to the molding machine
Where the stereotypers wait;
A roll and a dry and she comes out clean,
All set for the autoplate.
Antimony and tin and lead
Like a breath from the depths of hell! . . .
A rush and a shout, full speed ahead,
And the shot of a newsboy's yell!

Now one shall weep at the printed sheet,
And one shall leap and enthuse
When a story runs in the crowded street
From the cub with a nose for news.

BUYS CONTROLLING INTEREST

James Kerney Now Largest Stockholder in Trenton (N. J.) Times

James Kerney, of Trenton, N. J., has become the controlling owner of the Trenton Times through the purchase of stock of Owen Moon, treasurer of the company, who is retiring. Mr. Kerney has been editor and vice-president of the paper for 22 years.

JAMES KERNEY

Other officers and owners of the Times are A. C. Reeves, president; Thomas F. Waldron, assistant treasurer, and John H. Sines, secretary.

No other changes in the company are contemplated except that Thomas Lincoln Kerney, son of Mr. Kerney, will enter the publishing branch of the business. The younger Kerney was formerly associated with the Birmingham News, Springfield Republican and Hartford Times.

German Press Association Celebrates

Wolff's Telegraphic Bureau, considered the official German news agency, observed its 75th anniversary in Berlin, Nov. 25. The press association was organized in 1849 by Dr. Bertold Wolff, editor of the National Zeitung, and is the oldest of the European official news agencies, being two years younger than the Agence Havas of France. Its present director-general, Dr. Heinrich Mantler, has been managing head of Wolff's Telegraphic Bureau for 30 years. At a dinner held in celebration of the anniversary, a cablegram of congratulations sent by the Associated Press was read.

To Launch Sunday Edition

The Salisbury (N. C.) Post, an afternoon daily, has announced that beginning Sunday, Nov. 30, it will publish a Sunday morning issue.

Where Certified Dry Mats Are Made—West Groton, Mass.

The Best Proof of Every Certified Dry Mat is the Printed Page

A dozen good reasons for using Certified cold process dry mats:

1. Eliminate the steam tables
2. Save newsprint paper
3. Save invaluable time
4. Readily conditioned without steaming
5. Do not require petting or fussing
6. Molded with a minimum of wear on form and roller
7. Give deep, even, sharp impressions
8. Require a minimum of packing
9. Do not buckle or blister
10. Do not stick to plates
11. Cast perfect printing plates
12. Print better pages

MADE IN U.S.A. BY THE CERTIFIED DRY MATS ORIGINAL CLAUS IDEAL PROCESS

PUBLISHERS are naturally zealous of the appearance as well as of the substance of their newspapers. So, too, are they ever on the alert for any means that will help them in the many problems involved in newspaper publishing.

As a manufacturer the publisher is always interested in and ready to try anything that offers prospect of improvement or economy, or both, in the production of his periodical. That fifty percent of the United States dailies that stereotype are now using the cold process is proof conclusive that publishers realize the economic soundness of the dry mat, and that the dry mat cold process is here to stay.

As a matter of fact daily newspapers everywhere are either adopting dry mats or are seriously considering their possibilities.

The introduction of American-made Certifieds has given the dry mat an impetus that will unquestionably hasten the day when the cold process of stereotyping will entirely supplant the wet mat roll-your-own hot process.

The slogan of this company "PROFITS THROUGH SERVICE" is more than merely a "catch" phrase, and it is our earnest endeavor to make our slogan a real living force in the dry mat business.

When you buy Certifieds we are not merely selling you dry mats. True, we believe ours to be the best dry mats ever offered for sale; we strive to give the fullest attention to details and to give prompt and efficient service in the matter of shipments. But Certified Service does not end there. Far from it. That is just where Certified Service begins.

Certified Dry Mats are but a means to an end. In the last analysis it is printed pages that you are buying from us, and until you are satisfied with the part played by Certifieds in the production of your paper we are not satisfied and our Service has not been completed.

It is not necessary to depend upon the experiences of others with Certifieds. We make it simple for you to demonstrate to yourself the worth and efficacy of our dry mats, by furnishing you with samples free of any charge or obligation.

It will pay you to give Certifieds a thorough trial in your own plant under your actual working conditions, and see for yourself how readily Certifieds are conditioned; how easily they are molded; how cleanly they cast.

Just let the printed pages be your proof! Do that and we have no misgivings that your verdict will be, as that of many publishers throughout the country: "American-made Certified Dry Mats for Me."

Samples of Certified cold process dry mats cost you nothing—they are yours free of any charge or obligation. Just let us know how much shrinkage you require and what kind of equipment you employ, particularly your casting box, so that we may be able to send you the Certified mat best suited for your needs.

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION

340 Madison Avenue New York, N. Y.

"Made in America to Insure Quality and Service"

Copyright 1924 C. D. M. C.

MARTIN AGAIN EDITS CLEVELAND PRESS, HIS FIRST EDITORIAL COMMAND

H. B. R. Briggs Resigning After Several Years' Service, Announces No Plans—"Billy" Evans Overhauling Sports Department—Foster Writing Features

EARLE E. MARTIN, was appointed editor of the Cleveland Press, Nov. 20, succeeding H. B. R. Briggs, who had been in charge of the paper for two years. Mr. Martin comes back to his "first love" in newspaper circles, since he had been editor of the Press from 1905 to 1913, inclusive, leaving it in the latter year to become editor-in-chief of the E. W. Scripps Ohio group of newspapers, and serving in that capacity until 1921.

EARLE E. MARTIN

Mr. Martin left the Scripps Ohio group in 1921 to become president of the Newspaper Enterprise Association, which position he fills yet, and whether his new identity in the publishing business will mean that a new N. E. A. chief will be selected is not known at this time. Mr. Martin's appointment as editor of the Press marks the climax of what has been an extremely versatile and successful career as a newspaper man.

Years ago, while still a youth, Mr. Martin started as a cub reporter on the Indianapolis News. From the very beginning his work was marked by aggressiveness and ability as a writer and he rapidly cut a swath through the usual channels of reporter to desk man to asistant city editor, to news editor, etc., until, in the early 1900s, he was appointed managing editor of the Star League of Indiana. His work attracted the attention of the Scripps people and caused them to tender him the editorship of the Cleveland Press in 1905.

Under Mr. Martin's regime the Press, from 1905 to 1913, carved out an enviable niche in Ohio newspaper circles.

In 1921, the N. E. A. began to expand and amplify and it was a natural result that Mr. Martin should be summoned to the presidency in order that his long experience as a builder of things that make for newspaper growth might be thrown into the N. E. A. in such a way that it could evolve a service that would mean the utmost to its clients. His record with the N. E. A. shows the same successful progression as was noted in all his other newspaper work.

Mr. Martin is 50 years old. He lives in South Euclid Village, in suburban Greater Cleveland, and is known in virtually every corner of Ohio newspaperdom.

In assuming his new post, Mr. Martin immediately called in as temporary aides, some of his former N. E. A. colleagues, and he also brought with him Billy Evans, American League umpire, asking Billy to revamp and put on a "pepped up" basis the Press' sporting department.

Evans, who is the second oldest umpire in the league, in point of service, is one of the best known figures in American sport circles.

Officially he is William G. Evans—though there probably aren't a dozen newspaper men in the country who know him save as Billy.

Officially Billy is still an N. E. A. writer and will, of course, continue as an American League umpire.

John Wharton Foster, managing editor of the Press under Mr. Briggs, will now become a feature writer. His reputation for putting heart interest into news is such that the Scripps-Howard people decided that under his pen name of John Wharton, Mr. Foster should be given the opportunity to pull out the tremolo full stop, so he will hereafter handle each day's biggest news story. A new managing editor will be named at a later date.

The changes on the Press come about five weeks or so ahead of its removal into its new addition to its present building in E. 9th street and Rockwell avenue.

Mr. Briggs has not announced what his new connections will be.

City Gets Publisher's Library

A library of 3,000 volume, some rare, collected by the late George Thompson, publisher of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, has been presented to the St. Paul Public Library, of which Webster Wheelock, former editor-in-chief of the Pioneer Press, is librarian. It is the gift of heirs of the late Abigail Thompson, widow of the publisher.

Teaching Religious Journalism

What is believed to be the only class in religious journalism in the world has been organized by Prof. Milton C. Towner of the Missouri Bible College at Columbia, Mo., home of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri. The class publishes the Students' Religious Journal, a weekly.

Paris Reading Jack London

One of the late Jack London's works is again chosen as a serial for a French paper. This is the third or fourth of his books which have appeared in daily serial form. L'Auto, the athletic daily paper, is presenting its readers with "White Fang", which in French is "Croc Blanc," translated by M.M. Paul Gruyer and Louis Postif.

MATHEWS TO ST. PAUL

To Direct Circulation of Dispatch and Pioneer-Press

The St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer-Press this week announced the appointment of J. A. Mathews as director of circulation for the two newspapers, succeeding W. E. Sherlock, who, though still with the organization, has assumed other duties.

Mathews comes to St. Paul from the San Antonio Light, where he was in charge of circulation. Before starting circulation work, he was a telegraph operator for the Associated Press. He joined the Indianapolis Star in 1904, then the Indianapolis Journal, and later went to the Indianapolis News.

C. C. M. A. Elects New Members

The California Circulation Managers' Association this week announced election of six circulation managers to membership. They are: E. T. Hamrick, Pasadena Star-News; Harry M. Cahill, Fresno Republican; Frank E. Rhode, Sacramento Union; V. E. Caugbell, Fresno Republican; Homer L. Coffman, Fresno Republican; and Fred Brandt, San Francisco Bulletin. The association decided to meet in Los Angeles in 1925.

Newark Press Bankruptcy

Claimants in the bankruptcy proceedings against the Newark (N. J.) Press, tabloid newspaper, which ceased publication recently, have been ordered to show cause why the property should not be sold to satisfy creditors Dec. 2. John A. Bernhard of Newark is the receiver.

Doorly Rejoins Fairchild Publication

N. W. Doorly, formerly connected with the Fairchild Publications, and for the last two years president of W. I. Tracy Inc., advertising agency, will become advertising manager of Women's Wear, the Fairchild retailers' daily, effective Dec. 1. W. I. Tracy, Inc., will continue as before with the same personnel, excepting Mr. Doorly.

New San Francisco Managing Editor

Mort J. Donoghue was recently made managing editor of the San Francisco Daily Herald by Cornelius Vanderbilt, president of the Vanderbilt Newspapers Inc. He served on the Los Angeles Daily News as feature editor, going to San Francisco several months ago as assistant managing editor.

Belin, Radio Inventor, Returns

Edouard Belin, an inventor of apparatus for transmitting photographs by telegraph, arrived in this country last week on the S. S. Paris for a visit.

First nine months of 1924

Carried more Men's Wear advertising than the World and Sun combined.

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

Norwegian Newsprint

Prompt shipments Inquiries solicited

NORWEGIAN PAPER MILLS AGENCY, INC.

33 West 42nd Street New York City

Telephone Penn. 7443

Cincinnati Advertising Values Positive, Comparative and Superlative

Positively good advertising value in Cincinnati—a dollar's worth for every one hundred cents of your appropriation,—can be bought in any one of the four Cincinnati newspapers. During the first nine months of 1924 these four papers carried a total of 22,298,906 lines of display advertising. Of this, the two morning papers carried 4,404,134 lines on week days and 4,522,280 lines on Sundays,—8,926,414 lines in all.

Comparatively the two afternoon papers made even a better showing. With no Sunday editions to swell their volume, they carried a total of 13,372,492 lines of display advertising. This excess in the lineage of the afternoon papers over the morning papers, 4,446,078 lines, was more than double the total lineage, daily and Sunday, of one of the morning papers,—was approximately 50% greater than the total daily lineage of the other,—and was more than the combined daily lineage of both morning papers.

Superlatively good, however, was the record of the Times-Star which carried 8,632,799 lines of display advertising, leading the second evening paper by 3,893,106 lines and almost doubling the daily lineage of the two morning papers combined. The leadership of the Times-Star was equally definite in the realms of national and local display, in both of which the Times-Star has been the record maker of Cincinnati newspaperdom for seventeen consecutive years.

Goo —all the Cincinnati Newspapers are good advertising media in a good trading center.

Better—the evening papers with larger home circulation.

Best—the Times-Star which goes to practically 100% of the native, literate, white families in the most American of American cities.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

IOWA WEEKLIES SEEK MORE NATIONAL COPY

ecide to Work Through Manufacturers to Promote Local Tie-Ups at Iowa City Meet—Henry J. Allen Speaks

Publishers of weekly newspapers in owa are convinced that advertising gencies are not giving them their just hare of national advertising. This was he tenor of the southeastern district con-rence of the Iowa Press Association eld in Iowa City, Nov. 14, under the uspices of the University of Iowa School f Journalism and the extension division.

A round-table discussion on national dvertising brought out the fact that in pite of recent slight increases, the amount f national advertising in weekly papers f the state is far from satisfactory. An ducational program similar to that in-ituted last year by the daily papers of he state will probably be launched by he Iowa association in the near future.

Two plans were suggested for increas-ng the volume of national advertising. Both are aimed at the manufacturer and ot at the agencies. G. L. Caswell, man-ging director of the Iowa Press Asso-iation, believes that publishers should ork through local merchants. In a let-er which he has recently sent to members f the association he points out that anufacturers are unacquainted with local onditions and are permitting agencies o divert too much advertising to maga-ines, overlooking meanwhile the greater ield of local advertising. He has asked ditors to have their local dealers write he manufacturers of their goods ex-plaining their needs in regard to adver-ising.

Senator E. M. Smith, publisher of the Winterset Madisonian, presented a plan o the conference which would check up definitely on the effectiveness of national dvertising used without a local hook-up. He has prepared questionnaires for men nd women with the names of some 15 nationally advertised products handled exclusively by some merchant in his town printed on them. In preliminary tests Senator Smith found that in the case of one product only was there anything like agreement among his fellow towns-men as to the local dealer who sold the product.

The questionnaires, Senator Smith pointed out, might be adapted to use in any town. They offer undeniable power that national advertising without a local hook-up loses most of its effec-tiveness, he maintains.

The two plans evoked a great deal of favorable comment from the conference and it is expected within the coming year that publishers of Iowa will utilize both in bringing national advertising to the weekly papers of the state.

Among the other speakers at the con-ference were Henry J. Allen of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon; Prof. C. H. Weller, head of the University of Iowa School of Journalism, and President Walter A. Jessup of the University.

"After six years' absence from my newspaper the first thing I had to cure my men of was 'banneritis,'" declared Mr. Allen. "They bannered things so much that when any real news did hap-pen we didn't have any type in the shop big enough to tell about it."

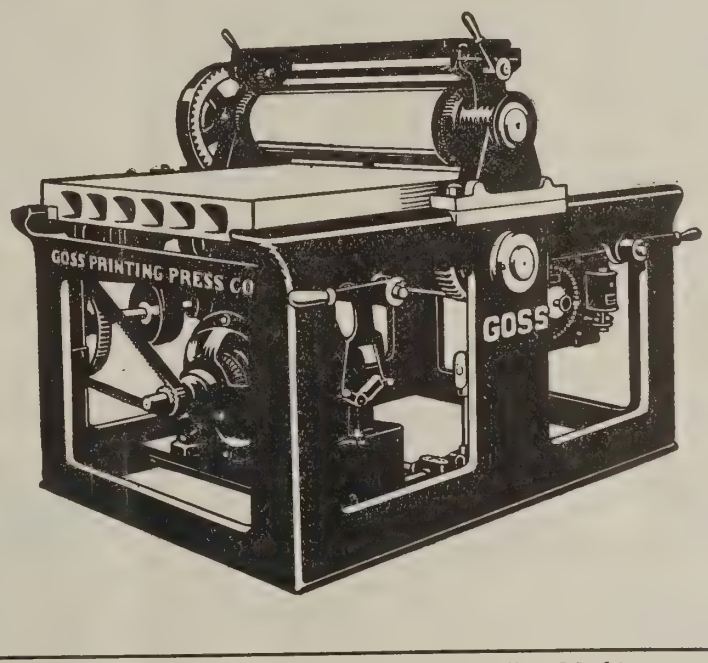
Too much syndicated material is driving personality from newspapers, according to Mr. Allen. If there is any one thing responsible for the prominence of Kansas newspapers it is the fact that they are made in Kansas without the help of the syndicates, he believes. "Picture the home town girl that does something rather than a Hollywood queen even if the local girl isn't quite so good looking," he said. "Write your own editorials, write your own features."

Crime news creeps down between the sheets in the Wichita Beacon, according to the former governor, and by his or-ders. "Formerly I licked my chops, jour-nalistically, over a crime," he said, "and put it on the front page. Now I deplore it and put it on the inside."

DAILIES TO ADVERTISE

Wisconsin Group Planning Campaign to Promote State

The daily newspapers of Wisconsin are sponsoring an intensive advertising campaign designed to sell the sales pos-sibilities of the state to the country as a whole, and to manufacturers, adver-tisers, and agencies in particular.



The campaign as outlined is the most comprehensive state advertising project yet undertaken by any of the several state newspaper publishers' associations now conducting similar campaigns.

The initial schedule calls for extensive space in advertising publications and met-ropolitan newspapers as well as in Wis-consin dailies. All advertisements ap-pearing outside the state will appear si-multaneously in Wisconsin daily news-papers, and a comprehensive series of special advertisements have been devel-oped for exclusive local use.

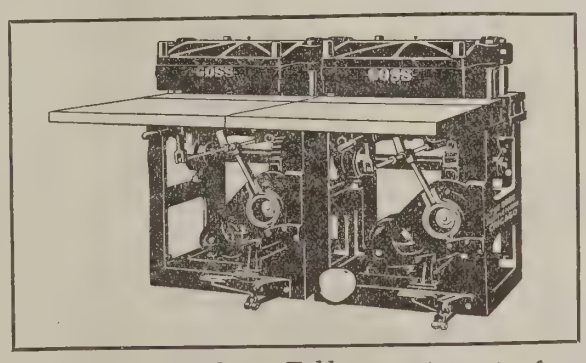
The Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen Advertising Agency of Mil-waukee is placing the advertising.

LOS ANGELES
EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.
Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631
IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY
REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY

Goss Combination Wet and Dry Mat Rolling Machine

MORE IN USE THAN ANY OTHER



What stereotypers the world over think of Goss Mat Rollers is best indicated by the fact there are more of them in use than any other dry mat rolling machine on the market today. They roll wet mats in 11¼ seconds; dry mats in 22½ seconds. Both ends of cylinder are set at same time.

Goss patented stretching roller produces dry mats without a wrinkle—exclusive! Cylinders of heavy cast-iron with forged steel shafts. Extra heavy bed—no racks—large enough to run chase with columns crosswise. And many other out-standing features. Write for catalog.

Carried in Stock

Flat Casting Boxes
Friction-Driven Routers
Automatic Gas Fired Steam Generators
Combination Jig Saws and Drills

Catalog on request

Goss Motor-Driven Steam Tables are made in units of one platen. As many units as desired may be placed side by side. 30,000 lb. "follow up" pressure. Automatic releases. Power used only while platens are being raised or lowered.

Carried in Stock

Radial Arm Flat Routers
Ball Bearing Form Tables
Combination Wet and Dry Mat Rollers Motor-Driven Steam Tables

Catalog on request

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS COMPANY
CHICAGO
The Goss Printing Press Company of England, Ltd., London

FIVE MORE NATIONAL ADVERTISERS JOIN MOVE TO RESTRICT BILLBOARDS

Number Now in Movement Against Landscape Defacement Totals Twenty-One, Mrs. W. L. Lawton Reports—Describes Campaign

FIVE more large advertisers have joined the growing group who have agreed to restrict their billboard advertising to commercial locations, Mrs. W. L. Lawton, chairman of the National Committee for Restriction of Outdoor Advertising, disclosed this week in an interview with EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

They are: Fisk Tire Company, Mountain City Mill Company (Orient Flour), Indian Refining Company, Inc., the International Harvester Company, Chicago and Cluett, Peabody & Co., Inc.

The total list of advertisers who have responded favorably to the "public opinion drive" against landscape defacement by posters and board, now numbers 20, Mrs. Lawton said. All have agreed on expiration of present contracts to tear down their signs in rural districts, using billboard space in commercial locations only. The list follows:

Kelly-Springfield Tire Company; B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company; Hood Rubber Company; Ajax Rubber Company; Kirkman & Son (soap manufacturers); Pillsbury Flour Mills Company; Washburn Crosby Company (Gold Medal Flour); Champion Spark Plug Company; Ward Baking Company; Dodge Brothers; Fleischmann Company; Gulf Refining Company; Sun Oil Company; Standard Oil Company of California; Standard Oil Company of New York; Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Mrs. Lawton in the interview summed up the year's campaign she has directed, and outlined plans for a new drive in the billboard war, scheduled to start Jan. 1.

The committee Mrs. Lawton heads was formed in November, 1923. Then a group of men and women representing state and national organizations interested in the problems of restricting signboard advertising in order to save scenic beauty, decided to form an independent committee to act as a clearing house for the work of all these organizations.

"Our policy," Mrs. Lawton explained, "is restriction of signboard advertising, not abolition.

"We appreciate the value of advertising. If business needs signboards, let us have signboards, but let them be restricted to commercial districts where they will not injure scenic or civic beauty.

"We stand for no rural boards, except on the place of business. In the towns and cities we stand for no signboards where they injure civic beauty or residential values.

"Our plan of action is simple. We are trying to convince the advertiser that the public resents the signboard smeared across every landscape.

"The advertiser must have the goodwill of the people. Therefore, we feel that if we convince advertisers that the public resents rural signboards, they will cease to use them.

"And the business of the country will not suffer because rural boards are removed. Only 5 per cent of the billboards in the United States are in rural districts."

Convinced their policy represents public opinion generally, the National Committee for Restriction of Outdoor Advertising, organized a protest by letter campaign.

A list of 175 advertisers using billboards was prepared, Mrs. Lawton said, and the more than 50 organizations cooperating in the work urged their members to write individual letters to the presidents of these companies.

"This protest by letter campaign started Dec. 1, 1923, and we started out sending an average of 400 letters a week to each of these 175 presidents," Mrs. Lawton declared.

"By March of this year our reports showed that these presidents were receiving an average of 1000 letters a week, all protesting against rural signs.

"This of course was too much. We do not want to be a burden, and this coming year we mean to spread out more."

Naturally, as Mrs. Lawton pointed out, the signboard advertising agencies, "viewed with alarm" this mass attack against their business.

"They formed what they called the Public Relations Committee of the Organized Outdoor Advertising Industry and started what they called a campaign for reform from within," Mrs. Lawton explained.

"We are willing to confer with the signboard companies and we foster the freest interchange of opinion with them," she said. "But we don't favor the formation of a joint committee with them, as they suggest, for the restriction of billboards. Their ideals and ours are entirely different.

"For instance, the president of one of the largest signboard companies in the West came to one of our recent executive board meetings to explain this national committee, which he said the signboard companies had formed to keep signs from scenic locations. He mentioned the great national parks. But he said we had no right to restrict signs from ordinary rural roads, as long as the boards are well kept and well painted.

"We preferred to keep on as we started.

"We believe that if we do not want signboards, however artistic, we must tell it to the advertiser, and we must speak in no uncertain terms. Outdoor advertising claims it has tripled since the war."

Mrs. Lawton was extremely optimistic in regard to the prospects for the 1925 drive.

"Just the other day I received encouraging letters from organizations cooperating with us in three widely separated states. Maine is now organized and is demanding a state amendment," she said.

"Mrs. A. A. Passer, fine arts chairman, of the Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs, reported the women of her state were advocating a state amendment, and the same word came to me from Texas, where H. B. Aytes, managing director of the Old Spanish Trail, is heading the organizations which are trying to push billboard legislation there."

Mrs. Lawton also pointed out the resolution passed by the New York State League of Women Voters at their annual convention at the Hotel Astor, Nov. 17-19, New York, endorsing the work of the National Committee for Restriction of Outdoor Advertising.

The resolution follows:

Whereas: The natural beauty of the country is a great spiritual asset, a national resource to be conserved as jealously as our material resources, and

Whereas: A National Committee has been formed to work for the Restriction of Outdoor Advertising to Commercial locations, where it will not injure scenic or civic beauty and

Whereas: This Committee states that it does not oppose outdoor advertising as such, but only outdoor advertising when in non-commercial locations, therefore

Be It Resolved: That the New York State League of Women Voters endorses the policy of the National Committee, and recommends the local Leagues of the state to study and support this movement.

The list of organizations co-operating for the restriction of outdoor advertising follows:

American Civic Association; National Highway Association; Garden Club of America; General Federation of Women's Clubs; Adirondack Mountain Club; American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society; American Federation of Arts; National Academy of Design; National Society of Women Painters and Sculptors; National Garden Association; Society of Little Gardens; American Society of Landscape Architects; Massachusetts Civic League; N. Y. State Association of Real Estate Boards; N. Y. State Automobile Association; N. Y. State League of Women Voters; N. Y. State Home Bureau; Federated Women's Clubs of New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Texas, Florida, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Oregon, Michigan, Ohio, Colorado, Virginia; Society of Farm Women of Pennsylvania; Citizens Union of New York City; City Club of New York; Fine Arts Federation of New York; Municipal Art Society of New York; Municipal Art League of Chicago; Conservation Council of Chicago; New York Water Color Club; League to Protect Riverside Park; Sorosis; Women's City Club of New York; Federated Garden Clubs of Long Island; Long Island Federation of Women's Clubs; Halifax Country Garden Clubs, Florida; Philadelphia Congress of Art (45 organizations); Florida Development Board (State Chamber of Commerce); New Jersey Home Bureau; Outdoor Circle of Honolulu.

246,043

was the average net paid daily circulation of The Baltimore Sun (morning and evening) for the

Six-Month Period Ending Sept. 30

The average net Sunday circulation of The Sunday Sun for the same period was 177,548.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

PRESS CONGRESS MEET IN ROME, JUNE, 1925

Third Session of World Organization Will Follow N. E. A. Richmond Convention—U. S. Delegates to Sail from New York

The third session of the Press Congress of the World will be held at Rome, Italy, in June and July, 1925.

This decision was reached at a conference of the Officers of the Press Congress held at the School of Journalism of the University last week. Those present were George W. Marble, president of the National Editorial Association, J. W. Brown, publisher of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, New York City, secretary-treasurer of the Press Congress of the World, and Dean Walter Williams, president of the congress.

The date chosen follows the meeting of the National Editorial Association, which will be held in Richmond, Va., in June.

Dean Williams was named chairman of the committee on program and Mr. Brown of the committee on transportation.

Striking Printers Accept Arbitration

Printers on the staff of the Saskatoon (Sask.) Star, who went on strike at midnight on Nov. 13, returned to work Nov. 18, at the old scale of wages. The Star Publishing Company agreed with the printers to have an arbitration board decide between the Saskatoon rate of 91¾ cents per hour and the Alberta rate of 94 cents as claimed by the printers.

Who's Who in the CONSOLIDATED PRESS

A. S. ANDERECK

A. S. ANDERECK, Business Superintendent of the Western Division of the Consolidated Press, is another C. P. A. man, who, while on the business side today, has had thorough training and experience in the editorial end and knows every phase of newspaper making.

Beginning as a reporter on The Kankakee, Ill., Democrat, Mr. Andereck became editor and publisher of the Selma, Ala., Times and also of the Atchison, Kans., Champion. Later he went into press association work, with headquarters in Chicago, where he is still stationed with the C. P. A.

Having worked in the south, the east and the west, Mr. Andereck knows the newspaper field thoroughly. His professional advice has been sought by many publishers. He is another example of the type of men in this "Know-how" organization, producing service for discriminating publishers.

The Consolidated Press Association
Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

STRICTLY A NEWSPAPER

The New York Times holds to its single purpose of gathering and printing the news.

News is the indispensable element of a newspaper for which there can be no substitute, for which nothing else can compensate.

News alone has an unchanging value for those who buy and read a newspaper. News holds an interest above all.

The New York Times spares neither effort nor expense to gather the news. The energy and trained intelligence of an unrivaled staff, the unequaled use of cable, telegraph and local facilities, assemble nightly news of world, nation, state and city for the readers of The New York Times.

The New York Times has created and maintains a news organization which serves it daily with an enterprise and an impartial judgment of the importance of news which commend it to all intelligent and thoughtful persons. The slogan All the News That's Fit to Print is taken by The Times as the simple statement of a newspaper's task. It gathers news wherever news happens.

The New York Times always covers the big news best. With The New York Times the news comes first.

LA PI

A DAILY NEWSPAPER OF BUE

Founded by Dr. Jo

The Newspaper with the Larg

The average daily circulation is more than 250,-000 copies and is constantly increasing. This newspaper uses one third of all the news print paper imported in Argentina.

In one single edition LA PRENSA has published mor

The blanket circulation of this newspaper is uniform in the entire Argentine Republic, and is equally extraordinary in the near-by countries. In all the principal towns and cities it has branch offices and agents dedicated exclusively to increasing its circulation.

In its daily editions it print own exclusive news received the world. It receives daily n cable in a receiving office ins news from the interior of the

Advertising Rate Card of LA PRENSA

In Argentine paper "pesos", worth about 42c American gold.

	Prices per centimeter
On the first display advertising page—Head of column touching text, or leading advertisement	$15.—
Surrounded by text	15.—
Touching text	12.—
Head of column touching text, preferred corner, surrounded by text on any page, or next to funeral notices, top of column	10.—
Next to text on any page	8.—
Next to funeral notices	8.—
Top of column or on serial story page	7.—
Without specified location	6.—

FULL PAGES

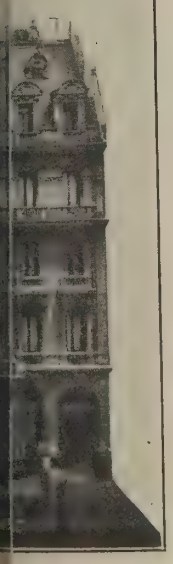
	Back Page	Inside Pages
For designated day	$2,500	$2,300
For any day at option of LA PRENSA within limit of four days	2,300	2,100

Note—Prices quoted are in Argentine paper "pesos," each peso being worth at par rate of exchange approximately 42 cents U. S. gold.

LA PRENSA receives the world-wide news service of the

ENSA

REPUBLIC OF ARGENTINA
ber 18, 1869



Circulation in South America

The daily editions always include more than thirty pages and the illustrated editions of Sundays and Thursdays exceed forty pages, of which usually more than half is reading matter.

000 advertisements, counting display and classified

o four full pages of its wireless from all parts of 00 words transmitted by vn building. Telegraphic ually complete

The editorial and business offices and the printing plant, the branches in the different sections of the city of Buenos Aires and in various other cities, the paper warehouses, light and power plants, garages, etc., are installed in buildings owned by the newspaper and constructed especially for the purpose for which they are used.

Branches of LA PRENSA In Foreign Countries

NEW YORK—
For news and information, subscriptions and advertisements, apply to Sr. Romeo Ronconi, exclusive representative of LA PRENSA, 51 Chambers Street.

PARIS—
No. 41 Boulevard des Capucins.—Director, Sr. Francisco Casaux. Reading rooms containing all of the principal periodicals of Latin America. Meeting place for South American residents of Paris. Free exposition of Argentine products. Telegraphic news of the principal events of South America. Free service in taking care of the mail of South Americans resident in Paris.

GENOA—
Mario Fantozzi, Piazza de Ferrari, No. 36.

LONDON—
For advertisements and information apply to Mr. Harold Neill, 22 Eldon Road, Kensington, W.

MADRID—
Apply to Sr. Mariano Martin Fernandez, Plaza Colenque, No. 3.

MONTEVIDEO—
Calle Ciudadela 1387. Director, Sr. Manuel Oribe Coronel. Information bureau and office for taking advertisements and subscriptions. Agents, Fonseca y Moratorio, Calle Buenos Aires 722.

ASUNCION, PARAGUAY—
For information, advertisements and subscriptions, Agencia Plate, Palmas 435.

ress Associations—averaging 8,000 words by cable daily.

MIXED FACES

Continuously Composed—Continuously Distributed

WITHOUT removing his hands from the keyboard, the operator of a Model 26 Linotype can set intricate catalogue, directory or advertising matter in which several different faces are combined in the same paragraph or even in the same line. He can set it practically as fast as straight matter because the matrices from the two main and two auxiliary magazines can be mixed at will and are automatically returned to their respective magazines.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Agencies in the Principal Cities of the World

520.24.11-F

Composed on the LINOTYPE in the Caslon No. 3 Series, with hand-lettered title line

ACHRACH STUDIOS FIND NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING IDEAL MEDIUM

mpany Has Been Using Dailies for Twenty Years and Developed Semi-National Business—Favors Rotogravure Sections

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

NCOLN gawkily faced the crowd at the dedication of the national cemetery Gettysburgh that November day in 3, and in a few words delivered the ress which will live through the ages. Somewhere in the concourse of listen- was David Bachrach, a photographer, o recorded with his camera Lincoln at historic event. Had modern news- er facilities existed, doubtless the otograph would have been published n after in the rotogravure sections of the newspapers.

The elder Bachrach numbered many the distinguished people of the day ong his patrons and built up a reputa- n for artistic work. That was the ndation for the present far-flung, semi- ional Bachrach business, which leads field in the use of newspaper adver- ing as well as in other ways.

Today the Bachrach name has come to identified in the public mind with a gh standard of photography. It is obable that this could never have been ained without advertising, regardless of e quality of the work done. In the mpany's advertising policy, which has en in effect for 20 years, there are les- ns which are applicable not only to the otographer who wants a growing busi- ss, but also to many other lines.

Gradually Bachrach studios have been ened in principal cities in the East, uth and Middle West. Those in the uth formed what has been termed the uthern "chain" under Walter K. Bach- ch; the rest were developed under Louis abian Bachrach, both sons of the elder achrach. On Oct. 1, the north and south hains" were united, with Louis Fabian achrach as president and active head. fter Jan. 1, the new organization will known as Bachrach, Inc. It has 450 nployes, with division managers, and ntrally located finishing departments. ach studio has a local manager and other nployes who live in the town, banks cally and to all intents and purposes is local institution except that it has the dvantages of belonging to the Bachrach rganization. Advertising is placed from he Bachrach executive headquarters at Newton Centre, Mass., at local rates.

"Louis Fabian Bachrach is an ardent eliever in advertising," Miss Grace S. ower, the advertising manager, stated. Year by year our sales have grown and ur advertising has grown, and we would ot think of stopping our advertising. At the opening of each year, we plan our ublicity work on a budget basis.

"For us the newspaper has proven the deal medium. It enables us to center ur effort in and around the cities which ave our studios, over the names and ddresses of those studios. There is no waste. It covers all the prospects well nd builds the Bachrach institutional eputation.

"I am particularly enthusiastic about otogravure and only wish more news- apers offered this. We could not ask for a better medium to show up our photographs, as it affords localized cir- ulation with beautiful effects.

"Recently, we ran a test of results from advertising for a studio in which we are interested. We made a special offer in a newspaper rotogravure section and the same offer in other papers in the same city with five times the circulation. The rotogravure brought orders for 300 sit- tings and the black and white 100. This shows why, for our purpose, we favor rotogravure. Where we use black and white, as we do in some cities, you will note we seldom try to reproduce photos, but rather utilize black silhouettes. After trying both, we find the latter more satis- factory for newsprint.

"We practically always devote our copy to getting over Bachrach quality and in- dividuality. It is institutional. The copy is hand-lettered without the local address. A photographic print is sent to the local newspapers, with letters in the street address."

A small amount of space is used in one or two class-magazines to form a back- ground. Direct mail work to lists of cus- tomers is conducted occasionally. Within a few months the company has tried the experiment of using car cards in a number of cities. These signs have been unique in that space has been cut in the card- board for an actual photograph to be in- serted from behind. The trains of some railroads also carry Bachrach signs in special positions. For some years the Tube under the Hudson has carried Bach- rach sign advertising. This type of ad- vertising is felt to have accomplished its purpose and will be continued.

Bachrach has used newspaper copy ranging from 50 lines to a full page. From its experience, the company believes that smaller advertising persistently used gets further than a big "splash" followed by silence, especially in building up prestige. In the case of a new studio, the company spends money for advertising out of proportion to the immediate earn- ings of the studio.

The newspaper advertising is used with greatest vigor for the 33 studios in the spring and early fall. The fall advertis- ing encourages early sittings for Christ- mas portraits. Where the photograph of a customer is to be used, permission is always obtained. The company finds three columns by ten inches an effective size.

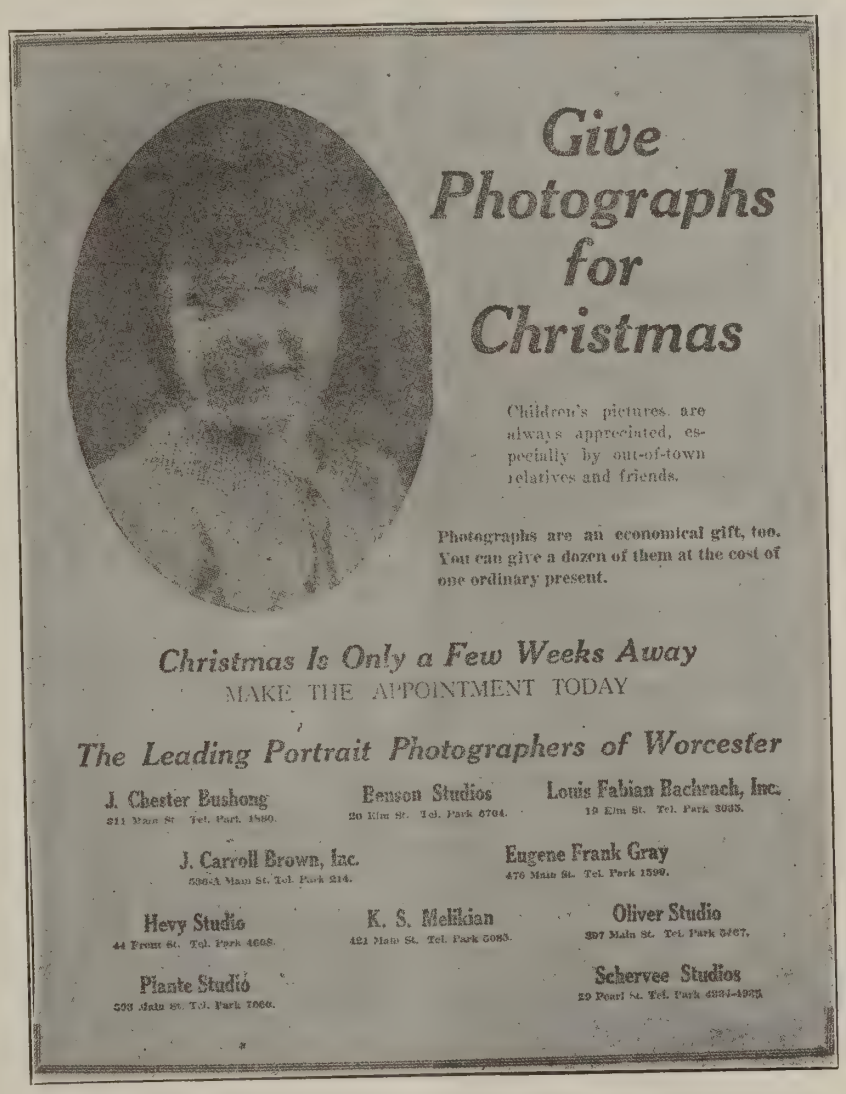
Below a photograph of a young woman, appeared this copy recently:

The prestige of years of growth, of years of quality, service and care in the production of Bachrach Portraits of Distinction by the most comprehensive photographic organization in the United States. Built upon thorough business principles, yet with no sacrifice to Art, should enable you to feel implicit confi- dence in selecting your photographer.

If contemplating Portraits for Christmas, we urge you to make an appointment for a sitting now. Bachrach Portraits are moderately priced at the studio from $15 the dozen. Chil- dren from $10.

Among other newspapers which have been used have been the Boston Herald, Philadelphia Public Ledger, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Washington Star, Washing- ton Post, Baltimore Sun, Hartford Courant, Providence Journal, Springfield Republican, Waterbury Republican, De- troit Free Press and the Detroit Satur- day Night. Some newspapers are used all the year, others seasonally.

The Bachrach code of ethics outlined for all workers is broad. One article of it holds up the importance of speaking well of competitors and helping them every way possible. As one indication of this the Bachrach organization nearly in- variably pays its pro rata share of any local co-operative advertising published by the newspaper to boost business for all local studios. Usually the newspaper ad- vertising department gets up the copy and sells the idea.



"Give Photographs for Christmas" was the heading in one piece of copy in a co-operative campaign staged by the Wor- cester (Mass.) Telegram, which is repro- duced on this page.

Ten leading portrait photographers shared the cost.

Newspapers are furnished with photo- graphs by Bachrach without charge for editorial use, where permission has been obtained and where the credit line will be used.

The company's slogan in all of its ad- vertising is "Photographs of Distinction."

Newspaper advertising truly can claim Bachrach as one more shining example among many business successes which have been furthered by its constant use. As a reputation builder, the newspaper is admirably adapted for the job. And it "hasn't scratched yet" the surface of its possibilities.

Specimen of cooperative art photography advertising.

Imperial
Soars In Dayton

The city of Dayton, Ohio, ex- emplifies progress. Out of Day- ton have come two of our greatest inventions—the aeroplane and the cash register. Within its borders are found thousands of leading manufacturing concerns. And here also in the News, Herald and Journal, we find the typical progressive American newspaper.

Inasmuch as the publishers of these three papers have been unanimous in selecting the Im- perial Plus Metal Plan, we can- not help but feel proud that Im- perial soars high in Dayton.

Adopting the Imperial Plus Metal Plan typifies progress of a publication. It means that the publisher sees the need of a plan whereby he can add years of use- fulness to his type metal and at the same time increase its effi- ciency. That's progress!

Get Acquainted With the Plus Plan

Publishers everywhere are talking about the Plus Plan. Hundreds have adopted it. We want you to become acquainted with this popular, dependable type metal plan. Ask the pub- lishers who are using it now. Better still, write and ask us to send you a copy. We believe that the hundreds of shops, large and small, that now place reliance in the Plus Plan justifies your investigation.

Imperial METAL

Linotype—Monotype—Intertype—Stereotype
Elrod—Ludlow—Linograph—Thompson

Imperial Type Metal Co.

New York—Philadelphia—Cleveland—Detroit

Results of a Rece

Several months ago I was asked t establish a definite ratio between foundry facilities and press capacity, so that a met ropolitan publisher might know how many units of Junior Autoplate-Autoshaver equipment to provide for a press equip ment of a given size.

A survey of the principal newspaper plants proved this to be impracticable. In no two were conditions alike. But a use ful discovery was made. Not six publishers were found who had established a correct ratio of capacity between composing room, foundry, and pressroom; the rest had neg lected their foundries in one way or another.

In nearly every case the capacity of the composing and pressroom exceeded that of plate making. Forms which the pressroom eeded habitually clogged the foundry like log jam in a stream.

Foundry Survey

An analysis of this defect disclosed the ct that most foundries were either badly ranged or obsolete or insufficiently equip- ed, which caused time losses and labor aste and not infrequently compelled the ressroom to run more presses than were ctually needed for the work in hand.

The conclusion I draw from this survey that it has not been sufficiently per- eived that the foundry is a bridge—the nly bridge—over which the composing oom supplies the pressroom, and that un- ss it be adequate for the traffic it is xpected to bear distribution suffers and e paper is hurt.

HENRY A. WISE WOOD

EDITORIAL

A STRANGE "CRIME"

THE Baltimore Post, a Scripps-Howard newspaper, has the distinguished honor of being the first newspaper in the history of this land of the free to be indicted for the "crime" of printing the news.

The New York Herald Tribune is second and Kansas City Journal Post is third in this Hall of Fame.

The news in question was taken from the public records of the local collector of income taxes.

Until a few weeks ago these records were closed to the public. Through an absurdly unconstitutional act newspapers had been restrained from publishing that class of public information. Then Congress, after long debate and by a big vote provided an amended law which declared for publicity of income taxes. It was a bungling job, however, for Congress failed to repeal the old clauses of the law which penalized publication of tax returns.

Now we are to have test cases.

No one questions the right of Congress to make laws to control the departments of Federal government. If there is a law which prohibits the Treasury Department from giving out to the public income tax returns it doubtless would be respected, at least until public opinion has broken it down.

But the gentle business of attempting to penalize newspapers for publishing news is something strange and novel. It is a precedent which journalism should resist to the last ditch. It is so plain an attempt to set up a fundamental principle of abridgement of the freedom of the press that we cannot imagine any court even entertaining the complaint.

A great many people seem to be opposed to the publication of income tax returns.

A great many people are opposed to the publication of many other departments of pleasant and unpleasant news, including all other classes of tax information.

But those questions are not involved in the present discussion. The question now is whether a newspaper can be penalized for publishing news. We do not think this will happen. If it does it will be upset in the course of time by the Supreme Court of the United States. The press cannot be gagged in this or any other cause. The constitutional guarantee is as clear as daylight.

How many words are you wasting in your writing? More fun than a cross-word puzzle, and much more valuable way to spend an hour, is to take your stuff for a day or week and see how many superfluous words you can clip out.

PROFITABLE TRIANGLE

"THE advertiser is but one side of the triangle, which consists of advertising agent and publisher as well. If advertising as a business force is to achieve its greatest usefulness, it must be through cordial co-operation among these three."

This statement made by G. Lynn Sumner, upon his election to the presidency of the Association of National Advertisers, deserves a frame and wall space throughout the publishing, advertising and selling world.

It is the new spirit. We saw it greatly in evidence at Chicago a few weeks ago. It animated the session of the advertisers at Atlantic City last week. It is good sense and good business.

An old, old child's song, which has as its refrain, "You in your little corner, and I in mine," comes up in memory as fitting. You business man and advertiser—no one can understand and solve your producing problems but yourself. That is your corner. You advertising agent—specializing in the art of publicity, your corner is well defined. You publisher—yours is not to produce merchandise and in the national field you cannot hope to visualize and satisfy the advertising ambitions and aims of all advertisers. You yield to the legion of agents who cater to the special requirements of diversified business. Your corner is to lay the printed word before the general public in acceptible form to effect the maximum value in behalf of the space buyer.

Mr. Sumner has coined a phrase that will endure.

Do you find yourself stumbling over prejudices? Keep to the open road!

EXODUS

Chapter XXIII—1

Thou shalt not raise a false report; put not thine hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness.

RADIO VIEWS

SPEAKING for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, J. C. McQuiston accurately, we believe, states that radio is the natural ally of the daily newspaper, but is not an agency which will supersede the newspaper or cause it to accept second place in the dissemination of news. He says that radio broadcasting has not the facilities nor the talent to function as a general news carrier.

However, our correspondent argues for the broadcasting of great news events saying that radio programs of the present merely stimulate public interest. He cites the case of the phonograph: It was predicted that radio would injure the phonograph business, but it was later found that it merely stimulated the sale of records.

Radio did not supersede the phonograph, not because it does not furnish music, but because it does not make it possible for the listener to select his music. The radio will not supersede the newspaper because the listener cannot select items of interest. But radio broadcasting of news does interfere with the newspaper business. The number of people who will buy a newspaper because of interest created or stimulated by radio announcements surely will not outweigh the number who will be satisfied merely to know that Yale won, or that Coolidge was elected. In large cities newspaper extras to cover fixed events are even now being discontinued.

We do not argue against radio. We do contend that as a natural newspaper ally it should and ultimately will be a local newspaper auxiliary.

"I can do anything, from publishers' desk down through a newspaper office," is not half so good a recommendation for a candidate for a situation, as is: "I know more of this particular subject than any man in this city—the crowd will follow me." Get a specialty, if you would prosper and be confident of the future!

November 29, 1924 Volume 57, No. 27

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Bldg.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout, 10 Radcliffe Road, Winchmore Hill, N. 21.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

MAGAZINE CENSORS

FIFTY-EIGHT newsdealers have been arrested in and near Boston and the officers of a New York magazine publishing house have been indicted in Massachusetts for publishing and selling stories and illustrations which are objected to by a private organization of self-constituted censors, the Watch and Ward Society, which corresponds to the New York Society for the Prevention of Vice.

It is alleged that the American News Company which distributed the magazines in question, had an agreement with the society calling for the submission to that society of advance copies of such magazines for censorship before they were distributed for sale.

A suit to test the right of the society to censor periodicals was proposed by the publishing company but refused; but inconspicuous and poor newsdealers were haled before the courts, some times accepting $100 fines for guilty pleas, some times fighting through local lawyers.

It is reported that there is now to be a concerted action among magazine men to test the right of an unofficial body to act as the guardian of public morals.

That matter deserves a thorough test.

If you subscribe to the talk that newspapers "invade privacy" by publishing the incomes of those fortunate enough to contribute federal income taxes, you must in fairness at the same time consider all other forms of alleged invasion of the privacy of individuals by the American press.

THE LONDON SURVEY

EDITOR & PUBLISHER presents with this issue a trade survey of the magical cities of London and Edinburgh, which will be an invaluable asset to the large and rapidly increasing body of American merchandise producing and advertising concerns engaged in international trade. The survey speaks of huge numbers of consumers, as eager as we for the material comforts and aids of life. The host of American advertising men who visited England last summer testify both to this fact and to the greater fact that the people of the British Isles are well able to possess that which they feel they need. This survey is another eloquent testimonial to the close-knitting ties of friendship and trade among the English speaking races.

One considers our wondrous privileges with new zest when reading: "To give the name of this high potentate to the public would be an unthinkable act."

COLUMN CHARACTERS

ONE gains the impression that many of the intimate friends of column conductors must be amazingly dull folk; smart or surprising talk seems scarce at the tea, tennis, poker or week-end parties attended by them. Gay and wise chatter from the hearthside is good column stuff, but we think the public cares not that, "Mrs. S. was there, looking sprightly," or that "Old Sam Simp sulkily bought another stack of blues." Old English literature which this form of writing imitates was notable because of intimate glimpses at interesting persons.

Anyhow, the circulators say that the income tax lists sold newspapers.

AN UGLY WORD

WE are in complete agreement with our correspondent, John H. A. Kelly, that the newspapers of this country should bar from their columns the ugly contraction "Xmas."

It is a profanation of one of the sacred words in our language.

It sets cathedral chimes to jazz.

Is the modern pace so fast that we may not spell out the name of the birthday of Him who gave us the faith by which most of us hope to live and die?

Tell your sales story quick and often!

PERSONALS

GDEN M. REID, editor and publisher of the New York Herald Tribune called on President Coolidge at White House, Nov. 20.

rank Munsey, owner of the New York and the New York Telegram and ail, Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the w York Times, and Melville E. Stone, nsellor of the Associated Press, are nbers of a committee making plans a dinner to be given at the Waldorf-oria Hotel, New York, Dec. 11 in or of Owen D. Young.

William Southworth Hunt, part owner the Newark (N. J.) Sunday Call last week appointed by Governor er of New Jersey to be State lget Commissioner and confidential iser to the governor. Mr. Hunt is president of the village of South nge, N. J.

ardner Cowles, publisher of the Des ines Register and Tribune-News was sitor in New York this week.

I. S. Scott, general manager of the roit News was a visitor in New York week.

dward A. Blair, editor and publisher the Mexico (N. Y.) Independent, is rically ill following a stroke of alysis.

eorge C. Shor, editor and manager of International News Service, left New k last week on a trip to Mexico City, xico, where he will attend the inaugu-on of President Plutarco Elias Calles, v. 30 and Dec. 1.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

DWARD H. HAMILTON, political writer of the Pacific coast who has on the San Francisco Examiner for years, with Mrs. Hamilton sailed on President Monroe, November 22, for ur around the world.

I. W. Lyman is now city editor of the oma (Wash.) News Tribune, succeeding Oscar Thompson who has accepted a post as associate editor of sical America.

Miss Winifred Nicholas, several years ety editor of the Bridgeport (Conn.) egram has resigned.

rank L. Blackadar, for four years mber of the reportorial staff of the dgeport (Conn.) Post has resigned to duct his own paper, The Sportsman, lished weekly in the interest of Con-ticut hunters and fishers.

lfred H. Sinks, who recently resigned n the Cleveland Times and Commer- last week returned to his former as a reporter on the Times.

ames Gray has been given charge of St. Paul Pioneer Press book page, ch has been widened in scope. Mr. y is also handling dramatic criticism eeding Randolph Edgar, resigned.

harles H. McTigue, capital repre-ative of the Albany Times-Union, been named secretary of the state commission.

ve Burkhardt, reporter for the Cleve-t Press as a feature stunt recently e in a locomotive cab from Cleveland Pittsburgh and wrote her experiences her paper.

on Wootton, caricaturist, of the veland Plain Dealer, and his bride, are e from a honeymoon spent in Canada.

William Marzolf, formerly with the Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, takes rge of the book page of the St. Paul ly News, succeeding Bernard Vaug-who continues with the paper.

rnest F. Hughitt, member of the rts staff of the Buffalo Evening News l Mrs. Hughitt are parents of a ghter born recently.

oseph Nutter has left the sporting artment of the Providence (R. I.) ning Bulletin to go to Nebraska.

uth Neely France, feature writer of Cincinnati Times-Star, has just com-ed her first novel "Nearly Married."

Clark B. Firestone, of the editorial staff of the Cincinnati Times-Star, has recently had published a volume of travel called "Coasts of Illusion" by Harpers.

M. R. Dunnagan, city editor of the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer, was elected historian of the Society of Mayflower descendants in the state of North Carolina last week.

Roger Orr, telegraph operator for the past 15 years on the Ogdensburg (N. Y.) Daily News, has resigned to enter the real estate and insurance business.

Miss Helen Galbraith, feature writer for the Providence (R. I.) Sunday Journal, has joined a New York advertising company.

Frederick L. Bagby, reporter on the Salt Lake City Telegram, is a candidate for a seat on the local school board.

Joseph Jordan, who for a while left the New York Evening World to conduct the column "Sought Seen and Heard" for the New York Evening Post, has joined the staff of the New York World as political writer.

Louis Weitzenkorn has returned to the staff of the New York World, having resigned as editor of Radio Stories, a Macfadden publication.

Eddie Johnson, chief of the Chicago Tribune's photographic staff, recently suffered a broken shoulder blade in an automobile accident.

Henry Wales, Paris correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, recently underwent an operation in the American Hospital at Neuilly, just outside of Paris.

William A. Lawhon, artist for years connected with the San Antonio Express, has resigned to take a similar position with the Houston Post-Dispatch. He has been succeeded by W. R. Patrick, formerly cartoonist with the San Antonio Light.

Lawrence Toepperwein has resigned from the art department of the San Antonio Express.

C. James Hanratty, who has resigned from the reportorial staff of the Montreal Gazette, to join the publicity department of the Canadian National Railways, was tendered a banquet by his colleagues last Saturday. John Bassett, vice-president of the Gazette publishing company, presented Mr. Hanratty with a traveling bag to mark the occasion.

Henry J. Collins, a member of the Lynn (Mass.) Daily Item city staff, last week received a commission as second lieutenant in the Medical Administrative Corps, U. S. Army Officers' Reserve Corps. During the World War he served as a sergeant overseas.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

S. S. ANDERSON, advertising manager of the Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune, has just returned from a business trip to California cities including Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Earl D. Cross has been chosen business manager of the St. Cloud (Minn.) Daily Journal-Press, succeeding J. F. Gaspard.

Fred Brandt, newspaper man who has been in the publicity department of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce has resigned to join the circulation department of the San Francisco Bulletin.

Marshall I. Hough, of the advertising staff of the Albany (N. Y.) Knickerbocker Press for the past three years has resigned to become advertising manager of the Union Furniture Company of Troy, N. Y.

Vernon R. Trachsel of San Diego, Cal., has joined the classified staff of the Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune.

E. W. Corman has been transferred from the Detroit office of the New York American to the New York office. W. J. Schmitt, formerly in charge of the Chicago office of the American, succeeds Corman in Detroit.

Austin B. Fenger has been appointed business manager of the Monterey (Cal.) Peninsula Daily Herald.

Charles H. Ferguson, with the foreign advertising department of the Chicago Herald and Examiner for several years, has joined the Chicago office of I. A. Klein, publishers' representative.

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

W. A. ELLIOTT, business manager of the Jacksonville Florida Times-Union, present president of the Associated Dailies of Florida, started his newspaper career as a carrier boy.

W. A. Elliott

His first newspaper work was delivering newspapers for the Nashville (Tenn.) American, now the Nashville Tennesscan. Later he became connected with the Nashville Banner, where he was employed in the circulation department.

Seventeen years ago he joined the staff of the Florida Times-Union. For a period of seven years he had charge of the circulation department of that newspaper, and for the past 10 years has been its business manager.

Elliott was president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association for the year 1922 and was also on the board of directors of that association for a number of years. He was elected to his present position as president of the Associated Dailies of Florida at a recent convention.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

ERNEST LARSEN, from rewrite desk, St. Paul Pioneer Press, to Sioux Falls (S. D.) Argust Leader. He is succeeded by Fred Fleming, late of the Des Moines News.

Leo H. Wise, from assistant news editor, Hendersonville (N. C.) Daily Times, to Palm Beach (Fla.) Times.

W. V. Branch, from advertising department, the Charlotte (N. C.) News, to copy desk, Charlotte Observer.

Dean H. Ashton, from Collingswood (N. J.) Retrospect, to Camden (N. J.) Post-Telegram.

Charles J. Lewin, from Rockford, (Ill.) Morning Star staff to New Bedford Standard. He is succeeded in Rockford by L. T. McNerney, former city editor of the Burlington (Ia.) Hawkeye, lately with the Waukegan Sun.

Claude A. Jagger, from Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, to staff, Providence (R. I.) Evening Bulletin.

Dave H. Harris, from San Diego (Cal.) Tribune, to copy desk, Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune.

W. J. Duchaine, from city editor, Marinette (Wis.) Eagle-Star, to news editor, Las Cruces (N. M.) Rio Grande Farmer.

Chas F. Theis, from San Antonio Evening News, to Houston Press reportorial staff.

MARRIED

WILLIAM BROMAGE, former assistant financial editor of the Providence Journal and Evening Bulletin, to Miss Florence H. Devine of Suffield, Conn., recently.

Philip L. Meyer, advertising manager of the Morristown (N. J.) Jerseyman, to Miss May Curtis, Nov. 21.

Herbert M. Hofford, general re-write man of the Providence (R. I.) Evening Bulletin, to Miss Margaret Schmid Labbee, of Providence, R. I., Thanksgiving Day.

WITH THE SPECIALS

H. P. NEUMAN, advertising manager of the American Press, is now in Chicago for the purpose of appointing a Western representative.

Benjamin & Kentnor Company has been appointed publishers representative for the Evanston (Ill.) News Index effective Nov. 24.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

MARYVILLE (Mo.) DEMOCRAT-FORUM a 55th birthday edition, Nov. 13.

Honolulu Star Bulletin, a 110-page Progress and Opportunity edition, Oct. 20.

Glendale (Cal.) Evening News, a 108-page development edition, Oct. 31.

Rockwood (Tenn.) Times, 16-page Front street Booster and White Way edition, Nov. 20.

Laurel (Miss.) Daily Leader, 64-page development edition.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

J. E. BOYLE, Associated Press correspondent at Madison. Wis., has resigned, effective Dec. 15, to accept a position as news editor of the Episcopal Church Association of Chicago and publisher of their magazine. He will be succeeded by R. G. Massock, at present night editor of the A. P. Dallas bureau.

N. W. Gold was this week appointed acting correspondent of the Associated Press in New Orleans. He had previously been day filing editor in the same bureau.

Guy T. Smith has been appointed night editor of the Associated Press, San Francisco bureau, succeeding L. W. Randall, who has resigned to join the staff of the San Francisco Daily News.

D. F. Brittle, who has been attached to the Associated Press Southern Division

For building good will and holding circulation
there is nothing equal to the Haskin Service.

as filing editor in the Washington D. C. bureau, has been made a reporter in the same bureau.

J. H. Jenkins, Associated Press correspondent at Charlotte, N. C., who has been in Raleigh since the middle of October directing the A. P. election service, returned to the Charlotte bureau this week.

Fraser Edwards, widely known Washington newspaper correspondent, has gone from the United Press Associations to the Universal Service. He will again cover the Senate when Congress reconvenes.

F. A. Barker has been transferred from the Dallas, Tex., bureau of the United Press to represent the U. P. at a new bureau opened at Austin with offices in the Austin American-Statesman building. H. Sharpe, formerly of the U. P. Kansas City bureau replaces Barker at Dallas.

J. Kenneth Mullen, Universal Service bureau manager at San Antonio before the bureau there was closed, has gone to Mexico City for the Hearst news service.

ASSOCIATIONS

NEW YORK NEWSPAPER WOMEN'S CLUB will hold a dinner Sunday evening, Dec. 14, at the Algonquin Hotel. Columnists on New York daily newspapers will be guests of honor.

Catholic Writers Guild, New York, held its regular monthly meeting at the Hotel Plaza, Nov. 23. Otto Kahn, banker, who was the principal speaker, paid tribute to the Catholic Church as a power in art. Rev. John B. Kelly presided.

New York Business Publishers Association will hold its 35th anniversary dinner Dec. 9. On Feb. 19, a Gridiron dinner will be held, and on April 9 an Agency Night. Monthly meetings have been abandoned in favor of three meetings during the season at two-month intervals.

Edmonton (Alta.) Press Club held its November meeting in the Macdonald Hotel on Nov. 12. The feature of the evening was a moving picture display of scenes in the Peace and Athabasca territories and on the Prince of Wales ranch by Colin Groff, Alberta publicity commissioner. A. R. Alloway, new managing director of the Edmonton Bulletin, was initiated into the club.

New York Employing Printers Association (Brooklyn Group) held their monthly dinner-meeting in the restaurant of the Linotype factory as guests of the Mergenthaler Company on Tuesday evening, Nov. 18. The principal speaker was A. V. Ingham of the Sheffield Fisher Company, of Rochester, N. Y., who spoke on "Methods of the Successful Small Printer."

Charlotte (N. C.) Advertising Club, which will be affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, was organized at a meeting of 45 advertising men last week. John Paul Lucal, publicity director of the Southern Public Utilities Company, was elected president; Stark Dillard, vice-president; Miss Willie Shelby, secretary; Mrs. Edith Deschenes, treasurer; Junius M. Smith, Ralph Spangler, O. T. Stewart, E. C. Lyndon and W. H. Martin, directors. Application has been made for a charter for the club, which expects to increase its membership to between 75 and 100.

Washington (D. C.) Ad Club held a "Good-Fellowship" luncheon Tuesday, Nov. 18, at which Col. George Harvey, editor of the Washington Post, was chief speaker.

Town Criers of Providence, with a representation of 150, won the attendance cup for the largest number of members present at the New England Advertising Clubs convention in Hartford, Conn., last week. The group obtained permanent possession of the cup, having won it three years in succession.

Women's Advertising Club of Chicago will celebrate its seventh birthday at the Keedy Studios on Dec. 2. A buffet supper, two one-act plays by the Playcraft Players, dancing, souvenirs, and other entertainment will be features.

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

FEG MURRAY, sports cartoonist, winner of three national and two international track championships, is now drawing for the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York. Rights to this sporting feature were obtained by Metropolitan through arrangements with Associated Editors, Inc., Chicago. Murray is the brother of R. Lindley Murray, United States tennis champion 1917-1918.

FEG MURRAY

Murray's success as a sports cartoonist is not simply an outgrowth of his athletic career with the discovery of a latent talent to draw; on the contrary, his leaning toward the pencil was as strong as that toward the cinder path, and when he entered Stanford University, California, as a freshman, he enrolled in the Art Department.

After four years of both drawing and hurdling he was graduated, in 1916, with the degree of A. B. in the Graphic Arts department, and he was at the same time captain of the university track team.

In the war Murray saw service with the field artillery at Cantigny, Chateau Thierry, San Mihiel and the Argonne. He continued to draw pictures in France.

In 1920, he was chosen a member of the U. S. Olympic team and took third place in the 110-metre hurdle race at Antwerp.

He worked as a regular sports cartoonist on the Los Angeles Times before joining the Associated Editors of Chicago.

Merrill Blosser, creator of "Freckles and his Friends," and Gene Ahern, who draws the "Major Hoople" cartoons, both of NEA, Inc., Cleveland, left last week for Los Angeles, where they will spend the winter, doing their work there and forwarding it to the Cleveland headquarters for syndicate distribution.

Arthur R. Todd, former day city editor of the Rockford (Ill.) Morning Star, who left that post to become secretary of the Rockford Boys' club, has returned to the newspaper field. He will join the Associated Editors, Chicago, a syndicate which lately acquired the two newspaper and job printing plants in Lake Geneva, Wis., and will consolidate the papers and job printing firms with Mr. Todd in charge.

Steve Hannigan, formerly feature writer for the NEA, Inc., Cleveland, has joined the sales staff of United Feature Syndicate, New York. No successor has yet been appointed to succeed Norris Huse, who resigned recently as general manager of this syndicate to become business manager of the Mount Vernon (N. Y.) Argus and the New Rochelle (N. Y.) Standard-Star.

Bryan Mack, formerly editor of the Pensacola (Fla.) Journal, is now a member of the sales staff of the Publishers Autocaster Service Company, Inc.

MOST NEWS

The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Post

MORNING AND SUNDAY

Daily Circulation.....130,891
Sunday Circulation....182,313

Member A. B. C.

The Cosmos Newspaper Service, New York, has started syndication of the Cosmos Editorial Board feature, of which William Allen White of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette is chairman. The feature presents daily editorials by prominent authorities on national and international news.

The territory of Hawaii has inaugurated a free monthly news service, with W. O. Cogswell as editor. The service, to be known as News of Hawaii, with headquarters at Postoffice Box 2120, Honolulu, announces that in addition to regular monthly releases, it is prepared to handle assignments for articles and general information on the Hawaiian Islands.

Something new in newspaper features is the set of nine full page drawings and text by Tony Sarg now being handled by the Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York. The first of the series is entitled "Sir Walter Raleigh and the Hot Potato." It is supplied in mat form.

The Bell Syndicate, Inc., also announces it has the exclusive newspaper rights on William Allen White's book on Woodrow Wilson.

Beginning this week, NEA, Inc., Cleveland, is adding to its service a half page feature, supplementary to the special weekly farm service. This feature is a weekly article which tells farmers how to build certain implements, small structures and other farm equipment.

DAILIES IN RADIO TEST

New York World and Petit Parisien Aid Trans-Atlantic Broadcasting

Newspapers and newspaper men played a part in the partially successful attempt to bridge the Atlantic by radio broadcasting this week, a test sponsored by Radio Broadcast, a magazine.

Starting Nov. 24, and continuing until Nov. 30, official tests were conducted by the wireless broadcasting station of the Paris Petit Parisien. The newspaper's management announced that it would welcome remarks and suggestions from American listeners-in, which their radio expert would acknowledge.

On this side the New York World cooperated with the station operated by Gimbels' department store. The New York Journal offered prizes to fans who heard messages from abroad.

Sir A. Morrice Low, Washington correspondent of the London Morning Post and George Harvey, editor of the Washington Post, were two speakers in the program offered by combined American stations in their effort to broadcast eastward across the Atlantic.

FLASHES

Hard-hearted employers are taking joy out of life by insisting that the cr word puzzle is a diversion and no means of livelihood.—Boston Transcr

With the advent of night golf a lot men will probably see no reason for c tinuing their "lodge membership.—Baltimore Sun.

The latest definition of a real Am can is one who pays his taxes hones What a rare bird!—Buffalo Commerc

A chemist lists 150 useful produ from the humble peanut, but peanut p tics is not one of them.—Springfield publican.

The hard part is to be good with envying the naughty.—New York Te gram and Evening Mail.

We are the only nation that tre liquor drinking as a crime, but other tions seem to look with disapprobat on murder.—Columbia (S. C.) Reco

Vanity is essential. It enables us think our head level merely because feet are cold.—New York Telegram a Evening Mail.

Mussolini says his philosophy of life to "live dangerously." If he wants do that to the limit he should come o here and patronize a bootlegger.—Colu bia (S. C.) Record.

Europe must not be vexed at Driving from the back seat is just little habit of ours.—New York Te gram and Evening Mail.

A Yonkers man who has been marri and divorced three times says he belie in a safe and sane fourth.—New Yo American.

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

SOUTHERN NEWSPAPER PLANT FOR SALE AT BARGAIN

The Charleston American offers its entire plant, including real estate and equipment, for sale at a bargain. This plant is located in the heart of the City on one of the best corners in town, measuring fifty one (51) feet on Meeting Street, and one hundred seven (107) feet on Society Street, including one three story brick building, with news print warehouse adjoining, and one two story brick press room with composing room above; containing editorial rooms, business office, circulation department and complete and well arranged newspaper lay-out. Together with one 32 page Duplex Press with color deck, linotype and intertype machines, stereotyping outfit, safes, files, desks, chairs; furniture, and all appurtenances of any and every kind needed in the operation of a modern daily morning or afternoon newspaper. This plant is ready to be operated by simply turning on the switch. Terms cash, or one-third cash and the balance in three annual payments. Price extremely cheap. Communicate with John I. Cosgrove, Attorney, 45 Broad Street, Charleston, South Carolina.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

AWRENCE L. SHENFIELD, formerly vice-president of the W. I. Tacey, Inc., New York advertising agency, has been elected president to succeed N. W. Doorly, who leaves to become advertising manager of Women's Wear, a Fairchild publication. William Irwin Tracy becomes vice-president and treasurer; and Arthur S. Garrabrants, secretary. The following concerns recently placed their accounts with this agency: Lustberg, Nast & Co., New York, Outdoor Shirts; G. Gennert, New York, photographic supplies; Darn Proof Hosiery Company, New York, Arthur Miller, Inc., insurance.

The Wildman Advertising Agency, New York, has been selected by the Lamb Knitting Mills, Malden, Mass., to direct its 1925 advertising program. An extensive newspaper campaign will be carried on in more than one hundred cities. A. R. Murray, formerly connected with the Household Magazine, has joined the Wildman staff.

The Vancouver branch of A. J. Massie, Ltd., general advertising agency with headquarters in Winnipeg, has moved to new and larger offices at 808-809 Dominion Building, which faces Victory Square.

Edward F. Archibald for 15 years associated with the Charles Advertising Service has been appointed director of advertising of the Hostess Magazine. He will enter upon his new duties Dec. 1.

Roy Bourne, manager of the L. S. Gillham Advertising Company, Salt Lake City, has joined the commercial department of the Utah Power and Light Company. He is a former editor of the Salt Lake City Deseret News. Marion E. Nelson, business manager of the Agency, succeeds him.

L. C. Brown, until recently with the American Weekly, has joined the New York Staff of Ruthrauff and Ryan, Inc., advertising agency. He has been with the Hearst organization for the last 20 years.

James C. Chillcott has been transferred from the Boston office of N. W. Ayer & Son to the New York office.

The Harrison-Rippey Advertising Agency has been established in St. Louis, Mo., with the following incorporators; Milton S. Rippey, president; Robert H. Isaacson, vice-president; and E. K. Harrison, secretary-treasurer.

W. Arthur Cole has joined the staff of the Corman Company, Inc., New York as production manager. He formerly served in a similar capacity with Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc.

H. O. Straub, formerly president of the Everite Service, Inc., has been appointed production manager of Sternfield-Godley, • New York advertising agency. Abner P. Grunauer has joined the staff of the same agency as service manager. He was formerly with the C. W. Hellwig Company.

In New Orleans it's THE ITEM

Wright Returns from South America

F. J. Wright, of the Chicago Tribune Staff, returned to this country this week from South America, where he had been watching and writing of several new revolutions in Latin countries. He told ship news reporters that South Americans had taken an unusual interest in the recent American elections, and that several hundreds had visited the newspaper offices at Santiago, Chile, on election night for returns. Bolshevism is the big fear in South America he said.

To Build 200-Ton Mill

Directors of Price Brothers & Co. have decided to proceed immediately with construction of their proposed new 200-ton newsprint mill at St. Joseph D'Alma, in close proximity to new Duke-Price power development on the Grand Discharge. This development is part of important plan of expansion worked out by the late Sir William Price, who was killed by a landslide near the Kenogami Mill in October.

N. Y. Special Adds 7 Papers

Seven Oklahoma newspapers have appointed Fralick & Bates, Inc., New York, their special representative, effective Dec. 1. They are: the Ada News; Bartlesville Examiner; Durant Democrat; McAlester News-Capital; Pawhuska Capital; Ponca City News; Shawnee News.

Boston "Special" Changes Name

The Foreign Language Advertising Service, Inc., Little Bldg., Boston, Mass., has changed its name to Joseph J. Borgatti, Inc. The firm acts as representatives of the leading foreign language newspapers.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

Nov. 30-Dec. 1—Texas Managing Editors Assn., meeting, Galveston, Tex.

Dec. 4-5-6—Texas Editorial Assn., meeting, Galveston and Houston, Tex.

Dec. 6—Veteran Boston Journalists, annual meeting, Boston, Mass.

Dec. 9—Trial of Baltimore Post for publishing income tax payments, opens in Baltimore.

Dec. 9—Assn. of Foreign Press Correspondents, luncheon to Sir Esme Howard, Lawyers Club, New York.

Jan. 10—Alabama Press Assn., northern section, mid-year meeting, Birmingham, Ala.

Jan. 16-17—Virginia Press Assn., mid-year meeting, Charlottesville, Va.

Obituary

LAWRENCE BRADLEY, 51, for 30 years a New York newspaper reporter and publicity man, died last week. He had worked on the New York Herald under the younger Bennett and for a time was dramatic editor of the New York Evening Telegram. He had recently been road manager for David Warfield in his tour in "The Merchant of Venice."

HARRY V. BALDWIN, 58, for 25 years news editor of the Philadelphia Record, died Nov. 20 in Philadelphia. He was born in Worcester, Mass., and started on the Spy, later working on the Providence Telegram and on Baltimore newspapers.

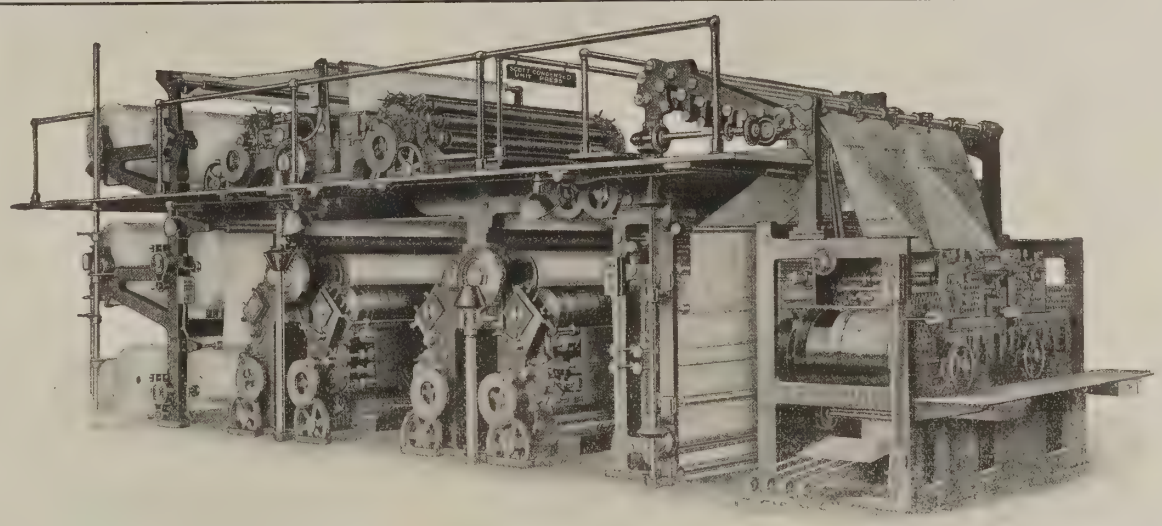
WILLIAM HAWLEY STEVENS, 63, associated with his father, the late W. W. Stevens, in management of the Joliet (Ill.) Record, in the late '80's until its consolidation with the Joliet News in 1899, died suddenly recently at his home in Bartow, Fla., where he had lived since leaving Joliet.

DON A. JACKSON, 61, former editor of the Fredericksburg (Ia.) News, died Nov. 10, in the family home. He served as editor and manager of the News, which he established in 1889, for 35 years. A few weeks before his death he disposed of the paper to Albert Johnson of Dows.

MRS. PENELOPE GLEASON KNAPP, former well-known Michigan newspaper woman, is dead at her home in Chicago. Mrs. Knapp formerly lived in Albion, Mich., and besides her newspaper work was a contributor to many magazines.

JOHN H. BOYS, 54, banker and former Atlantic, Ia., newspaper publisher, died Nov. 21, in Wichita, Kan. He started newspaper work on the Galesburg (Ill.) Daily Mail in 1893. He entered the banking business in 1906.

EDGAR H. DEFEBAUGH, 68, founder and president of the Barrel and Box Publishing Company, Chicago, died recently.



JOHN C. TELFORD, 46, former owner and publisher of the Beaver Falls (Pa.) Tribune, died at his home in Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 22.

CORNELIUS A. SHAVER, 87, who operated the news service on the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad from 1861 until two years ago, died recently at his home in Chicago.

JOHN B. GILLOOLY, sporting editor of the Boston American for the past 17 years, died at his home in Dorchester, Mass., Nov. 23, following a shock the previous week. He was one of the best known sport writers in New England. Before joining the American staff, he was three years on the Boston Post.

MISS GRACE M. BURT, 52, for the past 19 years club news editor of the Newton (Mass.) Graphic, died Nov. 19.

J. G. TUCKER, 53, linotype operator for the San Antonio Express, died of heart failure while on a hunting trip near Pleasanton, Tex., Nov. 9.

The Jersey Observer, Hoboken, New Jersey
Uses THE SCOTT
Condensed Sextuple "Straight-Unit" Press and Two SCOTT Sextuple Decked Presses

which takes care of their present requirements and can be converted to Octuple Presses at any time. Can be seen running any week day starting at 1 P. M.

THIS PAPER HAS ALWAYS USED SCOTT WEB PRESSES

WALTER SCOTT & CO.

CHICAGO 1441 Monadnock Block — PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, U. S. A. — NEW YORK 1457 Broadway, at 42d Street

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

AN EDITORIAL DEFINED

"AN editorial should be a free expression upon the news or the tendencies of the day, written briefly and bravely by a wise kind-hearted man. Bitterness, bias or fear have no place in an editorial; they make for weakness, no matter how much they bluster."—William Allen White, Editor, Emporia (Kan.) Gazette.

* * *

WOMEN AND THE NEWSPAPER

"WOMEN refuse to look upon newspapers as mere commercial enterprises and advertising mediums. They place upon the newspapers a large responsibility as perhaps the most important agency of 'public welfare and for private information.' The newspaper is unquestionably the biggest continuation school of the Nation and does more to mold public opinion and public action than any other institution. Therefore, let the newspaper look well to the course of study it offers the public."—Mrs. Elias R. Michael, member of the St. Louis Board of Education.

* * *

THE RURAL MERCHANT AND ADVERTISING

"THE rural merchant is by no means sold on the value of the newspaper advertisement. Ninety per cent of them in the small town think that the money spent for advertising is merely a donation to keep the local newspaper going. And yet, if you note those small town business men who are succeeding notably and are building up a large and prosperous business, in every case are those who are carrying on persistent and constant advertising in the proper way in their local newspapers."—A. H. Syverson.

* * *

A PAINTER OF THE INTELLECT

"SARGENT was a portrait painter. Sargent was a brilliant depictor of physical being. The interviewer, in my judgment, is a portrait painter also, but he is an intellectual portrait painter, he is a psychic portrait painter, he is a painter of the minds and souls of women and men. That is the interview in the abstract. You can't see an emotion, you can't see an idea, you can't see an ambition, you can't see a dream; those are the great invisibles of the world that translate themselves into that great practical visibility which we call civilization. That is the interview in the abstract."—Edward Pine Bell, Special Correspondent for the Chicago Daily News.

* * *

TAKE THE GUESS OUT OF ADVERTISING

"ADVERTISING is limited to the personal effort put into it. Stores, big and little, are beginning to see that they get more effectiveness if they take the guess and mess out of advertising and merchandising. Advertising scarcely has been analyzed. Every merchant should look on advertising as the symbol of the character of his store. To make advertising pay a man must take an inventory of his stock, whip his sales organization to 100 per cent efficiency; his stock must be reduced by 50 per cent. There is too much stock tied up on his shelves. It is buried and worthless. The merchant today does not get the right margin of profit."—Frank French of the French Advertising Agency, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

ELEANOR CLARAGE, 26, IS CLEVELAND'S ONLY WOMAN MUSIC CRITIC

ACTRESS, musician, short story writer, and now at the age of 26, musical critic on a metropolitan newspaper in competition with members of the opposite sex, and giving them a strenuous run to keep pace with her!

ELEANOR CLARAGE

That's the colorful career of Eleanor Clarage music critic of the Cleveland Times and Commercial, since the day, a few years ago, she stepped from the New England Conservatory of Music after a three-year study of harmony, theory and composition.

Miss Clarage, a native Clevelander, is the only woman music critic the city boasts, or, so far as the old newspaper men recall, ever boasted.

Leaving Cleveland a few years ago, Miss Clarage, after being educated at Washington, D. C., went to the music institution in Boston, then took up a stage career. The life behind the footlights failed to appeal, and she gave it up to follow the muse. Her first successful effort was a short story published in the Metropolitan under the pen name of Ellen Orr.

H. L. Mencken and George Jean Nathan, while they guided the destinies of old Smart Set, bought stories and poetry from her, while others of the airy, popular magazines also purchased of her wares.

Miss Clarage spent two years in New York City, free lancing for newspapers and writing poetry and fiction. She kept closely in touch with music and music activities. Joining the staff of the Cleveland Times last February, she did some "emergency" reviewing, acting as a pinch hitter for the regular critic, who was soon to retire from the paper for other endeavors. Her work attracted the attention of her superiors and it followed naturally that she fell heir to the post when it was vacant.

Now, her music reviews are quoted widely in the publications devoted to melody. Her theory of review work is that reviews and criticisms should be written so simply that the veriest laymen can understand them. She says that only the professionally trained musician knows what a critic means when technical details are excessively used.

KEENAN FLIES TO CUBA

Former Pittsburgh Publisher Takes to Air at 65

"Fighting editor" signifies courage; so does "flying editor."

And Thomas J. Keenan, former Pittsburgh publisher, zoomed up from New York harbor this week on an airplane flight, which will carry him down the Atlantic Coast to Havana, Cuba, and his estate on the Isle of Pines.

Mr. Keenan is still young enough to strive for honors as a flying ace. He is only 65. If enthusiasm counts he'll establish new records on his present airplane trip.

Mr. Keenan founded the Pittsburgh Press in 1884, and was its editor and publisher until 1901. He also was founder and first president of the Publishers' Press Association, now the United Press. In 1891 he organized the International League of Press Clubs.

•World Topics Eminent Writers

MARCH of EVENTS

New York American

Second News Section

Editorial Telephone, Beekman 2000 SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1924 Business Telephone, Columbus 7000 L 11—1

'Germany Alone Not to Blame for War'--Barbusse

ABOVE ARTICLE SOLD:

New York American
Chicago Herald & Examiner
Boston Advertiser
Rochester Journal & Post Express
Washington Herald
Baltimore American
Fort Worth Record
San Antonio Light
Atlanta Georgian
Detroit Times
Milwaukee Telegram
San Francisco Examiner
Los Angeles Examiner
Seattle Post-Intelligencer

ARTICLES BY Distinguished Europeans:

HENRI BARBUSSE, Author, "Under Fire," Etc.

ANDREAS LATZKO, Author, "Men in War," Etc.

STEFAN ZWEIG, Noted Franco-Austrian Journalist; Romaine Rolland's Biographer.

VAILLANT-COUTURIER, Distinguished French Deputy

MARCEL FOURRIER, Managing Editor, "Clarte," Paris, and others.

THE accompanying article by Henri Barbusse, famous author of the sensational war book, "Under Fire," is especially timely in view of the revelations contained in the secret diary of George Louis, former French Ambassador to St. Petersburg under the Czarist regime, published a few days ago in Paris. Among other things Louis' diary charged that former President Poincare was indirectly responsible for the World War and accused him of being a tool of Count Islovsky, former Foreign Minister of Russia. Former Foreign Minister Sazanoff of Russia and a number of other statesmen in France also figured in the revelations contained in Louis' diary. Although M. Barbusse's article was written several weeks ago, his conclusions are strikingly borne out by the Louis revelations of the past week.

EDITORIAL NOTE from "N.Y. SUNDAY AMERICAN"

RESPONSIBILITY IS LAID AT DOORS OF FRANCE AND ALLIES

Noted French Writer Declares That Revenge Against Germany for Defeat in 1870 Had Been the Constant Goal of Poincare—Russian Secret Documents Are Cited to Prove His Charges.

By HENRI BARBUSSE,
The Famous Author of "Under Fire."

PARIS, November, 1924.

FRENCH and English political circles are agitated over the attitude of the German Government in considering a note to the Powers reopening the clause in the treaty of Versailles that attributes to Germany alone the responsibility for the war. This clause, of course, is the cornerstone of the treaty.

When the leaders of the Entente are reproached with having grabbed the great spoils of victory, crushing Germany under a weighty tribute, cutting her to pieces in Europe and taking all her colonies—in a word, reducing her to complete subjection—their answer is, "Well, Germany started the war." When they are accused of not having kept the pledge that set their armies on the march ("this war will be the last war; its end will be the end of war itself") by sowing the germs of hatred and revenge, which will rise fatally one day, they answer: "Our attitude is justified by the crime Germany committed in attacking peaceful countries. She alone was

Above and Other Territory Open to Enterprising Editors at a Moderate Rate for Weekly Contributions from the Pens of Europe's Most Renowned Writers and Journalists, Touching Every Dramatic Phase of the International Scene. No Prior European Publication. Especially Written for Wire or Phone for Reservations. All Territory Open for Contracts.

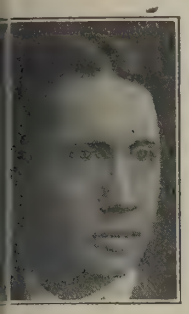
THE VANGUARD FEATURE SYNDICATE



RICHARD ROHMAN, Managing Editor

70 Fifth Avenue, Tel. Chelsea 6559 New York City.

ILLER OF BATTLE CREEK RE-ELECTED MICHIGAN PRESS CLUB PRESIDENT

rian Telegram Wins Trophy for Best Front Page Among Dailies—Willis Abbott Says Yellow Journalism is Rapidly Dying

HE University Press Club of Michigan, which comprises the combined ranizations of editors and publishers and press clubs of the state, closed its sixth annual conference at the University of Michigan last Saturday by re-electing Albert L. Miller, editor of the Battle Creek Enquirer and News, president for the ensuing year.

A. L. Miller

Three vice-presidents elected were Arthur H. Vandenburg, nd Rapids Herald; Murl DeFoe, rlotte Republican, and Arthur anor, Saginaw News-Courier. Awards trophies were made at this session. e Adrian Telegram, edited by Stuart ry, was awarded the trophy for the t front page among the larger dailies the state. The Owosso Argus Press n the prize for the best page among smaller dailies, and the Birmingham centric submitted the best front page ong the weeklies.

The annual meeting and banquet in the chigan Union Friday night was tured by an address by Willis John bott, editor of the Christian Science nitor.

"Yellow journalism is dying in Ameri" said Mr. Abbott. "The day of sensanal journalism is almost over," he said. know whereof I speak because for ny years I was as active as any newsper man could be in yellow journalism, d there is little about it that I do not ow.

"I was interested this afternoon in the cussion of advertising and the effect advertisers upon newspapers. The day past when big advertisers can dictate policy of responsible newspapers. hat is yesterday's stuff. The advertisers day are doing more to clean up the wspapers than are the editors."

In speaking of the printing of crime ws Mr. Abbott said:

"The only defensible excuse of the inting of such news is that exposure crime or a disease epidemic deters re crime or results in stamping out e disease. The evidence is all the other y. The report of the Cleveland comssion on crime and the courts showed nclusively that every time the Clevend newspapers started printing stories out a crime wave there was a crime ave. Then the base ball season would me along, the newspapers would forget out it, and the crime wave would be er. The police and court records proved conclusively.

"Every newspaper man who has had ofessional training, and who regards his rk as dignified and honorable, is a prossional man," Mr. Abbott declared.

"The newspapers must raise salaries d so conduct themselves that they will not only attract better grade men, but will hold them.

"The newspapers must pay enough to permit a man to live a life of dignity if they are to hold their good men. I know of newspapers where they pay their circulation manager more than they do their managing editor."

At the opening day's session of the conference, the various groups comprising the club had separate gatherings. They are the Michigan Daily Press Association, the Michigan League of Home Dailies, the Michigan Press Association (weekly publishers) and the Michigan League of Press Women.

"The Place of the Community Weekly in Modern Newspaper Development" was the subject of a talk by M. L. Cook, publisher of the Hastings Banner in the afternoon. After that the editors adjourned to a campus auditorium where they heard Walter de la Mare, English author.

Herbert Bayard Swope of the New York World and Kent Cooper, assistant general manager of the Associated Press were to speak at the evening dinner, but telegraphed their inability to attend. E. T. Cutter, head of the central division of the Associated Press, urged the editors to put into their papers straightforward news of the kind they would be willing to have go into their own homes. He described the workings of the Associated Press, and said that he believed it was aiding to bring about the demise of yellow journalism.

Arthur Vandenburg of the Grand Rapids Herald spoke impromptu, urging the editors to "be decent, be honorable, be fair." Prof. William A. Frayer of the department of history of the University of Michigan said that the historian finds more that is valuable to him in the advertising and the editorial columns of the newspaper than in the news columns which are too often incorrect.

Stuart H. Perry of the Adrian Telegram spoke on "Contempt of Court as Applied to Newspapers."

Prof. Herbert Goodrich of the University of Michigan Law College spoke on "Civil Liabilities in Libel" and Arthur R. Treanor of the Saginaw News Courier discussed the "Proper Selection of Features."

Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman, editor, writer and lecturer of Boston, provoked considerable comment from the editors when she attacked newspapers for printing crime and circulating "debasing material which stops human progress and weakens social bonds." She called poisoning the public mind "as dangerous as mutiny of the army and navy in time of war and nothing less than treason."

Journalism as a profession was discussed by Prof. Edwin G. Burrows of the University of Michigan School of Journalism.

"This tendency to find a higher sounding name for one's occupation is general among business men of all kinds who have unquestionably won a higher standing in the community during the last few generations and who want a title to show their promotion. So the real estate dealer calls himself a realtor, the press agent a public relations counsel and the undertaker a mortician. There is no harm in that. There is good in it, if it makes anyone feel any better. There is more substantial good if the name carries with it additional self respect and new professional standards.

"It seems to me that college work in journalism is concerned with something less pretentious and more practical than a new title or classification for newspaper men, not only practical in the sense that it will show results in a pay envelope or balance sheet, though it may do that too, but practical in the sense that it helps newspaper men make a good job of what they have to do."

Faulkner Fund Growing

Russell Wilson, chairman of the James E. Faulkner Fund, reported recently that the sum raised in Cincinnati and vicinity to date amounts to $3,751. It is said that $10,000 additional is to be raised in the state of Ohio at large as a memorial to the famous Cincinnati Enquirer political writer. The fund is to be raised to endow a chair of journalism at Ohio State University.

CANADA SEES PROSPERITY

Conservative Victory in England a Factor, Publisher Says

Business conditions in Canada, while not maintaining the level established during 1923, are on the upward trend, L. H. Dingman, president of the St. Thomas (Ont.) Times-Journal and vice-president of the Stratford (Ont.) Beacon-Herald, told Editor & Publisher this week during a business trip to New York. He gave the recent Conservative victory in England as one of the causes which will result in increased prosperity.

Newspaper consolidations are as popular in Canada as in the United States, he stated. At the present time only two cities in Ontario—Kingston and Belleville—have more than one daily, whereas many more newspapers were being published in the province a few years back.

The pulp embargo proposal, which has caused much controversy in Canada, would be of great aid to the upbuilding of Canada's industries, Mr. Dingman declared.

The present U. S. tariff excludes many of Canada's farm products, forcing them to be marketed abroad, he pointed out.

"Gold Mine" Swindle Exposed

The St. Paul Dispatch, Nov. 20, exposed a "gold mine" swindle that had victimized a large number of people in southern Minnesota. Several arrests were made. The Dispatch operated in collaboration with the Minnesota State Securities Commission. Lucien D. Parlin handled the story.

The Deseret News

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH

Covers the news field in the best possible manner. Great popularity throughout Utah.

Foreign Representatives
CONE, HUNTON & WOODMAN
New York Chicago Detroit
Kansas City St. Louis Atlanta

Pacific Coast Representatives
H. H. CONGER COMPANY
Los Angeles San Francisco

Eliminates Requests

Mr. Ed. J. Fehn, Business Manager of the Evansville, Ind. COURIER had this experience:

"Since adopting your service we seldom receive requests for checking copies, and we no longer have to maintain a large file of back copies to supply agencies. Likewise our bills are being paid promptly and we are rid of the annoyance of the missing copy evil."

We can easily "prove" our value. Shall we?

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.
538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO
15-19 East 26 St., NEW YORK
A NEWSPAPER CHECKING PROOF SERVICE

Ludlow Typefaces Improve Appearance of Janesville Gazette

MR. H. H. BLISS, Publisher of the Janesville (Wisconsin) Daily Gazette writes: "My decision to install the Ludlow was made on an actual demonstration in the plant of the El Paso Texas Herald, where they operate three Ludlows. They assured me that they were able to handle double the composition with Ludlows that they could handle by any other system they had either used or investigated.

"We now operate two Ludlows with about 65 fonts of mats and we find that these machines meet our requirements. Our men took to them readily.

"As to the saving of time, which of course means money, and for space—the Ludlows have accomplished these items. We have discarded practically all of our single types except the large sizes. The typography of our paper has been greatly improved. New type for each edition insures cleanliness and perfect reproduction. With the careful selection of Ludlow type faces we produce a first page which has frequently been commented upon favorably."

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Avenue
San Francisco Hearst Bldg. CHICAGO World Bldg. New York

CANADIAN PRESS WINS WAGE DISPUTE

Conciliation Board Awards $5 Reduction for Telegraphers East of Winnipeg—Present Scale Continued Elsewhere

Continuation of the present wage scale with the exception of a reduction of $5 a week in points east of Winnipeg was ordered by the Board of Conciliation in settlement of the dispute between the Canadian Press and its telegraphers in an award handed down in Toronto, Nov. 25. The board was appointed by the Dominion Minister of Labor.

The award ordered that seniority rights be unchanged and made recommendations for arbitration of future disputes.

Members of the board were Judge Colim G. Snyder, chairman; J. G. O'Donohue, K. C. representing the employes; and E. Norman Smith for the Canadian Press.

Mr. O'Donohue dissented from the $5 reduction in the wage scale. Otherwise findings of the board were unanimous.

The dispute between the Canadian Press and its telegraphers originated last July, when the operators demanded a wage increase and the press association countered with a request for reduction, claiming the cost of living had been lowered.

The company offered to arbitrate and sought appointment of the Conciliation Board by the Minister of Labor. The telegraphers at first refused and went on strike Sept. 11. After 10 days, however, they returned to their keys, and sittings of the board began.

NEWSPRINT EXPORTS FALL

Slight Decrease Shown in Canada's October Report

Canada's exports of newsprint in October amounted to 99,812 tons valued at $7,307,539, as compared with 101,843 tons valued at $7,454,239 in September. On other hand exports of pulp were up from 72,997 tons valued at $3,513,806 to 76,406 tons valued at $3,696,406.

For ten months ended October, exports of newsprint amounted to 1,006,559 tons valued at $75,310,579, against 939,944 tons valued at $70,783,007 in same period of 1923. Exports of pulp during ten months were down from 730 683 to 620,254 tons and in value from $39,333,582 to $32,476,443, principal decrease being in mechanical pulp, which dropped from 283,181 to 188,571 tons and in value from $9,503,310 to $5,994,310.

October exports of pulpwood were 105,951 cords valued at $1,112,333, in comparison with 96,353 cords valued at $1,057,410 in September. For ten months' period, exports of pulpwood were 1,096,376 cords valued at $12,253,171, against 1,261,871 cords valued at $12,170,136 in 1923.

AUTO BUREAUS CO-OPERATE

Louisville Dailies Working with Chicago and St. Louis Papers

The Automobile Touring Bureau of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times has completed an arrangement with Chicago and St. Louis newspapers to give free information to tourists who pass through these cities. The interchange of information will greatly aid automobile owners in that section of the country.

During the past few months road scouts connected with the Courier-Journal and Times have travelled thousands of miles obtaining first hand information about the highways.

The Louisville dailies' Touring Bureau ranks among the most efficient operated by daily newspapers. A large file of accurate, up-to-date data has been compiled and maps are being continually revised to meet changing road conditions. In addition to its large collection of highway maps, a large base map of the entire country, showing types of surfacing, condition of roads, detours and best routes hangs in the main office and is constantly refered to by automobile owners.

The Automobile Touring bureau of the Courier-Journal and Times, established three years ago by the automobile editor, Charles C. Swearingen.

Frequent announcement by the radiophone broadcasting station of these newspapers that free road information is furnished prospective tourists on request to the automobile editor has added to the volume of inquiries that reach the bureau daily.

DAILIES BOOST RADIO SHOW

Chicago Papers Open Booths and Print Special Editions

With the opening of the third annual Chicago Radio Show, Chicago newspapers, in addition to special booths and displays at the Coliseum where the exhibition is being held November 18 to 25, ran special radio editions. On Sunday, Nov. 16, the Chicago Tribune had a 12-page section devoted to radio topics while the Chicago Herald and Examiner produced 20 pages of exclusive radio material.

On Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 18, the first day of the radio show, two of the evening papers issued their special editions. The Chicago Evening American had 16 pages in ordinary black and white, while the Chicago Daily News ran 16 pages of rotogravure.

The Chicago Daily Journal had extra space devoted to the radio show on the opening day also. The Chicago Evening Post issues a weekly tabloid radio review on Thursday. The issue of Nov. 21, gave special attention to the show.

INCOME TAX TRIAL SET

Date Tentatively Fixed for Dec. 9—Baker Represents Newspaper

The Baltimore Post will go on trial Dec. 9, for publishing income tax payments. The date was tentatively fixed at a conference between United States Attorney Woodcock and Judge Frank E. Stevens and Paul Patterson of Cleveland, representing the Post.

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War and one of the Post's counsel, will participate in the trial in Baltimore, as will Thomas L. Sidlo, comptroller and general counsel for the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

N. Y. DAILIES MAY AID PRINTERS' SCHOOL

Renewal of Support Appears Possible if Body Installs Linotype Equipment—Gunnison Elected Chairman of Publishers' Assn.

Renewal of appropriations by New York newspaper publishers for support of the School of Printers Apprentices appeared possible following the meeting this week of the Publishers Association of New York, before which plans for development of the school were outlined.

H. F. Gunnison

The school is seeking to obtain linotype machines and additional room facilities from the New York public school system. The New York publishers discontinued appropriations, because students were not being instructed in the use of linotypes. Hugh A. O'Donnell, assistant business manager of the New York Times, is chairman of the committee on the school.

The association elected Herbert F. Gunnison of the Brooklyn Eagle, chairman, and F. A. Walker, publisher of the New York Telegram and Mail, vice chairman.

A resolution was passed paying tribute to the late H. H. Kolsaat, Chicago publisher.

MIAMI HERALD NEWS FEAT

Prints Pictures of New York Boat Passengers Before They Land

The Miami (Fla.) Herald performed an enterprising news feat Sunday, Nov. 23, when it printed pictures of passengers on the New York to Miami steamship Apache, and placed the newspapers in their hands two hours before the boat docked. The trip marked the first passage of Apache.

The feat was accomplished by sending George L. Bradley, assistant managing editor and also an expert photographer to New York to make the trip. On the voyage between New York and Charleston Mr. Bradley obtained photographs of practically every passenger on the boat. He also prepared personal mention of all of them. He left the Apache at Charleston, S. C., boarded a fast train, arriving in Miami on Saturday afternoon. His copy was put in type and about 2 separate halftones of the passengers were made in the Herald's plant. This spread appeared in the regular Sunday morning edition of the paper, covering four pages.

Copies of the Herald were then delivered to passengers aboard the Apache off the Florida coast, two hours before the boat berthed at Miami. They received a newspaper containing their pictures and write-ups before they had completed the voyage.

The Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

Detroit

Fourth Largest City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

Here's a Chance to Help Children

The Church Advertising Department is glad to pass on the suggestion of the Near East Relief that publishers make a special effort to link their paper with the popular interest in Golden Rule Sunday, December 7. Special page layouts, featuring this day, are available from several of the mat services.

Churches will be willing to take extra space to feature their part in this special day, and papers can thus help along this unique day and stimulate larger advertising by special treatment of some sort.

Your denominational leaders in your town have full information. Special electros are available from the Near East Relief, 151 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
A. A. C. W.
Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising
383 Madison Ave.

Clubs of the World
New York City

ETAIL CENSUS PLAN IS PROGRESSING

. A. Committee Formed to Tabu-te U. S. Retail Outlets to Meet in Washington in December, Chairman Feiker States irther progress on the plans for tak-a retail census of the United States he benefit of business and advertising was reported this week by F. M. er, vice-chairman of the committee large.

meeting will be called in Washington this year, he said, under the chair-ship of Owen D. Young to consider methods to be employed in making mplete count of retail outlets.

r. Feiker first broached the plan for a census before the convention of Association of National Advertisers tlantic City last week. His announce-t brought action from the convention , a committee being appointed to act the general committee to promote undertaking.

onsiderable interest was expressed week in the Market Survey now in course of preparation by EDITOR & LISHER for publication next month, h contains a record of retail outlets ore than 1000 American markets.

r. Feiker expressed the opinion it ld aid considerably in the task of col-ng statistics, congratulating EDITOR UBLISHER for its enterprise.

Business men," Mr. Feiker said, "to-are engaged in a great peace-time , the fight against rising costs. This t against rising costs for 40 years in erican business has been carried out essfully in the field of manufacturing. this field the business man has gone, scientist, the engineer, and the econ-st. The scientist has discovered new erials, better and cheaper ways of ufacturing, short-cuts in production nse.

No parallel attack has been made on costs of distribution until within the five or six years, when business men vidually and collectively have called n the sales and advertising men to ex-ne scientifically into the costs of dis-ution in order to find practical ways educe these costs. Trade associations undertaken collectively problems of mercial research, analyses and mar-, programs of collective advertising, other methods of reducing the cost narketing.

The problem is much more compli-d than the problem of production. There is much talk about the high s of distribution. In a trade this may the form of a wide inquiry into e debatable question, such as, 'Is the per essential?' or, 'Have we too many ilers?' when nine cases out of 10 the iry would not have been started if a facts as to the number of jobbers retailers the volume of sales they dle and other similar statistics were ilable."

PRESS LEAGUE PLANNED

wspaper Committee to Investigate Other Organizations

lans for organizing a nonpartisan s association in Indiana to consider blems of editors and managers were ussed recently in Indianapolis by a group of Indiana newspaper men. The organization would be in the nature of an auxiliary to the Inland Press Association, composed of newspaper editors in 15 middle western states.

A committee, headed by Rudolf Leeds, of Richmond, was appointed to investigate similar associations in other states and report at a later meeting. The meeting Tuesday was called by George D. Linsday, editor of the Marion Chronicle and former president of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association.

APPRECIATES SERVICE

Editor, The Editor & Publisher:

I want to congratulate you and Mr. Schuyler for the able way in which EDITOR & PUBLISHER has reported the Association of National Advertisers' Convention.

As past president of the Association I have appreciated the fine support which you have extended to the activities of our Association, and I know that under the administration of Mr. Sumner you will find the work of the A. N. A. going on in a constructive way for the betterment of advertising. I bespeak for his administration the same cordial interests which you have extended to mine.

Yours very truly,
P. L. THOMSON.

NEWS VETERAN DIES

Charles Murray, 83, Had Long Service in Washington

Charles Theodore Murray, 83, one of the founders of the Gridiron Club, and widely known newspaper man, died at Winchester, Va., Nov. 20.

Born in Goshen, Ind., in 1843, Mr. Murray was educated at the University of Indiana. He served for three years in the Union army during the Civil War, being wounded at Stone River in December 1862.

He established the South Bend (Ind.) Herald, in 1874. Shortly afterwards he was shot through the right lung in a political quarrel during the Tilden-Hayes campaign and his obituary appeared the next morning in his own newspaper.

Mr. Murray was later Washington correspondent for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Pittsburgh Dispatch, Philadelphia Times and the New York Herald. In 1916 he claimed to hold the record for the greatest number of words sent over wires in a single day, being his report of the Guiteau trial, and a record for the amount of matter written by one person in a single issue of the New York Herald.

He was a syndicate writer for several years writing from New York, London, and Paris, and was also a fiction author. Some of his books are "Sub Rosa," "A Modern Gypsy" and "Mlle. Fouchette." For two terms he was secretary and treasurer of the Gridiron Club, Washington.

TIPS TO AD MANAGERS

Elmer L. Allen, 15 East 26th street, New York. Reported to be placing account of the Hygenic Fibre Company, New York.

Anfenger-Jacobson Advertising Company, Odd Fellows Building, St. Louis. Handling account of the Lanfenberg Mfg. Company, St. Louis, manufacturers of Front Rank warm air furnaces.

Brandt Advertising Company, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Contracts are being sent out to newspapers generally on the La Mar Laboratories, Cleveland, O.

Brooke, Smith & French, Inc., 206 Eliot street, Detroit. Placing account of the Grays Motor Corporation, Detroit, manufacturers of automobiles.

Charles H. Fuller Company, 629 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Data is being compiled in preparation for a newspaper campaign on the Don-Mac Electric Company (Protect-O-Tube), Chicago.

Frank M. Comrie Company, 310 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Has secured the account of the Cooper-Carlton Hotel, Chicago.

Guenther Bradford Company, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Newspapers in North Carolina are receiving orders on the George H. Mayr Company, Chicago.

Henri, Hurst & McDonald, 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Handling account of the Bradley Knitting Company, Delavan, Wis., manufacturers of sweaters, bathing suits, etc.

Hertz Hadley Company, 646 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Copy on the Sealey Mattress Company, Sugarland, Tex., is being distributed to a list of newspapers in the metropolitan cities.

Hicks Advertising Agency, 52 Vanderbilt avenue, New York. Placing copy with medical magazines in behalf of Lister's Starchless Flour, manufactured by Lister Bros., New York.

Lake & Dunham Advertising Agency, Exchange Building, Memphis. Placing account of the Continental Piston Ring Company, Memphis.

Lord & Thomas, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Colorado papers are receiving orders on the Cellucotton Products Company, Chicago. MacGibbon & Watson, Easton Building, Oakland, Cal. Placing account of the Bass-Hueter Paint Company, San Francisco, manufacturers of paints and varnishes.

Potts-Turnbull Advertising Company, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Contracts and schedules are being sent out to newspapers in scattered territory throughout the country on the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Chicago, makers of the "Handy Andy Candy Bar."

Sehl Advertising Agency, 139 North Clark street, Chicago. Copy is being distributed to a general list of newspapers on the Calumet Baking Powder Company, Chicago.

Stack Advertising Agency, 29 East Madison street, Chicago. Orders are being sent out to a general list of newspapers on the Santa Fe Railway.

J. Walter Thompson Company, Inc., 14 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Several new towns are being added to the list of newspapers receiving copy on Aunt Jemima Mills, St. Joseph, Mo.

Kenneth Barnard Injured

Kenneth Barnard, manager of the Detroit Better Business Bureau, was injured in an accident in Detroit Nov. 22, sustaining a fracture of the left shoulder. He is confined in the Toledo Hospital. Mr. Barnard resigned recently as chairman of the National Vigilance Committee of the A. A. C. W. to become manager of the Detroit bureau.

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"

The World.
MORNING EDITION

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The
Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?
Because
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.
Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED
SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK.
Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE, KY.

New Haven Register
is New Haven's Dominant Paper
Circulation over 42,171 Average
Bought every day by more New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.
New Haven Register
The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

Utah, Southern and Eastern Idaho, Eastern Nevada and Western Wyoming—the territory served by
THE
Salt Lake Tribune
No other section of the country offers the advertiser the opportunity of practically covering four states by using one newspaper.
FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency
New York—Chicago—Detroit—St. Louis—Kansas City—Atlanta.
PACIFIC COAST REPRESENTATIVE
M. C. Mogensen & Co., Inc.
Los Angeles—San Francisco—Seattle

THE same standards of quality are maintained by The News today that caused this paper to be recognized as one of America's best dailies long years ago.
The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely By THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

ADVERTISING MUST FOLLOW BUYING HABITS

(Continued from page 9)

And so the advertising man is bound to look upon position in a light that has nothing in common with the people he hopes to sell.

I recently solicited a big executive of a nationally known trademarked hat. It isn't necessary for him to think or dress like the class he hopes to sell. But it is necessary for him to sense their living and buying habits. He must visualize the level of his human market and drop down to their understanding. His idea of good position was to be the only advertisement on the sporting page. Association of any other straw hat accounts on a page with him was an occasion for a mighty kick. The created interest in the other accounts did not parallel a similar grouping of his many outlets on business streets of the strongest competition.

I don't blame anybody for fighting for good position. Where your copy is placed and the number of people who see it, is the most vital factor in creating sales. As an advertising solicitor of more than 20 years experience I can only regard an advertisement as something to sell. If I depended upon my thrills and spontaneity for guidance to good position, you may depend upon it that my idea would not draw a prize for originality. My results, however, from my humble selling efforts have always been greatest in the face of competition. The man who wrote his firm and said—"There have been a dozen men ahead of me—it's no use, I'm coming home," failed to sense an interest created by the men who went ahead of him. No doubt he preferred the towns with few people; with stores on corners only, with no competition and extra innings for sleep.

Long experience makes it possible to learn a great deal of the production end of advertising. But you can't learn the consumer's viewpoint. You must get it by observation. The testimony of your mother or brother as to how they read advertising means nthing. The grocer or druggist can't fill out a questionnaire that means a thing. You can't get it from space buyers, contact men, copy men, research men, publishers or advertising solicitors.

TO conceive a subtle understanding of advertising responsiveness you must get it from yourself. To do this you must disassociate yourself from the atmosphere of the workshop and make a study of people.

May I suggest that you go with me to a representative American market like Philadelphia for human observation. We will avoid the Bellevue and instead visit the average small two-story home. Most Philadelphia homes have alleys in the rear. I suggest that we spend a morning listening to the sales people who cry out their copy in these alleys. You will hear a variety of advertising messages that I am sure you will not be able to understand. He may be an umbrella mender, an old clothes man, a fellow with top soil to sell, a huckster or one of a dozen more varieties. If we asked our hostess what each man is saying she will probably reply—"Oh, I don't know but I grow to understand them all through their distinctive tones."

This is evidence of subtle instinct bringing a sales message to a point of understanding. Like newspapers these traders in alleys key their copy to appeal to regular dwellers. And for that reason the stranger is always bound to have a viewpoint that doesn't truly size up the situation.

If the alley illustration is offensive we go down town to the stock exchange where an equally strong illustration of instinctive buying takes place. It is the regular buyer in each case that instinctively understands the sales message. I have mentioned these two illustrations to prove that buying instincts are common in all types of people.

Now let us take a hurried trip around Philadelphia and see how the various lines of trade locate for shopping. From the stock exchange we will go down Chestnut street from Broad to 11th. We will notice John Wanamaker, Bonwit-Teller, Oppenheim-Collins, B. F. Dewees, Theresa Blum's, Mawson & DeMany and George Allen—the leading outlets for women's wear—all within a few hundred feet of each other; between 11th and 12th on the north side of the street there are nine piano stores. More pianos are sold in this block than are sold in all the other stores in Philadelphia; on Market street between 12th and 13th there are nine prominent shoe stores; at 12th and Filbert there are 68 dealers in sausage and scrapple, all under one roof in direct competition; on Broad street from Race to Columbia avenue, a distance of about a mile and a half, you will notice one automobile sales room after another.

Even the once-active brewers are grouped together at 30th street above Girard avenue; the produce dealers line both sides of the street at 2nd and Dock; antique furniture men on Pine between 8th and 10th; machinery and pulleys on Arch between 6th and 8th; insurance men on Walnut between 4th and 6th; bond brokers on Walnut street between Broad and 16th; no less than 50 film produce outlets on Vine street between Broad and 11th; shore dinner eats at 2d and Walnut; theatrical costumers at 9th and Race; in stallment houses around 6th and Market; radio dealers at 10th and Arch; meat packers at 32nd and Race. No less than a dozen men's clothing houses are within three blocks of William Penn. While on South street between 6th and 10th streets there are enough second hand clothing men to supply a regiment.

And so on and so on and so on, with every line of local merchant. Do you suppose these merchants could answer a question that would tell you why they naturally group together? They could not. And if they did try to answer you they would incline to the idea of exclusive position. Every piano dealer in piano row would gladly see his neighbor move away.

By necessity the local man must associate with his line. He doesn't know why; he simpy is there. The reason is traceable to the instinctive buying public—the regular dweller who grows to know the huckster's yell, the stock broker's pandemonium and the variety of sales appeals. You don't have to go to Philadelphia. It is the same in New York, Chicago; Lancaster, Pa.; Waco, Tex., or any trading center in the world.

The value of sales association manifests itself in a newspaper that represents an outstanding success. If you have any doubt about it look over the various pages of such a newspaper and observe how closely it follows the natural tendency of the buyer to shop in the atmosphere of sales association.

The advertiser who says he cannot see how people read solid pages of advertising is like the stranger in the alley. In most cases he is a new advertiser. He is not taking into consideration the instinctive characteristics of the regular readers of a newspaper. The fact that these advertisers are appearing day after day in this crowded condition is the best reason in the world that they are regularly read and answered.

Good position has more to do with advertising association than anything else. An agency man once said to me, "This association idea is bunk. Why look at the Saturday Evening Post; it's the greatest medium in the world for advertising an automobile." Upon investigating a current issue of the magazine, it developed that 47 pages out of 105 were devoted to automobile advertising.

The difficutly in presenting the advantages of advertising association lies in the fact that advertising men are essentially thinkers and consequently reluctant to give way to an instinctive attitude.

Instinct is not definable. For that reason it makes no difference what you and I think about good or bad position, but we owe it to ourselves and clients to make observations beyond our own workshop. You might think that a good place to sell fruit from one of these flat carts such as we see along the streets would be on a live corner free from competition, yet on a certain section of Ninth Avenue, New York, where there are approximately two hundred of these carts selling practically the same kinds of fruit, I listened to the following conversation from a poor ignorant Italian: "I first goa here then goa there—goa everywhere but let me tella you I mova no more—from thisa place I sella the goods."

Instinct is not explainable and for that reason an understanding of position is not possible without a close study of people. Can you imagine anyone trying to explain the most beautiful example of instinct—motherhod? The thinker who attempts this is occasionally seen on our streets spreading the propaganda of "Birth Control." The religious thinker assumes the hopeless task of breaking down tradition sacred to millions since time immemorial. World diplomats and crowned heads have never succeeded in a peace plan due to the instinctive fighting tendencies of people which have never been a part of the Conference. The politician is Bolshevik who thinks and sho his ideals independent of common t dencies.

This article is not to be construed as argument for ignorance. The fact t advertising men are brainy and force is beyond dispute. I have merely tr to show that the place to use the br is in the actual production of our wo

We can't control the buying habits people. The idea is unthinkable and loss of time. Thousands of dollars wasted annually because of the confusi over good and bad position. Why eliminate this phase of waste by a sim acceptance of the habits common people?

SEATTLE WELL ADVERTISED

Chamber of Commerce Has Spe $312,000 in Past Four Years

The Seattle Chamber of Commer spent $312,000 on national advertising most of its newspaper advertising—duri the past 4 years, a recent report states.

The Chamber's 1924 advertising a peared in 15 nationally circulated new papers and 8 magazines, having a co bined circulation of 8,000,000. In t 1924 publicity campaign $15,400 from t Chamber's publicity fund was pooled wi appropriations from Vancouver, Victor Bellingham and Tacoma for newspap advertising in California. These 5 cit have voted to continue their advertisi campaign in California newspapers du ing 1925.

Direct results from the national adve tising campaign compiled by the Chamb of Commerce follow:

Tourists spent $11,200,000 during t 4-year span.

The population of the city increas approximately 35,000 during the past yea

Tourists registering at the auto can park increased from 3,400 in 1922 to 1 203 in 1924. Most of these tourists h read newspaper advertisements whi persuaded them to include Seattle in the motor itineraries.

Hazel Deyo Batchelor's New Love Problem Serial

"SOLD"

Treats from a new angle the problem
Can money buy a woman's heart?

For Terms and Proofs Wire

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, P

A Stable Market

THE Milwaukee-Wisconsin market offers your most dependable sales opportunity in 1924! The first city of diversified industries located in the world's richest dairying center—an unbeatable combination — thoroughly covered by one advertising medium—

The Milwaukee JOURNAL FIRST - by Merit

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE · BORDERS · ORNAMENTS
BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies · Presses · Paper Cutters

Hamilton Wood & Steel Equipment including our
AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT
Carried in Stock for Prompt Shipment

American Type Founders Company

Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Richmond, Atlanta, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Spokane, Winnipeg

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

A REVISED edition of "The Making of a Great Newspaper" has just been issued by the New York Times. The title explains the contents. For making the booklet so attractive considerable credit should be given to Louis Level, who made the numerous drawings. The following interesting facts are taken from the booklet:

The annual cost of distribution of the Times by truck and railway is more than $1,045,000.

More than 2,200 employes are engaged in the production of the Times, in and outside of the Times Annex.

The weekly payroll of the newspaper and its auxiliary publications exceeds $100,000; the annual payroll exceeds $5,000,000.

The bill for telegraph and cables tolls amounts to more than $300,000 a year—about $1,000 a day.

Thus, for the three main items of its cost—paper and ink, service and delivery—the Times spends more than $12,000,000 a year.

Including all expenditures the outlay is more than $40,000 every day of the year—nearly $2,000 an hour.

The booklet may be obtained upon application to the New York Times, Times Square, New York City.

* * *

In the Clinical Notes of The American Mercury for November, the New York Sun was put upon the dissecting table for the benefit of the students in journalism. The operating literary surgeon issued the following bulletin:

"Under William M. Laffan, indeed, the paper was probably even better than under Dana, for Laffan had no political ambitions, and was thus free to knock any head in sight. Moreover, he was a fellow of artistic tastes, and so lifted the Sun clearly above the general level of journalistic Philistinism.

* * *

JAMES M. CAIN, formerly head of the Department of Journalism at St. John's College, Annapolis, but now a member of the editorial staff of the New York World, contributes to The American Mercury for November an article that is right to the point on the subject "Politician: Female."

* * *

THROUGH the courtesy of Frank A. Munsey, Sparks—the employes' magazine of The R. H. Macy Company—is reprinting Munsey's own story of his fight for success in the publishing field. This autographical sketch is as interesting as anything Mr. Munsey has printed in any of his magazines.

* * *

CHARLES M. SHELDON, editor of The Christian Herald, describes in The Atlantic Monthly for November an unique experience in journalism. His contribution tells how for one week he was hired to run the Topeka Daily Capital, as a Christian daily conducted as though the Man of Galilee were its editor.

The Rev. Mr. Sheldon, even after the lapse of a quarter of a century, is still bitter toward newspaper correspondents who covered the experiment for metropolitan dailies. These correspondents are still wondering if the Son of Mary would have given them the same treatment they experienced while covering the story.

In view of the large sale of the Daily Capital during this week—frankly admitted in the article—it is hard to see how these correspondents could have given any false impression that would have lasted about the experiment. The people had a chance to buy the paper and to see what the experiment was like for themselves.

I once attended a national newspaper conference held at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan. The conference opened on Sunday with lay sermons in local pulpits preached by Kansas editors. Personally, I am inclined to believe that these editors did better in pulpits than Mr. Sheldon did in the editorial chair. But this may be a matter of opinion rather than facts. I do not, however, question the sincerity of the Reverend Mr. Sheldon, but he certainly took some assignment when he tried to run a modern daily as Christ would have conducted it.

* * *

EDWARD W. BOK, for many years editor of The Ladies' Home Journal, contributes to The World's Work for November "The Greatest Word in the English Language." Mr. Bok believes this word is service—certainly a great word for all newspaper publishers.

* * *

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, knows how to write. If you have any doubts about this matter glance over his "Woodrow Wilson" (Houghton Miffiin Company).

Mr. White thus indicates the contents of his volume in his introduction:

> This book will try to tell the story, as simple as may be told, of a man, his time, and his task. His partisans have idealized his virtues and so have sought to create a superman—some sort of Heaven-sent Messiah to redeem a wicked world from iniquity. His enemies—alas, they have seen his weakness through the green and red glasses of envy and hate, and a fine old striped devil they have made of him.

For the newspaper man the most interesting pages of the volume will be found in those devoted to the way the correspondence of American Newspapers, and for other newspapers as well, were treated in Paris.

The publishers of the volume limit the number of words of direct quotation, so I will play it safe by simply mentioning this discussion of the closed door for publicity begins on page 395.

P. S. Appendix C. gives the correspondence on the Cox dinner episode.

To Honor Publisher Governor

Governor-Elect and Mrs. Theodore Christianson of Minnesota will be guests of honor at a dinner to be given by the Seventh District Editorial Association at Olivia, Minn., Dec. 5. Mr. Christianson, who is editor of the Dawson (Minn.) Sentinel, is president of the association.

Graves Resignation Rumored

Colonel John Temple Graves, veteran editor, lecturer and publicist, is to sever his connection with the Hendersonville (N. C.) Daily Times, according to a statement given by Morris Beale, for a time managing editor of the Daily Times, to Winston-Salem newspapers. Mr. Beale recently resigned from the Times and last week was in Winston-Salem for a conference with Tom P. Jimison, former member of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, relative to the organization of a new newspaper for North Carolina. No announcement has been received as to the outcome of the conference. According to the report of Mr. Beale's Winston-Salem statement Colonel Graves is considering connecting with a Florida newspaper.

Lou Holland Resumes Duties

Lou Holland has completely recovered from the recent illness which prevented him from assuming his full duties as president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, it was announced this week at A. A. C. W. headquarters, New York. He has again taken active charge of the association's administrative work, it was said.

Daily Files Libel Denied

The Portland (Ore.) Telegram has filed in court a denial of libel in the suit for $100,000 recently brought against it by Judge W. N. Gatens, defeated candidate for mayor of Portland. The Telegram asserts that its attack on Gatens was not libelous and that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.

Memorial Meeting for Bridgman

The Psi Upsilon Fraternity held a memorial meeting in honor of the late Herbert L. Bridgman business manager of the Brooklyn Standard-Union, at the Lotos Club, New York, Nov. 24. Mr. Bridgman had been president of the fraternity for 40 years.

BOOTH DAILIES ADD TO CAPITAL

$6,000,000 Capitalization Raised to $10,000,000 by Michigan Group

The Booth Publishing Company of Michigan, publisher of the Grand Rapids Press, Flint Daily Journal, Saginaw News Courier, Kalamazoo Gazette, Jackson Citizen Patriot, Bay City Times-Tribune, Muskegon Chronicle, and Ann Arbor Times-News filed amended articles of incorporation with the secretary of state at Lansing, Saturday Nov. 22, increasing the capitalization from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000. Home offices of the company are in the Dime Savings Bank Building, Detroit.

Several papers have been purchased by the Booths within the past few years and a number of new plants have been erected. One such plant is now contemplated to house the Kalamazoo Gazette. The Flint Daily Journal recently moved into a new, modern home.

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 126,763

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives

Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

Over—200,000
CIRCULATION
in less than 3 years.
—because Detroiters want it.
DETROIT TIMES

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE
TACOMA
Population, 112,000 People

Local flour mills export over 1,500,000 barrels of flour each year; Tacoma Smelter largest in the West; 2 High Schools, 6 Intermediate Schools, 39 Grade Schools, College of Puget Sound, Annie Wright Seminary and 145 churches.

You can blanket the rich and prosperous territory of Tacoma and Southwest Washington through the columns of the News Tribune; A. B. C. Audited Circulation, 32,643.

Frank S. Baker, President. Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave., New York City.
Ford, Parsons Co., 360 No. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

R. J. Bidwell & Co., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

THE PASSAIC DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities
TRADING POPULATION
167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

On and after September 6th, 1924
The New Orleans States
Will be represented in the East and West by the
JOHN M. BRANHAM COMPANY
New York Office—Canadian-Pacific Bldg.
Chicago Office—Mallers Bldg.
Also in Detroit, Atlanta, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Always Reliable
The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia and GROWING!

The Plain Dealer
has the Largest Circulation
of Any
Cleveland Daily Newspaper
205,569

J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York
Woodward & Kelly, Security Bldg., Chicago

CIRCULATION

FOR ALL DISTRIBUTORS OF DAILY NEWSPAPERS

By J. Omansky

Victor Lattanner of the Oakland (Cal.) Post Enquirer called our attention forcibly to a misstatement made in this department in connection with the action taken by the A. B. C. convention regarding club raisers. We stated that all subscriptions obtained by club raisers were considered when the fact is that only their single orders were passed on.

We gladly make this correction and are grateful to Mr. Lattanner for calling our attention to the mistake.

* * *

E. A. Van Valkenberg recently retired as editor of the Philadelphia North American will, we are sure, be missed greatly by the circulation department. An editor who writes as vigorously, fearlessly, and clearly as he did makes and holds circulation when features and news departments often fail. Although it is 12 years since we read North American editorials regularly, many of them—two full columns long—still lodge in our memory.

If there were more such editorial writers the job of circulating newspapers would not be so difficult.

* * *

In building circulation it is easier to get new readers than it is to hold them. One reason why new readers quit is because they do not know where to find anything in what is to them a new paper. In order to overcome this we advise them where to look for the various departments and features. The letters acknowledging receipt of subscriptions contain a guide to our paper which together with the news summary and index on page one help new readers locate the things in which they are mostly interested.

* * *

Many metropolitan newspapers, we notice, are going back to printing such small town stuff as marriage licenses, court news, deaths reported, births recorded, etc. Such information belongs in every paper and is helpful in holding readers.

* * *

The expected boom in advertising is going to bring more money into newspaper offices but will it make more circulation? We're afraid not. When a paper has more than 24 or 30 pages it repels complete reading. By the time we leaf over 20 pages we are ready to quit and probably would if we were not in the newspaper business.

Large, bulky papers are costly to distribute, they slow up delivery, and readers swear at them. At what size papers become unprofitable to publish we do not know but we do believe that the unreasonably large papers are an imposition on the readers. For the sake of the future development of the newspaper business an effort should be made by publishers to limit the number of pages.

* * *

The Baltimore Sun prints the names of school children and others who visit the Sun plant under the caption, "Seeing the 'Sun'." That's a smart thing to do. Evidently this paper has someone to guide visitors around the building and explain the workings of the departments. Most newspapers we know look upon callers as pests and shuttle them around from man to man until they finally either walk out or are taken in tow by the porter or office boy.

Since the circulation department is closest to the readers we believe that an office member of it should take care of all visitors. Invitations sent to all schools welcoming inspection tours by journalism, current events, civics, and other classes will gladly be accepted. If the students and teachers are tactfully and intelligently guided they will more than repay the courtesy in loyalty.

The composing room foreman can cooperate by giving each sightseer a line of type with his name for a souvenir and the editor can well afford to give the space required to print the names of the visitors just as the Sun does.

* * *

Keeping complete and accurate records is a tedious, irksome job; yet a necessary one. In common with most circulators we would much rather devote our time to promoting circulation for we get more of a kick out of doing it. But it is just as essential to know where each paper that comes off the press goes, what the losses are in waste, left-overs, returns, and how much is actually received for each thousands papers circulated.

Accurate records enable circulators to eliminate waste and increase the revenue so there will be more money to use in promotion.

The systems adopted by the A. B. C. are excellent and papers that are not members would do well to study the A. B. C. methods of keeping records.

* * *

Papers that offer prizes to carrier boys can get quick results and clean up miscellaneous prizes in stock by making a Christmas Surprise Offer now.

The circulars should describe the prizes without stating specifically what articles will be given for the two, three, or five subscriptions required. In this way the element of curiosity is injected into the offer and an opportunity is afforded for disposing of odd lots of prizes.

To please the boys most the prizes should be sent to them before Christmas.

* * *

A most significant article on newspaper circulation was printed in Editor & Publisher, Nov. 15. The author, R. S. Kellogg, with the aid of an outline map of the United States, showed the percentage of papers circulated in proportion to population, the percentage of illiterates, and the urban inhabitants in each state. In New York State there is one paper sold for every two persons and one paper for more than 28 persons in Mississippi.

Absolute deductions from such statistics obviously cannot be made but it does look as though the papers of the Empire State are near the saturation point and that the Mississippi papers have a long way to go. In several other states there is a paper sold for every two and three persons so that the problem of what to do for more business when almost all possible papers have been sold will soon be confronting many circulators.

With but few exceptions papers are so much alike that few persons find it necessary to buy more than one.

It seems to us, therefore, that in order to grow faster than the population papers will have to become more distinctive. Then people will find it worth while to buy several. And so the problem of standardization which many students of papers deplore will probably be solved when, to get more readers, editors will be forced to make their products individual.

We hope Mr. Kellogg will continue to use his analytical brain on the newspaper business and give us more analyses.

DAILY 106 YEARS OLD

Little Rock, Arkansas Gazette Celebrates Birthday

The Little Rock Arkansas Gazette celebrated the 106th anniversary of its founding on Nov. 20.

The oldest newspaper west of the Mississippi, and the first to be founded in Arkansas, the Gazette was established in 1819 by William E. Woodruff. It was a full decade before the Territory of Arkansas saw the founding of a second newspaper.

When in 1863, Little Rock fell into hands of the Federal army, the Gazette suspended publication, although the Northern forces in charge of the press printed various papers of their own. Publication as a daily was resumed in 1865 and has continued without interruption ever since.

J. N. Heiskell is the present editor.

AMON G. CARTER HONORED

Names Enrolled First on Exchan Club's "Book of Golden Deeds"

Civic work of Amon G. Carter, pre dent and publisher of the Fort Wo (Tex.) Star-Telegram, was commem rated in a testimonial dinner given him, Nov. 15, by 150 young business men of the city, members of the Exchange Club, inaugurating a custom of honoring each year some outstanding citizen of Fort Worth.

Amon G. Carter

Carter was selected for the premier honor, because of his many activities. His name was incribed first in the clu "Book of Golden Deeds."

Leaders in business, finance and c life spoke of the work of Mr. Carter a praised him for his numerous activiti in behalf of the state and city.

Mr. Carter responded, giving the cre for whatever success he had attained the co-operation of others and to t civic pride of Fort Worth.

35,434

Net paid (1923) Average.
An increase of 47% in 7 Years.

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping — Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service
Woodward Bldg., Washington, D.C.

a woman in the jungle

Stories of exploration are always fascinating, even more so when the explorer is a charming woman. Here is the best series yet—

UNKNOWN TRIBES—UNCHARTED SEAS

By Lady Richmond Brown

Extraordinary adventures told with unusual skill.

10 Sunday articles
Immediate release

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New York City

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

again
ON THE
San Francisco Chronicle

Both in the methods we use and in the results we obtain, we please the publishers of great metropolitan dailies throughout the country. That is why we are constantly being invited to repeat our successes for the same papers, as we are now doing for The San Francisco Chronicle.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The most successful of all newspaper consolidations.

THE NEW YORK HERALD
New York Tribune

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.

Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Radio a Newspaper Ally

EDITOR & PUBLISHER: It is the ess of the modern newspaper to dis- ate information to the public and in isseminating process to be accurate speedy.

is also the duty of the modern news- to use those agencies which enable give the most accurate news reports o give them the widest possible cir- ion with the greatest dispatch.

dio broadcasting is termed the ally ournalism and not the agency which supersede the newspaper or cause it sume the second place in the dissem- on of news. The newspaper with its fications will always be the primary e of news gathering and of news mination. Radio broadcasting has he facilities nor the talent for this nor does it have the audience to h much newspaper material is wel- .

clearly understand what part radio dcasting plays in connection with alism, let us analyze a parallel case effect of operatic phonograph rec- upon the attendance at operas.

ars ago, when it was first decided to duce operatic or other good music honograph records, it was thought, cularly by the impressarios that the c attendance at concerts would de- e and that receipts would fall off rdingly. It was their opinion that e public could buy a record of the famous artist in the world for one r, it would not attend the public ap- ance of that artist, with seats selling bove the price of the record.

his conclusion which at first seems onable, however, proved entirely g. The result of the sale of opera- honograph records was primarily to ase interest in music. More people l better music and thus more people ed to appreciate the artists. With people interested in music, the con- had a larger field from which to its audiences and, consequently, en- l more patronage than it ever had re. The phonograph, instead of de- ing attendance increased it very ma- lly.

those who fear that the broadcast- f news reports will hurt the circula- of a newspaper, the above illustra- applies. The wizard voices of the re broadcasting each night programs h are stimulating the minds of the c and filling them with an intense e to know and to understand the questions of the day. So it becomes duty of the newspapers to satisfy stimulated curiosity. Radio greatly ging the field of the newspaper has it increased obligations.

a recent address commemorating the th anniversary of KDKA, the West- use Company's pioneer broadcast- tation at East Pittsburgh, Pa., A. E. n, president of the Pittsburgh Post- Publishing Co., speaking from the Pittsburgh Post Studio aptly summed up the radio-newspaper situation as follows: "From new demands and obligations imposed upon the newspapers, stimulated by radio broadcasting, American journalism must not flinch. It must regard its obligation to present the news and the problems of the day without fear or favor, but it also must have due regard for the millions of unseen friends who listen in to the radio messages nightly."

J. C. McQUISTON,
Program Director, Westinghouse Electric Stations KDKA, KYW, WBZ, and KFKX.

Ted Robinson Wrote One

Des Moines, Iowa,
Nov. 4, 1924.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: "The Copy Reader" verse published in your magazine Oct. 25, is not "the first in human history ever to have got a rise out of the copy desk." I haven't the first at hand, but Ted Robinson, column conductor, Cleveland Plain Dealer, can furnish it to you. It's mighty good and well worth reprinting in your columns. The theme of it is that the copy reader is entitled to an equal place on Parnassus with the poet. By all means, be sure to get it.

An erstwhile member of the craft.
Jos. A. HACHA.

Census of Ad Signs Taken

Manufacturers of signs and advertising novelties reported products valued at $67,223,676, according to data collected at the biennial census of manufacturers just announced by the Department of Commerce in Washington, D. C. The value represents an increase of 26.2 per cent as compared with 1921, the last preceding census year.

first!

—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results

The Indianapolis NEWS

1893 SERVICE 1924
as visualized by
BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

SERVICE TO PUBLISHERS, as we see it, means much more than merely getting business. That, of course, is important, but the caring for it, keeping it giving satisfaction, preventing mistakes that work harm, all enter into the service we render.

There are hundreds of ways, some of them seemingly unimportant, others of supreme importance, where we find chances to do things for publishers which increase revenue and make standing with advertisers — standing that counts.

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.
Advertising Representatives of Newspapers
2 West 45th St. New York — 900 Mallers Bldg. Chicago
401 Van Nuys Bldg. Los Angeles

Improved Highways

Asset to Merchandising

Indiana is perhaps the best equipped of all states to meet all merchandising plans. Every National advertiser knows that an advertising campaign cannot bring in results from a territory that is not conducive to close co-operation between manufacturer and retailer. Indiana is the ideal territory in which to institute an advertising campaign.

Indiana's central location gives an advertising campaign a far reaching influence.

Indiana's unexcelled and unequalled transportation facilities bring your message and your product not only to all corners of the state but far beyond its boundaries.

Indiana's first place in the matter of improved highways is indicative of the fact that the people are bringing the world to its doors.

The 583,342 automobiles within the state show that the progressive Hoosiers can go after what they want. It is up to you, Mr. National Advertiser, to make them want what you have to offer. This can best be done, in fact, can be done, only through the medium of the following list of dailies, that so effectively reach and convey their message to all corners of the state.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
†Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,106	.025
*Evansville Courier and Journal	(M) 27,839 (E) 11,230	39,069	.09
*Evansville Courier and Journal	(S)	32,840	.08
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	31,502	.07
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	34,520	.07
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	41,938	.09
*Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	14,196	.055
Hammond Times	(E)	15,436	.05
*Huntington Press	(M&S)	3,797	.025
*Indianapolis News	(E)	128,400	.25
*Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,605 (E) 12,900	20,505	.06
†††La Porte Herald-Argus	(E)	6,000	.025
*Newcastle Courier	(E)	6,000	.025
*South Bend News-Times	(M) 10,138 (E) 12,902	23,040	.06
*South Bend News-Times	(S)	21,293	.06
†South Bend Tribune	(S) 19,388 (E)	20,627	.06
*Terre Houte Tribune	(E&S)	22,830	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

"Them Was the Good Ol' Days!"

The Boys Responsible for Turning Out Snappy Front Pages Would Have Had No Kick on the Run of News if Leased Wire Reports Had Been Available in the Mythological Days.

By CHET JOHNSON

BULLETIN—SPARTA, Greece,—(LEAD WAR THREATS)—Incensed by the elopement of his wife, Queen Helen, with Paris, a former guest in their home, King Menelaus, of Sparta, is mobilizing his troops and war with Troy appears imminent. Intense excitement prevails here. A formal declaration of war is expected momentarily.

—705am—

(BULLETIN)—CRETE—(LEAD FLIGHT PLANS)—Daedalus, famous architect and sculptor and inventor of the axe, level, gimlet, wedge and combination can opener and potato peeler, and his son, Icarus, announced early today that everything was in readiness for their attempted flight, the first aviation effort in history.

—710am—

CORRECTION
EDITORS: In bulletin lead war threats make it read: "Incensed by RUMORS OF THE ELOPEMENT of his wife, Queen Helen, etc.," as sent.
The Mythological Press.

—713am—

ABOARD ADMIRAL JASON'S FLAGSHIP, THE ARGO — (LEAD GOLDEN FLEECE)—Nearing the end of its eventful voyage from Ioclus, the Argo was this morning within sight of the Island of Colchis, where Admiral Jason and his hardy crew hope to find the Golden Fleece. Upon the possession by Admiral Jason of the Fleece, hinges his claim to the throne of Ioclus, now ruled by his half-brother, Pelias.

Preparations are now under way aboard the Argo to land an armed force.

—720am—

BULLETIN
SPARTA (ADD BULLETIN WAR THREATS)—At a meeting in the palace this morning, King Menelaus frankly announced discovery of proof of the elopement of Queen Helen and the handsome Trojan.

"This does not surprise me," he told his advisers, "My wife's interest in my guest was apparent from the day I brought him to the palace. The first time Queen Helen saw him, she cried: 'So this is Paris!' And from that moment I have been suspicious."

—726am—

BULLETIN
CRETE—(NEW LEAD FLIGHT)—After an hour spent in tuning up their wings, Daedalus and Icarus took off from the Crete field. Only a few spectators were on hand to cheer the intrepid aviators.

—731am—

MOUNT CAUCUSUS—(MAIL CORRESPONDENCE) — "How's your liver?" This facetious question brings no mirthful response from Prometheus, former prominent resident of Mount Olympus. Prometheus recently incurred the wrath of Jupiter by making clay models of men and bringing them to life by means of fire stolen from heaven. Jupiter ordered him chained to this mountain as punishment. Each day vultures swoop down and eat Prometheus' liver. And each night the liver grows again.

When passersby call to Prometheus: "How's your liver?" the usual response is: "Go to hell!"

—741am—

CORRECTION
EDITORS: In mail correspondence from Mount Caucasus, eliminate word "HELL" in last sentence and make it read: " .....usual response is: 'GO TO ————!'"

The M. P.

—744am—

HESPERIDES,—(LEAD HERCULES)—Hercules, world's champion strong man, will today take up his eleventh celebrated job: obtaining the Golden Apples of the Hesperides. Anticipating Hercules' plans, Bosco, the sleepless dragon that guards the sacred fruit trees, awakened early today and took up his position directly beneath the famous apple trees.

—748am—

BULLETIN
SPARTA (LEAD ALL WAR)—The Trojan ambassador was handed his passports at 7:17 this morning.

—750am—

WEST CRETE—(ADD FLIGHT)—Daedalus and Icarus passed over this city, nine miles west of the start of their flight, at 7:19 a. m. They were flying at an altitude of about 2500 feet and making a speed estimated at 35 miles an hour.

—754am—

Bulletin
TROY—(FOLLOW SPARTA, WAR) — Queen Helen, of Sparta, and her lover KILL IT KILL IT KILL IT
BULLETIN
TROY—(FOLLOW SPARTA, WAR)—Queen Helen and her platonic friend, Paris, arrived here today from Sparta. They read dispatches, telling of war preparations, calmly.

"Of course, I'm sorry," said the queen, "but I love Paris; even war shall never part us."

"There is something else back of all this war talk," said Paris. "Old Menelaus is merely using the friendship of Helen and me as an excuse. The real cause of this war dates back several years to the time I was appointed judge of the Mount Ida Bathing Beauty contest. Juno and Minerva were angered when I gave the first prize to Venus. They are the ones ribbing this whole thing."

—805am—

KILL KILL
EDITORS: In Troy bulletin just sent kill reference to Juno and Minerva, gods of Olympus. DISRESPECTFUL TO GODS and VIOLATION OF ESPIONAGE ACT.

The M. P.

—813am—

MOUNT OLYMPUS—(LEAD HANDICAP)—Pegasus, with Bellerophon up, is favored 9 to 1 in betting on the Pegasus-Chimaera handicap to be run Epsom Ups today. Chimaera, a lion-headed two-year-old, will run unmounted.

—819am—

BULLETIN
MOUNT OLYMPUS—(WAR)—Mars left early this morning for Sparta to lend all possible assistance in the successful launching of the Trojan War.

—825am—

NIGHT NEWS SUMMARY

Bacchus announces he will vigorously oppose attempts to make world dry.

* * *

Double life of popular god was exposed when Psyche discovered that h mysterious night-time husband was Cupid, son of Venus.

* * *

Proserpine, beautiful daughter of Jupiter and Ceres, kidnapped by Pluto, Ma of Hades for the last six terms.

* * *

Narcissus, known as "the world's prettiest man," starves to death while adm ing own reflection in stream.

* * *

Perseus announces he will marry Andromeda, pretty girl who rescued him fr sea monster recently.

—836am—

BULLETIN
CRETE—(NEW LEAD FLYERS)—A message from a fishing vessel sta that Daedalus and Icarus were sighted 56 miles west of Crete at 8:31 this morni They were flying slowly, the message stated, at an altitude of about 1,800 fe Icarus appeared to be having trouble.

—842am—

BULLETIN
ISLAND OF COLCHIS—(LEAD ALL GOLDEN FLEECE)—King Aet famous Golden Fleece fell this morning into the hands of Admiral Jason and h band of adventurers. Contending that Juno aided the attacking force, King Ae will appeal to Mount Olympus for return of the Fleece.

—846am—

EOS BULLETIN EOS EOS
EPSOM UPS (HANDICAP).
At the quarter: The Chimaera, by three lengths.

—848am—

CORRECTION
EDITORS: In Hercules bulletin sent at 748am make it read ". . . . obtaini the famous Apples of the Hesperides, SAID BY MANY TO BE OF PU GOLD, etc.," not "GOLDEN APPLES" as sent.

The M. P.

—852am—

EOS BULLETIN EOS EOS
EPSOM UPS—(HANDICAP).
At the half: The Chimaera by half a length.

—854am—

BULLETIN
TROY—(NEW LEAD WAR)—Mars arrived here at 8:03 a. m., and at on went into conference with military leaders. Later, as he left the conference, Ma said to newspapermen: "Boys, take it from me, this is going to be one of the nic little wars I've ever staged on such short notice."

—900am—

FLASH
HERCULES GETS THE APPLES.

—904am—

EOS BULLETIN EOS
EPSOM UPS—(HANDICAP).
At the three-quarters: The Chimaera by an eyebrow.

—905am—

FLASH
PEGASUS WINS.

—906am—

BULLETIN
EPSOM UPS—(LEAD ALL HANDICAPS)—Prince Bellerophon, on h winged and fleet-footed Pegasus, today won the Grand Handicap, overtaking t lion-headed Chimaera in the last quarter after a mad race through the skies. T Prince promptly killed the Chimaera.

—911am—

FLASH
ICARUS FALLS TO DEATH.

—912am—

BULLETIN
CRETE—(LEAD ALL FLIGHT)—Icarus, son of Daedalus, fell to his dea in the sea 87 miles west of here this morning while he and his father were attemp ing the first air flight.

The tragedy occurred when Icarus' wings collapsed. The young flyer we into a nose dive and plunged 1,500 feet into the sea. Daedalus, after circling ov the spot several times and seeing there was nothing he could do, continued on h flight to Sicily.

THIRTY

(NEXT WEEK—MOTHER GOOSE BY WIRE)

INTERTYPE

Standardized and interchangeable typesetting machines for all composition, from 5-point text up to full width 36-point bold, and 60-point bold condensed, on slugs up to 42 ems wide. See our full page next week.

INTERTYPE CORPORATION
General Offices: 805 Terminal Building, Brooklyn, N. Y.

ALL IN THE DAY'S WORK

Drawn Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

By C. D. BATCHELOR

Who Draws the Monkeys and Elephants in the Human Zoo

E artist who draws the Ledger yndicate's successful human inter- rtoon. The Human Zoo, is an adept in the art of being interviewed.

D. BATCHELOR

What our representative got out of this humorous genius follows, verbatim:

"Is this a caricature of yourself, Mr. Batchelor?"

"Unfortunately, it is not a caricature."

"Have you anything to say about your past?"

s, I have. But nothing that I can this late date can affect the result. born in the late eighties and am pproaching the roaring forties."

hy be facetious? Why not say uing of—well—importance?"

"Men rarely say the important thing for publication. The important things are usually said between the blue points and the demi-tasse, or under a full moon in the sun parlor."

"Have you any advice to those about to take up art work?"

"Only the advice of Mr. Punch to those about to marry, 'Don't.'"

"Were you ever poor?"

"'Ever' is the word."

"I suppose, Mr. Batchelor, that your parents early discovered that they had an unusual child on their hands."

"Yes, but 150 other parents in Osage City, Kan., had the same experience that year."

"Now, Mr. Batchelor," (the reporter looks searchingly at the artist) "where do you get your ideas?"

"Well, some of them, like Topsy, just grow; and some of them like the flivver, are built from the chassis up. Fortunately 'The Human Zoo,' admits of a wide range of subjects; but of course those on which there is not a general agreement are taboo."

rectory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Editorials

AILY SERVICE, TIMELY TOPICS
Reid Editorial Service,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WORLD'S FAMOUS AUTHORS
led selection, serials, novelettes, shorts.
e for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., N. Y.

General Features

SMALL-TOWN-PAPER SYNDICATE
Unique—Inexpensive—Complete
s Caricatures — Home Features — Daily mn—Comic Jingles—Other Specialties ture, 110 West 40th Street, New York or Complete Catalog with Service Rates

Radio

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Syndicate Features

Advertiser desires to get in touch with the producers of established syndicate features which have made good in a few newspapers, and might be sold to many by an experienced sales force. Commission basis only. Address: "SALESMAN," care EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

10% Increase in Wealth

IOWA, a section of the country that has always been richly endowed, has, within the past few months far exceeded her own expectations. Added to her great revenue from live stock and industrial pursuits, is a new wealth of

564 Million Dollars

This great increase in wealth is due to a phenomenal crop during 1924. The value of the crop far exceeded that of 1923, giving Iowa an almost unparalleled increase in buying power over last year.

The coming year promises, for the wise and wide-awake National Advertiser, a great harvest of results in Iowa. Millions of dollars are waiting, in Iowa, to be converted into every conceivable variety of necessity and luxury.

Make sure that your local dealer is adequately supplied with your product to meet the great demand that will be felt in this coming record breaking year. Then do your most intensive advertising in this territory where every family takes and reads a Daily Newspaper. The Iowan prefers his daily newspaper to any other form of publication—in fact it has become a vital and indispensable factor in his daily life.

These newspapers can give you quick contact with this huge market

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
*Burlington Gazette	(E)	10,164	.04
*Cedar Rapids Gazette	(E)	21,481	.07
*Davenport Democrat & Leader	(E)	14,564	.06
*Davenport Democrat & Leader	(S)	17,895	.06
†Davenport Times	(E)	24,676	.07
*Iowa City Press-Citizen	(E)	6,387	.035
*Mason City Globe Gazette	(E)	12,622	.04
*Muscatine Journal	(E)	7,762	.035
*Ottumwa Courier	(E)	12,852	.05
*Waterloo Evening Courier	(E)	17,071	.06

* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

PUBLICITY SCORED BY COAST ADVERTISER

Standard Oil Man Attacks "Handouts" and Papers Which Accept Them at San Francisco Newspaper Executives' Meet

Publicity received a scathing denunciation from John J. Cuddy, advertising director, Standard Oil Company of California and president of the San Francisco Advertising Club, in an address before 75 enthusiastic newspaper executives from the Pacific Coast and Intermountain territories gathered in San Francisco, Nov. 20, at the second annual convention held under the auspices of the A.N.P.A. Bureau of Advertising. Cuddy deplored both the practice of issuing publicity by the advertiser and acceptance by the newspaper. He opened the eyes of newspaper men to what the big newspaper advertiser looks for in the selection of media.

T. L. Emory

There should be no link between the advertising and editorial departments according to Cuddy, who stated advertisers want clean newspapers with character and only that merchandising service which gives real information intelligently about possibilities of the market and the trade situation.

"The representative is the field glass of the advertiser", said Cuddy, stating that a publisher's representative is one of the most useful men in the entire field of advertising.

The program for meeting was prepared entirely by Thomas L. Emory, Pacific Coast manager of the Bureau of Advertising and who received a rousing vote of appreciation of his work. William J. Hoffman, advertising manager of the Portland Oregonian presided as chairman.

The meeting was featured by the presence of Friend Richardson, Governor of California, president of the California Press Association and publisher of the Berkeley Gazette, and George L. Baker, thrice elected mayor of Portland, who opened the meeting with the declaration that the sanity of the United States Press was proved conclusively by the last presidential election. Baker asked newspapermen for even closer co-operation to make the Pacific Coast one unit.

Ramsey Oppenheim, publisher of Western Advertising sketched the astonishing growth of coast newspapers and advertising, citing the jump from 30 advertising agencies with 450 clients in 1919 to 120 agencies with 1,950 clients in 1923. Oppenheim also stressed the importance of the bureau and publisher's representatives, and predicted huge increases in coast newspaper advertising.

Speed was the theme of an address by Doctor B. M. Rastall, manager of Californians, Inc., who hailed the newspaper as the modern university.

R. F. Haeglin, district sales manager of the Kellogg Sales Company, spoke on profitable cultivation of the Pacific Coast through newspaper advertising.

Following the adjournament for luncheon as guests of bureau, Thomas L. Emory opened a closed afternoon session with a searching analysis of advertising, citing specific examples of the Bureau's work. Emory prayed for increase in the future vision of newspaper publishers in dealing with their problems.

The remainder of the session was given over to a discussion from the floor covering merchandising service, shopping news, and local advertising problems. By unanimous vote San Francisco was chosen as the place of next year's convention, to be called in early October.

To Fete British Ambassador

The Association of Foreign Press Correspondents, New York, will give a luncheon in honor of the British Ambassador, Sir Esme Howard at the Lawyers Club, Dec. 9. P. W. Wilson, special correspondent for Great Britain, is president of the association, and Sydney J. Clark, of the London Daily Telegraph is secretary and treasurer.

MUST STUDY LINOTYPE

University of Washington Journalism Students Will Learn to Operate

The University of Washington School of Journalism will be the first journalism school in the United States to require all its graduates—men and women—to acquaint themselves with the linotype machine. A Model 14 is being installed, and familiarity with the machine will be one of the requisites for graduation, although no scholastic credit will be given for the course.

The course in linotype operation was necessitated by the increasing demands by publishers of country weeklies and small town dailies that their staff members know how to operate the machine. Printers' strikes and sudden resignations by operators are more and more forcing publishers to require members of their staffs to know linotype operation.

Many graduates of the school have gone into the country field. Practically all of them have been forced to go into their shops and learn how to operate the machines, thereby spending time which would have been used more profitably in soliciting advertising, writing features stories which bring increased circulation.

"MA" FERGUSON INVITED

Texas Governor May Speak at A. A. C. W. Houston Convention

Mrs. M. A. Ferguson, Governor-elect of Texas, has been invited to address the international A. A. C. W. convention to be held at Houston, Tex., May 10 to 14.

The invitation to Mrs. Ferguson was tendered by Bernice Blackwood, executive secretary of the Advertising Specialty Association and chairman of the Federation of Women's Advertising Clubs of the World.

"You Haven't Seen Anything Until You've Seen Texas" has been tentatively chosen as the A. A. C. W. convention slogan.

ADVERTISING WON VOTES

Newspaper Campaign Helped Re Oregon Income Tax Law

Newspaper advertising is given c for effecting the repeal of the Or state income tax in the recent elec C. C. Chapman, manager of the camp for repeal, who singlehanded directe phases of the campaign, says it was of the most remarkable demonstration the effectiveness of newspaper adve ing he has ever seen.

Concerning the advertising camp Mr. Chapman said it was the first such a campaign had consisted mainl newspaper advertising which frankly forth all the facts of the case.

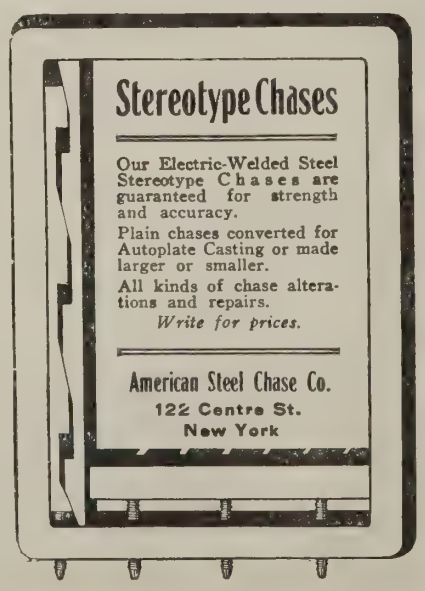
"My theory was that 'an informed lic will vote right,' and upon that th I expended nearly $15,000 in newsp advertising to get information before public," Chapman stated. "The th was amply vindicated by the return believe that newspaper advertising i far the most economical and efficac method of reaching the public."

Mr. Chapman, a former adverti man, is publisher of the Oregon V a political weekly.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

Printers' Outfitters

Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.



Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money

Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace

Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis Minn.

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

Web Presses for Sale:
Hoe 12-page web press; Hoe 16-page web p Goss 16-page Junior straight line; Potter page with color; Hoe 20-page web press; 32-page right angle quad; Goss half-tone color press for comics, etc.; Scott five- press. All above presses with stereotype e ment. Campbell Multipress 8-page, from forms (no stereotyping). All good outfits all but one at very low prices. For details dress Baker Sales Company, 200 Fifth Ave New York City.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Driv with full automatic push button control
USED BY THE
ST. LOUIS STAR
St. Louis, Mo.
We refer you to them for thei opinion

CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO CHICAGO QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME
CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

MAIN OFFICE Fisher Building 343 S. Dearborn St. CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE Marbridge Building Broadway at 34th St. NEW YORK

The Quickest and Best Casting Unit

Hoe Stereotype Furnace with Hoe Equipoise Curved Casting Moulds and Pumps.

If it's a Hoe, It's the Best

R. HOE & CO.
504-520 GRAND STREET, NEW YORK CITY
7 South Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.
7 Water Street BOSTON, MASS.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

er word per insertion, cash with order, or advertisements under the classifica- "Situations Wanted."

per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bot- advertisement.

er word per insertion, cash with order, or advertisements under any other cation.

per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bot- advertisement.

STUATIONS WANTED

ising Man.
enced solicitor, ad writer, familiar with ng layouts, etc., desires position on daily per in South. References. Address Scare Eidtor & Publisher.

ising Manager.
lass display and classified man seeks Salary, sixty-five; now earning more. 970, Editor & Publisher.

is Manager.
ngaged, will consider offer from pub- desiring to turn over entire mangement ness: 20 years' actual experience in all ments. C-510. Editor & Publisher.

tion Manager,
ountry, or both. Box B-992, Editor & er.

tion Manager
had experience on large Eastern and n papers, wishes to make change. Best rence furnished, now employed. C-507, & Publisher.

ion Manager, years' experience on morning, afternoon, and combination papers, desires perma- aveling position. Well educated, pleas- rsonality, good salesman, age thirty. resent employer for past six years. Best rences from well known newspaper men. s Box B-998, Editor & Publisher.

esk.
f 27 who has been serving eighteen as city editor of Virginia daily, city of desires responsible place with news- rn larger city. He is experienced in mak- signments and in turning in clean, fast e copy. Salary requirements $60 per Address Character, B-981 Editor & er.

an.
ree years in Boston. Rapid, accurate, able editorial assistant, aged 31; best ces. Wants desk job on high-grade daily. f city immaterial. Available when Alger S. Beane, P. O. Box 2364, Mass.

lave.
tands makeup, can write editorials, require lash to induce action, seeks l west berth. Address C-513, Johnson, ditor & Publisher.

o
married man with seven years' experience , telegraph, city desks, editorial and fea- riter, paragrapher, reporter, backed by ity education, travel and linguistic at- nts, now on morning paper, seeks change ving daily. Available January 1, pos- efore. B-988 Editor & Publisher.

p man, 30, desires position as reporter or n small paper. Eight years' experience. opies of paper. References. Box C-506, & Publisher.

S YOUR MECHANICAL DEPARTMENT CROWDED?

Have you any unused equipment taking up valuable space? There is no need for this machinery to become an obstacle to efficiency in your plant.

A classified ad in EDITOR & PUBLISHER will sell it or you quickly and cheaply.

Situations Wanted

Editor, Reporter.
Good Times Are Here! Have you a vacant seat in the Prosperity Special? Now the election is over newspaper man with 14 years' experience in general reporting and editing wishes position on evening daily. Can cover run from sports and police to churches, city hall, and conventions. Also help on desk. College graduate, varsity letter man. 32nd degree Mason. Married. Best references. Write to Box B 969. Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer,
with foundation of wide news training, would like change from present association with large and highly reputable publishers. Executive. Competent to direct. Address Box B-973, Editor & Publisher.

Feature Writer.
With all-around newspaper training desires connection. Background includes three years on The Springfield (Mass.) Republican. University trained and World war veteran. References and examples of work on request. Address Box B-986, care Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent.
Now employed, desires to make change. Qualified from 20 years' actual experience to supervise all departments. Will consider proposition of salary plus percentage of savings effected. C-509, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Man.
Experienced, seeks position afternoon paper. Desires editorial writing or desk, but will consider reporting. C. C. Leach, 1328 Benton Ave., Springfield, Missouri.

Newspaper Man, 36,
Thoroughly competent, aggressive and reliable, now in responsible position on morning paper, desires responsible desk connection on afternoon daily. Experience covers every position in news end. College man, habits good, with no failures in record. Detailed information and references gladly submitted. Address C-512, Editor & Publisher.

Paragrapher.
Brown Thinks His Case Is Funny. Carl Brown, of the Atchison Daily Globe, thinks his case is funny. Brown thinks he is one of the world's greatest paragraphers, and yet nobody has ever offered him a job, and he admits it here and now. Brown's Snort Column in the Atchison Daily Globe is taking very well, or a lot of people have been fibbing to Brown. Brown also writes the Atchison Globe Sights, widely quoted. He also daily writes countless pert little paragraphs for the news columns of The Globe. And yet nobody has ever offered him a job. Isn't that funny? Brown is hoping that somebody will read this advertisement, and investigate him and his work on The Atchison Globe, and offer him a proposition or tell him frankly why his work is so rotten nobody has ever offered him a job. Brown believes if some big newspaper or syndicate would adopt him, they could make something out of him. Address your letter to Carl Brown, Atchison Daily Globe, Atchison, Kansas.

HELP WANTED

Advertising Manager.
Evening newspaper. Immediate territory of 200,000. Manufacturing city. Must be strong developer. Good copy writer. Street man. Give full details in reply. Address Box C-501, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor.
Daily newspaper of 20,000 circulation in Central Pennsylvania city. Is in need of solicitor competent to write copy, make lay-outs and develop new accounts. Good opportunity for young man who really likes newspaper work. Address Box B-999, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor.
One of the largest and best known daily newspapers in the United States has opening for experienced advertising solicitor who has record of successful results in the last several years. This position is permanent with liberal salary, also opportunity for advancement. Applicant should give at least five references regarding character and ability, also forward photograph of himself. No need to answer this advertisement unless you can produce a large volume of new business. Box C-508, Editor & Publisher.

Afternoon And Night Desk Man.
Close editor. Good head line writer. Hours noon to 10 p. m. Evening newspaper. City of 145,000. Must understand rewriting and news digest. No snap. First letter tells the story. Address Box C-503, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Ambitious young man with advertising selling experience and ability on a big mail order paper. Fine opportunity for a hustler. State age, experience, references and salary expected. Address, Box C-516, Editor & Publisher.

Help Wanted

Classified Advertising Man.
Afternoon paper. City of 150,000. New owner. Street man. Hard soliciting. No theoretical schemes. Chance for man who wants trial and develop into salary as he produces. Address Box C-504, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Evening newspaper. Small circulation now. New owner. City of 150,000. One who understands circulation promotion. Plenty of hard work. Tell full story in first letter. Address Box C-500. Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Two circulation managers with ambition to get ahead who have reached the limit of possible promotion in present location. Must be over 30 years of age with five years experience in hiring and training canvassers and be willing to locate permanently in large cities anywhere between Atlantic and Pacific. Further expansion of already large circulation organization creating several desirable positions with earning possibilities ranging from $2,600 to $5,000 per year. Answer with full particulars regarding last ten years experience and references as to personal habits and character. Ernest A. Scholz, Circulation Director, Butterick Publishing Company, Butterick Building, New York.

Day Desk Editor.
Evening newspaper. Fully competent for both local and Associated Press news. Good head line writer. Plenty of hard work. City of 140,000. Give full record. Minimum salary expected. Address Box C-502, Editor & Publisher.

Salesman.
Feature or other salesman now traveling wanted to sell newspaper features on a commission of 20 to 50 per cent of his gross sales. B-984, Editor & Publisher.

Staff Artist.
Experienced in cartooning and layouts. Location Washington, D. C. Write confidential age, experience and salary expected. Box C-514, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Hustling young artist capable of producing drawings for display advertising of this company, doing cartoon work for company magazine and art work necessary for the conduct of publicity department. One acquainted with chalk plate process preferred. Include samples of drawing and expected wages in reply. Publicity Department. Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company, Fairmont, W. Va.

Woman Reporter.
Experienced, to take charge of woman's page on evening daily in city of 125,000 near Philadelphia. Excellent opportunity for constructive work. Permanent. Write confidentially giving age, experience, references and salary to start. Box B-983 Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

In the South.
First class weekly. Fine city, 7,000. Will bear closest investigation. Price reasonable. Address C511, care Editor & Publisher.

For Sale.
Daily newspaper in Ohio city of 15,000 population. Only paper in city. Address C-505, R. F. C., care Editor & Publisher.

New Paris Sunday Paper

Dimanche Illustré, of Paris, the Sunday edition of the illustrated paper Excelsior, is soon to have a rival, L'Etoile, which is slated to appear early in December. It is already being advertised in a novel way, men with star shaped boards parading the streets of Paris calling on Parisians not to forget to buy the new paper—L'Etoile (Star) when it appears.

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

FOR $12,500 CASH, balance deferred, you can buy a small city afternoon newspaper, now breaking even, inventory $28,000, annual business $35,000. Sale price is $25,000. Owner is engaged in other business which demands his entire time. Mention our No. 319.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L. BL'D'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

BOY PROMOTION STUNT PROVED IN TEST

K. T. Boardman, Santa Barbara (Cal.) Press, Suggests "Best Scheme" for Boosting Circulation on Small City Dailies

King T. Boardman, circulation manager of the Santa Barbara (Cal.) Press, claims to have developed the best "boy promotion scheme" for boosting circulation on small city dailies ever tried.

He outlines his scheme as follows:

"First, have independent carriers.

"Divide your routes into classes; first class, those with over 200 papers; second class, those with 150 to 200; third class, those with 100 to 150; and you can have a class for those under 100 if you want.

"This will not require the smaller route to compete with the larger, and the larger will not be at a disadvantage with the smaller on account of having a larger list and consequently fewer people to call upon that do not take the paper.

"Give $25, first prize; $15, second, and $10 for the third in each class. For the largest average increase in the three months, give them credit for all subs that come through the office or any other way, this will encourage them; note that I say, average increase, not merely new subs.

"To get the average, as you know, is to add the number of papers that the carrier has drawn for three months and divide by the number of days.

"I have worked this twice a year on an evening paper with good success. During that time I never had to have a solicitor, and if I did they could not do anything as the boy had been there first and got a promise if not the subscription; I have worked the same on morning papers, but did not have as good results, which convinces me that the evening paper has the advantage with the boys, if it is a newspaper."

Louis A. Golding Dies

Louis A. Goldberg, manager of the Philadelphia office of the New York Jewish Daily Forward, died recently in a Philadelphia hospital. He first came to Philadelphia to take charge of the Forward office in 1914.

Killed in Plane Crash

George Walker, 43, a newspaper man of Jerseyville, Ill.; H. G. Tilley, 22, and Ole Hagen, 25, were killed recently when an advertising airplane in which they were riding crashed to the ground at Greenfield, Ill.

DOLLAR $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

BANKS will make Christmas Club disbursements Dec. 4-6. Payments, this year, it is indicated, will exceed those of past years by thousands of dollars.

H. L. Rawll, president of the Christmas Club, a corporation organized to centralize the printing and disbursement problems of the many thousands of banks throughout the country that have organized Christmas clubs, states that theyear was marked by a strong tendencytoward scientific savings. But now the money saved is to be spent on Christmas gifts.

Merchants of your city will want to get their share.

A double truck, featuring your own local banks' disbursements of Christmas savings, paid for by co-operative efforts of small gift shops, might go well.

DURING this busy season, you don't worry much about filling the daily quota of space with advertising, because it almost fills itself. But now is a time you could well do a little advertising for yourself! Run a few ads telling people to give themselves a year's subscription to your paper for Christmas. Ask them to send your paper for a year to relatives or friends who have moved away! You can make a few dollars in subscriptions if you advertise!—R. John Gibler, St. Louis, Mo.

A great many newspapers, especially in the smaller cities, neglect the billiard parlors. A contract for one or a series of ads setting forth the pleasure found in a game of billiards could easily be obtained to be paid by five or more parlors, a sort of co-operative advertising affair. Try it. It will add to your advertising. —G. Smedal, Jr., Minneapolis, Minn.

At this time of the year when the winter schedule of parties and socials is beginning, the Lowell (Mass.) Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader secured a page of advertisements from hair-dressing parlors and beauty shops. An attractive 8 column streamer head was used, plus a box of copy pointing out to milady the benefits of having her hair shampooed every three weeks and marcelled weekly.—Arthur N. Stackpole, Lowell.

The advertising manager of an eastern Canadian newspaper arranged three pages of special advertising to be sold only to those business and professional and manufacturing firms or individuals that were in existence for 30 years or more. The idea was obtained by perusing the section in the paper devoted to condensed news of items that were published in the newspaper 30 years previously. It was found that sufficient advertising could be sold to fill the three special pages, for insertions, thrice consecutively.—W. McNulty, St. John, Can.

How about a "Wire your house" campaign? There are still innumerable dwellings not equipped for the use of electricity. The electrical contractors, house wiremen, supply houses, etc. as well as your local light company would be interested.—B. A. T.

Club women are a majority among the readers of the Women's Pages in most newspapers. Recently, I have been trying what is proving to be a good plan. Each week I look over the various programs of the clubs and choose one or two of the papers which have been read at these meetings and which I think might be the most interesting. These I publish in the Sunday edition. It gives the club women an opportunity of knowin what is being done in clubs other than their own; and incidently, adds a feather to the cap ow the onew hose paper is published.—Lillian Blackstone, Fort Wayne (Ind.) Journal-Gazette.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

THERE ought to be a good cross word puzzle story in your town. What do various representative residents of your city think of the craze? Is it educational? Is it true that the vocabulary is really improved or are the unusual words merely obsolete, unnecessary and impracticable? How much money is spent for cross word puzzle books? How much time is used collectively in solving puzzles? Who are the prominent persons engaged in solving the puzzles in your newspaper? What methods do various persons use in working out their solutions? There are many angles from which a story could be built up.—H. M. H., Providence, R. I.

"Eighty and Active" is the standing two-column box head under which the Louisville Times runs a photograph and a brief sketch of men who are past fourscore and still are active in business. The feature has proved popular and the Times has found nearly a score of them in the city of Louisville in the month it has been running the feature.—S. G. Thompson, Louisville (Ky.) Times.

With winter coming on a story on what winter sports will be available would be interesting to a large number of readers. Will there be outdoor ice skating rinks, slides, skiing, etc.? Your part department head and school authorities could give you the necessary information.—George Smedal, Jr., Minneapolis.

With more automobiles in use than ever before in history and the season of slush, snow, ice and cold weather coming on rapidly, get your traffic chief to give you a story outlining "don'ts" and "do" for the benefit of your autoist readers. Also, get your prominent auto dealers to tell you concisely the best manner in which to keep your car "up and going" during the hard season just now coming in.—M. R. H.

"Your Best Route" is a helpful feature that the readers of one middlewestern daily make good use of in obtaining routes, distances and highway conditions for contemplated motor trips. Your motor association will be glad to cooperate with you in supplying this sort of information and the feature used daily will prove a welcome service to motorists, many of whom will find a little sc book of the clippings valuable when s information is desired.—Robert L. Bea Fort Wayne, Ind.

Under a two column box head "Di ing Off the Records," the Wabash (In Plain Dealer is running a daily series interesting stories taken from the cou records as far back as 1835.—B. P. Fort Wayne, Ind.

A "swaps" column calls the attent of many readers to the classified adv tising section of the Portland Oregon The "swaps" column is advertised o news page. Here are two typical adv tisements in the "swaps" column:

"Will exchange graphonola for ra set."

"Wanted, 12-guage Winchester pu gun. Will trade tires."—Marga Kressmann, Eugene, Ore.

CHRISTMAS SHORT STORIES

Full Page Mats or Setting Copy

Melville Davisson Post
Sophie Kerr
Katherine Holland Brown
Sylvia Chatfield Bates

Wire Quick

These stories are part of the Metropolitan Weekly Short Fiction Services, but are available separately.

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.

150 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK CITY

Thomas W. Briggs Company

Memphis, - Tenn.

Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page

Look us up in Dun or Bradstreet's

NEA NEA

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

Write for samples and rates

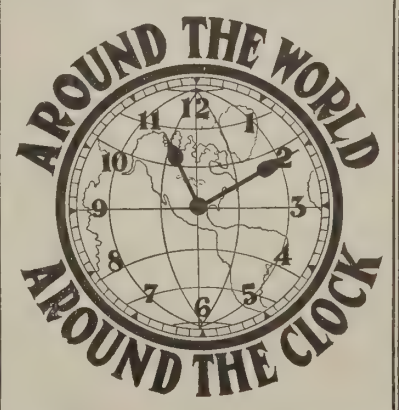
NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

All-Star Features

Comics
Magazine Pages
Editorials
Special Articles
Fiction

Send now for

THE GREEN CATALOG



of

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

M. Koenigsberg, President

NEW YORK CITY

BY UNITED PRESS

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

RECTOR'S RENOWNED RECIPES

by

GEORGE RECTOR

son of the famous restaurateur

These are the dishes that made "Rector's" illustrious on two continents.

The Chicken Sauté invented to celebrate the premiere of "Peter Pan."

The Lobster Cocktail prepared specially for the Infanta Eulalie of Spain.

Write for Samples.

THE McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE
373 Fourth Ave., New York City

The First Thanksgiving Was Celebrated in NEW ENGLAND

The people that first settled the territory now known as New England, felt that they had much to be thankful for, and decided to set aside a day each year for the purpose of Thanksgiving. The three hundred and third Thanksgiving has just been celebrated in New England, where the people found that they had more than ever to be thankful for.

New England is enjoying a greater prosperity than ever before. Her industrial pursuits are pouring in great revenue. This can be more clearly shown by the following latest figures:

Total Income	$1,908,134,000
Total Wealth	24,407,466,000
Per Capita Wealth	3,306
Building and Loan Assets	262,466,578
Manufacturing Capital	5,758,137,000
Bank Deposits	4,720,927,000

Where there is so much wealth there is a proportionate buying power that is well worth going after by National Advertisers. The Daily Newspapers listed herewith reach all classes of New Englanders.

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356
*Attleboro Sun	(E)	5,628	.0275	.0175
*Boston Globe	(M&E)	274,892	.50	.50
*Boston Globe	(S)	322,030	.55	.55
*Boston Post	(M)	371,124	.60	.60
*Boston Post	(S)	351,527	.55	.55
*Fall River Herald	(E)	15,553	.05	.05
*Fitchburg Sentinel	(E)	11,383	.055	.045
*Haverhill Gazette	(E)	15,400	.055	.04
†Lynn Item	(E)	16,345	.06	.04
††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader	(M&E)	21,270	.06	.06
*New Bedford Standard Mercury	(M&E)	33,883	.10	.10
*New Bedford Sunday Standard	(S)	26,944	.10	.10
*North Adams Transcript	(E)	9,491	.04	.035
†Pittsfield Eagle	(E)	17,138	.04	.035
*Salem News	(E)	20,784	.08	.07
*Taunton Gazette	(E)	8,479	.04	.03
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette	(M&E)	86,049	.24	.21
*Worcester Sunday Telegram	(S)	49,849	.18	.15
MAINE—Population, 768,014
†Bangor Daily Commercial	(E)	14,750	.055	.05
*Portland Press Herald	(M&S)	31,788(A)	.09	.08
*Portland Express	(E)	27,251	.10	.07
*Portland Telegram (Sunday Edition Express)	(S)	29,992	.10	.07
†Waterville Sentinel	(M)	6,134	.035	.025
NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683
*Concord Monitor-Patriot	(E)	5,104	.0375	.025
†Keene Sentinel	(E)	3,609	.03	.034
*Manchester Union Leader	(M&E)	27,864	.09	.07
RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397
†Newport Daily News	(E)	6,249	.0336	.0296
†Pawtucket Times	(E)	25,555	.07	.07
†Providence Bulletin	(E)	64,524	.17 (B)	.23
*Providence Journal	(M)	36,686	.10 (B)	.23
*Providence Journal	(S)	61,575	.15	.15
*Providence News	(E)	26,845	.07	.07
†Providence Tribune	(E)	23,603	.10	.09
*Westerly Sun	(E&S)	4,618	.025	.025
†Woonsocket Call	(E)	13,666	.05	.05
VERMONT—Population, 352,428
*Barre Times	(E)	6,944	.03	.025
†Bennington Banner	(E)	3,067	.0125	.0125
*Burlington Free Press	(M)	12,983	.05	.05
*Rutland Herald	(M)	10,765	.04	.04
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record	(E)	4,024	.0214	.015
CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631
*Bridgeport Post-Telegram	(E&M)	45,795	.15	.15
*Bridgeport Post	(S)	20,017	.10	.10
*Hartford Courant	(M)	37,649	.08	.08
Hartford Courant	(S)	50,247	.11	.11
†Hartford Times	(E)	48,875	.12	.12
*Meriden Record	(M)	7,348	.045	.03
*Middletown Press	(E)	8,050	.0325	.025
†New Haven Register	(E&S)	42,171	.12	.11
†New London Day	(E)	12,079	.06	.045
††Norwich Bulletin	(M)	12,494	.07	.05
*Norwalk Hour	(E)	5,842	.04	.04
†South Norwalk Sentinel	(E)	4,280	.025	.025
*Stamford Advocate	(E)	9,305	.05	.04
*Waterbury Republican American	(M&E)	22,836	.08	.08
*Waterbury Republican	(S)	15,043	.08	.08

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
(A) Circulation daily edition only.
(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

The New York Telegram and EVENING MAIL

Concentrated High Class Circulation

219,488

219,488 people of means—potential purchasers of your products—buy The Telegram-Mail daily. Approximately 98% are within the New York trading district or 50-mile radius from City Hall.

A B C Figures for October 1, 1924

The New York Telegram and EVENING MAIL

DAN A. CARROLL
Eastern Representative
110 East 42nd Street, New York City

PUBLICATION OFFICE
73 Dey Street, New York City

JOHN E. LUTZ
Western Representative
Tower Building, Chicago, Illinois

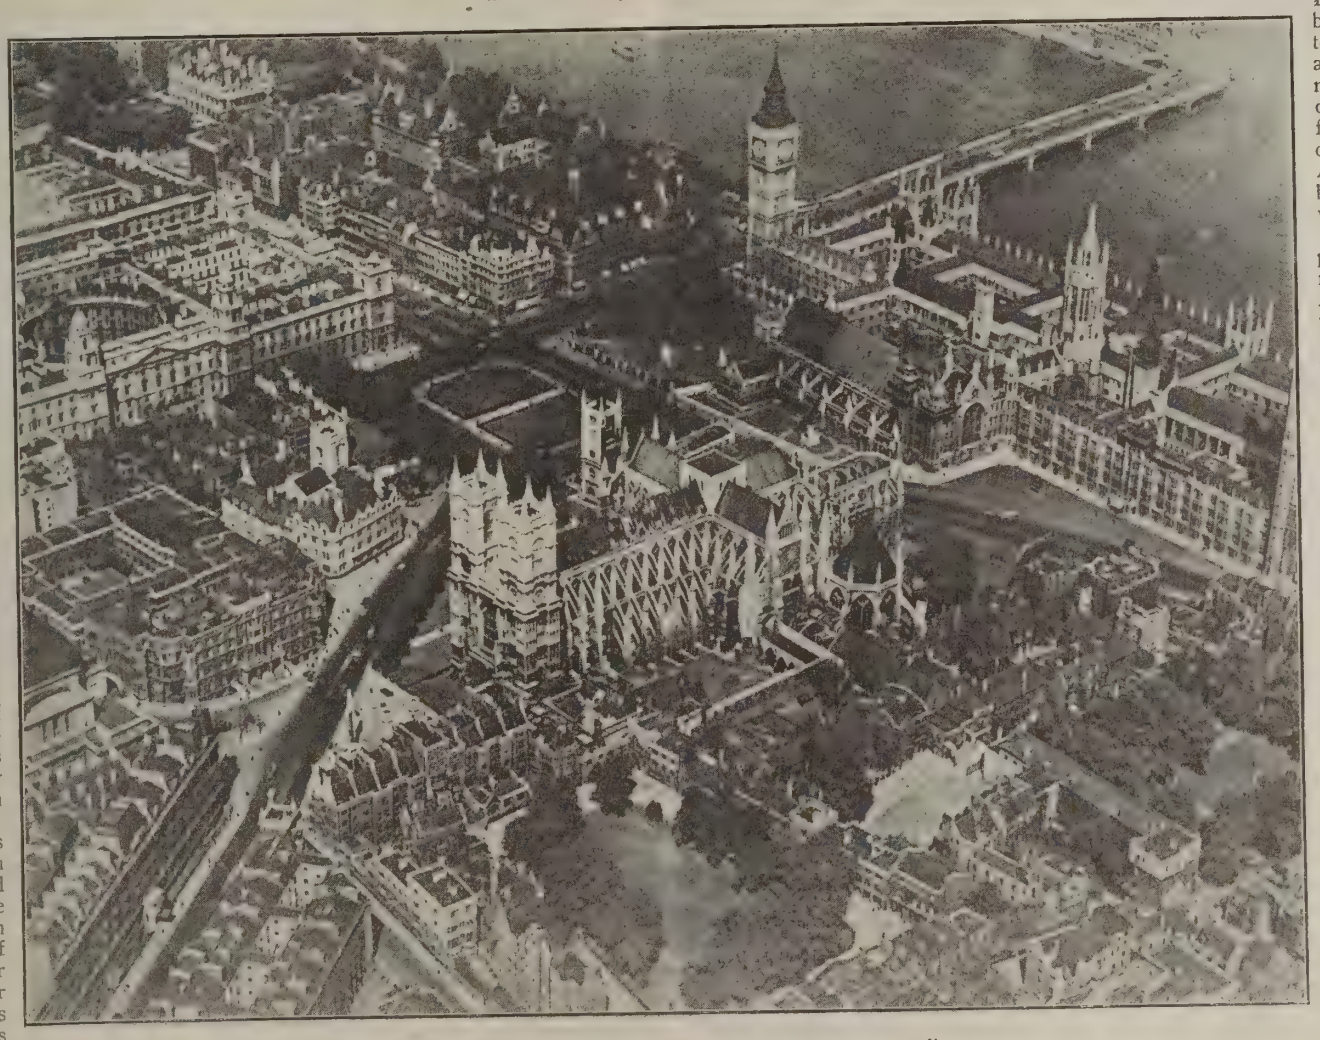
EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 — The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America — 1924

Copyright 1924 by the Editor & Publisher Company

Revised Space-Buyers' Chart and Market Survey

CITY OF LONDON, ENGLAND



Including New Survey of Edinburgh, Scotland

Second Section — NEW YORK, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1924 — Pages I to XVI

LONDON—CITY OF INCALCULABLE WEALTH

A Word and Figure Study of the British Metropolis—City of Wonders and Magnet of the World's Best —An Unbounded Market for Products of Sound Value

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT
(London Editor, Editor & Publisher)

Remarkable bird's-eye view of the center of the world's metropolis.

LONDON—city of wonders! Lodestone of the world. And for the manufacturer of sound products a market of vast and specific potentialties—a market in itself, and yet one from which a successful merchandising campaign radiates irresistibly to every corner of the British Isles; for to achieve success in London is to achieve fame throughout Great Britain.

London has exercised the power of its magic in the creation of the great British Empire Exhibition at Wembley. This mammoth exposition had, up to the end of September, attracted more than 15,000,000 visitors from all parts of the world—an attendance that has transcended any previous exhibition records.

But London has a lure, of its own that flashes and fascinates all the year round. From whatever section of the globe a visitor comes, sooner or later in the years to come he is drawn back under its spell for a further experience of its witchery. It matters not upon what pretext that first visit is made. It may be on pleasure bent—a desire to inspect its architectural beauties, its archaeological treasures—a financial deal—a business transaction—a domestic occurrence. Back, always back, comes the visitor to London. It is not merely the "call of the city" as is heard by the "hayseed" hundreds of miles upcountry. London has a call all its own that sounds above all the other siren voices of the world.

Everything gravitates to London in due season. The British Metropolis is the standard, the crucible of the world's productions, whether they be the work of man's brain or hands, or the produce of a bountiful Nature. When the best of anything has been tried and proved, then it is good enough for London.

For London differs from every other capital city of the world. The heart of the British Empire, it is the symbol of an ideal for millions of globe-scattered subjects of George the Fifth. It is more. It contains within its borders the headquarters of the financial, commercial and artistic interests of that Empire—a repository of wealth, science and art, without parallel. Its place in the world is such that no business enterprise in any quarter of the globe can be said to have attained high success without adequate representation in the City of London.

Perhaps to Americans the most convincing feature about London's commercial importance is the fact that so many American houses—financiers, manufacturers and producers—are centered upon that city as a point for the exercise of their European or British developments. The British market, radiating from London, is a veritable treasure island for American manufacturers and the best of their products occupy a high esteem with the British consumer. Their advertising activities are self-evident, the newspaper and periodical publications affording much evidence, and the retail shops still more, of the reliance placed by the British public upon office appliances, domestic appliances, fountain pens, canned meats, fruits, dentifrices, vegetables, safety razors, automobiles and accessories, fish, breakfast foods, toilet preparations and musical instruments, candies and drugs—to name a few of the products originating in America that have become household words in Britain.

For the British public exhibits no reluctance to adopt American productions that in themselves contribute to their convenience, comfort or efficiency; innate is an admiration for American enterprise that in merchandising often means a victory.

London is actually an area of more than 400 square miles, comprising an inner ring of 117 square miles that embodies the one square mile of the City of London, the City of Westminster, and 27 Metropolitan Boroughs, known as the County of London. The outer ring contains county boroughs and urban districts with a population of seven millions.

The City of London proper is but an area of 678 acres with a rateable value of £6,406,656 (1923) and a population of 13,709; the Administrative County of London (excluding the City) covers an area of 74,172 acres with a rateable value of £42,820,041 and a population of 4,470,814.

The richest of the London areas is that of Westminster, created the City of Westminister, by the Royal Charter in 1900. It includes within its borders some of the finest buildings in London, among them the Houses of Parliament, Westminster Abbey, the Westminster (Roman Catholic) Cathedral, the Law Courts, Buckingham Palace, St. James' Palace and the principal Government buildings—the Admiralty, War Office, Treasury, Home, Foreign and India Offices, etc. It also includes the fashionable residential districts of Mayfair and Belgravia. It has a rateable value of £8,110,655 for an area of 2,503 acres and a population of 141,578.

The length of streets in the City and Administrative County of London in 1919-20 were:

City of London	48 miles
County of London	2,169 miles
Total	2,217 miles

The cost of maintenance, borne by the Metropolitan Borough Councils and the City Corporation, in the same year, including repairs, repairing, cleaning and watering was:

City of London	£227,354	0.	0.
County of London	£3,084,129	0.	0.
	£3,311,483	0.	0.

An enumeration of the vehicular traffic (horse and motor vehicles) passing certain points in London between 8 a. m. and 8 p. m. on a fine day in July, 1923, showed the following results:

Hyde Park	Automobiles	Horse	Total, all kinds
Corner	45,579	3,896	56,039
Trafalgar Square	35,324	2,677	42,042
Piccadilly Circus	34,537	3,246	41,270
Marble Arch.	29,585	2,215	35,594

London has no skyscrapers, its buildings being rarely higher than ten floors. But what the architecture lacks in height it possesses in beauty and dignity, many fine buildings of historic interest in particular, being dotted throughout the city and West-end. The finest modern business thoroughfare is probably Kingsway, a wide road linking up Holborn and the Strand with a circular sweep; Aldwych, Kingsway is now completed, and forms one of the finest avenues in the world. Bush House, on the lines of the famous Brooklyn edifice, and as its name suggests, the home of the Bush Terminal Company, stands on the Aldwych site facing the whole length of Kingsway. A fine avenue, broad and spacious, is the Victoria embankment, running along the River Thames from Blackfriars to Westminster, from which a fine vista of the river, with such buildings as St. Paul's Cathedral, the Houses of Parliament and the County Hall (the seat of the London County Council) standing out against the skyline. The residential thoroughfares of highest rentals and estate values are Park Lane (running on the east side of Hyde Park) and Berkeley Square, with the intermediate streets. The West-end is the home of London society; the East-end the poorer districts.

The Parks and open spaces of London are popular places of resort. the larger parks of the Administrative County covering a total of some 1,672 acres. Regents Park is the largest of them all (472 acres) and houses the Zoological Gardens and the Botanic Gardens. But Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens (separated only by a railed fence) cover a large area (630 acres) and are the fashionable parades of society—the Hyde Park "church parade" and Rotten Row being the Sunday rendezvous of many smart London folk.

St. James's Park is small but has a semi-official character, running as it does between Whitehall with its Government buildings, and Buckingham Palace. The Green Park is another small park adjoining St. James's Park and these four parks are so placed that it is possible to walk across London from Westminster, through St. James's and Green Parks, cross the thoroughfare at Piccadilly and through Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens either to High Street Kensington, or Notting Hill Gate—a leafy stroll of some four miles. There are numerous other parks, Battersea Park (200 acres) in South London, Victoria Park (217 acres) in North London, Finsbury Park (115 acres) and 142 further open spaces, where boating, sports, music and in some cases dancing, are favorite summer pursuits. The largest central open space is Trafalgar Square, famous for its Nelson Monument, its statues and its playing fountains.

Twelve art galleries and 22 museums contribute to the art and historic interest of London. The Royal Academy (Piccadilly) is an annual summer exhibition of pictures and sculpture by living artists and a winter exhibition of old masters and deceased British artists. The National Gallery and National Portrait Gallery, both in Trafalgar Square, are the national repositories of old masters and historical portraits respectively, the Tate Gallery (Westminster) being the modern British section of the former. In 1921, there were 569,181 free admissions registered at the National Gallery, including 9,963 students. The Guildhall Art Gallery, in the City, with its adjunct the Guildhall Art Gallery, are maintained by the City Corporation and relate to historic London treasures. There are numerous other smaller art galleries, the latter being in the Bond street and Leicester Square neighborhoods.

The museums are headed by the British Museum, with priceless collections of ancient sculpture, print, eastern, early British and mediaeval antiquities, Mss., etc. The British Museum shares with the Victoria and Albert Museum the highest standard of popularity; in 1921 the attendances at the British Museum were 1,096,333. Other institutions of this kind are the Natural History Museum at South Kensington; Victoria and Albert Museum (with departments covering every branch of industrial and decorative art), 1921 attendance, 1,154,704; Science Museum (with collections of scientific apparatus, machinery, naval models and engines, and scientific library; Imperial War Museum (an exhibition record of the Great War); London Museum (St. James's) devoted to London antiquities; and the Imperial Institute, South Kensington, where are housed collections representing the produce of every part of the British Empire, a technical department with laboratories for conduct of research and investigations, and information bureau and library for furnishing reports upon matters appertaining to the institute's work.

Among the public buildings, St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey stand out as historic examples of pure architecture; the Guild Hall, the home of the City Corporation, where great City functions take place, the Houses of Parliament, with "Big Ben"—the giant clock tower, the chimes from which can be heard for many miles on clear days; the Monument at London Bridge, (Commemorating the Great Fire of London in 1666); the Law Courts, in the Strand; the Tower of London, built in the 10th Century, and the unwilling home of many famous personages who offended the powers that were. The Tower is now a popular show place housing the Crown Jewels and staffed by the picturesque "Beefeaters."

Music, drama, vaudeville, and motion pictures are well served in London and though the vaudeville (once a large feature of amusement) is now only represented by three or four central music-halls and suburban houses, its revival on a wider scale is in progress. Music finds a home at the Royal Albert Hall (seating capacity 9,000) and the Queen's Hall, at both of which Saturday and Sunday concerts are a feature from September to March, while in the latter Promenade Concerts are a nightly attraction, from September to December. The Royal Opera House and the "Old Vic" represent international Grand Opera and Grand Opera in English respectively. The latter playing Shakespeare from October to May in addition. Smaller concert and recital halls are regularly filled throughout the season, having their location in Bond street and Wigmore street. The National Sunday League promotes secular concerts in several London and Suburban theatres each Sunday.

There are 43 theatres in the entertainment section of London, all, with one or two exceptions, situated in the area between Piccadilly Circus, New Oxford street and the Strand. Of these about a dozen are invariably retained for the legitimate drama and comedies, the remainder being devoted either to musical plays or reviews, reverting occasionally to "straight" plays.

Motion pictures (severally described as kinemas, picture theatres, cinemas, etc.) exercise a vast hold upon the London public, the largest in the central area being the Stoll Picture Theatre in Kingsway (originally built as the London opera house by Oscar Hammerstein). There are no empty motion-picture houses in London, except in certain districts on Sundays, and 75 per cent of the programs shown are made up of American films.

Trade exhibitions in London attract large public attendances, the greatest being perhaps the Motor Exhibition, annually held at Olympia, Kensington. Industrial exhibitions in the interests of brewering, building, shipping, electrical trades, grocery, tailors, furniture, boots and shoes, dairy produce, cattle, drugs and surgical appliances, confectionery, etc., are held each year either at Olympia, the Royal Agricultural Hall, or the Royal Horticultural Hall, serving the purpose of introducing new season, goods, improvements in production or registering developments. A public exhibition that enjoys great popularity is the "Ideal Home Exhibition," usually held at Olympia in May each year.

Sport is a distant feature of London life—the masses devoting themselves to cricket, tennis and boating in the summer, and football in winter—if not as players, then as spectators—the cricket clubs and football teams attracting many thousands of paid admission visitors in their respective seasons.

Free public libraries are to be found in every Metropolitan borough, the printed matters there includes daily newspapers, weekly periodicals, and magazines, trade papers, works of reference, and a library of scientific and other books and fiction. Lambeth and Wandsworth each has eight such libraries within its precincts, their issue of books to borrowers totalling 769,068 and 1,178,462 respectively during 1922-3.

Under the National Health Insurance Acts, employed persons are compulsorily insured against illness under a scheme of contributions collected each week by the State jointly from employes and employers. In the County of London there were 1,629 medical practitioners and 1,600 persons entitled to medical service u this scheme in 1922.

The Police Force of London incl 1,162 officers and men in the City Po and 19,255 in the Metropolitan Po figures relating to 1922. The Lon Fire Brigade has a staff of 2,117 offi and men, with 63 land stations, 3 floa stations, a river repairing depot, 1 street fire alarms, 60 miles of hose 205 automobile engines and other v icles. In 1922 the Brigade made 112 journeys and its appliances covered 2 292 miles.

The lighting services of London gas and electricity. In 1922 there w 1,099,818 private consumers of

The surface tramways are represented by the following figures for 1922:

	Track Mileage	Cars in Use	Total Car Mileage	Passengers Carried	Passeng Recei
London County Council Tramways	155.20	1,421	59,532,087	688,151,316	£5,085,
Other electric tramways	210.81	.....	28,368,132	321,296,824	2,628,

*Passenger receipts (only) of L. E. R. Group Tramways are 1918 figures.

The underground Electric Railways show the following returns for 1920:

L. E. R. Group Railways:	Total Train Mileage	Passengers Carri
Central London Rly.	9,437,850	44,658,174
City & So. London	5,584,848	24,817,469
Metropolitan District	25,220,422	126,846,973
London Electric Rly.	29,034,034	128,922,477

The London General Omnibus Co. shows the following returns for 1920:

	Total Car Mileage	Passengers Carried	Passeng Receip
London General Omnibus Co. (and embracing the Metropolitan, South Metropolitan, Gearless. British Automobile, and Thos. Tilling, Ltd.	128,613,336	1,092,890,974	£7,448,( throughout the Metropolitan area. T electric lighting undertakings reported total of 371,784 consumers for the ye 1921-22.

Mail order shopping is on the increas a feature of the London stores being t deposit system of trading. One ret store despatched 6,000,000 parcels duri 1920, a second store 3,000,000 parcels the same year.

The General Post Office in 1923 de patched from London 42,618,000 parce and received in London for distributi 23 681,000 parcels. There are 992 po offices open in London, and the value postal orders issued and cashed in 192 amounted to £19,335,224. and £50,028,20 respectively.

The number of current London licens for motor cars and motorcycles, privatel owned (and not including commerci vehicles) at March 1, 1924, was 345,95 with 72,424 automobile hackney ca riages. This, however, does not ac curately represent the number of auto mobiles in use as under the quarterl license system many owners do not re new for the winter months; thus a August 31, 1923, the London number o private vehicle licenses stood at 383,52 Motor taxation in Great Britain produce in 1923 the sum of £12,757,632, represent ing 1,141,400 automobiles.

Buyers of Newspaper Space

To do business accurately, intelligently, economically, you must have at your elbow the two indispensable books of reference which are exclusively furnished to the regular subscribers of Editor & Publisher:

The International Year Book

listing newspapers, circulation and rate data, executive personnel, and the thousand and one facts which come into the experience of every advertising and newspaper man. Editor & Publisher International Year Book for 1925, is now in course of preparation.

Editor & Publisher Space Buyers' Guide

the first compilation of retail outlets in the cities and towns where daily newspapers are published in the United States and Canada. An invaluable reference book for Sales Executives in every department of trade and all advertising men. This huge work is now in press.

Editor & Publisher

Per Year, $4, including the Year Book and the Space Buyers' Guide. Send subscription now to avoid missing these great issues. Suite 1117 World Building, New York.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 1

LONDON, ENGLAND

Population

	1901.	1911.	1921.
Administrative County of London (including the City of London)	4,536,267	4,521,685	4,484,523
City of London	26,923	19,657	13,709
Outer Ring	2,045,135	2,729,673	2,995,678
Greater London	6,581,401	7,251,358	7,480,201

Detailed Census figures 1911-1921 (June 19-20) attached, taken from Government Return.

The 1921 Census of England, Scotland and Wales, taken on June 19th, 1921, shows that in the Administrative County of London and the immediately surrounding areas conveniently designated the "Outer Ring" (which together comprise what is usually known as Greater London, and coincide with the total area covered by the City of London and Metropolitan Police Districts), 7,480,201 persons were enumerated, representing about one quarter of the population of all urban areas, about one-fifth of the total population of England and Wales, and almost double that of the whole of Scotland.

In the Administrative County of London alone, a decrease in population is recorded, representing a numerical loss of 37,162 persons, or between two and three times the corresponding loss which occurred in 1901-1911. Having regard to the total numbers, this decrease is inconsiderable and signifies little else than that, in the process of decentralization of the resident population which must usually accompany the development of an important commercial or industrial centre and which has been gradually taking place during several decades in the London area, the County boundary for the past 20 years has been just inside the line within which the normal increase and the outward movement, due to decentralization, approximately neutralize one another.

It is of interest to examine briefly the densities of the various Boroughs as measured in terms of resident population per acre. With the exception of the City itself, with its resident population of only 20 per acre, the density is greatest in the central Boroughs, being at a maximum of 163 per acre in Southwark, 158 per acre in Shoreditch and 154 in Bethnal Green. This extreme diminishes with a progression outwards until in the areas farthest from the centre, particularly in the South East and South West directions, the densities become less than 30 per acre, the lowest being Woolwich, Lewisham and Greenwich with densities of 16, 24 and 26 respectively.

Both Shoreditch and Bethnal Green are contiguous to the City of London, the residents being of the lower classes.

GREATER LONDON, POPULATION, 1911-1921

District	Area in Statute Acres (Land and Inland Water)	Population 1911	Population 1921	Increase (+) or Decrease (—) Per Cent in the Intercensal Period 1911-21
Greater London	443,449		7,480,201	+ 3.2
Administrative County of London and City of London	74,850	4,521,685	4,484,523	+ 0.8
Battersea, Met. B.	2,163	167,743	167,739	— 0.0
Bermondsey, Met. B.	1,503	125,903	119,452	— 5.1
Bethnal Green, Met. B.	760	128,183	117,238	— 8.5
Camberwell, Met. B.	4,480	261,328	267,198	+ 2.2
Chelsea, Met. B.	660	66,385	63,697	— 4.0
Deptford, Met. B.	1,564	109,496	112,534	+ 2.8
Finsbury, Met. B.	587	87,923	75,995	— 13.6
Fulham, Met. B.	1,706	153,284	157,938	+ 3.0
Greenwich, Met. B.	3,859	95,968	100,450	+ 4.7
Hackney, Met. B.	3,287	222,533	222,142	— 0.2
Hammersmith, Met. B.	2,287	121,521	130,295	+ 7.2
Hampstead, Met. B.	2,265	85,495	86,153	+ 0.8
Holborn, Met. B.	405	49,357	43,192	— 12.5
Islington, Met. B.	3,092	327,403	330,737	+ 1.0
Kensington, Met. B.	2,290	172,317	175,859	+ 2.1
Lambeth, Met. B.	4,083	298,058	302,868	+ 1.6
Lewisham, Met. B.	7,015	160,834	174,194	+ 8.3
London, City of	678	19,657	13,706	— 30.3
Paddington, Met. B.	1,357	142,551	144,261	+ 1.2
Poplar, Met. B.	2,331	162,442	162,578	+ 0.1
St. Marylebone, Met. B.	1,473	118,160	104,173	— 11.8
St. Pancras, Met. B.	2,694	218,387	211,366	— 3.2
Shoreditch, Met. B.	658	111,390	104,248	— 6.4
Southwark, Met. B.	1,131	191,907	184,404	— 3.9
Stepney, Met. B.	1,767	279,804	249,657	— 10.8
Stoke Newington, Met. B.	863	50,659	52,172	+ 3.0
Wandsworth, Met. B.	9,107	311,360	328,307	+ 5.4
Westminster, City of; Met. B.	2,503	160,261	141,578	— 11.7
Woolwich, Met. B.	8,282	121,376	140,389	+ 15.7

Met. B. means Metropolitan Borough.

"The Daily Chronicle" Six months daily net sale

A Plain Statement of Cause and Effect

ON March 17th last, "The Daily Chronicle" made what was, perhaps, the most dramatic change ever made in the make-up of a great daily newspaper—a change that was welcomed alike by readers and advertisers.

To the reader it offered amongst other features, a 7-column page instead of a 6-column; a serial story; and a whole page of pictures. To the advertiser it offered Front Page positions, and other special opportunities, including an entirely new advertising position opposite the main news page.

We have pleasure in giving "The Daily Chronicle" Net Daily Sales for the six months ending June 30th, 1924.

In addition to showing the most rapid and consistent progress of any newspaper in the country, these figures bear eloquent testimony to the increasing hold which the Bigger and Better "Daily Chronicle" is having upon the responsible reader—the class of reader that really matters so far as the advertiser is concerned, and the class to which he will wish to appeal.

Chartered Accountants' Certificate.

London, 8th August, 1924.

We have examined the books of "The Daily Chronicle" and certify that, after deducting all unsold, voucher, complimentary and free copies whatsoever, the average net daily sale thereof for each of the undernoted periods was as follows:—

January 1 to March 15, 1924	811,439
*March 17 to March 31, 1924	830,830
April 1 to April 30, 1924	872,186
May 1 to May 31, 1924	922,772
June 1 to June 30, 1924	950,508

*Date of first issue of enlarged and improved "Daily Chronicle."

(Signed) DAVIES, DUNN & CO., Chartered Accountants, 32 Old Jewry, London, E.C.

The Daily Chronicle

Horace Imber, Advertisement Director

Salisbury Square, London, E.C.4

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 2

LONDON, ENGLAND

Population—(Continued)

SEXES.—One of the direct legacies of the War demonstrated by the Census returns of 1921 is the increased preponderance of females over males, the excess (over the whole of England and Wales) amounting to 1,720,802 as compared with 1,179,276 in 1911. In both cases, of course, the male population excludes the members of the Army, Navy and Air Force and the Mercantile Marine, who were out of the country on the census night.

The preponderance corresponds to a ratio of 1,095 females to 1,000 males—or 1,101 to 1,000 in England and 1,010 to 1,000 in Wales.

	Population				Variation in Intercensal Period (Persons)
	1911		1921
	Males	Females	Males	Females	Decrease	Per Cent 1911 to 1921
LONDON (including the City of London)	2,126,341	2,395,344	2,071,579	2,412,944	37,162	— 0.8

Comparison with the population of other large cities in the United Kingdom:

	1901	1911	1921
London (City and Administrative County)	4,536,267	4,521,685	4,484,523
Glasgow	.....	784,496	1,034,069
Birmingham	759,063	840,202	919,438
Liverpool	711,276	753,353	803,118
Manchester	644,961	714,385	730,551
Sheffield	411,188	460,183	490,724
Leeds	436,072	454,155	458,320

Location

London is located on both banks of the River Thames at the head of the estuary and about fifty miles from the sea.

The Administrative County of London (including the City of London), covers an area of over 117 square miles, extending from Highgate and Hampstead on the north to Sydenham on the south, and from Woolwich on the east to Hammersmith and Putney on the west, all inclusive.

Greater London (which includes the Administrative County and City of London) covers an area of over 690 square miles, extending from Watford and Cheshunt on the north to Epsom on the south, and Hampton and Harrow on the west to Romford and Erith on the east.

London is the terminus of nine great railway systems, formerly known as the London & North Western Ry., Midland Ry., Great Northern Ry., Great Western Ry., South Western Ry., London, Brighton & South Coast Ry., Great Central Ry., Great Eastern Ry., South Eastern & Chatham Ry., as well as several subsidiary lines under the control of the above. These railroad systems have now been merged into four groups, viz.: London, Midland & Scotish (which embraces the L. N. W. Ry., & Midland systems); London and North Eastern Ry. (which embraces the Great Northern, Great Central and Great Eastern systems); the Southern Railway (which embraces the South Western, London, Brighton & South Coast, and South Eastern & Chatham); and the Great Western. All the original terminals are employed, but the pooling of interests has resulted in closer-knit if less competitive services. Of these railroads, four serve the middle and north of England and two of them through to Scotland, three serve the south and west county and two communicate with Wales and Ireland, one runs through the east coast counties and serves Continental ports and one the southeastern counties and other Continental ports. The railway system covers the whole of England, Scotland and Wales and connects with the Irish railways.

Within the Metropolitan district is an efficient underground electric railway system, combining the Metropolitan Railway, the District Railway, the City and South London Ry., the Central London Ry., the Piccadilly and Hammersmith Ry., the Baker Street and Waterloo, the G. N. and City Ry., and the Waterloo and City Ry., all of which intercommunicate and provide not only rapid communication between every point in London itself but link up suburban districts as far apart as Watford, Uxbridge, East Ham, Richmond and Wimbledon.

Every district is linked up with an admirable service of electric tramways and motor omnibuses, the former, from points north of the line represented by Bank—Shepherds Bush radiating east to Stratford, north to Waltham Cross and Enfield, and west to Hounslow and Hampton Court, and south from the River Thames in each direction, Croydon, Wimbledon and Greenwich.

"Must Include —The Times"

An American View

From "Anglo-American Trade," the organ of the American Chamber of Commerce in London.

"IN the 'quality' class The Times stands pre-eminent. A significant fact in this respect is that The Times alone in this class publishes its daily net sales, which now stand at 190,000 copies. This figure should be multiplied by four to give the approximate total of daily readers.

"The Times carries more advertisements than any other great paper. In an advertising comparison recently published by the Newspaper World, The Times headed the list of the leading British newspapers with 23,816 square inches of space occupied by advertisements in one complete week in July.

"It follows that all forms of appeal made by American advertisers to the British public must include in their advertising programmes The Times. which takes first place in this group of British newspapers."

The Times

GREAT BRITAIN'S LEADING JOURNAL SINCE 1785

The Times stands out as the greatest power in British advertising—the one medium you must use to reach the cultured and monied classes of Britain.

That home advertisers know it is evidenced by the fact that The Times carries more advertisements than any other daily paper published in this country.

Get in touch with

THE ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER

Printing House Square

London, E. C. 4

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 3

LONDON, ENGLAND

Banks

The Bankers Clearing House includes 101 Banks and Branches in the Town Clearing (as against 52 in 1910) and 480 Banks and Branch Banks in the Metropolitan Clearing (as against 310 in 1917).

1920 was a record year of the Bankers' Clearing House:

	1923	1922
Grand Total	£36,627,592,000	£37,161,461,000	Decrease	£533,869,000
Town Clearing Total	32,270,373,000	32,780,635,000	Decrease	510,262,000
Metropolitan Clearing Total	1,546,565,000	1,574,661,000	Decrease	28,096,000
Country Cheque Clearing Total	2,810,654,000	2,806,165,000	Increase	4,489,000

The Town Clearing represents the transactions of the banks of the City of London. The Metropolitan Clearing, on the authority of the Chairman of the Bankers Clearing House, may be regarded as an index to the retail trade of the Metropolis, and similarly, the County Clearing may be taken as a reflex of the general trade of the country.

The resources of the ten great London Banks at June, 1924, are:

Bank of Liverpool & Martins Bank, Ltd.	£69,776,000
Barclay's Bank, Ltd.	327,607,000
Coutts & Co.	18,187,000
Glyn, Mills & Co.	34,090,000
Lloyds Bank, Ltd.	375,030,000
Midland Bank, Ltd.	414,121,000
National Provincial Bank, Ltd.	281,491,000
National Bank, Ltd.	45,557,000
Westminster Bank, Ltd.	298,172,000
Williams Deacon's Bank, Ltd.	37,917,000
	£1,901,942,000

The average daily clearings of the Bankers Clearing House are:

1900	£29,186,200	1922	£121,840,800
1910	47,904,800	1923	119,308,100

The Trustee Savings Banks have funds deposited with the Government amounting in November, 1919, to about £86,788,517, and over £25,396,700 in Government Stock, held for 2,220,780 depositors.

Churches

(County of London and Metropolitan area, 1924)

Cathedrals, Church of England	2
Abbeys, " " "	1
Royal Chapels, " " "	2
Parish Churches, " " "	622
Baptists	85
Baptists (Seventh Day)	1
Brethren	19
Cathedral (Catholic)	1
Parish (Catholic)	73
Catholic Apostolic	7
Christian Science	5
Church of Scotland	3
Churches of Christ	2
Congregational	83
Dutch Reformed	1
French Protestant	2
Greek Orthodox	1
Jews	56
Lutheran	10
Moravian	2
New Jerusalem Church	5
Presbyterian Church of England	26
Primitive Methodists	20
Russian Orthodox	1
Salvation Army Halls	26
Society of Friends	10
Swiss Protestant	1
Unitarian	15
United Methodist Church	21
Welsh Calvinist	7
Wesleyan Methodists	80
Other denominations	63

City Classed as

Capital city of the British Empire, and the greatest financial and industrial centre of the British Isles and the Greatest Port.

The industries of London, and the concentrated character of its population, render it the most important single market in the United Kingdom and Ireland. This is shown by the widespread character of its shopping districts, its number and variety of newspaper and periodical publications.

In addition to its resident population, more people pass through London as visitors than through any other city in the world.

"PUNCH"

"The Foremost Humorous Journal of the World"

"THERE is no medium to equal 'PUNCH' for creating sales in high-class trade at home and in the Dominions. I can vouch for this by the experience and reports of the highest class of British advertisers in many trades."

WM. S. CRAWFORD,
Governing Director, W. S. Crawford, Ltd., Advertising Service Agents, London, Eng.

Advance Booking is Always Essential

Rates and full particulars of space available from MARION JEAN LYON
Advertisement Manager, "PUNCH"
10 Bouverie Street
London, E.C.4, Eng.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 4

LONDON, ENGLAND

The Port of London

The Port of London consists of the Docks, which are situated between Tower Bridge and Tilbury, 26 miles seawards, and the River Thames from Teddington to Warden Point, a distance of 68½ miles, and the whole of this area is under the jurisdiction, control and management of the Port of London Authority. This Body, constituted for the purpose by Parliament, in 1908, is composed of a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman, Ten Members appointed by certain Public Departments, Seventeen Members elected by Payers of Dues and other port interests and one elected by the Wharfingers of the Port.

The Authority has carried out an extensive programme of improvements involving an expenditure of over £10,000,000 and further developments are in progress which will easily ensure the continued supremacy of London as the first port in the Empire carrying, as it does today, about one-third of the entire trade of the United Kingdom.

The docks serving the port with their respective acreage are:

St. Katharine's Dock	23 acres
London Docks (Eastern Dock and Shadwell Basin)	102 acres
Surrey Commercial Docks	380 acres
West India Docks	241 acres
Millwall Docks	231 acres	(the principal grain docks)
East India Docks	68 acres	(Cape and American traffic)
Royal Victoria Dock	276 acres
Tilbury Docks	634 acres
Royal Albert and King George V Docks	826 acres

The total area of the Dock Estate is 3,288½ acres, of which 731 acres are water.

While no industry specially predominates in the traffic passing through the Port of London, the allocation of the docks to various forms of imports shows that the goods received include marine shells, spices, tea, marble, ivory, rubber, wine, wool, tinned goods, timber grain, Canadian produce, rum, sugar, frozen meat, tobacco.

Industries located on the banks of the port include manufacturing interests concerned in provisions, margarine, soap, candles, matches, tanneries, iron-works, cables, oil storage, paper mills and glass.

17 bridges span the Thames, between the mouth and Kew Bridge, and 5 tunnels. Tower Bridge is the nearest to the mouth.

Nine trunk lines radiate from London to all over the Kingdom.

In 1921 the total tonnage entering at and clearing from the Port of London is, compared with other British ports, as follows:

		Total Vessels	Total Tonnage
Port of London, Entered	Foreign	9,900	13,488,259
	Coastwise	8,090	3,880,856
Port of London, Cleared	Foreign	8,460	11,114,792
	Coastwise	9,708	5,605,876
Liverpool, Entered	Foreign	3,465	9,821,773
	Coastwise	8,358	2,465,418
Liverpool, Cleared	Foreign	3,233	9,169,690
	Coastwise	8,877	3,066,430
Southampton, Entered	Foreign	2,189	4,480,469
	Coastwise	8,129	1,062,302
Southampton, Cleared	Foreign	2,214	4,446,778
	Coastwise	8,050	986,733
Cardiff, Entered	Foreign	2,731	3,925,463
	Coastwise	6,228	3,025,060
Cardiff, Cleared	Foreign	3,661	5,557,478
	Coastwise	5,436	1,393,274
Newcastle, Entered	Foreign	3,541	3,891,602
	Coastwise	4,157	2,978,601
Newcastle, Cleared	Foreign	4,095	4,808,481
	Coastwise	4,654	2,215,293
Hull, Entered	Foreign	4,275	3,506,772
	Coastwise	1,715	533,580
Hull, Cleared	Foreign	3,939	3,063,846
	Coastwise	1,623	843,634
Plymouth, Entered	Foreign	1,052	2,974,915
	Coastwise	1,380	475,213
Plymouth, Cleared	Foreign	997	2,923,226
	Coastwise	1,410	512,924

The value of the Domestic Exports passing through the Port of London in 1922 was:

Produce of United Kingdom	£129,445,941
Foreign Exports	61,409,461
Total	£190,855,402

PAUL E. DERRICK

Managing Director of the Paul E. Derrick Advertising Agency, Ltd., is an American born, who has had 30 years of experience as an Advertising Agent in Great Britain. This experience is applied through the medium of an organization wherein every man holds down his job because he is the one man in Great Britain best able to hold it down. Exactly how that organization functions as a business-building machine is explained in the Derrick Booklet. It will be mailed on request.

Policy, Plumstones and Paradox

SOME OF THE DERRICK CLIENTS

Among those who have been with Derrick's throughout their advertising history are the proprietors of:

Quaker Oats ..... 30 years
Johnnie Walker..... 16 years
Tootal Guaranteed Cotton Fabrics ..... 15 years
Dexter Weatherproofs.. 14 years
Homepride Self-Raising Flour ..... 14 years
Ross's Ginger Ale..... 14 years
Oneida Community Plate ..... 11 years
Bols Gin & Liqueurs.. 10 years

More recently the full Derrick Service has been co-opted by Messrs.:

Bass, Ratcliff & Gretton, Ltd. (Brewers).
W. & A. Bates, Ltd. (Clyde & Motor Cycle Tyres).
Blundell, Spence & Co., Ltd. (Paint & Varnish).
Alex. Cairns & Sons, Ltd. ("Goldfish" Marmalade).
Cockburn & Co., Ltd. (Manufacturing Chemists).
Crosse & Blackwell, Ltd. (Food Products).
Cudahy Packing Co. ("Old Dutch" Cleanser)
Cutler, Palmer & Co. (Wine Merchants, India and the East).
Evans Sons Lescher & Webb, Ltd. (Montserrat Lime Juice).
Evans' Pastilles, Liverpool (Virus). Pro-phy-lac-tic Brush Co. (Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brush).
Fox Bros. & Co., Ltd. (Puttees and Woollen Fabrics).

Money, say the economists, does not begin to exist until it is spent Paradox, perhaps, yet equally true is the fact that you don't begi to make use of statistics until you have finished with them.

There's something hypnotic about figures. One feels kind of, shal we say, Olympic to be able to tell the other fellow off-hand that the population of Newcastle, England, is 1,743,199. In fact, once the statistics virus gets going, it almost sounds like heresy to hear that the two-hundredth one is probably being born while you are talking about it.

Statistics need interpretation. When it comes to a show-down, that man runs a risk of getting left who hitches his wagon to an adding machine. European plebiscites notwithstanding, plain counting of heads is of about as much use as trying to dam the Hudson by piling plum-stones.

PAUL E. DERRICK A
110 SAINT MARTINS LANE (Tr

Telephone: Gerrard 8900. Telegrams: "Pauldrick, Westrand, London." Cables: "Pauldrick, London." Codes: Western Union and Bentley's.

This Agency offers its full to American Advertisers

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 5

LONDON, ENGLAND

Port of London—(Continued)

Value of Imports through the Port in 1922 was £373,478,370.

The total Trade of the Port of London and other large ports of the country in 1921 was:

	Imports	Exports (British and Irish)	Exports (Foreign and Colonial)
London	£415,076,058	£131,339,165	£60,441,663
Liverpool	241,370,065	262,669,432	23,973,337
Manchester	51,872,821	33,592,546	1,050,068
Hull	60,459,205	29,248,260	2,215,370
Glasgow	33,238,007	60,528,473	935,209
Southampton	30,633,879	27,887,605	8,291,818
Bristol	36,231,628	4,608,309	488,335

Schools

		Number	Pupils
ELEMENTARY
Elementary		968	741,684
Special
For blind and partially blind children		18	1,132
For deaf and partially deaf children		10	796
For mentally defective children		87	7,996
For physically defective children		41	3,995
Open air schools and day sanatoria		7	914
Industrial		8	537
HIGHER
Secondary schools (aided and maintained)		135	47,791
Day Technical School for Boys	Maintained by the London County Council	9	1,236
Domestic Economy Schools		3	81
Junior Day Technical School (Girls)		6	757
Art Day Schools		9	4,303
Other Technical Trade and Art Schools (day and evening)		21	5,358
Evening Institutes maintained by the Council for teaching commercial, junior commercial, junior technical, technical women's subjects, literary and other miscellaneous subjects		202	119,207
Polytechnics	Aided by the Council	10	32,749
Technical Institutes, etc		17	9,464
Imperial College of Science and Technology		1	371
Royal College of Science		1	341

Colleges

London University College, King's College, King's College for Women, East London College, Royal Holloway College, Bedford College for Women (Regent's Park), Birkbeck College, Westfield (Hampstead) College, London Day Training College, School of Oriental Studies, Imperial College of Science and English, Royal College of Science and School of Mines, City and Guilds English College, Southeastern Agricultural College, London School of Economics and Political Science, Theological Colleges at Hampstead; Regents Park: King's College; Richmond, Highbury.

Drama and Music

Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, Royal Academy of Music, Royal College of Music, Guildhall School of Music, Incorporated London Academy of Music, London College of Music, Tonic-Solfa College, Trinity College of Music, Royal College of Organists, Victoria College of Music.

Medical Schools

St. Bartholomew's Hospital College, London Hospital College, Guy's Hospital, St. Thomas's Hospital, St. George's Hospital Medical School, Middlesex Hospital, St. Mary's Hospital, Charing Cross Hospital Medical School, Westminster Hospital, University College Hospital, King's College Hospital, Lister Institute, London (Royal Free Hospital) School of Medicine for Women, London School of Tropical Medicine, Royal Army Medical College, Royal Dental Hospital, Naval Medical School, West London Post-Graduate College, London School of Clinical Medicine, University College Hospital Dental School.

Selling the Britisher via Derricks'

Getting down to basics, the British Market for an American Manufacturer is not the number of people in Great Britain, but the potential power of some of that number to absorb his product at a profitable price. To find that number—and to reach them—statistics is merely a place to jump off from. Maps, figures, research—these are only the foundation upon which to erect. Knowledge of British habits of thought, knowledge of British likes and dislikes, knowledge of British prejudices, aspirations, personality and the thousand differentiations between my lord and his chauffeur into which all these things resolve, must be applied before there can be any satisfactory outcome.

Such knowledge Derrick's bring to any marketing problem submitted to them. That this knowledge is constructively applied is made manifest in the list of the Derrick Clients and the term of years over which Derrick's have served some of them.

RTISING AGENCY, Ltd.

1Sq.) LONDON, W.C.2, ENGLAND

rAssociation of British Advertising Agents and Audit Bureau: Sustaining Member A. A. C. of W.

sng Service either directly ough American Agencies

SOME MORE DERRICK CLIENTS

Freeman, Hardy & Willis, Ltd. (Manufacturers owning 500 Retail Shoe Stores).
J. S. Fry & Sons, Ltd. (Fry's Pure, Soluble Breakfast Cocoa).
Goochs, Ltd. (Retail Attire).
Grierson, Oldham & Co., Ltd. ("Big Tree" Wines).
Horlick's Malted Milk Co.
James Keiller & Son, Ltd. (Dundee "White Pot" Marmalade).
Kraft-MacLaren Cheese Co., Ltd. (Kraft Cheese).
E. Lazenby & Son, Ltd. ("Chef" Sauce, etc.).
Lincoln Bennett & Co., Ltd. (Hats).
London Brick Co. & Forders, Ltd. (Fletton Bricks).
McLintock & Sons, Ltd. (Down Quilts).
The National Building & Engineering Brick Federation.
The Pepsodent Company (Dentifrice).
The Sherry Shippers Association.
James Shoolbred & Co., Ltd. (Drapery, Provisions, Furnishings).
Short & Mason, Ltd. (Instrument Makers).
Thrupp & Maberly, Ltd. (Coach Builders).
Tobacco Products Corporation, Ltd. (Melachrino Cigarettes).

THE DERRICK SERVICES

Broadly, the Derrick Service Organization divides into Four Departments.

Merchandising Counsel & Market Research which analyses the market, suggests the policy and visualizes the campaign.

Press Advertising Service which includes the Copy, Art and Process Engraving, Estimating and Contracting Services.

Outdoor Publicity Service, which includes Bill Posting, Street-car, Bus, Tube and Railway Advertising, and Painted and Electric Signs, etc.

Printing Service which includes Copy-writing, Designing, Layout and Art Work, and handles Catalogues, Booklets, Folders, House Organs, Showcards, Posters, Enamel Plates -everything that can be printed.

Derrick's are equipped to render these Services throughout the British Empire.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 6

LONDON, ENGLAND

Principal Industries

These are the latest figures available, the statistics of Principal Industries based upon the census of 1921 not having been completed for publication:

		Average Number of Employees
Agricultural (Farms, woods and gardens)	Men	7,766
	Women	168
Mines and Quarries	Men	3,373
	Women	235
Machinery, etc.:
Iron and steel manufacture		609
Iron Founders		2,451
Blacksmiths		8,120
Erectors and Fitters		10,865
Unclassified Workmen		23,355
Electrical Apparatus		17,466
Tools, dies, arms, etc.	Men	2,8 5
	Women	6,589
Ships and boats		3,235
Vehicles (including automobiles and cycles)		19,223
Jewelry (including precious metals, watches, instruments and games)		24,142
Housebuilding (including builders, carpenters, masons, painters, laborers, etc.)		126,980
Wood (including furniture, fittings, decorations, etc.)		5 ,329
Bricks (including cement, pottery and glass)		5,956
Chemicals and drugs		13,587
Chemicals (including oil, grease, resin, etc.)		7,679
Skins and Leather		19,160
Saddlery and Harness		2,333
Hair and Feathers		7,830
Paper, Books and Stationery:
Paperboxes and Stationery	(largely women)	20,557
Printing and Lithography		40,888
Bookbinding		13,580
Publishing, Book Selling and Newspaper Selling		16,524
Unclassified		4,282
Textile manufacturing (including canvas sails and bleaching)		14,251
Dress (including tailoring, millinery, shirtmaking, etc.)	Men	70,237
	Women	153,551
Tobacco manufacture		8,462

It is regrettable that the available statistics for Great Britain are in no sense comparable with those of the United States. This difficulty precludes our being able to furnish any reliable data concerning the value of products of various industries centred in London, or even to state (otherwise than the above employment figures suggest), the industries in their order of precedence. No official statistics of that kind or form are obtainable, and without them it is not possible to make comparisons on a firm basis or, indeed, to adequately suggest the vital and immense part London plays in industry and commerce.

Theatres

Places of public entertainment operate under one or more of four licenses, viz., (1) Stage Plays, (2) Music and Dancing, (3) Music Only, (4) Cinematograph. The term "theatre" means a place licensed for stage plays in which the public performance of stage plays regularly takes place. "Music Hall" or "Theatre of Varieties" means a place licensed for music and dancing in which entertainments of a variety character are regularly given.

The latter are usually licensed also for stage plays and generally for cinematograph exhibitions.

Motion Picture	Open Air	M. P. & Vaud.	Vaudeville	Burlesque	Production	Concerts	Music and Dancing
426	...	...	35	...	48	8	645

Grand Opera is given at the Royal Opera House in Covent Garden, W. C., and Grand Opera in English at the Royal Victoria Hall (The "Old Vic"), Waterloo Road, S. E. 1.

Trade exhibitions and carnivals are held in special buildings, of which the largest is Olympia, Kensington; others being the Royal Agricultural Hall, Islington; the Holland Park Rink, Shepherds Bush; Central Hall, Westminster; and the Royal Horticultural Hall, Westminster.

Acknowledgements

The facts and figures tabulated in all parts of EDITOR & PUBLISHER's Space Buyers Chart of London (England) was secured from the following sources: The Right Hon. Lord Riddell; London Statistics, 1919; Census Reports, 1911, and Preliminary Census Reports, 1921; Port of London Authority and the Docks and Harbor Boards of Liverpool, Glasgow, Manchester, Cardiff, Bristol, Hull; Bankers' Clearing House; London Electric Railways (Underground Group); Metropolitan Railway; London County Council (Tramways Dept.); the Postmaster General; and official publications.

1,759,881

Daily Mail

LONDON, ENGLAND

NET SALES IN 1924

London, 7th July, 1924

We certify that the average net daily sale of "The Daily Mail" after deducting all unsold and free copies whatsoever for the six months ended 30th June, 1924, was as follows:—

January	1,720,157	April	1,730,125
February	1,723,669	May	1,742,806
March	1,722,151	June	1,759,881

(Signed) LEVER, HONEYMAN & CO.,
Chartered Accountants

(Signed) E. LAYTON BENNETT, SONS & CO.,
Chartered Accountants

London Office:—Carmelite House, London, England.
New York Office:—280 Broadway, New York City, N. Y.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 7

LONDON, ENGLAND

Suburban and Farm Residents

District	Area in Statute Areas Land and Inland Water	POPULATION 1911	POPULATION 1911	Increase (+) or Decrease (—) per cent in the inter-censal period 1911–21
OUTER RING	368,599	2,729,673	2,995,678	+ 9.7
SURREY: Urban Districts.
Barnes	2,519	30,377	34,299	+ 12.9
Beddington and Wallington	3,040	14,322	16,308	+ 13.9
Carshalton	2,926	11,634	14,021	+ 20.5
Coulsdon and Purley	8,572	18,872	21,491	+ 13.9
Croydon, C.B.	9,012	169,551	190,684	+ 12.5
East and West Molesey	1,517	6,492	7,280	+ 12.1
Epsom	4,423	19,156	18,804	— 1.8
Esher and Dittons (part of)	3,885	9,909	11,426	+ 15.3
Ham	1,869	1,435	1,510	+ 5.2
Kingston on Thames, M.B.	1,131	37,975	37,479	+ 4.0
Merton and Morden	3,237	14,140	17,332	+ 24.0
Mitcham	2,935	29,606	35,119	+ 18.6
Richmond, M.B.	2,491	33,221	35,639	+ 7.3
Surbiton	3,049	17,717	19,547	+ 10.3
Sutton	1,835	21,270	21,063	— 1.0
The Maldens and Coombe	3,221	12,137	14,495	+ 19.4
Wimbledon, M.B.	3,221	54,966	61,418	+ 11.7
SURREY: Rural Districts.
Epsom (part of)	14,857	19,092	22,072	+ 15.6
Godstone (part of)	6,359	4,494	4,705	+ 4.7
KENT: Urban Districts.
Beckenham	3,889	31,692	33,345	+ 5.2
Bexley	4,942	15,895	21,457	+ 35.0
Bromley, M.B.	4,697	33,646	35,052	+ 4.2
Chislehurst	2,791	8,666	8,981	+ 3.6
Crayford	2,455	6,234	11,926	+ 91.3
Erith	3,859	27,750	31,558	+ 13.7
Penge	770	22,330	26,284	+ 17.7
Sidcup	2,043	8,493	8,939	+ 5.3
KENT: Rural District.
Bromley (part of)	17,835	17,621	20,749	+ 17.8
MIDDLESEX: Urban Districts.
Adton	2,305	57,497	61,299	+ 6.6
Brentford	1,091	16,496	17,032	+ 3.2
Chiswick	1,250	38,772	40,938	+ 5.6
Ealing, M.B.	2,946	61,222	67,755	+ 10.7
Edmonton	3,894	64,797	66,807	+ 3.1
Enfield	12,602	56,338	60,738	+ 7.8
Feltham	1,790	5,135	6,326	+ 23.2
Finchley	3,384	39,419	46,716	+ 18.5
Friern Barnet	1,304	14,924	17,375	+ 16.4
Greenford	3,042	1,064	1,461	+ 37.3
Hampton	2,045	9,220	10,675	+ 15.8
Hampton Wick	1,306	2,417	3,265	+ 35.1
Hanwell	1,066	19,129	20,481	+ 7.1
Harrow on the Hill	2,028	17,074	19,469	+ 14.0
Hayes	3,311	4,261	6,303	+ 47.9
Hendon	8,382	38,806	56,013	+ 44.3
MIDDLESEX: Urban Districts—Continued.
Heston and Isleworth	6,851	43,313	46,664	+ 7.7
Hornsey, M.B.	2,875	84,592	87,659	+ 3.6
Kingsbury	1,829	821	1,856	+126.1
Ruislip Northwood	6,585	6,217	9,112	+ 46.6
Southhall Norwood	2,575	26,323	30,287	+ 15.1
Southgate	3,596	33,612	39,122	+ 16.4
Staines	1,907	6,755	7,326	+ 8.5
Sunbury on Thames	2,658	4,607	5,350	+ 16.1
Teddington	1,214	17,847	21,213	+ 18.9
Tottenham	3,014	137,418	146,711	+ 6.8
Twickenham	2,421	29,367	34,790	+ 18.5
Uxbridge	868	10,374	12,919	+ 24.5
Wealdstone	1,061	11,923	13,433	+ 12.7
Wembley	4,564	10,696	16,187	+ 51.3
Willesden	4,385	154,214	165,674	+ 7.4
Wood Green	1,626	49,369	50,707	+ 2.7
Yiewsley	894	4,315	4,843	+ 12.2
MIDDLESEX: Rural Districts.
Hendon	11,319	14,160	17,656	+ 24.7
South Mimms	6,104	2,805	3,134	+ 11.7
Staines	17,975	21,926	25,063	+ 14.3
Uxbridge	12,625	9,240	10,643	+ 15.2
HERTFORDSHIRE: Urban Districts.
Barnet	3,114	11,335	11,772	+ 3.9
Bushey	3,031	6,978	8,088	+ 15.9
Cheshunt	8,479	12,954	13,628	+ 5.2
East Barnet Valley	2,644	12,381	13,514	+ 9.2
Watford (part of)	138	2,633	2,615	— 0.7
HERTFORDSHIRE: Rural Districts.
Barnet	9,216	4,074	4,495	+ 10.3
Hatfield (part of)	3,305	656	694	+ 5.8
Watford (part of)	6,114	3,894	4,349	+ 11.7
ESSEX: Urban Districts.
Barking Town	3,805	31,317	35,523	+ 13.4
Buckhurst Hill	873	4,886	5,008	+ 2.5
Chingford	2,808	8,184	9,482	+ 15.9
East Ham, C.B.	3,324	133,487	143,246	+ 7.3
Ilford	8,496	78,188	85,194	+ 9.0
Leyton	2,594	124,735	128,430	+ 3.0
Loughton	3,961	5,433	5,749	+ 5.8
Waltham Holy Cross	11,017	6,795	6,847	+ 0.8
Walthamstow	4,343	124,580	129,395	+ 3.9
Wanstead	1,679	13,830	15,298	+ 10.6
West Ham, C.B.	4,683	289,030	300,860	+ 4.1
Woodford	2,161	18,496	21,236	+ 14.8
ESSEX: Rural Districts.
Epping (part of)	4,136	2,742	2,943	+ 7.3
Romford (part of)	6,556	7,907	9,127	+ 15.4

C.B. means County Borough.

The Evening News

LONDON, ENGLAND

London Office:
Carmelite House, London, England

New York Office:
280 Broadway, New York City, N. Y.

London, 7th July, 1924

We certify that the average net daily sale of "The Evening News" after deducting all unsold and free copies whatsoever for the six months ended 30th June, 1924, was as follows:—

January	645,497	April	784,220
February	642,439	May	820,669
March	721,556	June	870,981

(Signed) LEVER, HONEYMAN & CO.,
Chartered Accountants.

(Signed) E. LAYTON BENNETT, SONS & CO.,
Chartered Accountants.

Weekly Dispatch

LONDON, ENGLAND

London Office:
Carmelite House, London, England

New York Office:
280 Broadway, New York City, N. Y.

London, 7th July, 1924

We certify that the average net weekly sale of "The Weekly Dispatch" after deducting all unsold and free copies whatsoever for the six months ended 30th June, 1924, was as follows:—

January	722,206	April	729,822
February	713,049	May	726,245
March	724,199	June	740,980

(Signed) LEVER, HONEYMAN & CO.,
Chartered Accountants.

(Signed) E. LAYTON BENNETT, SONS & CO.,
Chartered Accountants.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 8

LONDON, ENGLAND

Residential Features and Building Facts

The City of London proper is mainly devoted to offices, shops and warehouses, but there is a small proportion of apartment houses and dwellings, mostly of a working-class character.

Adjacent to the City are the districts of Shoreditch, Hackney, Bethnal Green, Poplar, Stepney, Islington and Finsbury. Because of their proximity there is a very heavy manufacturing element in these localities, many apartment houses and a few private residences.

The following table will show the number of dwellings and classification of same:

	A	B	C	D	E	F
City of London	523	282	58	271	1,288	2,784
Battersea	28,017	3,275	1,250	140	68	24,321
Bermondsey	13,104	4,496	183	221	87	14,967
Bethnal Green	10,975	6,445	322	220	74	13,649
Camberwell	32,387	5,123	551	274	103	36,559
Chelsea	6,115	1,503	276	82	41	7,499
Deptford	14,768	1,966	75	121	40	16,102
Finsbury	5,574	5,727	206	225	232	7,630
Fulham	17,324	3,199	716	82	53	19,895
Greenwich	12,963	1,518	235	140	44	14,722
Hackney	27,437	4,021	519	201	76	31,090
Hammersmith	13,368	2,574	932	116	67	16,121
Hampstead	10,062	881	467	53	29	11,976
Holborn	1,690	1,696	625	194	364	3,754
Islington	31,484	10,592	407	324	129	36,778
Kensington	15,912	4,501	675	265	152	21,399
Lambeth	34,305	6,192	907	398	160	39,634
Lewisham	25,463	855	828	98	44	28,723
Paddington	13,104	3,535	373	165	98	16,686
Poplar	18,466	4,747	89	305	131	21,107
St. Marylebone	7,850	3,731	643	233	125	11,987
St. Pancras	17,822	8,875	326	344	130	22,246
Shoreditch	9,470	6,494	110	246	96	11,535
Southwark	14,497	7,712	715	306	194	18,310
Stepney	23,299	14,548	531	589	247	29,172
Stoke Newington	6,691	690	57	34	19	7,471
Wandsworth	41,901	2,567	2,171	168	119	48,432
Westminster	11,522	2,893	1,146	518	695	17,540
Woolwich	19,131	1,000	207	169	52	21,176

A. Ordinary Dwelling Houses.
B. Tenements with more than two occupants per room.
C. Blocks of Flats.
D. Hotels, Inns and Public-houses.
E. Offices, Warehouses, etc.
F. Total Number of all Sorts of Buildings.

The foregoing figures afford an accurate indication of the character and purchasing powers of the residents in the City of London and the 28 Metropolitan Boroughs, when taken in connection with populations of those districts for the same year, 1911, given on another page.

For example, the number of buildings of all kinds in Shoreditch is 11,535, of which 9,470 are ordinary dwelling houses; but of these latter there are no less than 6,494 tenements with more than two occupants per room, a striking suggestion of the congested nature of the district and of the class of resident. In the other extreme comes Westminster with 17,540 buildings of all kinds, 11,522 dwelling houses, but only 2,893 tenements with more than two occupants per room. Taken with the population of Westminster for 1911, these bear out the statement that this borough is one of high-class character.

In the City of London is reflected another phase. With 2,784 buildings of all kinds, there are but 523 ordinary dwelling houses and of these 282 are tenements with more than two occupants per room; but there are 1,288 buildings used as offices, warehouses, etc., this confirming the commercial aspect of that district.

These figures, it should be noted, are based on the Census Returns of 1911; but may be taken as fairly representative of conditions in 1921. This is because the war automatically suspended all building operations, and after the cessation of the war, financial and other conditions were so stringent that the suspension has continued almost to this time, with the result that there has been comparatively little change or movement in building or character of residential districts.

There is now in evidence a recovery of building activities and in the suburbs and Greater London many schemes are in progress which already show material changes in these conditions and will largely increase the residential facilities of outlying suburbs in the course of the next few years.

Wholesalers

	Total
Grocers—Wholesale	111
Meats—Importers and Salesmen	188
Fruits (Fruit Merchants)	155
Dry Goods (Drapers—Wholesale)	31
Druggists—Wholesale	316
Confectionery	189
Clothing—Wholesale and Manufacturing	364
Tobacco (Tobacco Merchants—Wholesale)	123
Hardware (Ironmongers—Wholesale)	184
Jewelers	338
Millinery	212
Stationery (Wholesale and Manufacturing)	712
Boots and Shoes	315
Cloaks and Suits (Mantle and Cloak Warehouses)	130
Motor Car Accessories—Wholesale	57

ONE PENNY

ONE PENNY

THE DAILY GRAPHIC

(Founded 1890)

THE "Daily Graphic" was The Pioneer of British Illustrated Dailies. It is a paper of culture and refinement whose readers have faith in its opinions and confidence in its advertisements, appealing specially to busy men and women of the middle and upper classes.

THE "Daily Graphic" prints all the news worth reading and all the pictures worth seeing. Its regular features include: Fashions for Women by Lady Angela Forbes; "Wonderful London Yesterday," the most brilliant gossip page in contemporary journalism; Music by Ernest Newman; Books by S. P. Mais and James Agate; Cartoons by "Matt" and Jack Walker; Poll, Jack & Valentine for the children, etc., etc., etc.

THE "Daily Graphic" is preeminently the paper for the Home as it appeals to every member of the household. It is the only national daily that wields the strong influence of pictured news among the better class multitude. To advertise in the "Daily Graphic" is to be "at home" to those who spend most.

ADVERTISEMENT RATES

Ordinary Position ..... £100 per page
Special Position ..... £125 per page and pro rata for smaller spaces.
In Colour ..... £150 per page

Robert Thornberry, Advertisement Manager, Graphic Building, Tallis Street, London, Eng. Telegrams, "Digraph, Fleet, London." Telephone, City 2130.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 9

LONDON, ENGLAND

Special Information

The population of London, 1921 census, represents about one quarter of the population of all urban areas and about one-fifth of the total population of England and Wales.

The density of the population of London may be gauged from the comparison of its figures (7,480,281) with those of the whole of Scotland (4,882,288).

The County of London embraces the whole of the Metropolitan Parliamentary Divisions, 28 Metropolitan Boroughs and the City of London. The area comprised within London is 74,850 statute acres, of which 678 acres are in the City of London.

The City is the financial and business section of London, having within its borders the head offices of the greatest English banks, financial and insurance companies, and merchants. It has a Rateable Value of £6,406,656.

The Assessable Value of the County of London in 1923-24 was £49,318,115.

During the past decade there has been a vast development in department store organization in London, and shopping facilities unknown twenty years ago are now enjoyed by residents throughout the whole of London and a fifteen mile radius. Deliveries made by two representative London stores in 1923 show the extent of their operations:

		No. of Parcels
(A)	Deliveries per own vans	4,500,000
	Mail Order Deliveries	1,250,000
(B)	Deliveries per own vans	2,000,000
	By Local Delivery Services	250,000
	Mail Order Deliveries	500,000

In the case of one great London store, the total sales in 1923 were 100 per cent more than in 1922.

The increase in motor-car usage, though not perhaps at the same proportion to population as in the U. S. A. is very high, London contributing in motor taxation at the rate of approximately one-sixth of the entire country (excluding Ireland).

Motor-cars registered in London at November 30, 1923, as represented by taxation figures were as follows:

	Number	Total Taxation
Motor-cars, motor-cycles (privately owned, including commercial vehicles)	198,979	£1,962,818

The General Post Office of London is the largest post office in the United Kingdom. The London postal area does not coincide with any local government area, being fixed from time to time with regard to convenience for post office services. Nor do the eight postal districts into which the area is divided coincide with any local government divisions. The total area of the London postal district is about 234 square miles.

The following figures illustrate the activities of the General Post Office in the London area; they relate to the year 1923.

Post Offices open	992
Telegrams despatched	21,427,500
Parcels received for distribution	23,681,000
Parcels despatched	42,618,000
Number of Postal and Money Orders issued	19,394,366
Value of Postal and Money Orders issued	£19,335,224
Number of Postal and Money Orders cashed	43,312,221
Value of Postal and Money Orders cashed	£50,028,206

The telephone service of Great Britain is controlled by the General Post Office. The use of the telephone is less common than in the U. S., a telephone being the exception rather than the rule in private houses. The following are telephone service statistics for 1922-23, covering an area of 735 square miles:

Length of wire (miles)	1,396,272
Exchange stations	358,213
Private stations	18,789
Originating calls	348,600,000
Incoming calls	362,750,000

for Advertising in

In all of these markets the House of Mitchell is fully qualified to give expert advertising service based on long and varied experience, first hand knowledge of local conditions as well as an unrivalled acquaintance with the advertising value of the Press of the various Countries.

On the Continent of Europe banking accounts are maintained in each Country, and payment of accounts is accepted in the currency of the country concerned.

Many of the World's International Advertisers have entrusted us with their publicity arrangements. Reference to any of them gladly given on request.

Correspondence invited.

THE NEWSPAPER PRESS DIRECTORY

Seventy-ninth Annual Issue. $1.50 post free, "The Standard Work of Reference with respect to the Press."—TIMES.

Editors & Publishers, C. Mitchell & Co., Ltd., Snow Hill, London, E.C.1.

GREAT BRITAIN, IRISH FREE STATE, AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND, SOUTH AFRICA, CANADA, INDIA, and on the CONTINENT of EUROPE, consult

C. MITCHELL & Co LTD

—Advertising—

BRITISH, BRITISH DOMINIONS OVERSEAS, EUROPEAN

MITCHELL HOUSE, SNOW HILL, LONDON, E.C.1

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 10

LONDON, ENGLAND

Food Supplies

The following figures relating to food supplies and their values, brought into London from overseas, are from the Government Blue Books. The total imports of all kinds brought into London represent in value 34 per cent, for 1920, and 38 per cent, for 1921, of the total imports of the United Kingdom.

	1920		1922
	Quantities Cwts.	Value £	Quantities Cwts.	Value £
Butter	649,336	9,330,115	1,781,101	21,257,519
Cheese	1,719,471	12,685,804	1,921,005	12,038,526
Cocoa (raw)	587,674	3,869,392	229,956	718,704
Cocoa (preparations)	169,350	2,614,529	105,623	1,370,910
Coffee	608,812	3,838,406	446,566	1,894,194
Corn, grain, etc.	22,456,016	29,677,942	18,963,325	17,169,853
Rice, rice meal	1,849,818	4,064,664	5,254,869	4,896,503
Wheatmeal and flour	4,412,300	7,416,168	4,773,601	5,405,349
Eggs (gt. hundreds)	1,403,981	4,285,636	1,918,931	4,133,384
FRUIT—
Currants	518,371	2,089,168	485,940	1,579,919
Raisins	303,344	1,629,128	389,039	1,982,847
Apples	1,155,739	2,354,305	1,155,253	2,291,923
Lemons, limes and citrons	241,045	377,070	401,328	550,840
Nuts	582,875	2,626,474	687,181	2,129,817
Oranges	1,418,326	2,788,292	1,698,732	2,518,828
Plums and prunes (including dried apricots, etc.)	275,019	1,387,477	224,564	803,972
Margarine	55,688	340,347	116,715	595,389
MEAT—
Beef (fresh and frozen)	5,136,917	23,405,155	7,020,277	24,585,002
Mutton (fresh and frozen)	3,688,165	15,536,060	5,146,206	21,711,268
Bacon	997,350	8,813,026	792,904	6,273,287
Hams	105,664	962,544	166,267	1,229,117
Pork	236,446	1,742,105	201,375	1,166,717
Rabbits	373,091	1,106,193	187,509	419,000
Poultry and game	.....	423,715	.....	149,679
Miscellaneous	661,656	4,587,157	436,445	2,684,110
Milk (condensed—unsweetened)	219,265	1,604,842	401,822	2,305,409
Milk (condensed—sweetened)	791,219	4,743,480	931,283	4,565,331
Oleo Margarine	11,124	1,190,949	13,638	789,318
Sugar (refined)	763,201	2,633,836	2,034,040	3,163,903
Sugar (unrefined)	10,582,888	28,696,077	7,776,265	10,392,461
Tea (lbs.)	376,375,817	23,485,455	413,040,665	21,351,949
VEGETABLES—
Onions (bushels)	1,472,727	599,082	2,088,629	660,536
Potatoes	1,149,997	870,683	590,679	421,305
Tomatoes	364,412	864,991	639,940	1,304,570
Vegetables (canned or bottled)	275,470	663,397	230,940	436,341

The following figures indicate the movement of certain phases of London food supplies:

	1921	1922
Quantity of fish passing through Billingsgate Market (tons)	195,996	187,954
Quantity of food produce (meat, poultry and provisions) passing through the London Central Markets:
Beef and veal (tons)	220,768	251,921
Mutton and lamb (tons)	143,844	142,038
Pork (tons)	31,968	39,283
Poultry and game (tons)	13,647	16,453
Rabbits (tons)	3,984	4,730
Butter, cheese and margarine (tons)	3,436	3,916
Eggs (tons)	4,350	4,455
Supplies of live stock at the Metropolitan Meat Markets (number):
Cattle	82,859	74,305
Sheep	156,123	128,480
Calves and pigs	29,731	28,907

Trading Area

For the purpose of obtaining accurate information in regard to the trading areas of London, the London Editor of EDITOR & PUBLISHER secured the co-operation of the advertising managers of three of the largest department stores in Central London, and upon the information supplied, a daily and weekly zone was drawn. A very careful check was placed upon all reports. This formed the basis of the map shown on pages IV and V of this Survey. The two areas shown on the map represent the daily trading zone and the weekly trading zone. The daily zone is the territory from which retail establishments throughout the City and Central London receive their daily support. The weekly zone is the territory from which buyers are accustomed to travel to the city, for business and pleasure, at least once a week, and over which the great stores maintain a delivery service of at least once a week.

It is suggested that the map on pages IV and V should be taken in conjunction with an ordinary map of the London district for comparison of distances, etc.

Monthly Magazines

LONDON MAGAZINE
MY MAGAZINE
PREMIER MAGAZINE
THE MERRY MAGAZINE

Monthly Fashion Papers

FASHIONS FOR ALL
CHILDREN'S DRESS
HOME FASHIONS
MABS FASHIONS

Fortnightly Magazines

RED MAGAZINE
YELLOW MAGAZINE
VIOLET MAGAZINE
DETECTIVE MAGAZINE
MERRY MAGAZINE

Weekly Periodicals

ANSWERS
ALL SPORTS
FAMILY JOURNAL
HOME CHAT
HOME COMPANION
HORNERS STORIES
PICTORIAL MAGAZINE
POPULAR WIRELESS
SUNDAY COMPANION
WOMAN'S PICTORIAL
WOMAN'S WEEKLY
WOMAN'S WORLD

and other weekly publications too numerous to be listed here.

"A.P." Papers Cover Britain

THOSE publications of the Amalgamated Press which are open to the advertiser achieve a combined net sale of between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 copies per issue. They cover the British Isles to their remotest corners and appeal to every class and section of the public. They constitute the greatest self-contained publicity machine in this or any other country.

All enquiries should be addressed to
THE ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER

The AMALGAMATED PRESS Ltd.

THE FLEETWAY HOUSE, FARRINGDON ST., LONDON, E.C.4.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
SPACE BUYERS CHART

Survey in Eleven Parts—Part 11

LONDON, ENGLAND

Retail Outlet for Advertised Products

American Designation	British Designation
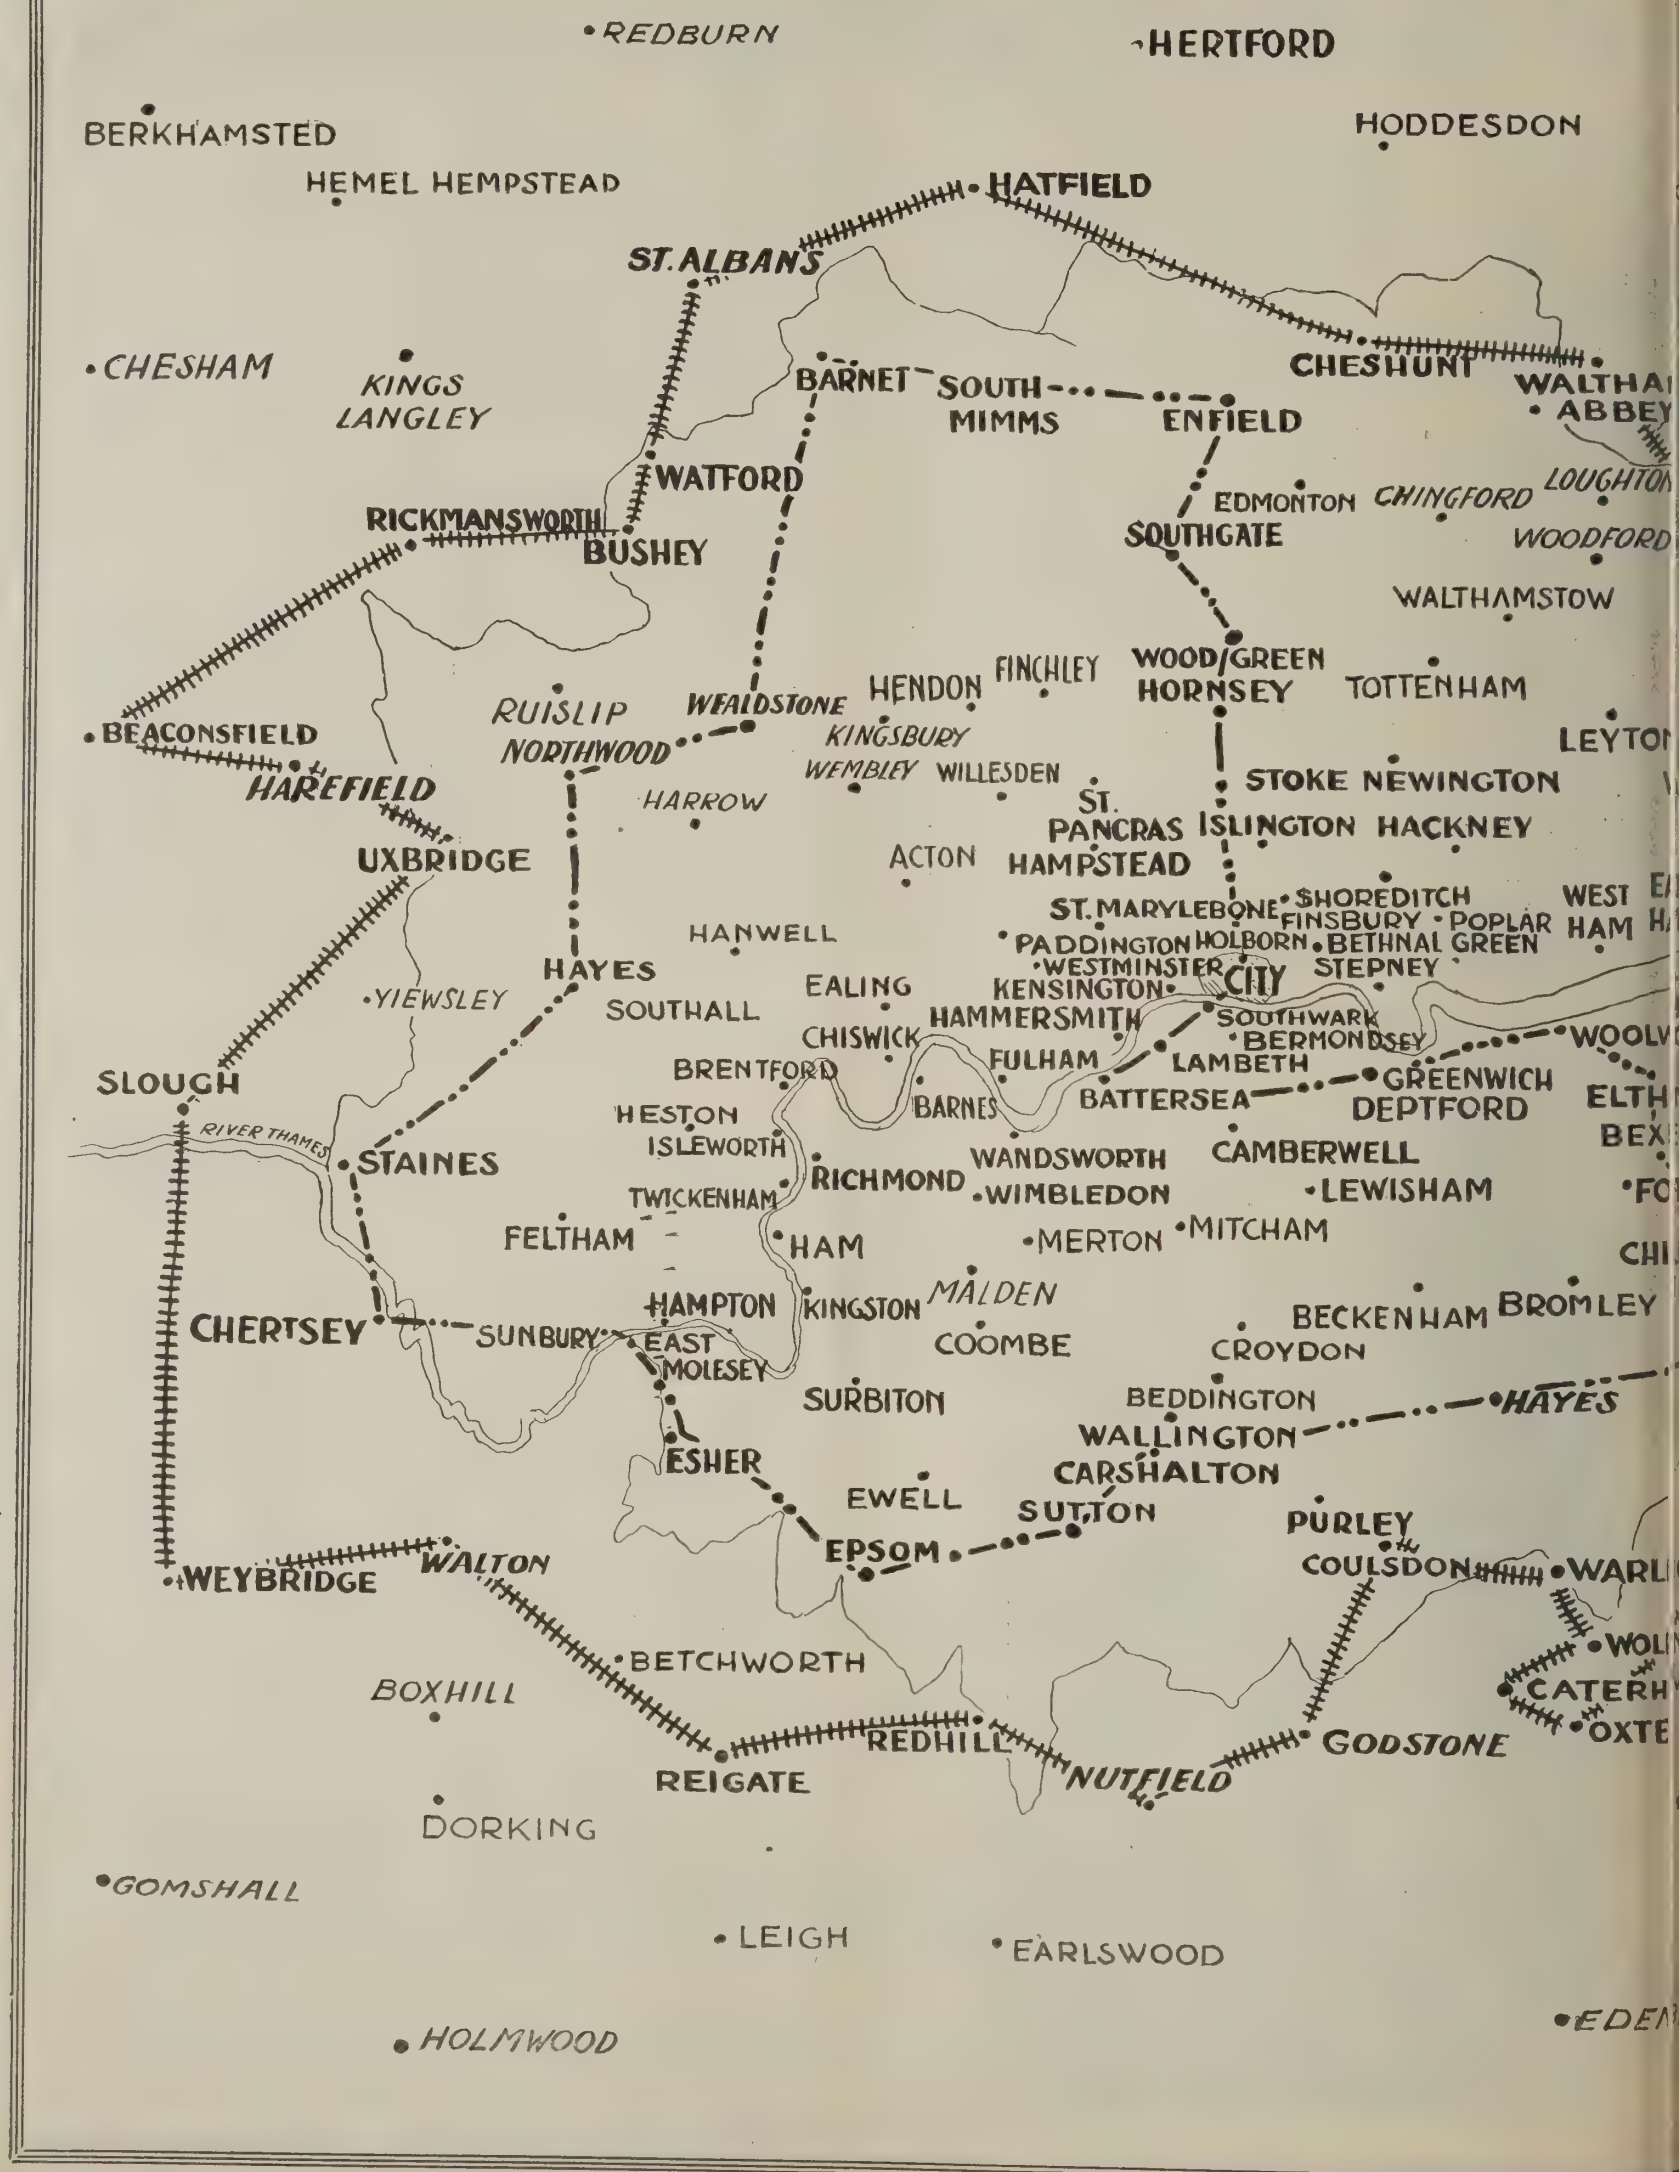
Automobiles	Motor Cars Agencies and Dealers	312
	Motor Cars Accessories and Motorcycles	465
	Motor Tires, Mfg. and Dealers	365
Bakers	Bakers	1,672
Cloaks and Suits	Mantle and Cloak	421
Clothiers	Men's and Boys' Clothiers	595
Confectioners	Confectioners	4,241
Delicatessen Stores	Ham and Tongue Dealers	173
Dressmakers	Dressmakers	1,768
Druggists	Chemists and Druggists	1,576
Dry Goods	Drapers	2,636
Department Stores		22
Electrical Stores	Electricians	601
Fruit Stores	Fruiterers (Fruit and Vegetables)	1,950
Florists	Florists	331
Furniture Stores	House Furnishers	511
Furriers	Furriers	266
Garages	Motor Garages	520
Grocers	Grocers and Tea Dealers	7,320
Hardware	Ironmongers	750
Hats and Caps	Hatters	242
Jewelry	Jewelry	848
Ladies' Tailors	Ladies' Tailors	1,275
Meat Markets	Butchers	1,871
Men's Furnishings	Men's Outfitters, Hosiers and Glovers	1,258
Milliners	Milliners	1,258
Opticians	Opticians	280
Photographers	Photographers	644
Piano Stores	Piano Makers and Dealers	374
Restaurants	Coffee House, Dining and Refreshment Rooms	5,395
Shoe Dealers	Boot and Shoe Dealers	6,440
Sporting Goods	Athletic Outfitters	63
Stationers	Stationers	2,320
Cigar Stores	Tobacconists	5,969
Beer and Spirit Stores	Beer Houses	1,776
	Public Houses	5,492

Retail Sections

London is the largest centre of the wholesale and retail trades in the United Kingdom, and is remarkable for the immense number of small one-shop businesses as compared with the larger stores of American cities. Further, each district has well-defined local shopping areas, and, in addition, Central London is characterized by the number of thoroughfares that have become identified with certain trades in which the principal houses engaged are to be found.

Fleet Street—Newspapers, etc.
Great Portland St. and Longacre—Automobiles.
Oxford St. and High St., Kensington—Dry Goods and Notions.
Curtain Road, E. C.—Furniture, wholesale.
Tottenham Court Rd.—Furniture, retail.
City Road and Clerkenwell—Gramophones and Records.
Hatton Garden—Diamond Merchants.
Bethnal Green—Books and Shoes.
Charing Cross Road—Second-hand Booksellers.

The important shopping streets of the City are Cheapside and Bishopsgate; of the West End, Holborn and Oxford Street to the Marble Arch, Regent Street from Oxford Circus to Piccadilly Circus, Piccadilly to Old Bond Street and the Strand from Charing Cross to Wellington Street. Bond Street (Old and New) is the Fifth Avenue of London. Further west, the Edgware Road, for about a mile, and after another mile residential break, the shopping centre for North West London at Kilburn and Brondesbury. In the extreme west, Hammersmith Broadway, Eastward from the City, the shopping centers are Shoreditch, Mile End Road, Ilford and Stratford. Northward from the City are Islington, Highbury, Holloway, Finsbury Park, Kentish Town, and Wood Green. In the south, beyond the river, are the Elephant and Castle, Kensington, Deptford, Clapham and Brixton. In every case, the shopping is concentrated upon a common centre, usually distinguished by one or more dry goods stores situated upon a main traffic artery.



The Daily Telegraph

enjoys an unrivalled measure of public confidence and esteem, not due to a fleeting popularity, but the result of years of sound journalism and truthful representation of news.

It is this reader-confidence which gives the paper its unique value as an advertising medium. The volume of classified announcements it carries—more than that of any other morning paper in the United Kingdom—forms a sure proof of its pulling power.

H. G. REEVES, Advt. Manager, 138, Fleet Street, London, England

REDBURN
HERTFORD
BERKHAMSTED
HODDESDON
HEMEL HEMPSTEAD
HATFIELD
ST. ALBANS
CHESHAM
KINGS LANGLEY
BARNET
SOUTH MIMMS
ENFIELD
CHESHUNT
WALTHAM ABBEY
WATFORD
RICKMANSWORTH
BUSHEY
EDMONTON
CHINGFORD
LOUGHTON
SOUTHGATE
WOODFORD
WALTHAMSTOW
BEACONSFIELD
RUISLIP
NORTHWOOD
WEALDSTONE
HENDON
FINCHLEY
WOOD GREEN
HORNSEY
TOTTENHAM
LEYTON
KINGSBURY
WEMBLEY
WILLESDEN
HAREFIELD
HARROW
ST. PANCRAS
ISLINGTON
STOKE NEWINGTON
HACKNEY
UXBRIDGE
ACTON
HAMPSTEAD
ST. MARYLEBONE
SHOREDITCH
FINSBURY
POPLAR
WEST HAM
PADDINGTON
HOLBORN
BETHNAL GREEN
HANWELL
WESTMINSTER
CITY
STEPNEY
HAYES
YIEWSLEY
EALING
KENSINGTON
SOUTHALL
CHISWICK
HAMMERSMITH
SOUTHWARK
BERMONDSEY
WOOLWICH
BRENTFORD
FULHAM
LAMBETH
GREENWICH
SLOUGH
BARNES
BATTERSEA
DEPTFORD
ELTHAM
HESTON RIVER THAMES
ISLEWORTH
STAINES
WANDSWORTH
CAMBERWELL
BEXLEY
RICHMOND
WIMBLEDON
LEWISHAM
TWICKENHAM
FELTHAM
HAM
MERTON
MITCHAM
CHISLEHURST
HAMPTON
KINGSTON
MALDEN
BECKENHAM
BROMLEY
CHERTSEY
SUNBURY
EAST MOLESEY COOMBE
CROYDON
SURBITON
BEDDINGTON
HAYES
WALLINGTON
ESHER
CARSHALTON
EWELL
SUTTON
PURLEY
EPSOM
COULSDON
WARLINGHAM
WEYBRIDGE
WALTON
BETCHWORTH
WOLDINGHAM
BOXHILL
CATERHAM
REDHILL
GODSTONE
OXTED
REIGATE
NUTFIELD
DORKING
GOMSHALL
LEIGH
EARLSWOOD
HOLMWOOD
EDENBRIDGE

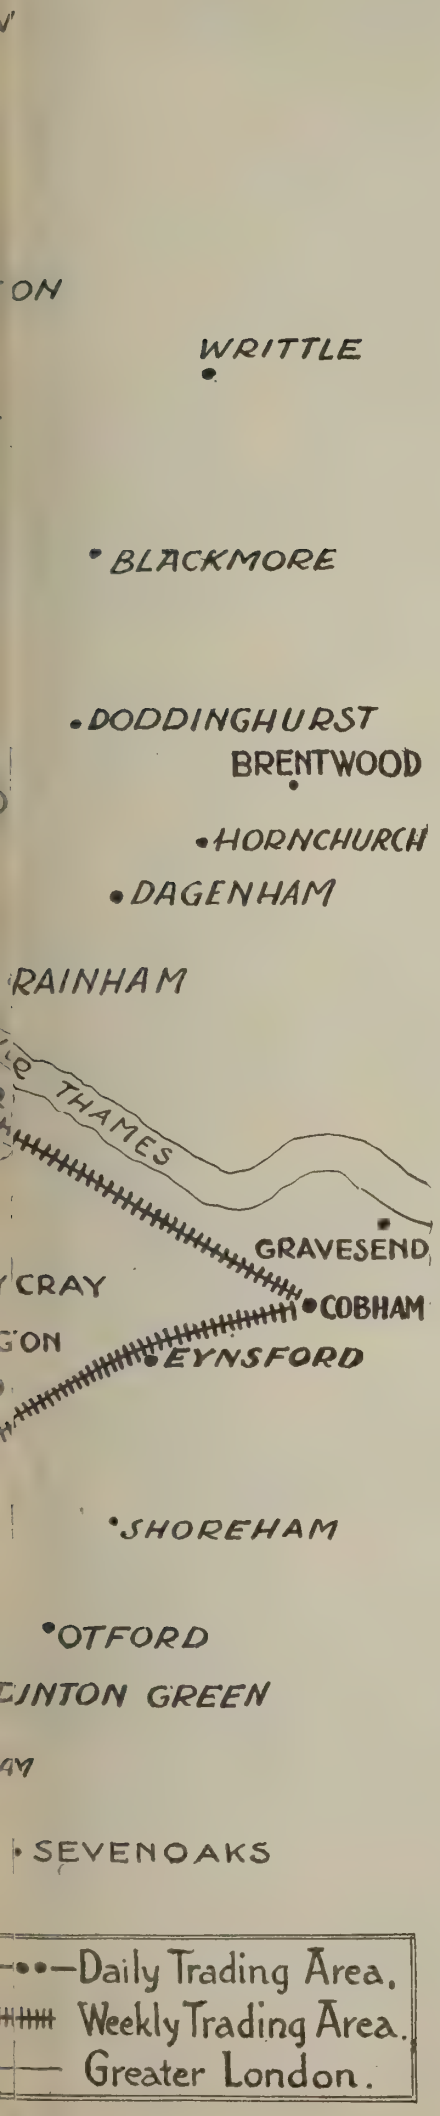
TRADING AREAS
of
LONDON, ENGLAND

IN outlining the trading areas of London, great care and study was necessary before deciding upon the boundary lines.

Taking as a foundation the extreme radius of Greater London, it was necessary to investigate the transportation facilities, the residential character of the various localities, the distributing facilities of the larger London stores and many other details before arriving at the trading areas indicated on the accompanying map.

It will be noticed for example that between the City and Barking on the east, on the north bank of the Thames, there is no indication of a daily trading area. That is because the districts are not of a residential population availing themselves of central London stores to any degree such as is the case with other parts of London. These districts, however, are served by a parcels delivery system conducted by a firm of carriers, Carter, Paterson & Co., Ltd., who collect from central districts and deliver to the consignees the following day. Similar facilities are provided by the London "tube" services, and both means of delivery are employed to reach the districts extending beyond the heavier line shown on the map.

The accompanying map affords the space buyer and national advertiser an opportunity to compare the areas, distances, and other details with any standard map of this territory. The larger and more important towns and districts are shown in larger and heavier type.



The daily trading area indicated by a double-dot-and-dash line is the territory from which the retailers of central London secure the bulk of their support.

The heavier line indicates the approximate boundaries from which the London retail centers attract a once-a-week business. Traveling facilities are such that people living in this second area are able and inclined to make a weekly trip for shopping and business purposes.

This area, too, practically coincides with that throughout which the larger retail stores and wholesale houses maintain a once-a-week delivery system by their own motor vans, in addition to exceilent carrying facilities afforded by the suburban systems of the main line railways having their termini in London.

Inside the daily trading area is a smaller district, bounded by the points represented by the City, Westminster, Kensington, Fulham, Hammersmith, Willesden, Hampstead and Paddington, served by some of the retail stores with twice daily deliveries.

It is quite impossible on a map of this size to indicate a third outer area as indicating a periodical trading zone, since such a map would include a fifty or seventy mile radius, while a fourth or seasonal shopping zone would necessitate a map showing the entire British Empire and many other points of the compass in which retail trade is done from the Metropolis. The map has, therefore, been restricted to an area that may be considered the vital territory upon which an advertising campaign based upon London would concentrate, though most of London daily newspapers and all of the Sunday newspapers and periodicals circulate within a radius of from fifty to three hundred miles of London.

NEWSPAPERS PUBLISHED IN LONDON, ENGLAND

(In Alphabetical Sequence.)

Dailies

Christian Science Monitor (London Edition) ..... 2d.	Daily News ..... 1d.	Jewish Evening News..... 1d.
Daily Chronicle..... 1d.	Daily Sketch ..... 1d.	Jewish Express ..... 1d.
Daily Express ..... 1d.	Daily Telegraph ..... 2d.	Jewish Times ..... 1½d.
Daily Graphic ..... 1d.	Evening News ..... 1d.	Morning Advertiser..... 2d.
Daily Herald ..... 2d.	Evening Standard..... 1d.	Sporting Life ..... 2d.
Daily Mail ..... 1d.	Financial News ..... 2d.	Sportsman ..... 2d.
Daily Mirror ..... 1d.	Financial Times ..... 2d.	Star ..... 1d.
	Financier ..... 1d.	Times ..... 3d.
		Westminster Gazette..... 1d.

Sunday Papers

Illustrated Sunday Herald..... 2d.	People ..... 2d.	Sunday Pictorial ..... 2d.
Sunday News ..... 2d.	Referee ..... 2d.	Sunday Times ..... 2d.
News of the World..... 2d.	Reynolds's Newspaper..... 2d.	Weekly Despatch ..... 2d.
Observer ..... 2d.	Sunday Express..... 2d.

Weekly Newspapers

City Press ..... 2d.	Jewish Chronicle ..... 4d.	Sporting Times ..... 3d.
Clarion ..... 2d.	Overseas Mail ..... 1d.	Times Weekly Edition..... 6d.

National Weeklies

Answers ..... 2d.	John Bull ..... 2d.	Sketch 1/-
Bystander 1/-	John o' London's Weekly..... 2d.	The Sphere 1/-
Graphic 1/-	London Mail ..... 2d.	The Tatler 1/-
Ideas ..... 2d.	Passing Show ..... 2d.	Tit-Bits ..... 2d.
Illustrated London News..... 1/-	Pearson's Weekly ..... 2d.	Truth ..... 9d.
Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News 1/-	Punch ..... 6d.	T. P.'s & Cassell's Weekly..... 2d.
	Radio Times ..... 2d.	World's Pictorial News..... 2d.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
SPACE BUYERS CHART

EDINBURGH, SCOTLAND

City Classed as Capital of Scotland

Population

1911 Census 320,318
1921 Census 420,281

Banks

Savings .... 2 Deposits ..£9,134,000
National ... 8 Deposits £247,226,905

Schools

Secondary and Technical	...170	Pupils....	69,718
Colleges	6	Students..	9,217
University	1	Students..	4,101

Theatres

Legitimate, 3; moving pictures, 27; music halls, 1; miscellaneous (dance and other entertainments), 5.

Location

Situated on the southern shore of the Firth of Forth, East of Scotland.

Principal Industries

Printing, brewing, and the manufacture of rubber goods, distilling, baking and biscuit making, engineering.

Special Information

Edinburgh, as the capital city of Scotland, is the leading centre of business thought as well as social activities. It has a famous University and Medical Schools—it is a centre of education, literature, and art. It is the seat of the Law Courts of Scotland. It is a highly popular tourist and holiday resort. Its natural beauty and handsome buildings, its historical and literary associations, the ancient Palace of Holyrood, attract many thousands of visitors every year.

Churches

Presbyterian, 150; Episcopalian, 25; Roman Catholic, 7; Baptists, 11; other denominations, 30.

Wholesale Houses

Groceries	45	Shoes	9
Meats	8	Dry Goods	6
Fruits	21	Hardware	6

Trading Area (Radius in which Edinburgh houses deliver by Motor)

Town of Dundee on North, 45 miles distant; Galashiels on South, 33 miles distant; Glasgow on West, 48 miles distant; N. Berwick on East, 22 miles distant.

Newspapers

Evening—Dispatch, News. Morning—Scotsman.

Retail Tradesmen's Shops

Motor Garages....	90	Druggists	110	Furniture	75	Ladies' Tailors ...	50	Music	41
Bakers	123	Drapers	160	Furriers	25	Men's Wear	75	Restaurants	40
Cigar Stores.....	180	Department Stores	12	Grocers	160	Merchant Tailors .	55	Shoe Dealers	160
Clothiers	250	Electrical	75	do. licensed	260	Milliners	80	Sporting Goods ...	40
Confectioners	250	Florists	44	Hardware	40	Opticians	35	Stationers	140
Dress makers	86	Fruiterers	150	Jewelry	100	Photographers	50

THE SCOTSMAN

Established 1817

Scotland's National Newspaper

From the centre of Scotland's national life, "The Scotsman" circulates to the limits of its native country, and across the border far into England. The only morning paper published in Edinburgh, it appeals direct to the Administrative, Legal, Banking, Insurance and Business interests concentrated in the Capital. Of certain classes of advertisements it has almost a monopoly; for all others it secures wide publicity in a country distinguished for business enterprise and prosperity.

North Bridge :: :: EDINBURGH

London: 63, Fleet Street, E.C. 4. Manchester: 24, Market Place. Glasgow: 24 George Square.

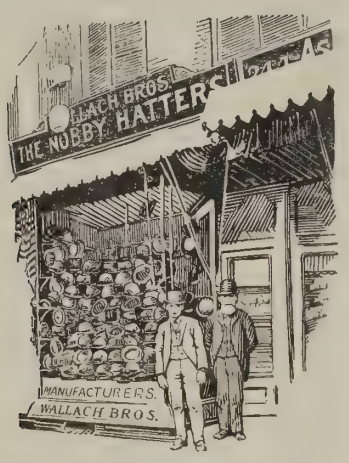
JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

THIS ISSUE—WHAT THE POSTAL REPORT MEANS TO PUBLISHERS

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America

1884 1924



SUITE 1117 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1926, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879
Issued Every Saturday

Vol. 57. No. 28 | NEW YORK, DECEMBER 6, 1924 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

TELL IT TO SWEENEY!

—Wallach Brothers do

Wallach Brothers' original store of 1887

IN 1887, two young men opened a store at 244 Bowery on the lower East Side of Manhattan. Their shingle acclaimed them "The Nobby Hatters, Wallach Bros." Three years later they extended their store to 240 and 238 Bowery. The Bowery of that day was pretty much the Broadway of today, visited, copied, talked of and quoted. In time came growing pains and one by one the establishment of other stores and the abandoning of the original. The firm now has four stores in New York, and will shortly open another on Fifth Avenue near Forty-second Street, crowded crossroads of the Sweeneys—a location that is the apex of ambition for every retailer with means enough to get there and brains enough to stay there.

This progression of the Wallach brothers in four decades from the Bowery to Fifth Avenue is not so remarkable an instance of business expansion as a parallel of the social and economic advance of their customers—the Sweeneys, the average man, the masses.

It must be remembered that this firm was no flashing planet on the business horizon, no monument to new found wants or discovered desires. The Wallach brothers were no Ford, no Edison, no Rockefeller, no Northcliffe, not even a Chaplin or Wrigley, with indispensable inventions, imperative essentials, with new satisfactions for insatiable appetites. They were dependent wholly upon the fortunes and fashions, the whims and wants of the consumer; subject also to mistakes and uncertain sources of supply. Indeed their merchandise at most is only semi-staple, depreciating with time and not absolutely necessary to anybody; a breakfast can be eaten only once, but a hat with persistence can be pushed through three seasons. So the affairs of Wallach Brothers are, as the economists say, an index of the status of the Sweeneys.

* * *

THE Nobby Hatters of 1887 opened their place of business at 6:30 A.M. and kept it open until the following A.M. They featured a nifty line of derbies, which were much worn that season by Boweryites as well as the then Prince of Wales. The hats were attractively priced at $1.90, $2.40, and for heavy spenders $2.90—top price. Ten cents were refunded to customers who came from beyond walking distance on the cable cars.

The fashionable Mr. Sweeney of 1887 favored, beside the derby or silk hat, a cutaway or Prince Albert coat, patent leather shoes, black silk shirt sometimes embroidered on the bosom with polka dots, and a black bow tie. A good suit cost eight dollars, suspenders free. Mr. Sweeney enjoyed a shave, with shine thrown in, for ten cents; a hack ride at two bits an hour; a show from a box seat at $0.75 without war tax or scalper's split; a big beer at $0.05; and the best room in any hotel for two dollars. Happy days, eh? But remember, too, that anybody who earned fifty dollars a week was pointed out to admiring strangers!

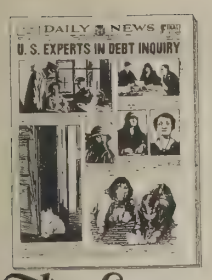
1884—1924
The fashionable Mr. Sweeney

Today Wallach Brothers sell the Sweeneys Manhattan shirts at $2.50 to $12.50; Hart Schaffner & Marx clothing at $35 to $85; Stetson Hats at $7 to $15; Berkley neckwear at $2.50 to $5, Florsheim shoes at $9, $10 and $11; and other nationally advertised standard priced merchandise. In 1887, their annual business was about ten thousand dollars. In 1923, it was more than a thousand times as much—an increase due not so much to more customers as better customers. And incidentally, Wallach Bros. are telling it to Sweeney in The News.

* * *

HOW are the Sweeneys on the Bowery buying today, the masses on the much maligned East Side where the Wallach brothers made their start? An investigation disclosed the fact that 240 Bowery, the location of Wallach Brothers thirty-four years ago, now holds Stark Brothers, clothiers, who carry suits and overcoats at $25 to $70, with average clothing sales of $45; they also feature dinner coats at $52.50 and up. Down at 210 Bowery is McCann's Hat Store, stocking Stetsons at $3.45 to $10.00. And nearby at 4 Delancey Street is Philip Kronfeldt, haberdasher, whose stock includes Manhattan and other shirts at $4.00 to $23.50, Hickok Belts, Fashionknit ties, Phoenix, Holeproof and Interwoven hosiery, underwear as high as $20, and large stocks of silk mufflers, linen handkerchiefs.

* * *



SO THE buying power of the Sweeneys is not localized, but universal; the poorest residence districts of New York are among the best markets. These markets may be yours as well as Wallach Brothers'—more business here to the square mile, to the dollar of effort, to the working day than anywhere else in the world.

If you do business here, you need The News, a medium big enough to sell this market—the Largest Daily Circulation in America, 97% concentrated in New York City proper. If you think of advertising in terms of sales, you must logically buy The News first in New York. Get the facts!

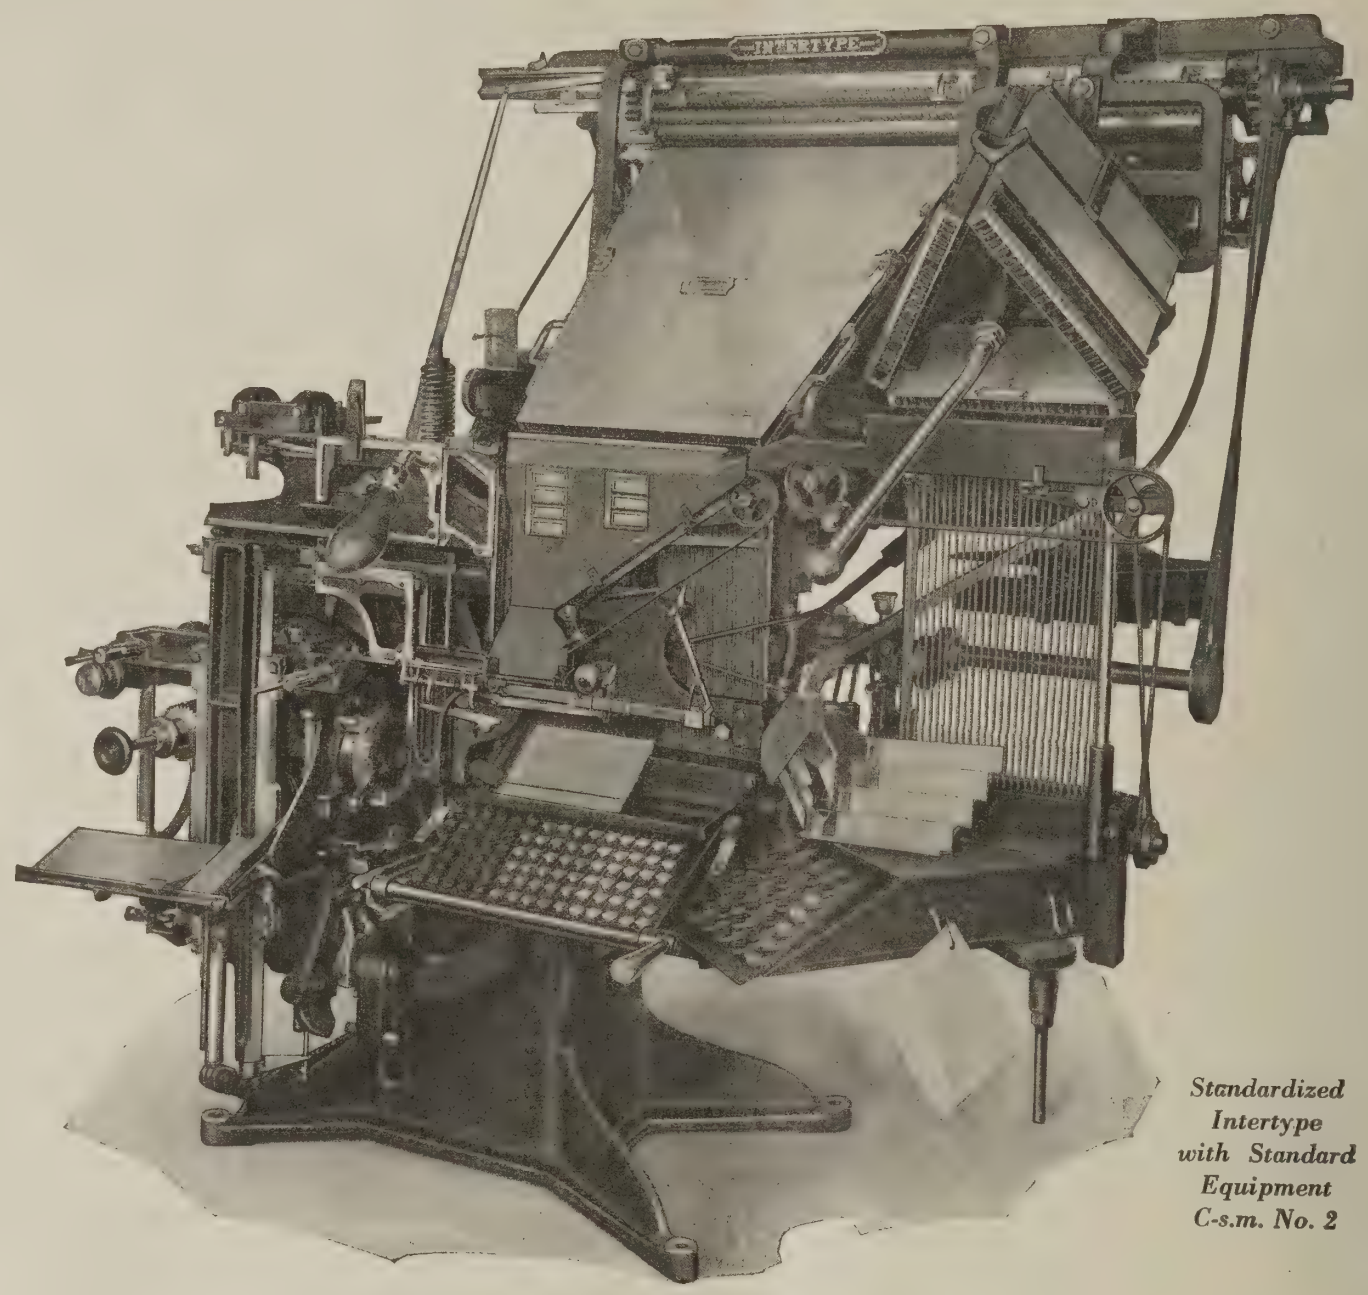
The new Fifth Avenue store

Most of the Sweeney series have been issued in folder form. A request on your business letterhead will bring the series.



The Largest Daily Circulation in America

Daily Average
786,398
Sunday Average
807,279

A. B. C. Report for six months ending September 30, 1924.

THE NEWS
New York's Picture Newspaper
25 Park Place, New York—7 S. Dearborn Street, Chicago

NO STANDARDIZED INTERTYPE HAS EVER BECOME OBSOLETE

Standardized Intertype with Standard Equipment C-s.m. No. 2

There Are Dollars in Details

A simpler machine must cost less to maintain. Parts which do not exist cannot wear out.

Every dollar spent in unnecessary parts, every production hour lost waiting for preventable repairs, must come out of your profits.

There are dollars in mechanical details. Intertype simplifications and improvements help put more type on the bank—and more cash in the bank.

Write for "Profit-Making Intertype Features" and other literature

INTERTYPE CORPORATION: 50 Court Street, BROOKLYN, N. Y. Branch Offices: CHICAGO, Rand-McNally Building; MEMPHIS, 77 McCall Street; SAN FRANCISCO, 560 Howard Street. Sales Offices: BOSTON, 49 Federal Street. LOS ANGELES, 1240 S. Main Street. Canadian Representatives: Toronto Type Foundry Co., Ltd., TORONTO. British Branch: Intertype Limited, 15 Britannia Street, Kings Cross, LONDON, W. C. 1.

INTERTYPE

Editor & Pu

R & PUBLISHER

y, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding publication, by blisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; rld Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Chapero

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 6, 1924 No. 28

¶ It's ate Fight to Follow Postal Report iting Big Deficit to Second Class

eavy Losses Charged to Newspapers and Magazines—Allocation of Costs Questioned — ort Carries No Recommendation and Is Open to Investigation in Committee Meeting— General New Defends Accuracy of Report.

By J. BART CAMPBELL

ASTER GENERAL HARRY NEW sent to Congress this week rt on the cost of handling the l classes of mail which, insofar as ncerned second class matter, amazed spaper and magazine publishers and said, according to close observers, to e created the biggest rumpus that the toffice department has witnessed in rs.

he first important fact in the report is t the department lost nearly $40,000,- in 1923, its revenues totalling $534,- 171.78, against expenditures of 4,218,873.96.

econd-class mail, according to the re- t, paid into the Government $31,214,- .47, and cost $105,927,294.14, the ttling alleged deficit being $74,712,- .67.

arcel post returned revenues, ac- ding to the report, of $120,649,662.42 l this class of postal service is repre- ted as having cost the department 7,556,416.24, a loss of only $6,916,- .82.

he remarkable alleged deficit charged second class mail is the bone of con- tion.

ow were those figures arrived at? hat items of postal expense were rged against second-class matter, what ainst parcel post and other divisions? t is known that the matter was carried the White House, that the Postmaster neral stood firmly behind the postal icials who made up the figures and that h insisted upon sending the report to ngress, although the allocations of cost re being hotly disputed.

There is a persistent report in Wash- gton that General New and President olidge are not in agreement on the re- rt as it was submitted to Congress. is carefully pointed out at the White use that the report is not an adminis- tion document, but a congressional re- rt made as a result of a Senate resolu- n. As EDITOR & PUBLISHER indi- ted last week the responsibility for ting on the report or making any mmendation with it as a basis will st with the Senate.

General New by no means indicates at there is any division of view among ministration officials as to the proper location of postal charges in the report.

That a fight will be made in the Senate, ere is not the slightest doubt. Hearings fore the Senate Postoffice Committee e expected to air the whole matter of ether the charges made against second ass matter, showing it to lose the gov- nment $74,712,868.67 in a single year, ere properly ascertained, or whether her classes of mail matter, particularly rcel post, were favored in their show- g by arbitrary allocation of cost charges.

General New and his subordinate offi- als are expected to stand firmly for their port, aided by two firms of certified blic accountants who were called in to eck the report and approve it.

Postmaster General New's report hows daily and weekly newspapers are harged $68,301,054.55, or 64.48 per cent of the total expenditures for second class. Daily newspapers are assigned 43.69 per cent of the total expense, as the cost of handling this class of mail was estimated at $46,273,540.09. The weekly newspapers are charged with $22,027,514.46, or 20.79 per cent of the total cost of second class matter.

The report asserts publications listed as scientific, agricultural, religious, fraternal, or trade journals, cost the Government $20,464,473.50, or 19.49 per cent of the total second class expenditures. The so-called popular magazines are included under a heading "all other publications" and the department states these periodicals are charged with $13,449,813.96, or 12.70 per cent of the total cost of second class mailings.

Another sub-class of second class publications, known in the report as "transient," are assigned $3,611,706.19, or 3.41 per cent of the total second class costs. "Transient" is a term assigned to publications not made up at the offices of publishers, but which are given to the post office department for delivery.

The Postmaster General states the deficit on fourth class, or parcel post, amounts to $6,916,753.82. Sometime ago the then Postmaster General Hubert Work, sent a communication to the Inter-State Commerce Commission stating parcel post had grown from 4 per cent in 1911, to approximately 65 per cent of the total volume of the mails.

The report assigns second class matter $34,375,097.11 as its share of rural delivery charges. The daily newspapers are charged $18,019,508.42, and the weekly newspapers $10,904,179.69. Scientific, religious, trade journals, etc., cost the Government $3,658,472.49 in the rural mails, and the "transient" papers $215,969.89. "All other publications" $1,576,965.62, according to the report.

The daily newspapers are assessed $8,425,454.93 out of a total of $9,823,048.17 chargeable to second class under the item "Railway Post Office."

Mr. Joseph Stewart, who signed the report as executive assistant to the Post Master General, states "This amount is apportioned to the sub-classes of second class on ratios of volumes of the respective sub-classes of second class, distributed during the statistical period in railway post office space."

In the general post office overhead the daily newspapers are charged $9,447,754.49 out of a total of $34,252,175.33. The weekly newspapers are assessed $8,455,954.04; scientific, agricultural, trade, etc., publications, $9,862,502.89; "all other publications" $4,383,060.05; "transient" publications, $2,102,902.92.

An analysis of the expenditures under "transportation" shows the daily newspapers are charged $14,182,699.21 out of a total of $27,021,743.59. The weekly newspapers are assessed $1,731,145.34; scientific, agricultural, trade, etc., publications, $4,694,606.28; "transient" publications $941,319.51; "all other publications" $5,471,973.25.

There is considerable speculation as to when or how Congress may act on the report which has apparently become inextricably interlocked with the moot question of when or how postal employes are to get the promised fattening of their pay envelopes.

The Washington Times this week set forth clearly the prevailing situation when it stated:

"An attempt will be made in the Senate to override the presidential veto of the postal wage bill granting salary increases amounting to $63,000,000 to 300,000 postal workers throughout the United States. Approximately 4,000 Washington men and women who work at the City Post Office and at the post office department are anxiously following this measure, the passage of which would be an acceptable Christmas gift, inasmuch as the increases average $240 a year."

Senator Walter Edge, of New Jersey, Chairman of the Joint House and Senate Post Office Committees which drafted the salary bill, made it plain that he will try to stave off immediate overriding of the President's veto, but also made it plain he will favor overrid-

READY NEXT WEEK!

Advertising Men and National Merchandisers Please Take Notice

EVERY advertising man and sales manager of nationally advertised merchandise will use, whether he owns it or borrows it, the edition of EDITOR & PUBLISHER which will come from the press next week.

It will contain the huge Space Buyers' Guide, upward of 300 solid pages of condensed and classified business facts descriptive of the cities and towns of the United States and Canada where daily newspapers are published.

Nothing like it exists. It is the reference book that advertising and sales managers have been demanding during a decade. It is a complete, comprehensive, authoritative survey of 1,200 American communities, population and character of population, social statistics, financial resources, principal industries, manufacturing establishments, residential features, retail shopping districts, trading areas, wholesale houses, number of retail outlets for nationally advertised products in 37 lines of trade, and a wealth of special information to guide any advertiser to an intelligent selection of fields.

Nowhere else can you find these facts in one compilation. Our statistics and facts have been obtained through the co-operation of newspapermen in 1,200 cities and towns, chambers of commerce, boards of trade, banking institutions, the Government Census and countless other sources. This effort represents the co-operation of at least 2,500 people. During recent weeks fully 25,000 letters have been exchanged to make this edition possible.

What are you going to do with this book to make money for your advertising clients? It is intended to make advertising pay higher dividends than ever before. No longer will the space buyer work in the dark when he is dealing with the character of any American trading centre.

Do you want to sell merchandise to an industrial population?

Are your goods appropriate for miners, farmers, factory workers, tenement dwellers, one and two-story family house holders, English speaking people, colored people, folks who heat their houses with gas, folks who drive over dirt roads? Does it mean anything to you that a town in Georgia has 18 wholesale grocery establishments, two wholesale hardware stores, 15 passenger automobile agencies, 52 cigar stores, 11 retail jewelry stores, that there are very few apartment houses there, that there are 20 per cent negroes, 7,000 school children, 13 Baptist churches and that the three national banks have total resources of $15,389,299.22? These are but suggestions as to a multiplicity of Guide uses.

At the recent convention of the Association of National Advertisers at Atlantic City it was declared that the greatest need of the business world was just the sort of statistics which this edition of EDITOR & PUBLISHER will give to its subscribers next week. It has been estimated that it would cost a million dollars to survey the country. We have done the United States and Canada at much less cost, but this book will be worth many millions of dollars to the advertising and selling industry to which it is dedicated.

If you are a regular subscriber of EDITOR & PUBLISHER the Guide will be delivered as a single number. If you are not a regular subscriber send this week $4 for the Guide and the regular editions for one year, including the International Year Book to be issued as usual in January. Act now, please! We shall not print a surplus.

ing of the veto rather than see the measure lost.

"I had several talks with President Coolidge regarding the postal pay bill" Chairman Edge said. "I know he vetoed it because it did not raise revenue to provide for the increases. I am hopeful that he will be amicable to the overriding of the veto. However, through the introduction of a separate bill which will increase postal rates to the extent of $43,000,000 per annum, this is within $20,000,000 of the amount necessary to pay the increased salaries.

"I do not agree with the plan to incorporate revenue producing provisions in the increased salary bill. We have never coupled these two items before, and I think that all salaries should be absorbed in the same manner as in the past.

"Why destroy the vetoed postal increased wage bill after it has gone nine tenths of the voyage by inserting some revenue-producing clauses which may not be accepted?"

Chairman Edge said that he is hopeful that the Senate leaders will agree not to act on the veto until after the cost ascertainment report has been forwarded to Congress by the Postmaster General. "With the cost ascertainment report in hand," Senator Edge said, "we will be able to draft a separate revenue producing bill and put it through immediately following the enactment of the one now before the Senate."

In short, it is the intention of Chairman Edge to secure the early enactment of the postal wage increase bill in a manner which will not embarrass President Coolidge. He feels that if the separate revenue producing bill is introduced before the veto is overriden that the President will let it be known that he is now reconciled to the measure which he vetoed in the dying days of the last session.

The increased wage bill for postal workers probably has had more unified support both in the House and Senate than any other bill of its kind ever before introduced. When joint hearings were held on the wage bill between 300 and 400 senators and congressmen personally appeared before the Committee at the behest of their constituents and unqualifiedly let it be known that it had their hearty support.

Postmaster General New's report has been ordered printed by the Senate which means at least two weeks in the Government printing office and no action by the Senate can come until after the Christmas Holiday.

This is the first cost ascertainment report made to Congress in a decade and is the one to which President Coolidge referred in his veto of the postal salary bill on June 7 last.

The postal salary bill which the President vetoed would add approximately $68,000,000 to the annual expenditures of the Government.

The last official ascertainment of the cost of carrying and handling the mails was made by the Post Office Department in 1909 and was carried forward by the Hughes Commission in 1911. Much of the data obtained for that ascertainment was from the special weighings of the mails of 1907 authorized by Congress. Since the findings of the Hughes Commission extensions of estimates have been made by the department from time to time, but have become unsatisfactory because of radical changes in the condition of the service, both with reference to increased expenditures and increases in the weight and volume of the mails as a whole, and of particular classes, which have radically affected their relations to each other.

Postmaster General New points out that the report is merely a fact-finding statement. It does not make any recommendations whatever with respect to postage rates. That matter is left in the hands of Congress.

Members of the postal committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association plan to hold a special meeting with Postmaster General New in Washington, D. C., Dec. 9, EDITOR & PUBLISHER learned this week. It is understood the postal cost report which has just been lodged with the Senate will be discussed.

SUMMARY OF REMARKABLE FINDINGS IN POSTAL REPORT

THE following table shows in detail the revenues and expenditures of the Post Office Department in each branch of the service in 1923, according to a report of Postmaster General New now before Congress:

Classes	Revenues	Expenditures	Gain
Paid first class	$271,894,051.49	$191,476,335.17	$80,417,716.32
Postal Savings	5,409,504.00	708,092.95	4,701,411.05
Total gain			$85,119,127.37
			Loss
Second class	$ 31,214,425.47	$105,927,294.14	$74,712,868.67
Third class	43,844,940.77	60,136,516.25	16,291,575.48
Fourth class	120,649,662.42	127,566,416.24	6,916,753.82
Franked matter	.....	357,819.45	357,819.45
Penalty matter	.....	6,214,131.44	6,214,131.44
Free for blind	.....	27,315.29	27,315.29
Foreign	12,871,746.39
Receipts foreign mail transit	115,419.03	17,591,003.59	4,603,838.17
Money order	11,601,425.82	21,141,936.99	9,540,511.17
Registry	8,005,579.20	18,379,593.01	10,374,013.81
Special delivery	8,175,648.33	8,297,645.67	121,997.34
Insurance	7,185,771.14	8,331,730.60	1,145,959.46
C. O. D.	4,079,143.35	5,904,580.74	1,825,437.39
Treasury savings	.....	221,809.28	221,809.28
Total	$525,047,317.41	$572,282,220.81
Total loss			$132,354,030.77
Loss, excluding unassignable and unrelated items	.....	.....	47,234,903.40
Less unassignable revenues	7,773,776.74	.....	7,773,776.74
Net loss, excluding unrelated	.....	.....	39,461,126.66
Unrelated	1,592,077.67	1,936,653.15	344,575.52
Grand totals	$534,413,171.78	$574,218,873.96	$39,805,702.18

L. B. Palmer, A. N. P. A. manager, declined to discuss the proposed meeting, and refused to either affirm or deny that it was to be held.

J. D. Barnum, Syracuse Post-Standard, is postal committee chairman, and A. G. Newmyer, New Orleans Item, vice-chairman.

DROPPED FROM A. B. C.

Peoria Journal, Transcript and Sunday Journal Transcript Out

Members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations were surprised this week to receive notice that the Board of Directors at a meeting in New York on Nov. 21 had considered charges against the Peoria (Ill.) Journal, the Peoria Transcript and Sunday Journal Transcript, and had dropped them from membership.

It was alleged in the published announcement that the papers had been found "guilty of conduct endangering the welfare of the Audit Bureau of Circulations."

No official amplification of this extraordinary announcement could be obtained from either side, but EDITOR & PUBLISHER learned that the difficulty grew out of the employment by the newspapers of an auditor who was, whether rightfully or not, considered by A. B. C. as attached to that organization.

The incident is referred to as an "unfortunate controversy," the merits of which are not known because both A. B. C. officials and representatives of the newspapers, including the auditor in question, refuse, or have failed to reply to questions.

"NO COG SLIPPED"

Martin Praises A. P. Men for Efficient Election Service

The Associated Press this week issued a two-page broadside containing editorial comment and letters from editors, complimenting the association on the service rendered in covering the general election Nov. 4. Included is a personal tribute to all A. P. men signed by Frederick Roy Martin, general manager.

"Not a human cog slipped", Mr. Martin said. "No reporter turned prophet, no tabulator tired. The board of directors has asked me to extend to you all its congratulations upon the excellence of your work during the campaign. This the board did enthusiastically on its own initiative. To pass this praise on to you, who have so well earned it, is a great privilege and pleasure."

DU BOIS DIES OF BURNS

Beckwith Agency Man's Cigarette Sets Fire to Bed

Samuel Webster Du Bois, 49, advertising man, for the last 12 years associated with the S. C. Beckwith Agency, New York special representatives, died Nov. 29, from burns he had received in a fire in his New York home two days before.

Mr. Du Bois fell asleep with a lighted cigarette in his hand, and it set fire to his bed.

Mr. Du Bois was born Oct. 18, 1875, at Tuscaloosa, Ala., and was a member of an old Alabama family. He was graduated from the University of Alabama and Vanderbilt University.

When he first came to New York he was associated with his father in the advertising business. Then he joined the firm of Hand, Knox and Cone, special agents, where he remained many years. He left this firm to become associated with the New York office of the Cloverleaf Newspaper group, under A. K. Hammond. From this position he went to the Beckwith Agency.

"He was the sort of man who never made an enemy", said a friend in tribute this week.

TO RESTRICT BILLBOARDS

Nash Motors Says It Will Use Only Commercial Locations

Co-operation in the movement underway to restrict outdoor advertising to commercial locations was promised this week by the Nash Motors Company of Kenosha, Wis., according to Mrs. W. L. Lawton, chairman of the National Committee for Restriction of Outdoor Advertising.

"We are in favor of the movement for preventing the defacement of scenes and civic beauty with advertising material," the Nash company wrote Mrs. Lawton.

"The policy of the Nash Motors Company is to employ outdoor advertising in commercial districts only. Insofar as is practical we intend to co-operate fully with the aims of the National Committee for restriction of Outdoor Advertising."

The International Harvester Company, another recent recruit wrote Mrs. Lawton they were in "full sympathy" with the work.

New Wyoming Weekly

A new weekly paper, the Pavillion (Wyo.) Press, has been started by newspaper men of Dubois and Riverton, Wyo.

A. P. CITES N. Y. SU FOR RADIO VIOLATIO

Frank Munsey Asked to Appear Bel Board of Directors Jan. 28 On Charge of Broadcasting Election Returns

Frank A. Munsey, member of the A ciated Press for the New York Sun, this week cited to appear before the A board of directors Jan. 28 to answer charge of violating the association's laws in broadcasting election news No

It is understood similar citations w issued to other alleged violators, but Associated Press declined to make na of the newspapers public.

The New York Sun on election ni broadcast returns from station WE New York, in a hook-up with the Ba more Evening Sun, Detroit News, Bos Post, Pittsburgh Press, and Buff Evening News. This hook-up was en neered by the United Press Associatio

"We had no Associated Press conn tions at the broadcasting station", was comment of Keats Speed, managing edi of the New York Sun, on the citation.

The A. P. citation charges the N York Sun with violating Article VII, s tion 5 and Article VIII section 7 of organization's by-laws.

These sections follow:

Article VII, section 5: "A mem shall publish the news of the Associa Press only in the newspaper, language, and the place specified in certificate of membership, and he sh not permit any other use to be made the news furnished by the Corporat to him or to the newspaper which represents."

Article VIII, section 7: "No mem shall furnish, or permit any one furnish, to any one not a member of t Corporation, the news which he is quired by the By-Laws to supply to t Corporation."

The citation addressed to Mr. Muns reads as follows:

"You are hereby cited to appear bef the board of directors of the Associat Press at general headquarters, New Yo Jan. 28, 1925 at 11 A.M., to answer the charge of violating Article VII, S tion 5 and Article VIII, section 7 of t by-laws in broadcasting election news t night of Nov. 4".

The WEAF hook-up, in which t Sun participated, reached 6,000,000 ra listeners, according to estimates. Vila, sporting editor of the Sun, w on the program.

Other Associated Press members w broadcast election returns, gained fr the United Press or other sources, cluded: the Chicago Tribune, the Chica Daily News, the Chicago Herald Exa ner; the Chicago Evening Post; the N York American, the Brooklyn Eagle, t Memphis Commercial Appeal, Portla Oregonian; Detroit Free Press, Fo Worth Star Telegram, and the Kans City Star.

INVITE WALES TO HOUSTON

Mayor Oscar F. Holcombe and W. S. Patton, president Advertising Association of Houston, Monday sent a specially engraved invitation to the Prince of Wales requesting the presence of His Royal Highness at the 1925 convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in Houston in May. Reservations for the Prince have already been made by members of the Cape Town Club of South Africa, with whom he is expected to make the trip.

Mayor Holcombe will appoint a committee to accompany President Lou Holland to Washington to extend the formal invitation to President Coolidge, Secretary Hughes and Secretary Hoover to attend the convention.

PICTURES BY RADIO NEW SCIENTIFIC TRIUMPH

Radio Corporation's Invention Successfully Transmits Photographs from London to New York in 20 Minutes—"Press Rate" Makes Cost to Dailies $42 Per Picture

By C. D. WAGONER

THE transmission of photographs across the Atlantic by radio is no longer an experiment but a reality. This was publicly demonstrated last Sunday by the Radio Corporation of America in the presence of a large delegation of newspaper men and prominent scientists, who gathered in the corporation's laboratory at Broad street, New York City and for hours watched a small machine with an evolving cylinder "tick off" pictures that were being transmitted through the ether from Marconi House in London, more than 3,000 miles away.

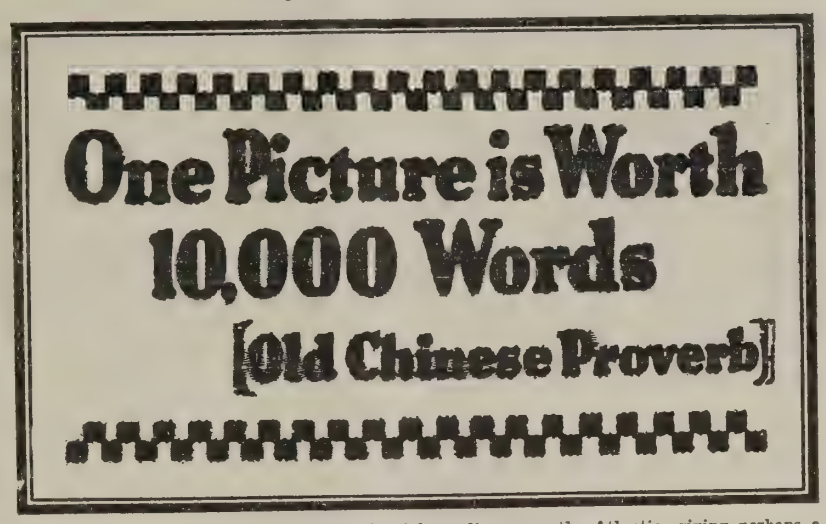
The average time for reception of a picture, 3½ by 5 inches, was 20 minutes. Allowing 15 minutes for the time necessary in taking a picture, developing and drying a negative ready for the radio transmitter, it means a picture will arrive in New York ready for the press 35 minutes after it is taken in England.

In demonstration Sunday, a picture of the S. S. Reclamation, which went aground on the River Tees in England, supplied by a Philadelphia newspaper correspondent to the Radio Corporation's engineer in charge of the sending at London, arrived several hours before the cabled story to go with the picture was delivered in Philadelphia.

Of course this was probably due to the fact that the air was cleared for the radio picture tests whereas the cabled press story undoubtedly took its usual course in the day's trans-oceanic traffic. Nevertheless it shows that when this new process is in commercial operation the editor will be relieved of his worries of holding up a cable or foreign news story for an illustration, when one cannot be readily found in the paper's morgue.

Just how long before Europe and America will be transmitting pictures on a commercial basis depends upon the time necessary to perfect certain improvements in the radiophotogram apparatus, according to officials of the Radio Corporation. One of the engineers expressed the opinion this might be next spring. Capt. R. H. Ranger, Radio Corporation engineer, who developed the apparatus, is already at work on improved sending and receiving devices, much more simple in operation and more compact than the laboratory apparatus used in the present demonstration.

Gen. James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation, said that there would be no haste to put the wirelessing of pictures on a commercial basis. The work of perfecting the apparatus would be left to the engineers and the inventors, he added.



"Now that the principle has been established, we have no fear of the future development," asserted Gen. Harbord, "Doubtless, the time of sending a picture, which is now between 15 and 30 minutes, will be reduced. The quicker they are sent, the lower the price of transmission will be. It may be a few weeks or it may be months before we are ready to invite the public to send pictures."

The question of price for sending pictures is something officials of the Radio Corporation declare they have given little thought. "The cost will probably be regulated by the time required to send a picture," Gen. Harbord said.

"About 600 words can be sent during the time now required to send a picture but I expect the time for sending will be materially reduced before we are ready to enter the commercial field.

The present radio rate for messages is 20 cents a word and the press rate is 7 cents. On the 600 word basis, this would make the present cost to individuals $120 a picture and $42 to the newspapers.

In transmitting a picture, printed matter, or whatever is to be sent by this new method for spanning the ocean, an ordinary camera negative on a film is made. This is developed, dried and then placed around a glass cylinder, which revolves like an old-fashioned cylindrical phonograph record.

How a solid type impression was transmitted by radio across the Atlantic, giving perhaps a foretaste of a future common practice of wirelessing display advertising, whole pages of newspapers, signatures to valuable documents, etc.

Portrait of the Prince of Wales as received by Trans-Atlantic radio.

Inside this glass cylinder is an incandescent lamp, the light of which is focused in a minute beam on the film as the cylinder revolves. The intensity of the light ray passing through the film varies according to the light and dark portions of the film. This ever-changing beam of light, having passed from the inside of the glass cylinder through the film, is focused through a lens on the sensitive element of the photo-electric cell, or transmitting "eye," a recent development of the General Electric research engineers.

This "eye" translates the picture by transforming the light waves into electrical waves or impulses, which can be transmitted by radio much the same as a regular dot and dash message.

The translation is accomplished through the fact that the electrical resistance of the photo-electric cell changes according to the amount of light thrown upon it. Having passed through the "eye" the electric waves go through a series of vacuum tube amplifiers and are fed into a modulating device ready for transmission. At this point the electrical interpretation of the picture is ready to leave London.

Over land wires it travels 220 miles to the Carnavon, Wales, transmitting station of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, which lent its facilities for the demonstration, co-operating with Donald G. Ward, Radio Corporation engineer, who took the transmitting apparatus to London.

At the Marconi station the electric impulses on the land wires operate small relays which turn on and off the high value currents flowing from the 200-kilowatt Alexanderson generator, an American product, to the antenna. This high power electrical energy, leaving the antenna in interrupted impulses similar to dots and dashes of the telegraph code, on a 14,000 meter wave length, creates the ether waves which carry the photograph through space.

The picture is received at the Riverhead (N. Y.) station of the Radio Corporation just as a radiogram is received, but instead of readable dots and dashes it is an undecipherable series of impulses. These pass through amplifiers and land wires to the Broad street laboratory. There they are unscrambled and translated back into the black and white of a picture.

In decoding the complex photo message, the receiving apparatus gives each electric impulse a definite task to perform in reassembling the picture. The picture is reproduced in duplicate, both in ink on a paper record and on a photographic film.

The paper is wrapped about a rotating cylinder and a specially constructed fountain pen bears against it as does a needle on a phonograph record. Then pen is attached to an electrically controlled lever in such a way that every pulse of electrical current, which passes through the magnet coils of the relay lever, draws the pen to the surface of the paper, making a fine dot or dash in ink.

A changing current fed through the magnet coils causes the pen to wiggle in step with the current, thus giving a stippled effect to the picture, which is reproduced vertically, line by line, in perfect synchronism with the sending apparatus. The harmony is maintained by special driving motors and other devices.

The making of the ink record, which is essentially a shorthand method of transcribing the picture, is visible in all its operations. The photographic record, made simultaneously with the ink record, is made on an ordinary camera film inside a specially constructed camera, a beam of light playing upon the film in place of the pen upon the paper. The film is then developed and pictures made from it.

The genesis of the present invention, General Harbord declares, is traceable to a suggestion made by Owen D. Young, chairman of the General Electric and Radio Corporation's boards and former reparations agent under the Dawes plan.

In February, 1923, shortly after Gen. Harbord had become president of the Radio Corporation, he was given a dinner by the corporation's employes. Mr. Young was the principal speaker.

"What we really want from radio in

(Continued on Page 28)

Captain Ranger receiving a radio picture from the sending station across the Atlantic Ocean.

ROBERT K. LEAVITT NAMED NEW A. N. A. SECRETARY-TREASURER

Former Advertising Manager of Onyx Hosiery, Inc., Picked to Succeed John Sullivan, Resigned—Outlines Association's Work

ROBERT K. LEAVITT, for the last four years advertising manager of "Onyx" Hosiery Inc., was this week appointed secretary-treasurer of the Association of National Advertisers, succeeding John Sullivan, who resigned because of ill-health after ten years of service.

Mr. Leavitt has long been active in the A. N. A. as representative of his company. He has been a director and member of the executive committee since September 1923, chairman of the membership committee during the past year, and chairman of the New York chapter since last September.

In an interview with EDITOR & PUBLISHER shortly after announcement of his appointment, Mr. Leavitt stressed the new A. N. A. policy of co-operation with groups of advertising agents and publishers.

ROBERT K. LEAVITT

"The object of our association," Mr. Leavitt declared, "is to watch and safeguard the rights and privileges of the advertisers. We stand first and last behind the man who pays the bills.

"But, as President Sumner said, 'the policy of the association is now and will continue to be one of co-operation.'"

Mr. Leavitt in the interview disclaimed he was the "mouth-piece of the association." He said he preferred to "work first and speak later." He consented, however, to review the aims and plans of the A. N. A.

Completion of an extensive circulation survey, re-organization of the headquarters office in New York, and an active membership campaign confront him when he assumes his duties as A. N. A. secretary Dec. 15.

"The association has practically completed a survey of magazine circulation," he said. "The results may be ready for publication shortly.

"We undertook this survey with a view to finding out something about the much discussed duplication in magazine circulation and also to learn as much as possible about the reading habits of certain classes of people.

"To assist our membership in unraveling this problem, we divided magazine readers into three groups, business executives, clerks and factory workers. We sent out questionnaires to a big list representing these three groups, and the tabulated replies should prove interesting.

"When we have completed this magazine survey, we intend to continue our investigations of reading habits and circulation values to other publications. We hope that by working in co-operation with publishers of the various media to uncover the true facts of circulation, beyond mere figures."

As chairman of the membership committee of the A. N. A. for the past year, Mr. Leavitt is keenly interested in the work of interesting national advertisers in the benefits to be gained from enrollment in the organization of which he has now been named secretary-treasurer. The A. N. A. membership at present numbers 309, he said, representing a considerable increase over a few months ago.

"More and more big national advertisers are beginning to realize the value of A. N. A. membership," he declared.

"To non-members, our annual and semi-annual conventions stand out as the most important features of association activities, whereas it is the daily office routine which is proving most productive.

"We are, for example, continually active in taking measures to circumvent unwise attempts to interfere with business on the part of municipal and state governments. We have and will continue to fight against the proposal to tax advertising.

"In addition to this, we have in our 14 years of operation, gathered together a most comprehensive file of advertising information of tremendous value to advertisers. This has enabled us to build up a service which puts at the finger tips of any advertiser member information on every conceivable subject concerning advertising and selling. In effect we have a veritable mine of information, which is always kept up to date and which is always available to members.

"To handle the collection and filing of this information efficiently, our headquarters office in New York is divided into three departments. They are: the General Data Department; the Publication Data Department, and the Export Data Department."

Mr. Leavitt, who lives in Pelham, N. Y., was graduated from Harvard, Class of 1917, having specialized in economics. During his college years he had a taste of journalism on the staff of the Harvard Lampoon, the humorous publication of the university.

During the war, he served for two and a half years in the army as first lieutenant of infantry, spending 16 months in France. He was made advertising manager of "Onyx" Hosiery Inc., in March, 1920, and has held that position continually since.

G. Lynn Sumner, the new president of the Association, in a statement to members, says: "Mr. Leavitt has accepted the appointment, which came to him as a complete surprise, and he will assume his new duties at Headquarters on Dec. 15.

"Your officers feel that for many reasons a particularly happy selection has been made. Mr. Leavitt is singularly well qualified for success in the work. He is intimately familiar with the activities of the headquarters office, and as one of our most active members knows the problems, the purposes and the ideals of the Association. He will therefore be able to assume without delay an efficient, understanding management of the Association's affairs."

TO MERGE PROPERTIES

Macfadden to Combine Newspaper and Magazine Corporation

Bernarr Macfadden, publisher of magazines and the New York Evening Graphic, is completing arrangements to consolidate the two different corporations which now control his magazine and newspaper interests.

Agreement has been entered into between director of Macfadden Publications, Inc., the magazine company, and of the Macfadden Newspaper Publishing Corporation, to this end. Stockholders will vote on the proposal at a meeting in New York Dec. 10. Mr. Macfadden is president of both corporations.

WANTED! A CHRISTMAS STORY

EDITOR & PUBLISHER herewith offers $50.00 as a prize for the best original Christmas story submitted on or before December 15, the following terms to govern:

To be written by the member of a daily newspaper staff.

To concern fiction characters in newspaper work.

Not to exceed 1500 words.

To be selected by the Editors of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, who reserve the right to return unselected stories or to retain any manuscript at usual space rates.

EDITORS ASK LIBEL LAW REVISION

Texas Managing Editors Recommend Consolidated Suits at Meeting in Austin—E. T. Cutter Speaks—Perkins Reelected President

The Texas Managing Editors Association closed its annual meeting in Austin Monday, with the re-election of President A. L. Perkins of the Galveston Tribune, and Secretary George B. Doran, of the Dallas News.

The editors went on record favoring amendments to the Texas libel laws to permit consolidation of libel suits growing out of the same matter, each paper retaining full right to present all testimony; and for a clearer definition of privileged proceedings of public meetings. The editors selected San Antonio for their 1925 meeting place. Austin, Waco, Dallas and Texarkana were bidders for the meeting.

Proposal for an all-Texas big-city associated press wire, supplementing present wire service, was discussed, and met general approval. The plan for additional servce is to be worked out during the next month. E. T. Cutter, superintendent of the central division, Associated Press, attended the meeting.

The editors were entertained by Austin citizens and the Austin American-Statesman, which published during their session the first issue of the consolidation of the two former papers.

Oklahoma Daily to Be Sold

Involuntary bankruptcy proceedings have been filed against the Okmulgee (Okla.) Democrat, by L. H. Schmidt, Samuel Leavy, Nathan Leavy and the Western Newspaper Union.

Bankruptcy has been held up pending the sale of the newspaper, which was scheduled to take place this Friday.

VANDERBILT TO LAUN TABLOID IN MIAMI

No Date Set But Machinery Has B Purchased, He States—Organiz tion Being Formed—Shorey to Pick Staff

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., presiden the Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., publisher of the Los Angeles Illustr Daily News and the San Francisco Daily Herald, definitely announced late last week in Miami, Fla., that he would launch a daily tabloid newspaper in that city. He did not say whether it would be a morning or evening publication.

CORNELIUS VANDE BILT, JR.

The date of publication has not been set, Vanderbilt stated, but declared that chinery had been ordered. A site being obtained and men are being mo in from his other publications, he ad

The Coast publisher would not whether this was to be his third tab or whether another paper was to s in another Eastern city before Miami venture got under way.

"We are working towards the n dle," he said. "We expect in fulfill our promise to our stockholders, to h two newspapers in operation this co ing year. These two will be located the East. One of them will be at Mia We have chosen this city because of growth and remarkable progress d ing the past year.

"We feel certain a Vanderbilt torial tabloid will sell exceedingy w This is not a new proposition with We have been exerting ourselves have had our experts examine this for several months. All of them of the same opinion that we are. T will be the first small Vanderbilt pap small in circulation, but I am cert it will be most profitable."

Mr. Vanderbilt said that Freder North Shorey, supervising editor of Vanderbilt papers, would be in cha of recruiting the new staff. He s every man would be picked and chos and that he expected a most perfect ganization in every way.

Already hundreds of applications being received, he said, and all will given careful consideration. Many n will be sent from the West to head partments. As appointments are ma announcement will be forthcoming.

Offices for Vanderbilt Newspape Inc., have been opened in Miami, in Pa Beach and in Miami Beach, and branch will be opened in other nearby cit shortly. Twelve men from the Ca fornia Vanderbilt papers are in this c already, and more are arriving daily.

The announcement of the tabloid ca as a surprise to residents of Miami.

At the present time there are t daily newspapers in Miami, the Mia Herald, morning, published by Frank Shutts, and the Miami News-Metropol evening and Sunday, published James M. Cox, former governor Ohio.

Unusual Tribute to M. H. de Young

An unusual tribute was recently pa M. H. de Young, publisher of the S Francisco Chronicle, by John Breune owner of the John Breuner Compan large San Francisco furniture store. the center of a seven column advertis ment in the San Francisco Examine Nov. 23, Mr. Breuner ran a two colum box in which he praised the civic a complishments of Mr. de Young, decla ing that San Francisco was proud of i veteran publisher and his achievements.

PRESS FREEDOM UPHELD IN FIRST TAX TRIAL

Clearly a Usurpation of Power," Says Federal Judge of Congress Attempt to Dictate Manner of Income Tax Publication In Sustaining Kansas Journal-Post Demurrer — Government Appeals CLEARLY an usurpation of power . . . a clear transgression upon First Amendment to the Constitution, ich forbids an abridgment of the free-om of the press."

These words are the crux of the gal decision handed down by Judge bert L. Reeves of the Federal Court Kansas City, Dec. 2, when he sus-ned demurrers to the indictments inst the Kansas City Journal-Post, ared with unlawfully printing income returns.

"In this view," continued Judge Reeves' cision, "the court is constrained to hold at the enactment is violative of the rst Amendment to the Constitution d is void in law."

Thus was favorably launched for the wspapers of the nation, their latest d most important fight for press free-m. Judge Reeves upheld their freedom d left it to the Supreme Court to deny s decision.

Other newspapers in the forefront of e battle, with test trial pending, are e Baltimore Post, scheduled to appear ourt Dec. 9, and the New York erald-Tribune, which has asked a ee's delay for preparation of its case. Different from the other indictments rned, the charges made by the Federal rand Jury in Kansas City made in-viduals and not a corporation the de-nants. Walter S. Dickey, owner and lisher, and Ralph Ellis, general manag-geditor, were made defendants. That s singular for the Journal-Post.

Again the Kansas City daily attracted tion-wide attention of newspapers and tions when on Tuesday, just one week r Mr. Dickey and Mr. Ellis were in-ted, Judge Albert L. Reeves, of the eral Court, sustained in toto demur-r filed by the defendants.

In layman language, Judge Reeves up-ld the freedom of the press and left it the Supreme Court of the land to r his decision.

Wednesday, the day following the in-dictment, Mr. Dickey and Mr. Ellis ntered pleas of not guilty to the charges. Thanksgiving day, Senator James A. eed, David M. Proctor and Maurice H. Weiger, counsel for the defendants, pre-ared the demurrers. The demurrers re filed Friday, were argued last Mon-ay and the decision obtained Tuesday.

In all the demurrers the truth of the facts contained in the in-dictments were admitted but the legal fficiency of the charges were challenged.

A few hours after the court had handed down the decision that the section of the internal revenue law construed by the Government as prohibiting newspapers from publishing income tax payments abridged the freedom of the press and "strode the bill of rights," Mr. Dickey and Mr. Ellis were besieged with tele-grams of congratulations from other newspapers and individuals.

"The decision will have a far reaching effect," Senator Reed, who made a fervid plea in support of the demurrers, said. "If it is sustained it will lay a strong foundation for the protection of the Constitution and, most important of all, the freedom of speech and the press—two of the cardinal principles of our gov-ernment."

Some of the most important sections of the decision follow:

"In the instant case the publications give the names of tax-payers and the amounts paid by them. This information has already been yielded to the public as to list of the tax-payers with the amounts paid had been made available for public inspection.

"But it may be argued that publication is prejudicial to the tax-payers. This may be true, and if the Congress has attempted to suppress all publications, its act probably could have been made effective, but in this case the Congress attempted to regulate the manner of the publication of the lists. This was clearly usurpation of power.

"Moreover, if the enactment is susceptible of the construction given it by counsel for the government, the act would be a clear transgression upon the first amendment to the Constitution, which forbids an abridgment of the freedom of the press. In this view the court is constrained to hold that the enactment is violate of the first amendment to the Constitution and is void in law.

"It is my judgment that the name of the tax-payer and amount paid by him was not considered by the law-makers such an important part of the return as to cover it with the cloak of secrecy. Even if the Congress sought to maintain a measure of secrecy upon this information, it not only exceeded its authority but impinged upon the first amendment to the Constitution."

Although Senator Reed was due in Washington Monday to attend the opening of Congress, he remained, he said, "away from my duties elsewhere, to participate in a case as important as any that ever has been argued before an American Court."

"The indictment imperils the liberties and franchise of the people," Senator Reed said. "If this indictment is sustained and Congress is granted power to say whether we may tell information we have lawfully received, then we have a death blow at the personal liberty on which the constitution was founded—we have a return to the dark ages of silence, tyranny and mutilation and death for the man or woman who would speak his lawful knowledge."

Following are some of the high points in Senator Reed's argument:

"If this indictment can be sustained, there is an end to the liberty of the press.

"If a newspaper owner can be sent to jail for printing the mere fact that John Jones had paid an income tax of $1,000, or any other amount, then it is time to haul down the American flag.

"Mr. Dickey and Mr. Ellis are entitled to the gratitude of our fellow citizens.

"We do not exercise our rights and liberties because they have been conferred on us by the Congress of the United States. We are the source of all power and all authority, and every agency of this government is a mere servant and agent of the people.

"Congress never intended to enact any law and did not enact a law penalizing a newspaper for publishing what is contained in these public lists."

COMPLETE TEXT OF JUDGE A. L. REEVES DECISION UPHOLDING PRESS FREEDOM

FOLLOWING is the complete text of Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves decision sustaining the demurrers of the Kansas City Journal-Post in its trial for publishing income tax returns:

In the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri.

United States of America, Plaintiff, vs. Walter S. Dickey and Ralph Ellis, Defendants.—No. 6812.

On Demurrers to the Indictment:

The indictment in substance, in its several counts, charges the defendants with having made publication in the Kansas City Post of the names and the amount of income tax paid by certain parties. The publication of each separate name, wth the amount paid as an income tax, is set forth in the indictment in separate counts.

It is alleged in the indictment that the names of the parties paying such income tax and the amounts so paid had become, under the law, a matter of public record, and that at the date of publication, to wit, Oct. 24, 1924, "a list of income tax payers within the said collection district containing the name of Frank C. Niles, showing the amount of said income tax, determined as aforesaid, and paid by him to the said Collector of Internal Revenue, was prepared and made available to inspection in the said office of said Collector of Internal Revenue in Kansas City, State of Missouri, aforesaid, for all lawful purposes and in the manner determined by the said Commissioner of Internal Revenue."

The indictment then sets out the specific offense charged by alleging that the list prepared and made available for inspection was "not for the purpose of being printed in newspapers or public prints." In substance the above charge, changed only as to names, is repeated in the other counts in the indictment.

The several demurrers challenge the sufficiency of the indictment for the reason, as stated by the defendants, that the statute upon which it is based, or upon which its sufficiency depends, is a Congressional act attempting to regulate purely local matters, and is beyond the scope of granted Congressional powers and impinges upon the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which forbids the enactment of laws abridging the freedom of the press. Moreover, it is urged that the publication of such lists is inferentially authorized by the Congressional act. In view of these contentions it becomes necessary to examine the Revenue act of 1924 and to consider the law with respect to the privileges of the press.

The pertinent portions of the Congressional act provide that: The Commissioner shall, as soon as practicable in each year, cause to be prepared and made available to public inspection in such manner as he may determine, in the office of the collector in each internal revenue district, and in such other places as he may determine, lists containing the name and the post office address of each person making an income tax return in such district, together with the amount of the income tax paid by such person.

It is both alleged in the indictment and admitted by counsel that the publication was made from this list and contained the data required by the above provision. The indictment, however, is based upon Section 1,018 of the Revenue act, approved June 2, 1924, and particularly a subdivision of said section which was in the law previously and appeared as Section 3,167 of the Revised Statutes. This section says, among other things, that "it shall be unlawful for any person to print or publish in any manner whatever not provided by law any income return, or any part thereof, or source of income, profits, losses or expenditures, appearing in any income return." The First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides that "Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press."

The above, with other pertinent matters, will be discussed in the opinion.

1. Concededly, the Congress has no power save such power as may have been specifically granted to it by the Constitution. The provisions of the Constitution clothe Congress with power, among other things, to impose and collect taxes, and in view of one of the amendments to the Constitution the Congress is given power to enact all necessary legislation to make effective the income tax amendment. It is academic that when clothed with a main or principal power the Congress possesses such incidental power as to enable it to make effective its exercise of the chief power, so that all legislation incidental or germane to the principal power may be enacted and such legislation may to a degree embody regulatory provisions. In making effectual the Income Tax law the Congress would undoubtedly have the power to preserve the secrecy of its taxing operations and to protect tax-payers against harm that

(Continued on page 25)

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for Editor & Publisher)

By Henry Edward Warner

THE PINCH HITTER

Do you know him? . . . He's the fellow who is always on the go,
Who enjoys the tides of struggle as they lift him to and fro,
He's the handiest oil for trouble in the bunch of guys I know—
The pinch hitter.

You can hand him anything from lemons up to apple sauce
And no matter how you fling it, he will catch your little toss;
He's the most convenient Goat there is from Office Boy to Boss—
The pinch hitter.

He appears to know a bit of everything there is to do,
And he's always sharp and ready with a helping hand for you;
You can always let him finish what you couldn't battle through—
The pinch hitter.

He can rewrite, edit copy, clean the office cuspidor,
Write an editorial, make-up, shovel coal or sweep the floor;
It's refreshing how he tackles odds and ends of any chore—
The pinch hitter.

I can see him drifting upward when he meets the common Fate—
I can see the angels fastening a crown upon his pate!
I can hear him say: "Say, Peter, take a rest; I'll mind the Gate!"
The pinch hitter.

You who don't appreciate him, who consider him a mark—
You who think he's just a little fish to feed a hungry shark,
Drive her easy or she'll buck you! . . . and be careful how you park
The pinch hitter.

Here's my hand and my respects, Sir! . . . Here's a hearty cheer for you!
Darn your buttons, while you're doing all the helpful things you do
You are piling up pure glory for the Day when you are through—
You Pinch Hitter!

"Them Was the Good Ol' Days!"

What a Grand and Glorious Time the Telegraph Editors Would Have Had if the Mother Goose Stories Had Been Filed On the Leased News Wires.

By CHET JOHNSON

BULLETIN

LONDON, Dec. 16.—All available mounted first aid regiments, plastic surgeons and physicians in London were called out this morning by a royal proclamation and ordered to devote their efforts to a massed attempt to save the life of a favorite of the royal family, Humpty-Dumpty, who was perhaps fatally injured when he fell early today from a high wall near Buckingham Palace.

—704am—

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16.—Old Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard this morning to get her poor dog a bone. But when she got there the cupboard was bare, so the poor old dog got none. Associated Charities workers are helping the old woman and her dog, both of whom were near death from starvation when found.

—711am—

CORRECTION

EDITORS: In Humpty-Dumpty bulletin near end, make it read "fatally injured when he fell, OR WAS PUSHED, from a high wall, etc.," as sent.

The Mother Goose Press.

—714am—

RENO, Nev., Dec. 16.—Unique grounds for divorce will be set forth in suits to be filed here today by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spratt. In her suit for an interlocutory decree, Mrs. Spratt will contend that her husband will eat no fat meat, thereby "causing her great mental anguish and suffering."

Hearing last night of his wife's contemplated action, Mr. Spratt at once had a counter suit drawn up in which it is charged that Mrs. Spratt made their home life unbearable by continually refusing to eat lean meat.

—723am—

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Jack Smith, 7, is hovering between life and death in a hospital here, and his sister, Jill, 6, is suffering from minor bruises and shock as the result of a peculiar accident early today. Jack and Jill had gone up the hill in back of their home in an outlying district, to get a pail of water. Jack fell down and broke his crown and little Jill, unnerved by seeing her brother fall, also lost her balance and slid down the hill after him.

—728am—

KILL KILL

EDITORS: Kill Reno story Spratt divorce suit. UNVERIFIED and DANGEROUS. Will be sub.

The M. G. P.

—730am—

LONDON (ADD HUMPTY-DUMPTY)—Suspecting that HumptyDumpty had been the victim of foul play, the king has ordered Scotland Yard to investigate his fall.

Members of the royal household said Humpty-Dumpty had apparently been in good health. They scoffed when the theory of attempted suicide was offered as an explanation of Humpty-Dumpty's fall.

—732am—

CORRECTION

EDITORS: In Philadelphia woman and cupboard story eliminate words "OLD MOTHER" and substitute "A MRS. HUBBARD, etc.," as sent. DISRESPECTFUL and LIBELOUS.

The M. G. P.

—734am—

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Dec. 16.—The opening day program of the annual county fair was enlivened this morning by a spirited sparring match just outside the entrance to the fair grounds. The impromptu participants, "Simple" Simon, champion pie-eater of Arizona, and a prominent pie vendor whose name was withheld, were separated by spectators and turned over to the police.

"He hit me first," Simon told the police magistrate. "I was on my way to the fair when I met him. 'Let me taste your ware, mister,' I said. He demanded a penny. I had no money and told him so. Then he pasted me in the nose and I hit back."

Both were fined $15 and released upon their promise not to resume hostilities.

—745am—

CORRECTION

EDITORS: In Simon story eliminate nickname "SIMPLE" and, about 20 from end substitute "STRUCK" for "PASTED" as sent. UNDESIRABLE SLANG.

The M. G. P.

—749am—

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16—(SUB)—Attracted by the barking of a faithful dog that refused to leave its mistress, even though near starvation, field workers for a welfare organization today found an elderly woman, known only to her neighbors as "Mrs. Hubbard" and "Mother Hubbard," near death from lack of food.

Mrs. Hubbard, it was said, had gone to her kitchen this morning in search of a bone for the dog. Finding the cupboard bare, she is reported to have fainted, partly from exhaustion and partly through grief over the discovery that the dog would have to go hungry. Three local butchers have promised to furnish the dog with all the bones the animal wants as a reward for its loyalty and devotion. Mrs. Hubbard is being cared for by the charitable organization.

—757am—

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 16 (FOLLOW HUMPTY-DUMPTY LONDON)—Humpty-Dumpty, court favorite, reported near death as the result of falling from a high wall in London, was for several months last year a member of the local film colony. His last picture, "Flaming Eggs," is now being cut and titled here and will be released in a few weeks.

—805am—

CORRECTION

EDITORS: In Los Angeles follow Humpty-Dumpty eliminate last sentence beginning "His last picture, etc." ADVERTISING.

The M. G. P.

—808am—

HOT SPRINGS, Ark, Dec. 16.—Stories of a wild midnight revel staged by hilarious cats, dogs and a high-jumping cow in the vicinity of Hey Diddle Diddle, near here, are being investigated today.

Weird accounts of the purported party were told this morning by t claiming to have been witnesses of the orgy.

"I could see them plainly from my bedroom window," said one resident. of the cats was playing a fiddle. Suddenly a cow started dancing to th music. As I watched them, hardly believing my eyes, the cow jumped righ the moon! A little dog started laughing at the sport. Then I heard some motion in my wife's silver chest and saw a dish run away with a spoon coaxed from the chest!"

The scene of the revel, those claiming to have been witnesses said, w spot where a duel to death was fought by two rum-runners several years ag

—816am—

LONDON (ADD HUMPTY-DUMPTY)—An hour after the body was attending surgeons and physicians announced they entertained little hope f recovery of Humpty-Dumpty. The force of the fall from the high wall had b the body into several pieces, some of which were found several yards fro torso of the victim.

—822am—

KILL KILL

EDITORS: In last add Humpty-Dumpty eliminate last sentence referri condition of victim's body. GRUESOME and UNNECESSARY.

The M. G. P

—828am—

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 16.—Hundreds of women awaiting the arriv a ferry at the new Hickory Dickory dock here were thrown into a panic at yesterday when a mouse ran across the waiting room and into the big Hardly had the frightened women collected their wits, when the big clock s one and the mouse ran down and across the floor again.

—831am—

KILL KILL

EDITORS: Kill Baltimore mouse story. TRIVIAL.

The M. G. P

—833am—

CORRECTION

EDITORS: In Jack and Jill story about 75 down, make it read: ". fell down and SUSTAINED WHAT PHYSICIANS DIAGNOSED A COMPOUND FRACTURE OF THE SKULL," not "broke his crown" as

The M. G. P

—841am—

RENO, Nev., Dec. 16—(SUB)—Jack Spratt would eat no fat; his wife w eat no lean. They frequently quarreled across the family board and at last de it would be best to separate, each to eat as he or she desired. The Spratts ar in Reno last night to launch divorce proceedings.

But after the court had called their attention this morning to the fact their divergent tastes for meat really meant a reduction in the amount of wasted and would serve to cut down the high cost of living, Mr. and Spratt forgave each oher, embraced and walked arm in arm from the c promising that in the future they would eat the platters clean, betwixt and bet them, and quarrel no more.

—853am—

KILL KILL

EDITORS: Kill Hot Springs animal revels story. EXAGGERATED IMPOSSIBLE.

The M. G. P.

—858am—

BELGRADE, July 5 (MAIL CORRESPONDENCE)—The secret of late King Cole's longevity has been found in old court documents, recently covered. When the merry old monarch felt his years, the documents reveal would call for his pipe, his bowl, and his fiddlers three.

—904am—

CORRECTION

EDITORS: In King Cole story make end of last sentence ". . . and THREE MOST ACCOMPLISHED VIOLINISTS."

The M. G. P.

—907am—

LONDON, Dec. 16 (LEAD ALL HUMPTY-DUMPTY)—Shoulders dr in royal purple and shoulders draped in rags were bowed with grief today the passing of one of the empire's most beloved characters, Humpty-Dum favorite alike of royal households and the most humble homes.

Humpty-Dumpty fell from a high wall near Buckingham Palace early to Although all the king's horses and all the king's men were massed in a last mi stand against death, efforts to keep burning the tiny spark of life that flick through the badly mangled body of the once jovial court favorite were unavail The theory of foul play was dissipated by later evidence that firmly establi that Humpty-Dumpty's fall from the wall had been entirely accidental.

A second tragedy was narrowly averted when the Prince of Wales, ridin the scene of the accident at top speed, was thrown from his mount. He esca however, with slight injuries, and continued to the hospital on foot after as taining that his horse was not hurt.

THIRTY

NEXT WEEK—Filing the Bible

New York Herald Tribune Aids Blind

The New York Herald Tribune is staging a benefit theatrical performance Dec. 7, in co-operation with Flo Ziegfeld at the Selwyn Theatre to help its radio fund for the blind. The Herald Tribune has already raised more than $10,000 for the fund, which was inaugurated by the American Radio Association to be used for installing a radio set in every blind person's home. Newspapers throughout the country are co-operating.

Seested Wins Libel Suit

Frank C. Seested, circulation manager of the Kansas City Star, was awarded $1 damages in his suit against F. G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post and former owner of the Kansas City Post, asking $200,000 for alleged libel. The suit was filed in 1921 and claimed damages for articles published in the Post prior to the present ownership.

To Discuss "Is the Press Kept?"

"Is the Press Kept?" is the subject he discussed at a dinner to be given The Nation at the Fifth Avenue Rest rant, 200 Fifth avenue, New York, day, Dec. 12. Speakers will be Herl Bayard Swope, executive editor of New York World; Ernest Gruening, mer managing editor of the Boston Tr eler, the Boston Journal, and later ass ated with the New York Tribune, William G. Shepherd, of Collier's Wee Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of Nation, will preside.

Preparing Second A. B. C. Blue Bo

The second edition of the Periodi Publishers' A. B. C. Blue Book will issued on Feb. 15, containing the P lishers' statements of circulation of ma zines and periodicals, agricultural a business publications for the period e ing Dec. 31, 1924.

Newspaper Advertising
The Kind That Is Read

Through the Detroit News it is possible to reach practically every one in this great territory —a feat unequaled by any other medium, newspaper or otherwise, in any city of Detroit's size.

NEWSPAPERS record the immediate. A week old journal may be a welcome visitor in an Alaskan mining camp, but today's news today is the demand of the modern man or woman. And who postpones the reading of Wednesday's paper until Friday? That is why newspaper advertising is the most direct method known for increasing sales. The newspaper has to be read—advertising as well as "reading matter" for advertising in the newspaper is news in a very great sense. No housewife would admit passing by the advertising of her sources of supply. It would be tantamount to an admission of inefficiency, waste and extravagance. The newspaper is the first shopping guide of every responsible citizen as it is the first guide in politics and in general knowledge. Use the newspaper to cover the Detroit field.

The Detroit News

Greatest Circulation Week Day or Sunday in Michigan

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

As an active member of the New York Yacht Club, Mr. Bennett took a prominent part in the Club's cruise and races. Frequent discussions as to the yachts' seaworthiness, and ability to go on long voyages, finally led up to the famous winter yacht race across the stormy Atlantic ocean. George and Frank Osgood bet Pierre Lorillard, Jr., and others $30,000 that their yacht, the "Fleetwing," could beat the latter's yacht "Vesta" in such a contest. The challenge was promptly accepted and the stakes of $60,000 cash put up. Mr. Bennett and some of his friends then made up a cash fund of $30,000, and the "Henrietta" was duly entered as the third competitor.

The three yachts were towed down from the upper bay, accompanied by a steamboat crowded with the elite of New York society, eager to see the start of this unique and thrilling race in cockle shell boats through raging winter seas. James Gordon Bennett, Jr., was conspicuous on the deck of the "Henrietta," cap in hand, acknowledging the greetings from those on the steamer, with a politeness that "excited fresh outbursts of enthusiasm."

The start took place at 1 p. m., on Dec. 11, 1866. Captain Samuels was second in command of the "Henrietta," and possessed special qualifications for the job, as he was the most dare-devil skipper that ever sailed a packet ship, and had broken all records by driving the old "Dreadnought" across the Atlantic in 13 days, 8 hours, from New York to Liverpool! The sailing master was Martin J. Lyons, already noted for his skill, while there were 14 able seamen and eleven others in the crew, including two cooks, one of them being a hotel chef, specially hired for the voyage. The yacht's larder was stocked with the choicest of viands, while lockers full of wines, liquors and cigars provided stimulation for all aboard. As old Cap. Lyons once remarked:

"We lived high, with the best of everything to eat and drink, including the choice Chateau Margaux wine, stored aboard by the case. Cigars a plenty for everybody aft, and free pipes and tobacco for all for'ard."

The "Henrietta" led at the start and the yachts soon lost sight of one another, and so continued for the entire voyage, due to their following different courses. The "Henrietta" had a stormy passage, but due to skilful handling met with no mishap, except that in a gale, a great wave broke the cabin skylight. The "Fleetwing" was less fortunate, losing several of her men overboard. Mr. Bennett went on regular watch with the officers, taking more than his share of the strenuous duty on deck, in freezing weather, with great waves dashing over the rail, and through all the discomforts of a winter voyage.

The "Henrietta" won the race, passing the Needles on December 25, and anchored opposite Osborne House, at Cowes, Isle of Wight, where Queen Victoria was then staying for a few days. The Royal Yacht Club fired a salute of eleven guns in honor of the victor, while on arriving, her crew gave three hearty cheers and a "tiger" for the "Henrietta," Mr. Bennett and Captain Samuels. She had made the voyage in the remarkably short time of 13 days, 21 hours and 55 minutes, and congratulations poured in on the lucky owner from all sides. The other yachts came trailing in many hours after the winner. Queen Victoria, who was deeply interested in such a daring race, viewed the yachts from the shore and waved her handkerchief at the "Henrietta."

A grand banquet was given at Cowes on December 29 in honor of the yacht owners, and later Mr. Bennett and Commodore McVickar of the New York Yacht Club had a personal interview with the Queen and afterward dined with the Duke of Edinburgh, when a match race between the "Henrietta" and the Duke's yacht, the "Viking" was discussed.

Mr. Bennett at the banquet, on rising to respond to the toast "To the Winner," was received with repeated acclamation, and in a few brief sentences expressed his thanks for the great and generous kindness with which he had been received:

"The reception they had met with was unspeakably gratifying, and such as none of the American gentlemen who accompanied him ever dreamed of. I shall always cherish a grateful recollection of your kindness."

Mr. Bennet with characteristic prodigality, offered his yacht, complete, with all her equipment as a New Year's gift to the Duke (Prince Alfred), but the latter declined the offer, saying he could not accept such a costly present, and trusted that the famous yacht might long continue in the hands in which she had accomplished such a triumphant success.

Mr. Bennett then announced his readiness to accept a challenge to sail a race with any yacht on that side of the Atlantic. He later proceeded to Paris, where he was a guest at the grand ball given by Emperor Napoleon and Empress Eugenie at the Tuilleries, on the night of Jan. 16, 1867. Mr. Bennett was presented to the Emperor by Major General D United States Minister to France.

"Ah," said the Emperor, in very good English, "I have been ve much interested in the yacht race and congratulate you, Sir, upon yo success. Was it not rather a bold experiment?"

"All experiments are bold, Your Majesty," replied Mr. Bennett.

The Emperor smiled one of his grim, sphinx-like smiles, and look at Mr. Bennett as if half doubting whether he had not received a use suggestion with a valuable moral from the young yachtsman.

The Empress greeted Mr. Bennett very graciously, asking: "Was dangerous, your voyage?"

Bennett replied that it probably seemed more dangerous to tho who heard and read of it, than it did to those on board, to which t Empress replied:

"I should not feel inclined to take such a trip, but hope to pay a vi to your yacht."

Mr. Bennett was entertained at a complimentary dinner given by l American friends on the following evening. Major General Dix bei present, and great enthusiasm was manifested. Mr. Bennett, on risin was greeted with storms of cheers, continuing several minutes.

(To be continued next week)

MORNING PAPERS THE GET ACTION SAME DAY

FOOD

CONSISTENT with the growth of food advertising, The Enquirer has kept pace—and presents the following interesting data to agencies, food manufacturers, canners and packers.

1st A daily circulation which covers the upper and the big, strong middle classes—the classes that earn 82% of the total income of Cincinnati.

2nd Editorial cooperation and food chats, menus, etc., in our "Home Forum" that has widespread interest.

3rd Cooking school and demonstration as to balanced food values, etc., for which we hire the largest hall in the city—and still turn many, many women away.

4th Grocers, delicatessens and druggists follow Enquirer leads—and read "The Merchandiser" for news of advertising appearing or scheduled.

5th The Enquirer comes closest to bringing manufacturer, dealer and consumer together in the Cincinnati market.

I. A. KLEIN
Chicago
New York

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market Street
San Francisco

The CINCINNATI ENQUIRER

One of the World's Greatest Newspapers

ONE CENT A LINE

For Each 6,000 of Circulation
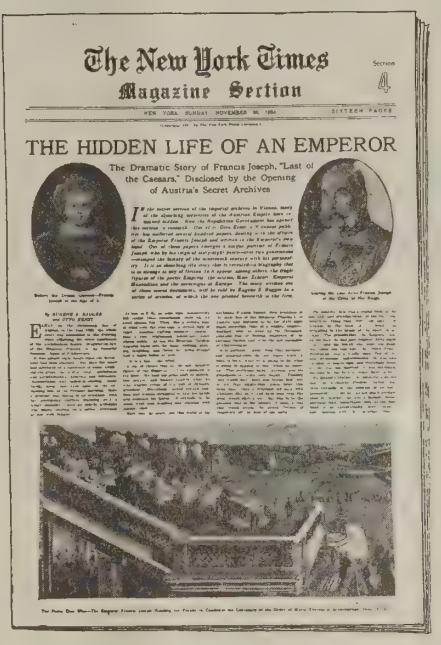
For the Best Type of Circulation and in A Newspaper Magazine Printed in Rotogravure

THE NEW YORK TIMES MAGAZINE SECTION



ORDERS FROM 13 STATES

December 3, 1924.

The New York Times:

I want to express my appreciation of the value of advertising in the Magazine Section of The New York Times. I sell a specially cured Virginia Ham, prepared after my own recipe, which I have never before advertised. An advertisement of 42 lines in the Magazine Section of November 2, 1924, brought me orders for 50 hams ranging from ten to fifteen pounds each, at 75c a pound, plus parcel post carriage. Orders reached me from thirteen states and are still arriving, even from California.

HUGH R. MILLAR,
Front Royal, Va.

The New York Times
Magazine Section
Section 4
NEW YORK, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1924 SIXTEEN PAGES
THE HIDDEN LIFE OF AN EMPEROR
The Dramatic Story of Francis Joseph, "Last of the Caesars," Disclosed by the Opening of Austria's Secret Archives

RESULTS EXCEEDED EXPECTATIONS

December 4, 1924.

The New York Times:

The results from our advertisement in the Magazine Section of the Sunday edition of The New York Times of Nov. 2 were most gratifying and exceeded our expectations. We had been opposed to magazine advertising, as we had never been able to trace any direct results, but this time we got what we were looking for—direct results in our store sales department, and our mail orders are continuing to pour in to us daily.

We will make use of The Times Magazine Section again when we advertise our horticultural goods.

The Macniff Horticultural Co., Inc., Robert W. Macniff, 196 Greenwich St., New York.

The Magazine Section of the Sunday edition of The New York Times has the lowest rotogravure advertising rate per thousand in the United States—and this for a circulation of the highest quality—Times quality.

It has a net paid sale of more than 600,000 copies, over 400,000 of which are bought in the metropolitan district and within 150 miles of New York. Its distribution in and outside this zone is in 9,000 cities and towns in every state.

The Magazine, a wire-stitched tabloid section, is part of the Sunday edition of The Times—a newspaper bought and read for news and information to be had in no other publication, and it is a magazine with a New York interest.

The quality of its articles is that of the highest class magazines, and it has the additional advantage of following fresh upon the news. Its illustrations are in rotogravure, the most beautiful of printing processes.

Advertisers get prompt and large results —the final proof!

Advertising rate $1.00 an agate line, $1030 a page; one cent a line for each 6,000 circulation. Lowest advertising rate for best quality of magazine circulation.

RENAUD ATTACKS NEWSPAPER CYNIC MYTH

Cynical News Man Doesn't Exist, Says N. Y. Herald Tribune Veteran, Who Maintains That a Bored Indifferent Attitude Defeats Success—Kindly, Humorous Outlook Is Best, He Holds

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

AN eraser was put to good use the other day by Ralph E. Renaud, assistant managing editor of the New York Herald Tribune.

"There's no such thing as a cynical newspaper man," he said, applying his eraser.

It was a mystic eraser, quite invisible and quite magical, too.

Mr. Renaud, in his own convincing, and at the same time whimsical way, had simply taken a philosophical bit of artgum from his brain pocket to delete one word from the stereotyped and hackneyed description of a newspaper man.

And, during the subsequent conversation, he continued to erase much of the unpleasantness from newspaper work, making the business seem, as it should, one of the choicest professions ever invented by man. He did a neat job, leaving no ugly traces.

The first sweep of the rubber made "cynical" with all its connotations disappear.

"But—" I who was the sole witness to the procedure attempted to remonstrate.

"Oh, of course they may think they are cynical," he interrupted. "They usually do—especially the young ones."

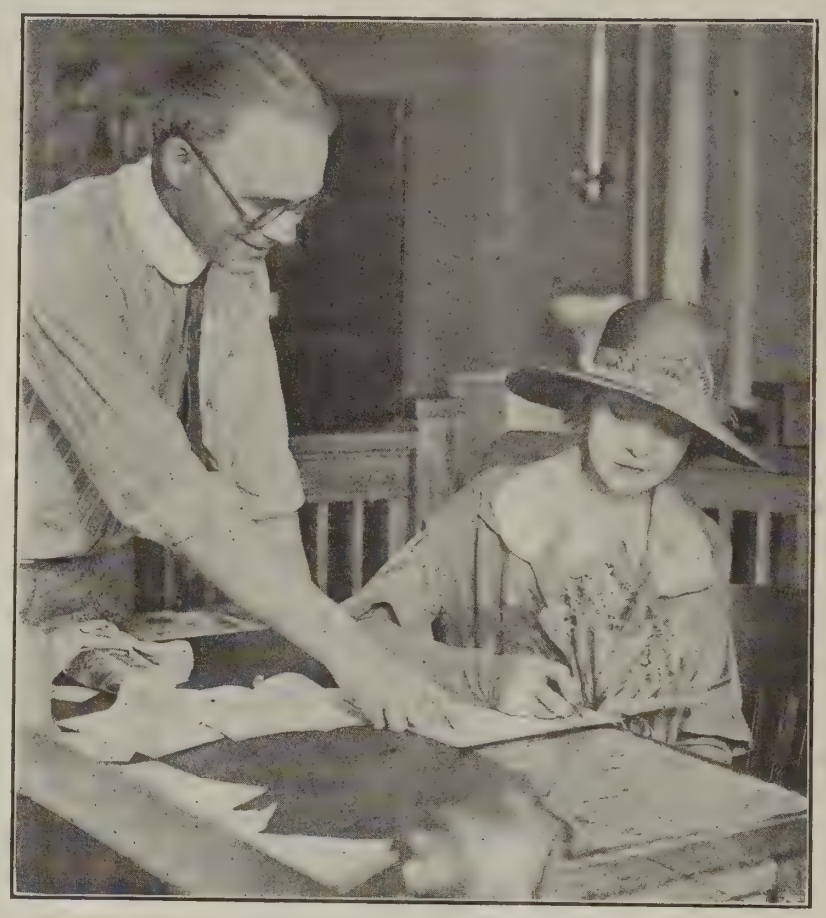
"And they may be hard-boiled. They usually are—if they've been in hot water often enough. And they can't afford to be gullible.

"But cynic implies boredom, misanthropy, disinterest. Cynic means one who is contemptuous from the height of an imagined superiority.

"A newspaper man who is bored with life, people or events, or feels inclined to look down upon and sneer at them, might as well step down and out. A newspaper man to succeed must remain interested in everything. He must keep his mind active and, I suppose, his arteries unhardened."

Renaud's conversation is dawn-colored, full of optimism. Words come from him like clouds, reflecting a rainbow. He is perhaps, the Herald Tribune's happiest, handiest, handy-man. For eight years he has been on the job there, ready and willing to take over any assignment given him. Recently he conducted Don Marquis' column, "The Lantern" and filled the bill to a turn. He has been copy reader, too, and reporter on occasion, while continuing to function as assistant to Julian Mason, managing editor. His daily running comment at the time of the Republican and Democratic National Conventions attracted considerable attention.

"I believe," he said to the writer once, "in putting as much human nature as possible into our newspapers, instead of having them a mere coldly formal resume of the news—putting it right through the headlines and captions down into the body type.



"One touch of nature, you know," he quoted, "makes the whole world grin."

"A newspaper, I think, should develop a kindly, humorous attitude towards life. Humor is merely a quick perception of incongruities. And that's just another way of saying 'a sense of proportion.'

"Men and women are vastly more interested in the healthy reactions of other men and women than they are in the putrid details of the latest scandal. And when you really try to write your news for living, breathing men and women instead of for mere automatic, or synthetic readers who want nothing but the wrung dry facts, you are going to make a friendly and attractive newspaper.

"Reporters to my mind should be more than just go-getters. They should have a mellowed, even something approaching a universal outlook, far from cynicism, and a measure of taste which can only be described as 'quality.'

"Executives on newspapers, I often think, have as close a contact with human nature, though a different one, as reporters do. And it would be interesting if they would emerge from behind the cloak of anonymity to write more often under their signatures—if they can pry a signature out of the night desk. A reporter reveals what he gets from his exterior contacts, while an executive might reveal some of the inner convictions and opinions distilled from years of more or less silent observation. After all, there is no reason why the men who put the paper together every day instead of writing it, ought not to say something themselves occasionally. The reporters, who hear them in the sanctum, say they know how to make it snappy.

Ralph E. Renaud shows Miss Lillian Gish.

"Briefs and short stories should be handled as carefully as the bigger stories each day. An editor, I believe, should see to it he has a most capable and sympathetic re-write staff. He should strive to give all copy that comes into his office a touch that belongs distinctly to his newspaper. Of course he can't do this at the expense of the news, because news must be thoroughly digested, freely and accurately reported and well displayed.

"But, where a paper could be made a mere record of what has happened—a sort of 'minutes of the meeting' affair—it ought to be a mirror of color as well as form."

Here Renaud interrupted himself to protest his own optimism.

"I don't mean to imply," he said, "that the present fades in comparison with the good old days. Not a bit of it. The newspapers of today are better than ever before. They are much more finished, more suavely sure, more poised, more complete. The pompous, florid, verbose style of writing is fortunately almost gone.

"The newspaper is the average man's university; and the newspaper of today is reflecting the present tendencies of the more formal universities. It is endeavoring to humanize its curriculum.

"No university nowadays is content to stuff its students with the mere dry bones of fact. They try their best to give the students the full significance of what they teach, set in its proper relation with the world in which we live.

"More and more, it seems, newspapers are using this subtle educative force, while realizing their responsibility fully.

"Of course their relation towards readers is not that of a teacher. Spare us from a didactic newspaper! Rather they are becoming like amiable friends. If an editor expects his newspaper to qualify as its readers' companion, he must watch his readers and study them.

"Put yourself in your readers' place. You know your readers, or the type at least you would like to have.

"Give them what they want to read, the way they want to read it."

"The same old impossible order," I objected. But Renaud was ready with reply.

"It is not impossible," he said, "to ke in close contact with your readers." recognized again the use of Renau eraser as he continued:

"Make your readers your companio Make your newspaper talk as you wou to a companion of your own so There's no earthly reason for being ow ishly dull, when you can just as well gay and pleasant.

"It naturally depends upon the edit an editor who has the so-called instinct an instinct probably acquired. 'I say 'a quired' because if he doesn't acquire he hasn't got it—and that's that.

"Such an editor is probably nothi more or less than a man or woman wi average active intelligence, vitally i terested in the many sides of life vibrantly interested.

"An editor who works on rules is fool or a nut. If it were possible chart editorship, you could teach it twelve lessons from a correspondenc school.

"But after all the circulation of mo ern newspapers represents an average i telligence constantly turning in fresh i terest to countless things.

"The more an editor can box the com pass of interest, the more effective he and the closer he comes to his reader The interests of an editor should be om nivorous, from science to sport. H must not keep his nose too close to h desk or he will lose the scent. Instea he should be troubled as much by an i stinctive groping for what is going t happen as for what has happened.

"If I were young again," he dreame "and wanted to become an editor, would cultivate an interest in every hu man being I met and every movement encountered either in life or in books

"And to repeat, a newspaper man wh is bored with life, people, or event might as well step out and follow hi natural bent, whatever it is, street clear ing or digging ditches."

Renaud, happily, practices as well a preaches. While newspaper work itsel remains his chief interest, he has kep that interest alive by delving into othe professions, chiefly dramatic.

A product of Washington, D. C., h stuck his inquisitive nose into govern mental offices of the capital, while still i high school, as a reporter in the Wash ington Bureau of the New York Tribune This was in 1899, and thus, although h worked on other newspapers afterward Renaud claims to be one of the oldes living employes of Ogden M. Reid's daily

From Washington, Renaud journeye across the continent to complete his edu cation at Leland Stanford, Jr., Univer sity. While in college he was editor o

(Continued on Page 28)

The Business Men

of your community will value the authentic statements of

ROGER W. BABSON

on the business and financial situation, above any other single piece of news that you can print.

Supplied weekly through the Babson News Service, Publisher's Financial Bureau, Babson Park, Mass.

SPECIMEN RELEASES AND RATES ON REQUEST

CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER VETERANS ORGANIZE OLD TIMERS CLUB

Forty Three Men and Women With More Than 20 Years' Service Are Members—Erie Hopwood Named President

FORTY-THREE men and two women who have served the Cleveland Plain Dealer for 20 years or more gathered around a banquet table at the Hollenden Hotel the evening of Nov. 25, and organized the "Old Timers' Club."

Some of the diners began working for newspapers before many of the present reporters, advertising solicitors and printers were born.

To the spirit of the Plain Dealer organization and the formation of the club, Albert H. Baker, president; George M. Rogers, general manager, and Erie C. Hopwood, editor, paid tribute.

"I do not believe there is a newspaper in America that can produce 45 men and women who have the intelligence, the good looks, the energy and the companionship of this crowd," Mr. Baker said in addressing the group.

Mr. Rogers, in his speech, declared that "most of the trouble in this world is caused because people do not know each other."

"We have come to the realization of the human equation—that folk are folk and not pieces of mechanism. The old conception of a great personality overshadowing the newspaper organization is past. The Plain Dealer has reached its place today because we all had faith in our proposition, stuck to it day by day, and were willing to make all manner of sacrifices to see it through, no matter in what department."

Miss Martha Dickinson, cashier, one of the two women members; U. W. Hird, credit manager; and V. C. Post, day composing room foreman, were also among the speakers.

Election of officers resulted in the winning of E. C. Hopwood, president; John Hoffman, first vice-president; J. H. (Jack) Milis, second vice-president; William G. Vorpe, secretary, and George R. Agate, treasurer.

The festivities started with a skit, in which Messrs. Hopwood, Hird, Vorpe, Mills, Henry P. Edwards, H. D. Ashby, W. R. Rose, and Archer H. Shaw took part. Mr. Hopwood, in knee pants, red wig, toy balloons, and mouth harp, assumed the role of the stammering neophyte who sought admittance to the effete club. Mr. Rose was "Old Man P. D.," with waist length whiskers and ecclesiastical delivery. Ashby, Hird and Shaw represented the "Bull Dog," all Ohio and 7 o'clock editions, and Vorpe, Edwards and Mills were corporals of the guard.

From left to right: William G. Vorpe, Sunday and feature editor; Jack Mills, assistant foreman of the mechanical department; Arthur H. Shaw, chief editorial writer; W. R. Rose, associate editor; U. W. Hird, credit manager; H. P. Ashby, superintendent of the mechanical department; E. C. Hopwood, editor in chief; Henry P. Edwards, sporting editor.

The club consists of the following persons (length of service in years follows name): H. D. Ashby, 29; Mort Moeder, 27; J. H. Mills, 36; F. E. Hoffman, 39; F. C. Mason, 28; V. C. Post, 37; W. S. Wanner, 39; F. D. Cass, 32; J. D. Schlabach, 21; C. M. Beerer, 20; E. S. Houghton, 22; William Grob, 21; Louis Rasch, 39; F. W. McKearney, 39; C. E. Snedeker, 32; E. W. Ingraham, 22; A. G. Chipchase, 26; H. F. Helms, 21; H. W. Longsdorf, 32; H. S. Fudge, 22; C. C. Sharpe, 27; John Zimmer, 20; E. C. Hopwood, 22; A. J. Craig, 32; H. P. Edwards, 23; A. H. Shaw, 22; C. T. Robertson, 23; W. R. Rose, 28; W. G. Vorpe, 23; J. H. Donahey, 24; U. W. Hird, 26; Mrs. Tilla Neff, 24; J. J. Kirk, 25; R. S. Piper, 20; Thomas Gebbie, 21; F. Berry, 21; George Riegler, 21; John Hoffman, 25; Fred Uhl, 23; Walter Frey, 22; George R. Agate, 39; E. H. Baker, 26; George M. Rogers, 26; Martha L. Dickinson, 21; Fred Reigler, 20.

DAILY PAPERS FROM OTHER CITIES
HOTALING'S NEWS STAND
BROADWAY AND 43RD ST.
NORTH END THE TIMES BUILDING

"Perhaps the most cosmopolitan spot in New York City is Forty-third Street and Broadway . . . Here is a mammoth news stand which sells newspapers from every city in the world. . . . Every town has similar stands, but none as huge as this, and none as varied and as picturesque in its patronage."
—Boston Transcript, Oct. 29, 1921.

HOTALING'S NEWS AGENCY, 308 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK

Experience
The Best Teacher

Has taught American exporters that the best advertising medium in Japan is

THE JIJI SHIMPO

時事新報

The explanation is readily apparent to all who have examined carefully the comparative status of newspapers in Japan. There are journals which cater to one political party, to the literati, to gay circles and even to the rikisha men and coolies. But The Jiji Shimpo is known throughout Japan as the Empire's foremost NEWSpaper and the favorite in business circles. The Jiji's circulation is greatest among prosperous Japanese. Its typical readers are found among those progressive Japanese who lead the way in the introduction of foreign goods in our country. To interest them is the foreign salesman's first requirement.

J. P. Barry, an authority on Far Eastern advertising, represents the Jiji in the American field. Mr. Barry is thoroughly equipped to assist you in planning your advertising campaign in Japan, and will take pleasure in serving you in every possible way. Communicate with him at

JAPAN ADVERTISER SUITE
342 Madison Avenue New York City

THE JIJI SHIMPO
Tokyo

"In Japan, the Buyers Read The Jiji"

N. Y. PICTURE EDITORS HAIL RADIO PHOTOS

"Most Wonderful Newspaper Innovation of This Age"—Mirror Issued Extra on Receipt of First Prints

Photoradiograms, the Ranger invention of the Radio Corporation of America, successfully tested Nov. 30, between London and New York, were hailed as the "greatest newspaper innovation of the age", by picture editors of New York this week.

"The day of news in pictures—of more pictures and less text, from every part of the world is rapidly approaching", declared Charles M. Graves, editor of the New York Times Sunday Rotogravure and the Times Mid-Week Pictorial.

"It has been on the way from many directions for months, even years. It has been in the air all around us, and every editor who thinks in terms of pictures knew and felt it.

"The recent remarkable transmission of photographs across the Atlantic is just one step—a long one—forward. It isn't perfect yet and won't be for some time to come. But it will come in perfected form eventually, just like the telephone and telegraph."

Picture editors of New York's three daily tabloid illustrated newspapers, were particularly enthusiastic in regard to the new invention.

"The importance the Daily Mirror attaches to the radio reproduction of pictures is illustrated by the fact that we issued an extra on receipt of the first prints and were the first newspaper in the world to appear on the street with the subject," A. W. Elliott, picture editor, said.

"This paper also was the first in America to publish the likenesses of the principals in the recent English blackmail case and I am certain had it been possible at the time, we would have welcomed radio pictures in advance of the real thing.

"The heightened competition resulting from the rapidly expanding picture paper field and mechanical improvements in the process will make radio reproductions both common and cheap within five years, in my opinion, color reproductions will also come soon."

Ryan Walker, picture editor of the New York Evening Graphic, went even further in his predictions.

"It will absolutely revolutionize the picture world within a few years", he said.

"Naturally when it it more developed, the invention will be of tremendous value to the picture papers", said William J. White, picture editor of the New York Daily News. "As it stands now portraits are reproduced better than news pictures; and what we need is rapid transmission of detailed news scenes, which will tell a real story."

"The most wonderful newspaper innovation of the age", was the comment of Martin Casey, picture editor of the New York American for the past ten years. He called attention to a comparison made in his newspaper between the telephotograph of President Coolidge wired to New York from Cleveland and the same photograph transmitted by radio from London.

"I noticed very little difference between the two", he declared. "The most striking difference being that the photoradiogram was made up of wavy lines and the telephotograph of straight lines.

"The invention is still in its infancy", he concluded. "But I look for perfection in the early future."

A more pessimistic attitude was taken from the rotogravure viewpoint. While admitting it was a great benefit to publishers of black and white pictures, Richard Clark, the New York World rotogravure editor, declared that photoradiograms must "go a long, long way beyond what they have so far to aid the roto editors."

Frank A. Eaton, rotogravure editor of the New York Herald Tribune, said: "It is only 25 per cent perfect now; the photoradiogram must become 75 per cent perfect, at least, before it will be of any value to rotogravure editors."

"Editors of rotogravure sections", he pointed out, "were looking for better pictures all the time, considering their perfection often rather than their timeliness."

COMPLETES 30 YEARS' SERVICE

Alliance (O.) Review Staff Fetes Hoiles —Veteran Woman Writer Honored

ALLIANCE, Ohio, Dec. 2.—Thirty years ago, on Dec. 1, 1894, Frank A. Hoiles assumed the management of the Alliance (O.) Review, Alliance's only newspaper.

MISS F. B. C. PAXSON

In the 30 years four rival papers have been absorbed by the Review leaving it alone in the field as a daily since 1915.

On the evening of his 30th anniversary, Mr. Hoiles played host to 60 of the plant employes and their families at his home in South Union avenue. A gold watch with a solid gold make-up rule as a charm was presented to Mr. Hoiles.

Closely linked with Mr. Hoiles in the development of the Alliance Review we Miss Fannie B. C. Paxson, for 35 ye a reporter, and R. E. Morris, pressm for 38 years. The three—veterans of t craft in Alliance—are still in harness.

If all the personals written by M Paxson in her long career would tacked end to end they would encircle t globe several times. It's harder to 'em now, though, Miss Paxson says. fore the automobile came Miss Paxso beat at the railway station was a ri field for personals.

A. A. C. W. Advertises Advertising

The Associated Advertising Clubs the World has completed a new series advertisements advertising advertisi They will be ready for distribution newspapers shortly, it was announced.

Becomes 7-Day Paper

The Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel has sta ed a Monday morning edition, maki that newspaper a 7-day paper.

In New Orleans it's THE ITEM

THE POTTSVILLE REPUBLICAN

Net paid A. B. C. Circulation* Guaranteed—12,589 copies per day.

POTTSVILLE MORNING PAPER

Net Paid A. B. C. Circulation* Guaranteed—3,354 copies per day.

Covering Pottsville and Schuylkill Counties—the greatest coal region in the world—with a diversity of industrial interests absolutely second to none in any busy city on this Continent of 25,000 population. The center of a market area embracing more than 100,000 people within a six mile radius of the city of Pottsville.

Here the Reading and the Pennsylvania Railroads have busy shops, active train dispatching points, splendid passenger service, and with the Lehigh Valley, Jersey Central, Lehigh & New England, Delaware & Hudson, Lackawanna and other nearby railroad traffic connections give the Pottsville section unsurpassed freight and passenger railroad facilities.

Pottsville and Schuylkill Counties have nine daily newspapers—a situation that does not exist the world over—and of these papers the Pottsville Morning Paper and the Evening Republican easily lead the procession with more bona fide net paid circulation than all the others combined.

The Only Two A. B. C. Papers in the Entire Section

COVER RICH POTTSVILLE FIELD COMPLETELY

By Using the

POTTSVILLE MORNING PAPER

and

POTTSVILLE EVENING REPUBLICAN

In Combination

J. H. ZERBEY, Editor and Proprietor

*A.B.C. Publishers' Statement for 3 months ending Sept. 30, 1924

Ludlow Helps Sell Display Advertising

IF you have a Ludlow in your plant and your competitor has none—you have the big advantage; but, if your competitor uses a Ludlow and you do not—he has the big advantage over you.

This big advantage the Ludlow system creates is one that takes into consideration the interests of the advertiser. With the Ludlow system you can cast an unlimited quantity of display type-on-slugs as you need it, and with printing faces that are always new. This means clean, sharp, clearly-printed ads in every edition—ads that please the advertiser and create favorable impressions upon the reader.

In the matter of type sizes and selection of faces you can, with the Ludlow, always give your advertiser what he wants. It never becomes necessary to procure additional supplies of single type that quickly become worn and battered, nor to tell your advertiser that he cannot have what he wants because the type matter is tied up in some other form."

The Decatur (Illinois) Review writes:

"We have received many pleasing comments from numerous large advertisers upon the splendid set-ups we are able to give them because of the Ludlows. This is evidenced by the fact that practically every large advertiser in the city sends his copy to the Review for the original set-up."

The Ludlow system offers a wide range of beautiful, well-proportioned typefaces from 6 to 60 point, including bold and extended. It is absolutely the fastest system for setting run-of-the-hook display copy.

We will gladly tell you more about the Ludlow system for increasing the advertising value of your paper.

Ludlow Typograph Co.

2032 Clybourn Avenue

San Francisco Hearst Bldg. CHICAGO World Bldg. New York

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

"DIVERSITY"

KEY TO SOUTH'S PROSPERITY

The South, with its great wealth of natural resources, with which it could house, feed and clothe the world, offers a market, unequalled and unsurpassed.

The turn from the growing of cotton alone to diversified crops has affected not only every phase of human endeavor in the South, but has been felt throughout the nation.

Although given a place of secondary importance, the revenue from the cotton crop is still of gigantic proportion. For the last ten years the value of the cotton crop has been $13,406,883,000, or approximately two and one-half times the value of the world's gold and silver production, for the same period.

The great purchasing power of the South is not limited to its agricultural resources. The enormous production of its mines, forests, manufacturing enterprises, live stock industry, fishing and oystering swell this power to a staggering total.

The daily newspapers of the South will help you establish yourself in this most promising market.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA
Birmingham Age-Herald (M)	33,184	.08	.08
Birmingham Age-Herald (S)	41,448	.10	.10
Birmingham News (E)	76,312	.18	.18
Birmingham News (S)	86,185	.18	.18
Mobile News-Item (E)	11,722	.05	.05
Mobile Register (M)	20,824	.07	.07
Mobile Register (S)	33,130	.085	.086
FLORIDA
Daytona Daily News (ES)	2,648	.03	.03
Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville (M&S)	37,564	.10(S.12)	.10(S.12)
Miami Herald (M)	18,300	.06	.06
Miami Herald (S)	21,681	.07	.07
Orlando Sentinel (M&S)	4,473	.035	.035
†St. Petersburg Independent (E)	6,007	.04	.04
Tampa Times (E)	15,176	.05	.05
Tampa Tribune (M&S)	24,783	.07(.08S)	.06(.07S)
GEORGIA
Augusta Herald (E)	15,095	.05	.05
Augusta Herald (S)	15,554	.05	.05
Macon Telegraph (M)	26,822	.07	.07
Macon Telegraph (S)	27,376	.07	.07
Savannah Morning News (M), 21,372. (S)	22,671	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
Lexington Leader (E)	19,395	.06	.06
Lexington Leader (S)	19,368	.05	.05
Paducah Sun (E)	8,616	.04	.04
NORTH CAROLINA
†Asheville Citizen (M)	14,066	.055	.055
†Asheville Citizen (S)	14,540	.055	.055
Greensboro Daily News (M)	24,423	.07	.06
Greensboro Daily News (S)	31,592	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (M)	29,921	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (S)	33,403	.07	.07
Winston-Salem Sentinel (E)	14,855	.06	.06
SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia Record (E)	16,107	.05	.05
Columbia Record (S)	15,907	.05	.05
Columbia State (M)	24,246	.06	.06
Columbia State (S)	24,442	.06	.06
Greenville News (M)	20,190	.065	.06
Spartanburg Journal (E)	3,940	.05	.05
Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,726 (S)	9,357
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga Times (M)	24,189	.08	.08
Chattanooga Times (S)	24,726	.08	.08
†Nashville Banner (E)	54,189	.11	.11
†Nashville Banner (S)	53,069	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
Danville Register and Bee (M&E)	12,128	.05	.05
Danville Register (Sunday)	7,184	.05	.05
Newport News Times-Herald (E)	7,326	.05	.05
Newport News Daily Press (S&M)	5,622
Roanoke Times & World-News (M&E)	24,993	.07	.07
Roanoke Times (S)	16,894	.06	.06
Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader (E)	6,424	.035	.035

 A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

EDITORIAL

THIS MATTER OF PRIVACY

TURNING from the uproar occasioned by the so-called press invasion of the privacy of individuals by the publication of income tax returns taken from the public records, discussed in this space last week, we have in New York the case of Dr. Grant.

It offers an instructive comparison of qualities of conscience in news editing.

There is no uproar over what happened to Dr. Grant. The New York World, however, has commented on the case, raising the question of privacy of such individuals as Dr. Grant, and has declared that "conscientious newspapers would welcome an alert public recognition of what is right and what is wrong in the protection of personal affairs."

A few days ago Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, in his 64th year, since 1893 rector of the Church of the Ascension, entered a hospital, suffering from pernicious anemia. It was a first page story for all New York papers.

Dr. Grant for years has been a very liberal-minded clergyman. In his church he has practiced the principle of free speech. In his congregation one would see all classes of people, dignified Episcopal members, followers of other Gentile denominations, Buddists, descendants of sun worshippers, Jews, queer old women in shawls, red-skinned men with high cheek bones, shabby kids and others wearing white collars and red neckties.

The clergyman, one way and another, got the reputation of being a "radical." He acquired influential enemies and loving friends. He was always a prime newspaper topic, usually being depicted in hot water.

Everyone remembers the stories that were written about his engagement to marry a rich, divorced society woman, the prohibition of the wedding by the Bishop, and the romantic incident of the finding of a baby waif on the clergyman's doorstep and its subsequent death, while the clergyman and the society woman bowed in grief. The metropolis was kept wondering about these people. It was all more like fiction than fact. Dr. Grant kept on his way, serene enough. His sister lived with him, having been his devoted companion for years.

When Dr. Grant went to the hospital, apparently desperately ill, his congregation gave evidence of love and esteem. The parsonage would be his as long as he wanted it. His salary would be continued. His resignation was held up.

During the first week of his confinement under treatment a scandalous story was circulated, concerning Dr. Grant and a house maid long employed by him. It was in no wise substantiated by any public record. We do not know, and are not concerned, whether it was true or false. The New York World is authority for the statement that it was a "cruel and unfounded allegation."

At least two New York newspapers (we do not know how many other newspapers followed) picked up this gutter gossip and published it. The name of the supposed unfortunate girl that Dr. Grant had befriended and employed in his house, and then had made love to, was actually printed.

Dr. Grant sent word from his sick room that it was a cruel falsehood. The statement was published that his friends had urged him to bring libel suits, but that he had shaken his head, saying he would not resist the evil.

Another story published at about this same time indicated, though it did not assert the fact, that Dr. Grant's physical disorders might have broken down his reason. There seemed to be no more justification for setting this rumor loose upon an unsuspecting public than the more infamous act in connecting the clergyman's name with that of the house maid, without any base.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER would fail of its duty if it did not denounce this monstrous piece of newspaper malpractice, ruthlessly committed in violation of recognized canons of journalism.

The New York World raises the question of what is right and wrong. The answer is simple. The line between right and wrong is, or should be, as clear to any editor as it is clear to any gentleman in his place of business or in his home. Back-stairs personal gossip, calculated to ruin the reputation of individuals, is not repeated, until it becomes a matter of public concern through some action by the public's responsible representatives.

The leading editors of the United States have clearly declared their position in the matter of the right of individuals to privacy. The rule, as set forth by the American Society of Newspaper Editors, is: "A newspaper should not invade private rights or feelings without sure warrant of public right as distinguished from public curiosity."

The case of Dr. Grant does not, unfortunately, stand alone. The newspapers responsible are not, by any means, to be singled out for condemnation. There is a general tendency by many newspapers to pander to morbid curiosity without warrant. Particularly is this true in metropolitan centers. Small cities will not stomach it.

It is our opinion, and we state it for such effect as it may have upon the newspaper as a business, aside from moral consideration, that temporary gains made at the expense of decency, ultimately are registered as definite losses. A newspaper is not that of a single editorship or of a single generation. Readers are people with sensibilities.

PROVERBS

Chapter XXII—1

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favour rather than silver and gold.

"I try to write stuff that is as easy to read as to stop reading."—BRISBANE.

LEE'S PIOUS CONCEIT

CARL C. DICKEY advises us, naturally and properly, that he does not subscribe to Ivy L. Lee's views that the "propriety of propaganda depends upon the honesty of purpose and method by which it is carried on." We erroneously attributed to Mr. Dickey, who is a newspaper man and a good one, this pious conceit, which, in fact, belongs to Lee and none other. It is our own unchanging opinion that the gentleman who pays the press agents' bills will decide all important questions related to "honesty of purpose" of the propaganda issued by said press agent.

December 6, 1924 Volume 57, No. 28

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Bldg.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout, 10 Radcliffe Road, Winchmore Hill, N. 21.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.

10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

DOES IT PAY?

DOES horse racing news pay?

Aside from all questions of morals, is it commercially profitable?

Is it legitimate in newspapers published in states where laws prohibit gambling?

Is a newspaper within its rights to publish betting odds that are used by the hand-book and cheap pool-room gentry to justify their traffic among simple-minded folk who fancy that there is such a thing possible as beating this long exposed game?

Is a newspaper in any wise justified in publishing "selections," which in effect means that a dopester in the employ of the paper is attempting to "sell" horses to readers?

Is the circulation gained worth the expense of wire service, composition and first-page displays, crowding legitimate news from the best editions of evening newspapers?

Is this "good" circulation?

Does the average reader of an evening paper want to hunt for the news on inside pages, with racing occupying the choice position of page one?

Do you know how betting odds are made and do you belileve that the figures your newspaper publishes daily represent accuracy or legitimate odds?

Is horse racing, as at present constituted in this country, a huge bunk of a gullible public?

We venture to suggest these questions to editors who sincerely strive to publish newspapers in the interest of readers and to publishers who desire to profit from their news service.

Does race news pay?

Stop cutting valuable pulp stock for Christmas trees? Ah, no, sentiment will prevail. For every tree cut to delight children on Christmas thousands are destroyed annually through the neglect of heedless men.

CASHING IN

CRITCHFIELD & COMPANY, of Chicago, advise EDITOR & PUBLISHER of an instance of commercial success in that city which is directly traceable to intelligent and persistent newspaper advertising.

In 1919 the management of the Horder Stationery Stores came to the realization that big city stationers had not seized the natural opportunity to profit from local newspaper advertising. There was a legend among this class of merchants that stationery supplies did not lend themselves to ordinary advertising.

The firm started with modest copy. The volume has been increased every year. In the copy they emphasized the convenience of buying all office needs from their immense stock of 10,000 items. They talked quality and service. They asked for telephone and mail orders and played the seasons for appropriate offerings.

Like magic their business has grown. Every week they show 330 line displays, with larger spreads on special occasions. We have the word of the advertising agency that the business has increased 50 per cent in five years and the company has increased its retail stores from five to eight.

What man is missing a natural opportunity in your city?

To get the facts of life straight in the public mind is the first business of the news chronicle.

ABLE NEWSPAPERMAN

AMBROSE NOBLE McKAY, whose death occurred recently, was general manager of The Salt Lake Tribune for 15 years. His talent and devotion to newspaper service were the rocks upon which that newspaper was built to its present high position in journalism. Mr. McKay started his work as a reporter, in Cheyenne and Denver. In 1898 he was managing editor of the old Salt Lake Herald. He was an excellent business man as well as able writer and editor. Warm-hearted, generous, faithful to the public interest, and unfailingly just and square in his relations, he made many thousands of friends in his home city and became a prominent figure in national journalism. It is not given to many to serve so nobly and so well as he.

PERSONALS

AURENCE HILLS, editor of the Paris Herald, the European edition of New York Herald Tribune, returned Paris Nov. 29, on the steamer La Savoie, following a month's business visit New York.

Owen Moon, former publisher of the Trenton (N. J.) Times and Mrs. Moon ed from New York for a visit in Eng- and and on the Continent on the Majestic, Nov. 29. Mr. Moon recently posed of his interest in the Times to nes Kerney, who had been editor and e-president of the newspaper for 22 rs.

. W. Hoch, former governor of sas, recently celebrated his 50th an- rsary of the ownership of the Marion n.) Record. Mr. Hoch purchased paper from C. W. Triplett, in 1874.

enry L. Stoddard, former publisher e New York Evening Mail, now as- ated with the New York Telegram Evening Mail, sailed from New York week on the S. S. Belgenland for a e around the world.

nales Coutoupis, editor and owner of Athens Nea Ellas, one of the leading newspaper of Greece, is visiting the ed States on a special mission for Greek government.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

C. HUNTER, for the past eight years circulation manager of the cy (Ill.) Journal, and the combined papers, the Whig-Journal, has re- d. He has not announced his plans.

W. Neese has been named advertis- manager of the Waupun (Wis.) er.

M. Harman has succeded Arthur oomis as advertising manager of the and (Ore.) Telegram.

D. Kimball, manager of the Aberdeen .D.) American-News, is recovering a severe illness.

F. Rogers, former business manager he Winona (Minn.) Republican- rld, is now a telegraph operator for Associated Press in the office of the ato (Minn.) Free Press.

Vernon Johnston, formerly general rger of Orchard and Farm, which ely discontinued publication at Los gles and San Francisco, has joined reign advertising department of the Worth (Tex.) Record.

B. Harris, formerly with the iapolis (Ind.) News, has become tising manager for the Long Beach Sun.

C. Swank, assistant cashier of the es-Home State bank at Chanute, has resigned to become business ger of the Lebanon (Ind.) Daily eter.

ie Forde, circulation manager of an Jose News, was a delegate to nual convention of the California ciation of Circulation Managers held kland recently. He was elected a or of the organization.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

NK VREELAND, assistant in the ramatic department of the New k Herald Tribune has resigned to he staff of the New York Tele- nand Evening Mail. He has been eded by Ward Morehouse, who has n the Tribune staff for 5 years.

r R. L. Brooks, nephew of Mrs. s Dana Gibson, has joined the f the New York Herald Tribune orter.

nd Melrose, editor of the Park (Wis.) Herald, has resigned and ngage in newspaper work in Du- Minn.

rence A. Blochman, of the San (Cal.) Sun editorial staff, has to Europe to resume a position as of the Riviera supplement of the edition of the Chicago Tribune. adquarters will be at Nice.

Albert F. Philips, 74-year-old reporter has started a column "As I Remember" in the Salt Lake City Telegram.

Harold M. Olson, city editor of the Winona (Minn.) Republican-Herald is recovering from an operation.

Ferman A. Wilson, formerly with both the Bemidji (Minn.) Sentinel and Pioneer is now news editor of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News.

John H. Dreher, who has been convalescing from a serious illness in California for the past year, has returned to his post as golf editor of the Seattle Times.

L. J. Penney, has been named managing editor of the Hendersonville (N. C.) Times succeeding Morris Beale, resigned. Henry Atkins is now news editor.

Robert W. Boyce, sports editor of the Seattle (Wash.) Times, is now conducting a column called "Today's Tides in Elliott Bay." Clifford C. Harrison, of the sports staff has been made sports editor.

A. C. Stallings and W. E. Matthews have assumed charge of the Warsaw (N. C.) Duplin Record buying the paper from O. J. Carroll. Mr. Stallings will be editor and advertising manager, and Mr. Matthews assistant editor and business manager.

Roland E. Shea has been named city editor of the Holyoke (Mass.) Telegram.

E. S. Shortess has resigned as editor of the Vinton (Ia.) Eagle.

William E. Hutches, of the New York Daily News, is in Paris with Mrs. Hutches. Hutches has been doing a series of articles on the American Colony.

Antoinette Donnelly, the beauty specialist writer of the Chicago Tribune and New York Daily News is visiting Paris and will be in that city until Jan. 1.

Gerard C. Griswold, feature writer of the Omaha World-Herald, with Mrs. Griswold has been visiting relatives in Portland, Ore.

Mike Michell, reporter and Martin Aden, artist are running a humorous column in the Honolulu Advertiser.

Frederick O'Brien, author of "White Shadows in the South Seas" visited Honolulu recently en route to Manila to gather material for a novel which will deal in part with Hawaii. O'Brien at one time was city editor of the Honolulu Advertiser.

Charles Eugene Banks, art and literary critic for many years on New York and metropolitan papers has resigned as editor of the Hilo (Hawaii) Tribune-Herald to go to Seattle. Van Hinkley has succeeded him as editor of the Tribune-Herald.

John Beckwith, cartoonist on the Lynn (Mass.) Daily Item, is conducting a class in cartooning and illustrating at the Lynn Y. M. C. A.

Edward A. McAdams, managing editor of the Lynn (Mass.) Telegram-News, and Mrs. McAdams last week observed the 10th anniversary of their wedding.

Joseph E. Chamberlain, dean of the Boston Transcript staff and conductor of the Nomad and Listener column, resigned last week to go to California.

Shelly N. Pierce, San Jose, Cal., correspondent of the San Francisco Examiner, left San Jose recently for an extended tour of the East.

Chauncey Vivian, city editor of the Boulder (Colo.) News-Herald has left newspaper work to enter the oil business.

MARRIED

CHESTER A. LETTS, managing editor of the Cape Girardeau (Mo.) Southeast Missourian, to Mrs. Ruth McBride Harkness, May 6. The wedding was kept secret until last week.

Hamilton Johnson, formerly news editor of the St. Paul Pioneer Press, and now in the same position with the Tokyo (Japan) Advertiser, to Miss Jeannette Wolfe of Cedar Rapids, Ia., in Tokyo recently.

Robert L. Girvin, state editor of the Reading (Pa.) Tribune, to Miss Dorothy Deppen, Nov. 22 in Reading.

Charles Burgess Cowell, newspaper man of Providence, R. I., to Miss Lydia E. Beauvais, also of Providence, Nov. 26.

Harry L. Pratt, editor of the three house organs of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, to Miss Marion Engebretson, clerk in the library of these papers, Nov. 25.

Miss Margaret L. McCarthy, associate editor of the Peabody (Mass.) Enterprise, to Michael A. Griffin of Boston, Thanksgiving Day.

Miss Eileen Delaney, society editor of the Seattle (Wash.) Post-Intelligencer, to Louis LeRoy Robinson in Seattle, Nov. 29.

Darrell D. Dunn, city editor of the Madison (Wis.) Capital Times, to Miss Lucile K. Troy of Baraboo recently.

John Bird Childers of the Bristol (Tenn.-Va.) Herald-Courier, to Virginia Stone Hogan, reporter on that paper.

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

ARTHUR L. PERKINS, managing editor of the Galveston Tribune, who this week was re-elected president of the Texas Managing Editors Association, has already served seven successive terms in the same capacity with that association. He has been managing editor of the Tribune for nine years.

ARTHUR L. PERKINS

Mr. Perkins started his newspaper career as cub reporter for the Joplin (Mo.) News Herald. From Joplin he went to the Oklahoma City Post, transferring later to Fort Worth, where he became telegraph editor on the Record, winning his promotion to city editor within a few weeks.

In 1908, he went to Galveston Tribune and in three years he had purchased a block of the stock in the newspaper, with Harry I. Cohen. Ten years before Mr. Cohen had worked under Mr. Perkins' direction on the Tribune as a reporter.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

BRYCHAN POWELL, from city editor, Scranton (Pa.) Republican, to news staff, Scranton (Pa.) Times.

Hal Foust, from San Antonio Evening News street staff, to Houston Press.

J. C. King, from Chicago Tribune staff to automobile editor, Long Beach (Cal.) Sun.

J. F. Massey, from Houston Press reportorial staff, to San Antonio Evening News.

G. O. Davis, from advertising manager, San Louis Obispo (Cal.) Daily Telegram, to the same position with the Porterville (Cal.) Recorder.

Lewis M. Nachman, from Columbus (Ga.) Ledger, to classified staff, Chicago Daily News.

Ralph Spinney, from city editor, Holyoke (Mass.) Telegram, to copy desk, Boston Post.

Arthur E. Calnan, from staff, Brockton (Mass.) Enterprise to staff, Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

R. T. Gardner, from Denver (Col.) Rocky Mountain News to staff, Cheyenne (Wyo.) Tribune-Leader.

W. E. White, from San Antonio Evening News staff to become city editor of the Cuero (Tex.) Record.

C. L. Barnard, from Wichita Eagle, to San Antonio Evening News reportorial staff.

Joseph Kraynik, from sporting editor Bridgeport (Conn.) Star, to staff, Bridgeport (Conn.) Post.

John G. Robinson, from editor, Redwood City (Cal.) Tribune to rewrite man, San Francisco Bulletin.

W. E. Albee, from staff, San Jose (Cal.) Mercury Herald to staff, San Francisco Bulletin.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

LESLIE D. HARROP, former manager of the United Press Bureau at Lincoln, Neb., has been transferred to the bureau at Detroit, Mich. The vacancy at Lincoln is being filled by F. A. Smothers from the Chicago bureau. Mr. Smothers was formerly with the Kansas City Post.

Wiley Smith, manager of the Chicago Bureau of Universal Service, is on vacation at his home in Gadsdon, Ala. During his absence, A. J. Lorenz is in charge.

Vincent Richards, reporter for Universal Service, has returned to the New York office, following a tennis playing trip to the Pacific Coast.

Jessie Henderson, who formerly wrote a daily dispatch from New York for the Consolidated Press Association under the caption "Seven Days in Li'l Old New York," is now writing for the C. P. A. from Paris.

It is estimated that every regular reader is worth $25.00 to a newspaper. The free information service provided by Frederic J. Haskin, from Washington, D. C., is a builder of good will and has a reader holding power greatly in excess of its cost. Write for terms for 1925.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

BOSTON Sunday Herald, 32-page rotogravure radio tabloid, Nov. 30.

Des Moines (Ia.) Register, annual insurance section, Nov. 27.

Marengo (Ia.) Pioneer and Democrat recently issued a 56-page All Iowa County Historical edition.

Mobridge (S. D.) Tribune, a 36-page edition commemorating the dedication of the new bridge over the Missouri River at Mobridge.

WITH THE SPECIALS

AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION, newspaper representative, has been appointed to represent in the national field the Wynne (Ark.) Star, Anthony (Kan.) Bulletin, Wilson (Okla.) Post, and the Pottstown (Pa.) Blade.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

A. L. GRIMM has sold his interest in the Northern Publishing Company, publishers of the Prentice (Wis.) News-Calumet, to Edgar T. Johnson. Mr. Grimm is postmaster at Prentice.

Amboy (Ill.) News has been sold by G. L. Carpenter to Stewart Pettigrew and John H. Millar.

William Headley, of Ponce City, Okla., has bought the Miltonvale (Kan.) Weekly Record.

Guthrie Center (Ia.) Bayard Bulletin and Bagley Gazette have been consolidated as the North Guthrie News, with publication office in Bayard. F. H. Plumb of the Gazette and H. E. Haskins of the Bulletin will retain their editorial positions, handling community sections of the paper, which will take over both mailing lists.

Kelso (Wash.) Kelsonian, oldest paper in Kelso, has been sold by G. H. Umbaugh, who has been connected with it since it was established 19 years ago, to the Kelso Publishing Company, recently organized by Frank Dallam, Sr., Frank Dallam, Jr., and D. F. McKenna, to publish the Kelso Tribune. Both papers are semi-weeklies and will be combined under the name of the Kelsonian Tribune. Plans are being made by the new owners to extend it into a daily. Mr. Umbaugh retains the equipment of his office and will operate a job printing establishment.

C. E. Colbert has purchased the Perry (Ia.) Tribune. C. D. Jones will continue as editor and business manager.

Homer Godding has purchased the Mount Hope (Kan.) Clarion from Myrtle Woodman Reynolds.

Lewistown (Ill.) Democrat, which was founded July 14, 1855, and since that time has been under the control of the Davidson family, passed into new hands Dec. 1, when John L. Eryse, Springfield, Ill., took possession on a long term lease.

Claude Cooper and C. Bennett Brasser have leased the Williamson (N. Y.) Sentinel from E. R. Scott.

Leon L. Hough has purchased the Canisteo (N. Y.) Chronicle from Reuben J. Cook. Mr. Hough founded the paper and was its editor until he sold it to Mr. Cook.

E. J. Murray has resumed publication of the Klamath Falls (Ore.) Evening Herald which he sold nine months ago to Luther W. Rood. Rood has relinquished his interest and turned back the paper to Murray.

Jeff Bailey, Southern newspaper man has purchased a half interest in the Lake Region Printing Company of Eustis, Fla., publishers of the Eustis Daily Lake Region.

SCHOOLS

MEMBERS of Dartmouth College's class in journalism last week went to Concord, N. H., where they assisted in editing and issuing the Concord Patriot and Monitor. The trip was made under the supervision of Professor Thomas G. Brown.

Eugene Sharp, instructor in the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri and city editor of the Columbia (Mo.) Evening Missourian, laboratory product of the students in the school, was operated for appendicitis last week.

"Find Your Line and Hew to It," was the subject of an address by M. T. F. Scully, column writer for the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press and the Booth syndicate, before senior and junior journalism students of the University of Notre Dame, Nov. 15.

James Melvin Lee, director of the Department of Journalism, New York University, recently broadcast a talk on "How To Read a Newspaper" from station WNYC.

ASSOCIATIONS

ADVERTISING CLUB OF NEW YORK'S advertising art round table luncheon was this week addressed by Miss Sara Birchal on "Can Advertising Art Too Be Highbrow?" A. H. Tatlow, publicity director of the South African Railways, spoke on Tuesday at a joint conference of the export advertising group with national directors of the English-Speaking Union on trade opportunities with British colonies.

Washington Press Association will hold its 13th annual Newspaper Institute at the University of Washington School of Journalism, Seattle, Feb. 5-6-7. The program is in charge of M. L. Spencer, director of the School of Journalism at the University of Washington.

Seattle Presss Club will celebrate its move from itts present quarters in the Stuart-Henry-White Building to its new home in the Kermott Building, with a ladies' night dinner-dance, Dec. 18.

Indiana Intercollegiate Press Association will hold its annual meeting at Crawfordsville, Dec. 12 and 13.

North Carolina Press Association will conduct an every-member canvass between now and the time for the annual meeting next summer, it was decided at a meeting of the executive committee at Greensboro last week. Plans were outlined for bringing every newspaper published in the state into the organization. Members attending the meeting were: H. Galt Braxton, Kinston Free Press; Miss Beatrice Cobb, Morgantown News-Herald; John B. Sherrill, Concord Tribune; A. C. Huneycutt, Albemarle Stanly News-Herald; Charles A. Webb, Asheville Citizen, and R. E. Price, Rutherfordton Sun.

Minnesota Editorial Association will hold a convention Feb. 20 and 21, at St. Paul.

Kansas Press Association will hold its next meeting in Topeka, Jan. 30-31, it was decided at a meeting of the executive committee of the association held in Lawrence. W. A. Hill, editor of the Westmorland Recorder, president of the association, is in charge of arrangements.

Ponca City (Okla.) Press Association has organized with C. M. Sarchet, president; Seward R. Sheldon, vice-president, and Joe L. Brandt, city editor of the Ponca City Daily News, secretary-treasurer.

Crosscup-Pishon Advertising Men's Post, American Legion, of Boston, was addressed Dec. 4 by Richard Sears, Boston newspaper photographer and formerly camera man with the U. S. Army Signal Corps, on the work of making moving pictures of front-line action dur ing the World War.

North Dakota Press Associatio will hold its winter meeting in Valle City, N. D., Dec. 16 and 17, it was ar nounced last week following a meeting c the executive committee of the associa tion at Valley City.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

Dec. 9—Trial of Baltimore Post for publishing income tax returns.
Dec. 9—Assn. of Foreign Press Correspondents, luncheon, Lawyers Club, New York.
Dec. 9—Advertising Men of Philadelphia, dinner to Rowe Stewart, Ritz Carlton Hotel, Phila.
Dec. 12—Debate, "Is the Press Kept?" Nation Banquet, 200 Fifth Avenue, New York.
Dec. 12-13—Indiana Intercollegiate Press Assn., annual meeting, Crawfordsville, Ind.
Dec. 16-17—North Dakota Press Assn., winter meeting, Valley City, N. D.
Dec. 30-31—Assn. of American Schools and Departments of Journalism, annual meeting, Chicago.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Editorials

DAILY SERVICE, TIMELY TOPICS
Reid Editorial Service,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
2048 East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

CIRCULATION BRINGERS
Famous fiction of all lengths.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., New York.

General Features

A SMALL-TOWN-PAPER SYNDICATE
Unique—Inexpensive—Complete
Decker's Caricatures — Home Features — Daily Column—Comic Jingles—Other Specialties
Tri Feature, 110 West 40th Street, New York
Write for Complete Catalog with Service Rates

Radio

CURRENT RADIO

Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.

American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

Linotype Split Magazines

A change of face in less time than it would take a hand compositor to get out a case of type.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY
Brooklyn, New York

Set entirely on the LINOTYPE in the Bodoni Series

Christmas Club Deposits of $48,000,000 in New York State

During the coming months, the pocketbooks of New York State will be reimbursed to the extent of $48,000,000 represented by the deposits in Christmas Clubs. This sum is one fifth of the total deposits in the United States.

To the people of New York State, this $48,000,000 means an increased purchasing power — an increased purchasing power of so great a magnitude that it can be overlooked by not one wide-awake and progressive National Advertiser.

There is no time for procrastination!! Immediate and sure-fire action is needed. This money is going to be spent and spent soon—for every conceivable product.

It is time to start the winter campaign of advertising, and the bigger and more inclusive the campaign, the bigger and more certain the results.

The New York State newspapers represented in this list will place you in line for your full share of this business.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
*Albany Evening News (E)	21,982	.08	.08
*Albany Knickerbocker Press (M)	33,239	.10	.10
*Albany Knickerbocker Press (S)	53,649	.14	.14
*Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat (E)	7,502	.04	.04
Auburn Citizen (E)	6,429	.04	.035
*Batavia Daily News (E)	8,737	.04	.04
*Binghamton Press (E)	32,006	.09	.09
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle (E)	67,646	.22	.22
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle (S)	77,839	.22	.22
*Buffalo Courier and Enquirer (M&E)	78,058	.18	.18
*Buffalo Courier (S)	118,603	.25	.22
†Buffalo Evening News (E)	125,618	.25	.25
*Buffalo Evening Times (E)	93,202	.21	.21
*Buffalo Sunday Times (S)	89,844	.21	.21
*Buffalo Express (M)	51,288	.14	.12
*Buffalo Express (S)	53,362	.18	.14
*Corning Evening Leader (E)	8,613	.04	.04
*Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser (E&M)	33,102	.11	.11
*Geneva Daily Times (E)	5,052	.04	.04
*Gloversville Leader Republican (E)	6,852	.035	.035
*Ithaca Journal-News (E)	7,411	.04	.04
*Jamestown Morning Post (M)	11,112	.04	.035
*Middletown Times-Press (E)	6,714	.03	.03
*Mount Vernon Daily Argus (E)	9,293	.05	.05
*Newburgh Daily News (E)	11,591	.05	.05
*New Rochelle Standard-Star (E)	7,741	.04	.04
*The Sun, New York (E)	253,763	.60	.54
†New York Times (M)	352,100	.70	.686
†New York Times (S)	569,623	.90	.882
*New York Herald-Tribune (M)	270,159	.594	.576
*New York Herald-Tribune (S)	316,585	.6435	.624
†New York World (M)	378,807	.595	.58
†New York World (S)	558,779	.595	.58
†New York Evening World (E)	314,489	.595	.58
*Niagara Falls Gazette (E)	18,103	.055	.055
*Port Chester Item (E)	4,359	.03	.03
*Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise (E)	12,110	.05	.05
*Rochester Times-Union (E)	64,727	.20	.18
*Syracuse Journal (E)	42,103	.14	.14
*Troy Record (M&E)	22,621	.06	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

G. B. MITCHELL of the New York advertising firm of Albert Frank & Co. returned to New York this week from a five-months' trip through Japan, China, Korea and the Philippines. The trip was undertaken for a study of travel conditions and the economic situation in general. He found travel excellent, with Japan rapidly recovering from the earthquake, and China safe, despite its recent wars.

Mr. Mitchell met the deposed Emperor of China and the leaders now in power. He visited also Major General Leonard Wood, Governor General of the Philippines.

Mr. Mitchell, who is something of an artist, brought back a sketch book filled with interesting scenes of the Orient.

The Anfenger Advertising Agency, Inc., St. Louis, has moved its offices from the Odd Fellows' Building to the Board of Education Building. Louis E. Anfenger is president; E. D. Winius, vice-president, and Charles H. Trap, secretary.

Ellery W. Mann, for a number of years vice-president of the H. K. McCann Company, New York advertising firm, was elected president of the Zonite Products Company at a meeting of the board of directors held Nov. 27. Through his connection with the McCann agency, Mr. Mann has been identified with numerous prominent corporations, including the Standard Oil Company, and the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

L. R. Northrup, of Erwin Wasey & Co., was elected chairman of the western council of the American Association of Advertising Agencies at a recent meeting held in Chicago. Carl P. Johnson, of Johnson, Read & Co., was elected vice-president, and Francis Marling, of Benson, Gamble & Crowell, was elected secretary and treasurer.

The new board of governors includes F. W. Thurneau, Vanderhoof & Company; J. W. Young, J. Walter Thompson Company; Paul E. Faust, Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company, and Dwight Chapman, of the McJunkin Advertising Company.

Harold Buffam, until recently with the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, has joined the staff of Barteau and Van Denmark, Springfield advertising agency.

Charles M. McLennan and M. S. Moore are now associated with E. R. Crowe & Co., New York advertising agency.

G. Kenneth Goode has resigned from the staff of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch to join the Cecil, Barreto & Cecil, Inc., Richmond advertising agency.

Francis K. Glew has started an advertising business under his own name at Grand Rapids, Mich. He was formerly with John L. Wierengo & Staff, advertising agency, of that city. The Grand Rapids Varnish Company, Grand Rapids, has placed its advertising account with Mr. Glew.

Frederick S. McLintock, formerly with the Redfield Advertising Agency, Inc., New York, has joined the New York office of the Lyddon & Hanford Company, Rochester, N. Y., advertising agency, as manager of its production department.

Advertising designed by the Central Advertisers Agency of Wichita, Kan., in co-operation with Col. Robert H. Timmons, director of public relations for the Kansas Gas and Electric Company has been given a signal honor by the Societe Financiere de Transpoerts, of Brussels, Belgium.

Recently the societe wrote to the company asking permission to use the series of Aesop Fables advertisements, used nationally in magazines and newspapers, for publication abroad. The company owns plants in Spain, Portugal, Turkey and South America. The Kansas company recently sold the rights to the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company.

FLASHES

Some are born hateful and some get that way trying to seem important.—Baltimore Sun.

Some people adhere so closely to the truth that you can't get it from them.—Boston Transcript.

"Do you ever have any quarrels at your women's club?"

"Oh, no; we call them debates."—Boston Transcript.

Expenses of the Colonel Forbes trial are expected to be $20,000 dollars a day. It is evident severe punishment is going to be meted out—to the taxpayers, anyway.—New York World.

It's the fat-head, not the overhead, that makes government costly.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

"You know that last cook I hired. She's an angel."

"What! Has she flown?"—Boston Transcript.

No cold cash is any colder than a payment of alimony.—Detroit Free Press.

It is significant of these superior times that the January eclipse of the sun will be the most spectacular thing of the kind ever staged in America.—Chicago Daily News.

The celebrated author who says that American laws are "the laughing stock of Europe" is only half correct. They are also the laughing stock of America.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

The most thrilling words are simplest. Consider "Atta boy!"—New York Telegram and Evening Mail.

Buffalo chauffeurs seem willing to aid each other. Three of them hit the same pedestrain.—New York World.

England has no office similar to our Vice-Presidency except that of poet laureate.—Hartford Times.

It's no sign of politeness to tell a bill collector to call again.—Roanoke Times.

And yet the right to make home brew is worthless if the method is wrong.—Baltimore Sun.

No one can look more as if life were a total failure than a man being towed to the garage in a brand-new car.—Ohio State Journal.

"What are we to do for big, successful men in the future?" mournfully queries The Toledo Blade. We don't need 'em at all. The women will be running the whole show.—J. R. W. in Milwaukee Journal.

Dry agents listened to radio bedtime stories and suspected that they were code messages to liquor smugglers in Canada. Anyhow, we now understand what Prohibition enforcers do with their tim New York World.

According to science, hair grows death; but this is darned little co lation for a bald man.—New York gram and Evening Mail.

The Nobel Peace Prize is not t awarded this year. Why not give Jack Dempsey?—New York World.

You can say one thing for static drowns part of the jazz.—Baltimore

People had "forceful personalities the old days, also, but it was called s head.—Baltimore Sun.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMEN

H. R. TILLOTSON, for 15 years tor and owner of the Stock (Ia.) News, has purchased The Shop at Ottumwa, Ia., and plans to his Stockport job plant to that city, solidating the two offices. The Shop was formerly owned by Carl Wallace.

St. Peter (Minn.) Free Press, re ly installed a Chandler & Price job with Miller automatic feeder.

Eveleth (Minn.) Clarion has purch a Collendar casting outfit and C. saw and trimmer.

Hutchinson (Minn.) Leader, has stalled Miehle Verticle job press.

Salt Lake City Deseret News is ad a new 8-story building to its

Mt. Carroll (Ia.) Mirror-Demo has installed a new linotype.

Let this emblem guide YOU to successful circulation building

WE have proved to scores of publishers—both large and small—that the best plan of building and holding circulation is our simple, businesslike, dignified plan, which binds the subscriber with a liberal accident insurance policy.

Our plan does not call for investment in premiums or prizes. It carries no contest or scheme features. It is most effective and most economical—maximum circulation at minimum cost.

We serve only one newspaper in a territory, but we serve that one seriously and successfully

If interested wire or write.

HICKEY-MITCHELL COMPANY

Pierce Building St. Louis, Mo.

Here's a Chance to Help Children

The Church Advertising Department is glad to pass on the suggestion of the Near East Relief that publishers make a special effort to link their paper with the popular interest in Golden Rule Sunday, December 7. Special page layouts, featuring this day, are available from several of the mat services.

Churches will be willing to take extra space to feature their part in this special day, and papers can thus help along this unique day and stimulate larger advertising by special treatment of some sort.

Your denominational leaders in your town have full information. Special electros are available from the Near East Relief, 151 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A. A. C. W.

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World

383 Madison Ave. New York City

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

MMA BUGBEE, reporter on the staff of the New York Herald Tribune, is sponsible for the idea of a "bogey time" rsolving cross word puzzles, a feature nh has been incorporated in the zels being offered to newspapers by e Herald Tribune Syndicate, New ɔc. Miss Bugbee was given a $25 ı s.

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, British car-ɔst, who draws an "Old Bill" feature rKing Features Syndicate, Inc., New ɔ:, returned to this country from Eng-ıon the Mauretania, Nov. 26.

ıy Christie, English novelist, has ıien a series of six articles to run ır the caption "As May Christie Sees "for the New York World Syndicate.

Cantland Rice, of the New York ɔld Tribune, whose articles are syn-:ed to newspapers, has returned to : York after spending several days at ılville, N. C., resting from high pres-: football writing. He was accom-nd by Mrs. Rice, Frank Crowinshield, ır of Vanity Fair, A. A. Boyden, ıer managing editor of the American ıazine, and Mrs. Mary Wilson ɛon.

Jın Laurens Van Zant, well known ıical writer, has joined the staff of ɛKent Press Service, and will cover ɛforthcoming session of the Illinois ɡiature. A new bureau has been ɛd at Springfield by The Kent Press rce with Charles E. Calkins in charge.

F C. ("Bud") Fisher, creator of ı and Jeff, who draws for the Bell ricate, Inc., New York, returned ı a trip to the Continent this week on ɔlympic.

Te D. P. Syndicate, although a de-ıent of the publishing house of ıleday, Page & Co., has announced thereafter it will also represent four ɛ publishers: Dodd, Mead & Co.; Har-r, Brace & Co.; Little, Brown & Co., he Frederick A. Stokes Company. esyndicate has launched a new plan ındling serial fiction by offering an-ılcontracts to newspapers wishing to ı first call on all novels in which the ɔublishing houses hold serial rights. tors on the combination's fiction list ıde Edna Ferber, Owen Johnson, ɔie Garstin, Harold MacGrath, Dor-y Canfield, Honoré Willsie Morrow, ıam McLeod Raine, E. Barrington, ɛworth Camp, "Elizabeth," J. Allan r, Robert Herrick, Clarence E. Mul-d Ethel Watts Mumford, and Pamela ne.

Nv features announced by the D. P. ıcate include Wickham Steed's Me-ı and Katherine Mayo's exposure of ı Truth About the Philippines."

Th Continental Theatrical Informa-ı Service, 112 West 44th street, New r a new syndicate, started operation ; reek, furnishing a weekly bulletin of v on the Continental Theater. San-dJ. Greenburger and George Halasz charge of the central office in New rl The European staff consists of Paul Atanyossy, Berlin; Ferenc Szanto, Budapest; Francesco Carbone, Milan; Mate Zalka, Moscow; Leon Wexner, Paris; Beumont Wadsworth, Prague; Steffan Presser, Vienna. Donald Freeman is temporarily in Europe in charge of the foreign staff.

N. Y. HERALD TRIBUNE UP DEC. 8

Trial Date On Tax Publicity to Be Set by Judge Knox

Trial date of the New York Herald Tribune, indicted for unlawful publication of income tax returns, will be set by Judge John C. Knox in United States District Court, New York, Dec. 8, one day before start of the Baltimore Post trial in Baltimore on the same charge.

This was decided in five minutes Monday, when the New York Tribune, Inc., through its attorneys, Henry A. Wise and Sackett, Chapman, Brown & Cross, pleaded not guilty before Judge Knox and obtained a week's leave to make any motions to the indictment which might be deemed necessary to bring out the questions to be litigated in a more complete manner.

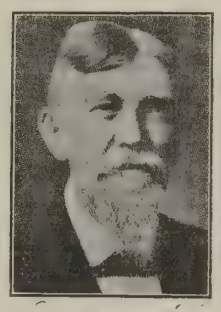
Counsel for the defense reiterated they have co-operated and will continue to co-operate in every way with the Department of Justice, so that there may be a prompt determination by the Supreme Court as to the intent of Congress in framing the publicity provisions of the revenue act and, "if necessary, a further clarification of the constitutional freedom of the press."

THOMAS SUCCEEDS JONES

Becomes President, Norristown (Pa.) Register Following Latter's Resignation

Announcement has been made that Gilbert S. Jones, president of the Norristown (Pa.) Register since its organization, has resigned. I. Powell Thomas, treasurer of the publishing company, has been elected president, and David H. Mann made assistant treasurer.

Mr. Jones, who established the Register with its commercial printing department, has gone to Florida, where he will devote the time of the winter months to some real estate interests. He retains his holdings in the Register Company, and will continue to live at his home in Montgomery County, near Norristown.



Brady Joins N. Y. Herald Tribune

Joseph Brady, former managing editor of the Providence News, this week joined the staff of the New York Herald Tribune. At one time he was on the New York Evening World.

OHIO EDITOR DIES

James Parker Chew Founded Xenia Daily Gazette in 1881

James Parker Chew, 92, said to be one of the oldest active newspaper editors in the country, editor of the Xenia (O.) Daily Gazette and Xenia Republican, died of old age in his home at Xenia, Nov. 29.

J. P. Chew

He was born in York County, Pa., April 10, 1832, and received his education and learned the printing trade in Carlisle, Pa.

His Journalistic career started in 1852, when he bought the Lawrenceburg (Ind.) Press, which he owned and edited for 25 years, after which he purchased the Xenia Gazette, then a weekly, and in November 1881, established a daily edition of that paper.

The last of many consolidations of newspapers in Xenia was made in 1915, when the Gazette absorbed the Daily Republican.

Oregon Publisher Dies

P. F. Cronemillar, publisher of the Lake County (Ore.) Examiner and postmaster of Lakeview, died recently at Lakeview. He had previously been associated with the LaGrande Chronicle and the Roseburg Plaindealer and established the Klamath Falls Evening Herald.

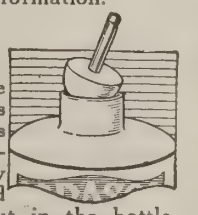
T. E. Niles in Providence

T. E. Niles, former managing editor of the New York Evening Mail, became general manager of the Providence (R. I.) News Dec. 1.

QUICK STICK



MIXED IN A MINUTE

For the Press Room or Mail Room Quick Stick has no equal. It is mixed in a minute, possesses greater strength than the paper itself and when once applied it will not let go. A clean white powder paste that will not sour or mould—free from lumps—speeds up bundle and single wrapping wherever it is used. Quick Stick mixes quick, sticks quick and dries quick. It can be ordered in 35 lb. cartons, 50 lb. kits, 100 lb. kegs, 150 lb. half barrels and 225 lb. barrels. Ask us to send you a sample.

No. 705 MAILING MACHINE PASTE

An exceptional paste. Will not clog, gum or harden in the fountain. Flows freely permitting speedy labeling. Smooth and free from lumps—made especially for Wing-Horton and Dick Mailers. The Coupon will bring you complete information.

C OPASCO

A desk paste that never needs water — always on the job — spreads evenly and easily and will not dry out in the bottle. Ask us about the self closing desk jars made especially for the news room. Handiest paste containers on earth.

THE COMMERCIAL PASTE CO.
Makers of the Largest Line of Adhesives
DEPT. 51 COLUMBUS, OHIO

The Commercial Paste Co.,
Dept. 51, Columbus, Ohio.
Gentlemen:
☐ We'd like to test Quick Stick.
☐ Send us your minimum order of No. 705 Mailing Machine Paste.
☐ Send us your trial order of Copasco —the handy desk paste.
NAME .....
ADDRESS .....
TITLE .....
PUBLICATION .....
TOWN .....
STATE .....

The Cathedral Towns of England

DURHAM

Placed upon a bold cliff, around whose base curves a deep and ample river, Durham Cathedral has a site unrivalled in Great Britain and perhaps the whole world.

Among the finest features of the Cathedral are its massive Norman Nave, the chapel of the Nine Altars, the Shrine of St. Cuthbert and the tomb of the Venerable Bede.

The naturally fortified position of the Cathedral and Castle lends greater significance to the fact that for several centuries the Bishopric of Durham was looked upon as England's first line of defence against the Scots.

One of the finest views of the Cathedral and Castle is obtained from the London and North Eastern Railway on its famous East Coast Route between England and Scotland.

Apply for free booklet describing
ALL YOU OUGHT TO SEE IN BRITAIN

H. J. KETCHAM
General Agent
LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY,
311 Fifth Avenue (at Thirty-Second St.),
New York

Highly Efficient

Mr. R. V. De Barry, Sec.-Treas. of the Lansing, Mich.. STATE JOURNAL, has had considerable experience:

"From our experience covering a period of about three years, we can safely say that through education and tireless efforts you have obtained a point of efficiency which is invaluable to us. Our discount period has just elapsed, and there was not a single deduction made by any agency on account of failure to prove the advertising invoiced."

You can't possibly go wrong on a trial test. Want it?

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.
538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26 St., NEW YORK
A NEWSPAPER CHECKING PROOF SERVICE

MOST NEWS
h largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh
The Pittsburgh Post
TORNING AND SUNDAY
October circulation (net paid)
Daily Circulation.....137,824
Sunday Circulation.....197,347
Member A. B. C.

"SEEING THE SUN" IS DEFINITE PART OF BALTIMORE CHILDREN'S EDUCATION

15,000 Pupils Have Heard Newspaper Processes Explained by H. E. Warner in Year and a Half—Sound Promotion Idea

SINCE the first of October, 1922—a school year and one half—more than 15,000 teachers and pupils of public and parochial schools, high schools, private schools and universities and colleges have gone through the Baltimore Sun plant or listened to Henry Edward Warner of the Sun in assembly, to learn just how a newspaper is made.

Starting in a very small way from a suggestion by C. W. Wagener, the Sun's publicity manager, and taken from its inception and developed by Mr. Warner, the idea has grown into an established institution, and today teachers wishing to take their classes through the Sun building have to reserve their dates far ahead. Studying the actual making of a newspaper on the ground in Baltimore is considered a part of necessary education by enough teachers to have required a separately organized unit known as "Seeing the Sun Department."

It has brought about a much wider educational influence, too. Students are required to write compositions on their trip as part of the school work. Some of the early compositions were submitted by the teachers for official editing, and the need of a reliable information booklet was so apparent that Mr. Warner wrote a story of the trip from start to finish, called "Seeing the Sun," a title which has been changed to "The Making of a Newspaper" in a second edition.

The demand for this booklet, especially by educational institutions, has indicated such a keen interest that a third edition is in preparation, and a leading publishing house has under consideration a text book by the same writer. "The Making of a Newspaper" is now in use as a supplementary textbook in the New York University School of Journalism, of which Dr. James Melvin Lee, whose book review column is an EDITOR & PUBLISHER feature, is director. It is also being used by the directors of a large number of journalism schools in universities and colleges throughout the country.

There probably is no newspaper industrial visitation organized on such a permanent and responsible scale as the Sun's. It is probable that in general visitors would be turned over to a guide of some sort—such a guide, for instance, as will show visitors through public buildings in Washington; or perhaps such a guide as one finds at the small end of a megaphone on a rubberneck wagon. But the "Sunpapers" don't turn their visitors over to anybody. Mr. Warner handles every detail himself, personally escorting classes, describing every piece of work, human or mechanical, making sure that everything is understood, and at the end of the trip holding a "quiz" in a side room of the mailing department.

Starting in the lobby of the Sun Building, the visiting class—usually about 45 strong—assemble at the foot of the stairs, and their instructor, taking a position on the second step, first welcomes them and then invariably says:

"There are three ways to learn anything: to read about it or have someone tell you, to see it done, and to do it yourself. We're going to try to show you so intimately that you will practically be doing it yourselves, and when you leave here we hope you will understand everything you have seen and done so thoroughly that you can go right out, get a lot of printing presses and linotypes and money and experience and subscribers, and start right in publishing your own newspapers!"

From that initial laugh to the finish, the instructor makes it a rule to keep them laughing whenever they might grow weary, for after all study is study, and work is work, and a little nonsense doesn't hurt the main purpose of the trip. From the lobby to the photo-engraving room, to the editorial department, to the composing room, through the stereotyping operation into the press room, on up winding stairs into the mailing room the party winds snake-like, every detail being explained so that the least apt will have a chance to understand; and finally, back again to the starting point, where booklets are distributed.

The next day, under the standing caption, "SEEING THE SUN," all the names of the visitors are published in the Evening Sun. There is no long story, there are no pictures, there is no attempt to capitalize the event. Just the plain list of names of those who visited. It is considered enough.

"You think it is a good thing?" Mr. Warner was asked.

"Ask me something hard," was the smiling reply. "If a newspaper can do any better thing from an angle—dismissing self-interest entirely as being unworthy of consideration—I don't know what it is. And from the standpoint of self-interest, if anyone insists, I don't know of anything better than letting the next generation see the wheels go 'round in a plant where they are printing civilization's common medium of communication."

To which he added:

"And if you print anything abou for the love of Mike don't refer to n a 'guide.' Not that I care personally these children and teachers are our ored guests, deserving the most co and painstaking reception even by busiest official on the place. And te them how and why a newspaper is pr is something that is worth all the in gent study that can be put into it."

In addition to showing visiting cl through the plant, Mr. Warner has dressed the students of all Baltim high schools in assembly. On Dec. gave an illustrated lecture on the su to 2,000 students of the largest school of the city, and on Feb. 2 repeats the lecture to the assembl Goucher College for Women. He talked to a section of the Journalism partment of New York University, at a later date will address the asse of that institution on newspaper e English and mechanics. So far has influence of this department extended the entire department of Journalis George Washington University, Was ton, D. C., made a special trip to B more to have him "take them thro

Col. Graves Has Not Resigned

The Hendersonville (N. C.) Times has made a formal anounce that Col. John Temple Graves, editor not severed his connections with newspaper, in answer to a public s ment made by Morris Beale, former aging editor of the Times that G contemplated resigning. Col. Graves spend the winter in Florida, but will tribute a daily editorial, the Times st

"OTHER PEOPLE'S CHILDREN"

By Fanny Y. Cory

Cleverest of the Cute Kid Cartoons By the Cleverest Artist Specializing in Children

For Terms and Samples, Wire

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SOUTHERN NEWSPAPER PLANT FOR SALE AT BARGAIN

The Charleston American offers its entire plant, including real estate and equipment, for sale at a bargain. This plant is located in the heart of the City on one of the best corners in town, measuring fifty one (51) feet on Meeting Street, and one hundred seven (107) feet on Society Street, including one three story brick building, with news print warehouse adjoining, and one two story brick press room with composing room above; containing editorial rooms, business office, circulation department and complete and well arranged newspaper lay-out. Together with one 32 page Duplex Press with color deck, linotype and intertype machines, stereotyping outfit, safes, files, desks, chairs, furniture, and all appurtenances of any and every kind needed in the operation of a modern daily morning or afternoon newspaper. This plant is ready to be operated by simply turning on the switch. Terms cash, or one-third cash and the balance in three annual payments. Price extremely cheap. Communicate with John I. Cosgrove, Attorney, 45 Broad Street, Charleston, South Carolina.

The Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce submits this comparison:

Miss Brooklyn reads the Standard Union with undivided interest because it prints the news she wants to read about.

R. S. R. Shriver
President

LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY BROOKLYN NEWSPAPER

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

GENE FOWLER—He'd Make Type Talk.

CENCE appears about ready to take he cue and walk out upon the edi-'l stage.

Gne Fowler, President New York espaper Club, recently appointed day nging editor of the New York rrican, proved himself the possible pter,- when this week he disclosed he has in mind of a "journalistic atory," for scientific study of news tods, which, if worked to capacity, gt bring about interesting innova-n in the newspaper field.

Te plans, now actually in more than en stage, seem rapidly approaching lation in Fowler's hands, and, as nfolded them in an interview with DR & PUBLISHER, he showed how he eady putting them into operation small scale.

Vhat Fowler contemplates eventually eablishment of a separate newspaper etment devoted exclusively to scien-chewspaper research and experimen-ia. It would be the place where edi-il conference ideas could be put to lest at small expense.

Dclosure of the "dream plan" came ie end of the interview, during ia Fowler had first proved himself ontemplative philosopher before es-ig the role of news-scientist.

I deviate, perhaps, from the old-cl newspaper man, "in that I believe s usiness we are in is a real science, ale of scientific development.

C course the fundamentals of the fission will never change, but there s be improvements, there should be ntual refinements.

"And, at present, we have no way of developing these improvements and refinements, except the old-fashioned editorial conference.

"Isn't it true that the fundamental job of the editor is to make it easier for his readers? Well, the editor has all sorts of ideas, but now he has no way to try them out.

"What I am hoping to see formed soon will be a journalistic laboratory in every metropolitan newspaper, which will have a competent newspaper man in charge, who likes research work, and at least two assistants. This laboratory force will continuously study the newspaper, seeking ways to improve it. It could work over every germ of an idea," he continued. "In it tests could be made, which are now impossible in a newspaper, because of the expense of failure.

"One idea I have in the back of my mind, which I would like to submit for laboratory testing is the creation of type styles which will convey vocal intonations. Sarcasm, for instance.

"Now a speaker in an address reported in a newspaper may make a very sarcastic remark. As it appears in print, however, it may convey an entirely different idea.

While interesting as a news-scientist, Fowler is most pleasant to talk to, when he puffs his pipe, and becomes a philosopher contemplating the editorial field.

When first he was named managing editor of the American a short time ago, I went to him for an interview.

"You can tell the boys," he said, "that now I can buy me a new set of false teeth."

That is typically Fowler. He takes advancement lightly. Tall, with long, wavy, dark hair and a broad smile, he is the office clown, with none of the clownish handicaps.

"How," I asked him, "is it possible to be happy though an editor."

"In the first place," he answered promptly, 'read Schopenhauer, possibly one of the happiest men who ever lived.

"Remember that glorious German pessimist tells us to live within ourselves and not to depend upon external things for happiness. And that doesn't necessarily mean one must be selfish either.

"While I like people, I really prefer to be myself and read a great deal. And when with people, I try to be natural, try not to assume something I'm not.

"Then, secondly, to be 'happy though an editor,' one of the first things to abolish is fear of any kind. Make up your mind you can make good anywhere. I have. Maybe it's sheer ignorance on my part. Perhaps I haven't enough sense to be afraid. In fact, it's within the realm of possibility that I'm dumb.

"Nevertheless, I believe the editor in charge of a newspaper should be absolutely free from fear. He should say to himself, 'This is a big property, so big it will survive any mistakes I might make.' Then he should give his ideas full reign.

"If he is well grounded in the fundamentals of newspaper work, he can't go wrong.

"Then the editor would carry his fearlessness down to the staff. His reporters should not always be fearing for their jobs. Of course they shouldn't be allowed to loaf, but instead of being afraid of the boss, the boss should let it be known that he relies on them, depends on them.

"Of course this idea has been treated in literature for centuries, but it is none the less true, and sadly foreign from many newspaper offices. Too few believe the simple fact that fortune comes to him who is mentally unafraid."

Here I interrupted Fowler, who speaks rapidly and with enthusiasm. I took him back to his proviso that a fearless editor must of course first be well grounded in the fundamentals of journalism.

"What," I asked, "do you consider the fundamentals of journalism."

"Of course that is a difficult question to answer," he replied. "But I should say the fundamentals of journalism are seeing clearly and telling forcibly.

"And this definition applies to both policy and news. Simplicity is one of the fundamentals of newspaper work. Powerful expression is another."

GREATEST GAIN

During the month of October, The New York Sun showed a greater gain in advertising lineage than any other New York evening newspaper.

The Sun

280 Broadway New York

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely By THE DAILY ARGUS
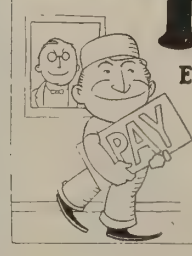
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle



Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.
ged 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.
Form Government Statement, Six Months ng Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six ths Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. ease in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.
COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY
REPRESENTATIVES:
. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 rth Michigan Ave., Chicago.
. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San ancisco, Calif.

Detroit Times

Evening 220,000
Sunday 250,000

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Always Reliable
The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia and GROWING!

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.

Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH NOW HOUSED IN NEW MODERN PLANT

REMOVAL of the mechanical, news and advertising departments of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, from South Tenth street to the company's new home, 107 South Seventh street, has just been completed, and with a few details yet to be finished the newspaper will soon be in shape for the formal opening of its modern plant.

The building fronts 200 feet on South Seventh street, and has a depth of 130 feet. The north wing of the building is two stories. On the lower floor are the offices of the general manager, business manager, the advertising and the bookkeeping departments, while in the rear on a mezzanine floor is housed the classified department.

On the second floor of the north wing are the editorial and news rooms, the telephone exchange; rooms in the rear being provided for the Associated Press, the engraving and the art departments. The news and editorial rooms are lighted by huge windows on both the north and south sides.

The south wing of the building is also two stories. The lower floor forms part of the press room, housing the huge color press, while the back part of the upper floor furnishes ample room for storage of news print. The front room is occupied by the morgue, which is reputed to be one of the most complete in the entire South.

Between the two wings, all on one floor, with ample skylight, making it unnecessary for artificial lights to be used during the day, are housed the linotypes, the monotype casting room, the make-up and the stereotyping departments.

A special nickeling plant has been installed, each plate for the color press being given a nickel "bath," which hardens the plate and insures clear, sharp colors and long life.

Besides printing an eight-page color section for the Times-Dispatch, the company prints the color pages for 27 of the larger dailies throughout the South.

Removal of the linotype battery was accomplished without a hitch in the issuing of the newspaper.

PRESS AT CORNER STONE LAYING

N. Y. Publishers, Editors, and Drama Critics at Theater Guild Function

The New York press was well represented when the Theater Guild laid the cornerstone of the new Guild Theater at Fifty-second street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues on Dec. 2.

Dr. John H. Finley, of the New York Times, was one of the speakers, while guests of honor at the ceremony included: John Anderson, dramatic critic, New York Evening Post; John Corbin, New York Times; Heywood Broun, dramatic critic, New York World; Alan Dale, dramatic critic, New York American; Gilbert W. Gabriel, dramatic critic, New York Telegram and Mail; Percy Hammond, dramatic critic, New York Herald Tribune; Walter Lippman, editor of the Editorial page, New York World; Burns Mantle, dramatic critic, New York Daily News; Adolph S. Ochs, publisher, New York Times; E. W. Osborne, New York Evening World; Ralph Pulitzer, editor, New York World; Stephen Rathbun, assistant dramatic critic, New York Sun; Ogden Reid, editor and publisher, New York Herald Tribune; J. Rankin Towse, dramatic editor, New York Evening Post; O. G. Villard, editor of the Nation; Alexander Woollcott, dramatic critic, New York Sun, and Stark Young, dramatic critic, New York Times.

St. Louis Star's Payroll Robbed

Two armed men held up the cashier and assistant cashier of the St. Louis Star in an elevator on the ninth floor of the Star building, Nov. 29, and escaped with $6,000. The money was to have been used for payroll purposes. The newspaper office is located in the heart of St. Louis's downtown district.

The incident created great excitement among the staff of the newspaper.

Publisher Appointed State Printer

J. R. Gabbert, newspaper publisher of Riverside, Cal., has been appointed state printer to succeed Frank J. Smith, recently appointed warden of San Quentin penitentiary.

THE PASSAIC DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities

TRADING POPULATION

167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

The New Orleans States

Is now represented in the East and West by the

JOHN M. BRANHAM COMPANY

New York Office—Canadian-Pacific Bldg.

Chicago Office—Mallers Bldg.

Also in Detroit, Atlanta, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco

TIPS TO AD MANAGERS

N. W. Ayer & Son, 300 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Placing account of Graton & Knight Mfg. Company, Worcester, manufacturers of leather belting, lace leather, etc.

Brandt Advertising Company, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. A number of towns in the Middle West are being added to the list on the Curtiss Candy Company, Chicago, Ill.

W. L. Brann, Inc., 11 East 43rd street, New York. Placing account of the Wahl Company, Chicago, manufacturers of "Eversharp" pencils and "Wahl" pens.

Brooks of Illinois, 30 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Contracts are being sent out to a general list of metropolitan newspapers on the Bonnoy Company, Chicago.

Cleveland A. Chandler and Company, 35 Congress street, Boston. Placing the mail order accounts of Washington Jewelry Company, Boston and Paul Case, Brockton, Mass., in newspapers and magazines in the United States and Canada.

Conover-Mooney Company, Harris Trust Building, Chicago. Placing account of the National Kraut Packers' Association, Clyde, Ohio.

D'Arcy Advertising Co., International Life Building, St. Louis. Renewing some newspaper contracts for the White Company, automobile, Cleveland.

Erwin, Wasey & Company, 844 Rush street, Chicago. A general list of newspapers is being prepared on the Postum Cereal Company, Battle Creek, Mich., (Bran and Post Toasties).

Ferry-Hanly Advertising Company, 1110 Grand avenue, Kansas City, Mo. Placing account of the Nonspi Company, Kansas City, manufacturers of "Nonspi."

Charles H. Fuller Company, 629 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Metropolitan newspapers are receiving orders on the Whitmarsh Laboratories, Adrian, Mich.

Gardner Advertising Company, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Special Christmas copy is being prepared on the Reichmann Electric Company, Chicago, advertising a loud speaker for radios, to be used in a number of metropolitan newspapers, including those in Chicago, New York, and Boston. The account of the Timken Roller Bearing Company, Canton, O., has been secured, and will be placed soon.

Walter E. Hardy, Inc., 111 West Monroe street, Chicago. A limited list of newspapers is being made up on the Cooper Underwear Company, Kenosha, Wis.

E. W. Hellwig Company, 9 East 40th street, New York. Placing special page copy with newspapers in various sections for Corn Products Refining Company, New York, "Karo Corn Syrup."

Hicks Advertising Agency, 52 Vanderbilt avenue, New York. Has obtained the account of Louis Lustig and Maurice Rentner, who have recently formed a merger for the purpose of producing in this country the "Ensemble" Suit.

Klau-Van-Pietersom-Dunlop-Younggreen, Inc., Milwaukee, Wis. The account of Oelerick & Berry, Chicago, (Old Manse Syrup) has just been obtained and some advertising is being contemplated in Chicago and adjacent territory.

Kling-Gibson Advertising Company, 220 South State street, Chicago. Some special advertising is being planned during December on Williams Oil-O-Matic Heater, of C. U. Williams & Son, Bloomington, Ill., in a number of large dealer towns.

H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, 209 South State street, Chicago. Copy schedules are b sent to some Illinois papers and some Illi state border towns on Plantation Pancake F of the Michigan Company, Valparaiso, Ind Livermore & Knight Company, Provide R. I. Making contracts with newspapers selected sections for the American Transfor Company, radio.

Lord & Thomas, 400 No. Michigan ave Chicago. Handling account of Seiz, Schwa Company, Chicago, manufacturers "Selz" sh A general list of newspapers is being prep on Mary T. Goldman, St. Paul, Minn. newspaper list is being contemplated on Kel Switchboard & Supply Company, Chic (radio) no longer placing advertising direct

McJunkin Advertising Company, Inc., 5 S Wabash avenue, Chicago. A new list is b prepared on A. Stein & Company, with sev of the smaller town newspapers elimina Again placing orders with newspapers in v ous sections for the Channel Chemical C pany, "O'Cedar" Mops and Polish, Chicago

Moser & Cotins, 206 Paul Building, U N. Y. Handling account of Chr. Hans Laboratory, Inc., Little Falls, N. Y., m facturers "Junket."

C. J. Ollendorf Company, 306 South Wat avenue, Chicago. Contracts are being sent to newspapers in large California cities on Planert Skate Company, Chicago.

Irving F. Paschall, Inc., McCormick Build Chicago. Has secured the account of the kening Manufacturing Company, Philadel makers of Pedrick heat shaped piston rings

Potts-Turnbull Company, 6 North Mich avenue, Chicago. Newspapers in the large c in the south and southwest are being sent schedules on Jones Dairy Farm Sausage, Atkinson, Wis.

Frank Seaman, 470 Fourth avenue, York. Again making contracts with newspa in selected sections for the General Cigar C pany, "Robert Burns," and "White C cigars, New York.

35,434

Net paid (1923) Average.
An increase of
47% in 7 Years.

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.

National Representatives

Marbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg Chicago

The Deseret News

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH

74.4% of the population of Utah live on Interurban Lines leading to Salt Lake City.

Foreign Representatives
CONE, HUNTON & WOODMAN
New York Chicago Detroit
Kansas City St. Louis Atlanta

Pacific Coast Representatives
H. H. CONGER COMPANY
Los Angeles San Francisco

YOUR CLASSIFIED AD

in

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

is read by the man you want to reach

ONE HUNDRED NEWSPAPERS have bought serial rights to one or more novel on the following list:

Ann's An Idiot, by Pamela Wynne.
Blue Blood, by Owen Johnson.
The Communicating Door, by Wadsworth Camp
The Desert's Price, by William McLeod Rain
The Divine Lady, by E. Barrington.
The Exile of the Lariat, by Honoré Willsi Morrow.
High Fires, by Marjorie B. McClure.
The Home Maker, by Dorothy Canfield.
The Mystery Woman, by Alice MacGowan an Perry Newberry.
The Owls' House, by Crosbie Garstin.
The Parowan Bonanza, by B. M. Bower.
Race, by William McFee.
The Rover, by Joseph Conrad.
Rufus, by Grace S. Richmond.
Rustler's Valley, by Clarence E. Mulford.
So Big, by Edna Ferber.
The Tenth Woman, by Harriet T. Comstock.
The Voice at Johnnywater, by B. M. Bower.
The Water Bearer, by J. Allan Dunn.
The Wedding Song, by Ethel Watts Mumford.
The Wolfer, by Frederick Niven.

NEW RELEASES EVERY FEW WEEKS.

D. P. SYNDICATE
GARDEN CITY, N. Y.

Representing: Dodd, Mead & Co.; Doubleda Page & Co.; Harcourt, Brace & Co.; Littl Brown & Co.; Frederick A. Stokes Co.

YOU MUST TELL THE BUSINES MEN OF YOUR TOWN ABOUT

BUSINESS

If you don't it will
COST YOU MONEY

John T. Flynn's Daily Business Review deal with fundamental business cond tions of vital interest to every busine man. They are backed by the greate business news collecting organization i America, The United Publishers Co poration, publishers of Iron Age, Dr Goods Economist and a score of oth nationally known business publication

Write for Particulars to

Edward F. Roberts, Editorial Direct

U. P. C. NEWS SERVICE, INC

243 W. 39th St., New York Cit

TEXT OF TAX PUBLICITY DECISION

(Continued from page 7)

ight accrue from Governmental process. From the argument and brief submitd, the foregoing propositions is not allenged. It is equally fundamental, wever, that under the guise of a taxig power the Congress cannot regulate ay matters of a purely local nature and eforce a tax as a penalty for disobedie:e to such regulation.

In the instant case the publications gave t names of tax-payers and the amounts id by them. This information had aeady been yielded to the public, as a l of the tax-payers with the amounts d, had been made available for public ipection. The power of Congress to eforce the payment of the tax had been de effective and had been concluded, all with the final exercise of the chief wer granted to Congress, the indidental wers would of necessity be at an end. Congress would have no authority to ntinue to exercise an incidental power hich in a measure involves local regulatn after it had fully enjoyed and exusted its main power and had gathered the benefits accruing therefrom.

But it may be argued that such publi:ion is prejudicial to the tax-payer. his may be true, and if the Congress d attempted to suppress all publicaons, its act probably could have been de effective, but in this case the Conss attempted to regulate the manner the publication of the lists. This was rly a usurpation of power. It was an incident to its power to tax, but obvsly an attempt on the part of the Conss to say in what manner the people uld acquire information made availle to them. Moreover, if the enactnt is susceptible of the construction en it by counsel for the Government, h act would be a clear transgression gn the First Amendment to the Constiton, which forbids an abridgment of freedom of the press.

n this view, the Court is constrained hold that the enactment is violative the First Amendment to the Constiid and is void in law.

—In the above discussion the theory a been followed to the effect that the lication as made offended against the gressional act. I am not inclined to theory. The statute upon which the ictment is based makes it "unlawful any person to print or publish in any ner whatever not provided by law any me return or any part thereof, or rce of income, profits, losses or exeditures appearing in any income re-n."

he publication in question did not vio- this provision, as no publication was e "in any manner whatever" of "any me return or any part thereof," and not purport to cover any income re-n, but, as conceded on argument, the ernment indictment charges only that publication as made was from a list of e who had paid a tax and the amount by them, respectively. This was rate and apart from the return and a have been different from the return, may have checked against a single not including the name of the yer in the return.

ragraph "B" of Section 257 of the gressional Act, as hereinbefore set enjoins upon the Commissioner the to have prepared and made available to public inspection, "lists calling the name and post office address of each person making an income tax return, together with the amount of the tax paid by such person."

Undoubtedly it was the Congressional purpose to preserve the cloak of secrecy upon the returns of income taxpayers, but after the imposition and the payment of the tax, then the fact of the payment with the name of the taxpayer and the amount paid by him must be made available for public inspection.

It could only be a violation of the law if it could be construed as printing and publishing by indirection a part of the return. In all probability the Congress had this in mind when it provided that the name and amount paid by a taxpayer should be made available for public inspection. Moreover, the inhibition of the section is directed against the publication "in any manner whatever" of any portion of the return "not provided by law."

If, therefore, the amount paid as a tax may be construed as part of the return, it was excepted from the provisions of the penal statute, for its publication is in a measure provided for by law in this that it must be made available for public inspection.

Section 3,167, Revised Statutes, reenacted as a part of the Revenue law of 1924, forbids any officer of the Government from divulging or making known in any manner ever the amount or source of income or any particulars thereof set forth or discussed in any income return. Yet such officer by another section of the statutes is required to expose to public inspection a list of all income taxpayers with the amount paid by each.

It would be strange indeed if any interpretation more favorable to an officer should be made than to the unofficial person mentioned in practically the same language in the same statute.

It is my judgment that the name of the taxpayer and amount paid by him was not considered by the lawmakers such an important part of the return as to cover it with the cloak of secrecy. Even if the Congress sought to maintain a measure of secrecy upon this information, it not only exceeded its authority, but impinged upon the First Amendment to the Constitution. In view of the foregoing, the demurrers of the several defendants will be sustained.

Friends to Honor Rowe Stewart

Advertising friends of Rowe Stewart, recently elected vice-president and general manager of the Philadelphia Record, are arranging a dinner to be held in his honor Dec. 9, at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, Philadelphia. In addition to his newspaper position, Mr. Stewart is a former president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Sunday Edition Launched

The Post Publishing Company, publishers of the Salisbury (N. C.) Post, an afternoon daily, began Sunday, Nov. 30, to publish a Sunday morning issue. J. F. Hurley is president of the company and editor of the Post.

Obituary

MARGARET CULLINAN BRESNAHAN, 72, mother of J. F. Bresnahan, business manager of the New York World, died in Springfield, Mass. Nov. 26.

MRS. REBECCA J. SEITZ, 81, mother of Don C. Seitz, of the New York World, died at her home in Cos Cobb, Conn., Nov. 22.

A. E. GUYTON, 51, city editor of the Coos Bay (Ore.) Times, and southwestern Oregon correspondent for the Portland Telegram, and for Seattle and San Francisco papers, died recently from a heart attack.

F. A. WRENCH, editor and publisher of the Sparta (N. C.) Alleghany Star, died at his home last week after a brief illness.

WILLIAM L. REID, publisher of the Fayette (Mo.) Advertiser, died Dec. 1.

MRS. P. W. KEMP, wife of the publisher of the Argyle (Minn.) Banner, died recently of heart failure.

URBAN J. HOULT, a member of the firm of Radcliffe & Hoult, publishers of the Merced (Cal.) Evening Sun, died recently after an illness of several weeks.

MRS. LOUISE HAMMOND, wife of Ross Hammond, former publisher of the Freemont (Neb.) Tribune, died recently in California.

J. W. HINCHON, 59, editor of the Algona (Ia.) Courier for 25 years, died Nov. 23 at Ventura, Ia.

A. D. HILL, 82, editor and owner of the Prophetstown Spike, Tampico Tornado and Morrison Herald, western Illinois newspapers, died Nov. 26, at Sterling, Ill., where he had spent his declining years.

B. FRANK WOOD, proprietor of the Doane Street Press, Boston, and past president of the Boston Press Club, died in the Lawrence Memorial Hospital, Nov. 28.

JOHN J. STRANAHAN, 81, for many years owner and editor of the Chagrin Falls (Ohio) Exponent, died at his home in Cleveland recently.

WALTER W. SCHMIDT, 43, for 16 years photo-engraver of the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph and the Gazette-Times died at his home in Pittsburgh, Nov. 25.

EDWARD P. B. RANKIN, editor of the Marine Guide, Boston, and for many years on the staff of the Boston Herald, died at his home in Dorchester, Mass., Nov. 28.

JOHN F. MCQUADE for 38 years in the employ of the New York Sun, died in New York Dec. 1. He was routeman for the newspaper at the time of his death.

W. L. AGNEW, Chicago advertising man associated with the Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company, died last week.

O'Neill Joins Oswald Company

The American Printer has announced the election of Matthew J. O'Neill as treasurer and general manager of the Oswald Publishing Company. Mr. O'Neill was for 26 years general manager of Machinery, of New York.

You Know It's

The Beacon Journal

In Akron, Ohio

No one disputes that fact. But do that business is booming in Akron—that the factories are working three shifts—that every one is buying what they want, as well as what they need. Money is plentiful—business is good.

You Know

Run Your Campaign in a Live Paper, in a Live City.

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 128,763

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg., New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

THE same standards of quality are maintained by The News today that caused this paper to be recognized as one of America's best dailies long years ago.

The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE

TACOMA

Population, 112,000 People

Local flour mills export over 1,500,000 barrels of flour each year; Tacoma Smelter largest in the West; 2 High Schools, 6 Intermediate Schools, 39 Grade Schools, College of Puget Sound, Annie Wright Seminary and 145 churches.

You can blanket the rich and prosperous territory of Tacoma and Southwest Washington through the columns of the News Tribune; A. B. C. Audited Circulation, 32,643.

Frank S. Baker, President. Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave., New York City.
Ford, Parsons Co., 360 No. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

R. J. Bidwell & Co., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

New Haven Register

is New Haven's Dominant Paper

Circulation over 42,171 Average

Bought every day by more New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.

New Haven Register

The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

First!

—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results

The Indianapolis NEWS

CIRCULATION

FOR ALL DISTRIBUTORS OF DAILY NEWSPAPERS

By J. Omansky

DURING the past decade circulation promotion methods have been subjected to the closest scrutiny by the A. B. C., local advertisers, circulation managers' and publishers' organizations, and in many instances by readers.

At the recent convention in Atlantic City of the Association of National Advertisers the delegates were treated to the spectacle of three representativs of as many lading magazines describing or rather defending their respective methods of obtaining subscriptions. Why they or newspaper circulators should have to defend their methods of promotion has never been quite clear to us because the means used to get new readers are not important. What is paramount, and yet is not investigated by any official body, is how a publication holds its readers.

When at the next convention newspaper circulators appear, as we understand they may, they should explain whether their readers are held on the merits of the papers they sell or whether their papers have to be resold continually to the same people and kept in homes by the use of premiums, yearly bargain offers, prizes to boys, contests, and the like.

It seems to us that, in order to introduce a paper to non-readers almost any method is justifiable. But when the same method, regardless of what it is, has to be resorted to to keep the readers in line such a circulation is of doubtful value to advertisers.

* * *

We know papers that continually canvass with premiums and sign and resign the same readers. We know other papers that hold large portions of their circulations by giving prizes to boys who get the same friends, relatives, and neighbors to subscribe every time an offer is made; and there are papers that inflate their circulations by running contests almost every year.

No, it's not the method to get the business that counts, it's whether a paper can hold circulation on merit that is important.

* * *

While on the subject of promotion methods the following letter from a circulator of a six figure paper is pertinent:

"Give some thought to the terrible practice of paying city and out of town agents a top-heavy salary, providing they have no returns.

"Another beautiful practice is to pay the carriers extra for so-called 'additional delivery service,' due to late arrival of trains. In some towns this pay for making a separate delivery of late papers occurs six or eight times per month, the agent being allowed $3.00 on each occasion.

"We are also informed that in some of the larger towns the carrier is sent a hundred more papers daily than he really needs and after paying the bill in full he receives a refund check for extra services rendered.

"On Single Mail it seems that the use of premiums to obtain subscriptions must be mentioned very plainly in the Audit Reports, but if it costs $5.00 to secure a $4.00 subscription through the use of men driving the rural routes, it is O. K."

Such wasteful unbusinesslike methods are employed by at least one paper in almost every town to make the paid figures look big because the A. B. C. considers only paid circulation valuable. We find no quarrel with that and will not until we can devise a better way of gauging the value of circulation, but we believe that business maintained in the manner described above should be so designated.

* * *

The general slump in circulation right now should not cause any one to lose sleep. The let-down after election and the early start in Christmas buying are the principal causes of the drop in sales. The pick-up will come around about the middle of January.

* * *

Another reason for the slump is that circulation organizations district men, street men, canvassers, and even carriers usually get into ruts about this time of the year. A little shaking up is needed every once in a while even in the best organizations. Frequent meetings, not the pep kind to which all the boys are hep, but gatherings of an informal nature where common problems are discussed, editorial plans announced, promotion campaigns examined, will do more to get men out of ruts than any other method we know. All departments have their let-downs and need jarring from time to time.

* * *

Many papers that use premiums in house to house canvassing find it best to have the verifiers deliver the premiums two or three weeks after the orders are taken. This is done on the supposition that when a subscriber continues the paper for at least two weeks he will live up to the terms of his contract.

* * *

When solicitors take signed orders it is well to have the verifiers get signatures which will indicate that the papers are being delivered properly. In this way two signatures are obtained which serve as a check on both the canvassers and verifiers. Yes, the latter have to be checked.

We have found the indirect method of verifying the most successful. A new subscriber is not asked whether he gave Mr. Smith an order. He is asked whether his service is satisfactory and whether he likes the paper. In this way no reflection is cast on the canvasser and the order, if O. K., is clinched.

* * *

The cross word puzzle feature seems to have reached the level of other stock features wtih a definite following.

Many papers are finding it worth while to stimulate interest in the puzzles by offering prizes for the best puzzles submitted by readers.

* * *

The Columbus Dispatch and other papers are running the puzzles in the want ad sections. That's a smart thing to do.

A cross word puzzle book should make a good premium now.

* * *

There was a period after the war when news of murders did not affect sales except when the cases were local and the persons involved prominent. The explanation was that the wholesale killing during the war hardened people and dwarfed by comparison single murders.

As a result many papers gladly took advantage of the situation and subordinated stories of crime. Now, any kind of a murder is good for a spurt in sales for a few days, and papers wanting mass circulation can get it by playing murder stories big.

* * *

Truck service to suburban towns is rapidly spreading, especially among afternoon papers. This use of trucks in trading areas is expensive but necessary, in most instances, if subscribers are to be given the best possible service.

Afternoon papers that found it impossible to compete for rural route circulation with their morning rivals now find themselves on more of an equal footing when they deliver to farmers their papers on the day of publication.

Where roads are good and population dense, truck service can be maintained at little higher cost than baggage and mail.

To Build New Paper Mill

The new Lake St. John paper mill of Price Brothers & Co., Ltd., at St. Joseph Dalma, Quebec, will be completed and producing paper by Dec. 15, 1925, it was announced this week.

RADIO AMATEURS RELAY NEW

Syndicates Test Them for Emergen Use When Wires Fail

To demonstrate the value of amate radio for forwarding news dispatches times of emergency, when communicati by wire it cut off, 68 messages addres to as many newspapers were started cently from New York City over routes of the American Radio Re League.

These messages were addressed to member papers of the North Americ Newspaper Alliance. After leaving offices of the N. A. N. A., New Yo the messages were transmitted by E. Glaser of Brooklyn.

One of the messages as received by E. Graves of Cambridge, Mass., and livered to the Boston Post, re "Thanksgiving greetings from the No American Newspaper Alliance via Am ican Radio Relay League. Here is example how amateur radio can se you when communication lines fail."

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?

Because

The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE

AND

The BEAUMONT JOURNAL

were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.

Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED

SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK.

Standard Gravure Corporation

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The most successful of all newspaper consolidations.

THE NEW YORK HERALD New York Tribune

The Pittsburgh Press

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

Daily and Sunday

Has the Largest CIRCULATION IN PITTSBURGH

MEMBER A. B. C.

Foreign Advertising Representatives

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.

New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.

Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.

San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"

The World.

MORNING EDITION

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York

Mallers Bldg. Chicago — General Motors Bldg. Detroit

The Plain Dealer

has the Largest Circulation of Any Cleveland Daily Newspaper

205,569

J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York

Woodward & Kelly, Security Bldg., Chicago

Utah, Southern and Eastern Idaho, Eastern Nevada and Western Wyoming—the territory served by

THE Salt Lake Tribune

No other section of the country offer the advertiser the opportunity of practically covering four states by using on newspaper.

FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES

The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency

New York—Chicago—Detroit—St. Lou —Kansas City—Atlanta.

PACIFIC COAST REPRESENTATIVE

M. C. Mogensen & Co., Inc.

Los Angeles—San Francisco—Seattle

ALL IN THE DAY'S WORK

Drawn Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

By A. E. HAYWARD

"Somebody's Stenog" Tells What She Knows About Him

CNE: Office of A. E. Hayward, cartoonist.

A. E. Hayward—"Miss O'Flage, is anyone out [illegible]?"

Somebody's Stenog. — "How you mean [illegible] I guess nobody, is it?"

A. E. H.—"But I mean, [illegible] anyone [illegible] I seem to [illegible] voices."

S. S.—"There [illegible] go with that [illegible] ace medium [illegible] again. Well, [illegible] EDITOR & PUBLISHER wants to know something [illegible] you."

A. E. H.—"Are they both out there?"

S. S.—"Each of it. Shall I tell them [illegible] I know about you?"

A. E. H.—"Great Scott, girl, use discretion. Wait—I'll be right out."

S. S.—"You see? He's always cramping style. I could have told you a [illegible]—well, here he is now."

A. E. H.—"Good-morning. I feel very [illegible] honored—"

S. S.—"There, you see? Right away [illegible] of blah. Pin him right down to [illegible] or he'll be wanderin' off into the [illegible], dreamiest stuff about great big [illegible] spaces and art and his latest song [illegible] blank verse—and believe me it's [illegible] enough and—"

A. E. H.—"I hope you will pardon the [illegible] ruptions of this young lady. I just [illegible] never around to—"

S. S.—"To keep your feet on the [illegible], though Heaven knows you [illegible] won't have any trouble in that re[illegible]"

A. E. H.—"Miss O'Flage, EDITOR & PUBLISHER is not interested in such trifling natters as the size of the shoes I [illegible]."

S. S.—"Oh, baby! They're no triflin' [illegible]."

A. E. H.—"Well, ahem. I suppose I [illegible] admit that I was born and grew [illegible] be a beautiful child—"

S. S.—"And someone pushed you and [illegible] looked sad ever since."

A. E. H.—"No, No. Nothing of the [illegible]. My father was an artist—"

S. S.—"Laws! You say that as if you [illegible] singing 'My Mother Was a Lady.'"

A. E. H.—"It was while crawling about [illegible] father's studio that I doubtless absorbed subconsciously much in the way [illegible] inspiration which later was to aid me [illegible] in painting. I remember as a boy the [illegible] advent of a talk with my father at [illegible] got seated at his studio window—"

A. E. HAYWARD

S. S.—"Twilight seated at a window! You talk like a nut! See, if you don't pin him down in a coupla minutes you think you're a flea jumpin' over the hills on the moon. Listen. You studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, didn't you?"

A. E. H.—"Yes."

S. S.—"When did you first find out you could draw?"

A. E. H.—"Why, I haven't found that out yet."

S. S.—"Good footwork. Then, when did it occur to you that you had a bean good enough to drag down perfectly good money for the stuff you do?"

A. E. H.—"I believe the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin stood for a lot when they paid me for sticking about the place for five years."

S. S.—"And you did a suffragette comic for the New York Evening World, called 'Someday Maybe,' didn't you?"

A. E. H.—"Yes, but—"

S. S.—"Then there was the Sunday page on the old New York Herald and a lot of alleged humorous writing in the City Life Section of the New York American?"

A. E. H.—"Yes."

S. S.—"And now you're slugging for the Ledger Syndicate?"

A. E. H.—"Yes."

S. S.—"And you are a member of the New York Water Color Club, a director of the Philadelphia Water Color Club, and you skidded into a gold medal at the Academy one year, didn't you, for a group of water colors?"

A. E. H.—"Y—yes, but really those are matters one should speak of in another mood—"

S. S.—"Rats! Now can you think of anything in the world you're glad about?"

A. E. H.—"Two things. First that you haven't pulled the old wheeze that I was whipped in school for drawing funny pictures of the teacher and—secondly—you know when I met you—"

S. S.—"Good Heavens. What a man! That's all, Mr. EDITOR & PUBLISHER. He's going to get sentimental."

First nine months of 1924

Carried more Men's Wear advertising than the World and Sun combined.

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

Astounding Growth of West Virginia's Banks

DURING the past thirty years, there has been a stupendous and continuous increase in the banking resources of West Virginia. This increase has exceeded 2400%.

In 1891, when the state department of banking was first established in West Virginia, the deposits amounted to $14,064,086. There were 23 national and 49 state banks at that time.

In 1923, there were 125 national and 222 state banks, with business amounting to $343,478,607.

This shows that, in a period of thirty-two years, West Virginia has

275 More Banks
$329,414,521 Increased Deposits

Banking resources are always indicative of a state's progressiveness and productiveness—two characteristics which are vitally essential to a good buying territory.

There is much money waiting for you in West Virginia, Mr. National Advertiser, provided you have the right, effective means of reaching the purchasing public. This can only be accomplished through the list of never-failing dailies shown below.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Bluefield
*Telegraph	(M)	11,605	.05
*Telegraph	(S)	15,752	.06
Charleston
*Gazette	(M)	19,619	.07
*Gazette	(S)	23,493	.08
Clarksburg
Telegram	(E)	9,479	.04
Telegram	(S)	11,797	.045
Huntington
Advertiser	(E)	11,176	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(M)	14,803	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(S)	14,482	.04
Martinsburg
*Journal	(E)	4,830	.03
Morgantown
†Post	(E)	5,085	.025
Parkersburg
*News	(M)	7,261	.025
*News	(S)	8,840	.025
*Sentinel	(E)	7,751	.03

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

BOMB HOAX JAILS 3 PUBLICITY PLOTTERS

Vicious Movie Press Agent Stunt Staged in San Diego Newspaper Office Proves Boomerang to Perpetrators

A moving picture press agent at San Diego wanted to "break into" the first pages of the local papers on Thursday of last week, and succeeded so handsomely in his free publicity venture, that he drew eight-column banner headlines and jail cells for himself and two others in the alleged conspiracy.

This incident of press agent fury is without a precedent for impudent audacity.

The "master mind" of the San Diego stunt appears to be a young gentleman named Max Brunstein, publicity agent of the Plaza Theatre. Arrested with him were C. C. Platt, manager of the house, and William Fife, a working man, who had been employed for the occasion by the press agent.

Brunstein's job was to attract public attention to a melodramatic picture showing at the Plaza. The advertising columns of the newspapers were not good enough for him. His ambition to fill the seats of the playhouse, through free publicity, became so overheated that he conceived the idea of planting a "bomb" in the editorial rooms of the San Diego Union and Tribune, the underdone idea being that he would thus wake the editors up to the importance of the occasion.

A suitcase containing a fake bomb and other paraphernalia was discovered emitting smoke by a member of the staff of the newspaper. Clockwork could be heard ticking within the case. The entire building was quickly vacated, and a telephone girl in a booth bravely remained at her post until everyone had been warned of the possibility of an explosion.

The police and fire departments rushed to the scene. An intrepid fire chief grabbed up the smoking and ticking suitcase and carried it from the building. An hour later the suitcase was opened, revealing the fake.

The offices of several physicians are located in the Union and Tribune building. An aged woman, undergoing treatment in one of the offices, was so shocked by the hoax that for a time her life was despaired of.

Extras were put on the street by two evening papers, telling of the outrage. Later editions told of the arrest of three men. They were charged with malicious mischief, disturbing the peace and conspiracy. The "bomb" was planted by the workman, who received $2 for the job.

The owners of the theatre immediately took a half page advertising space to explain and apologize. It was asserted that the press agent and the manager had been discharged. Both made public apologies and asserted that no one but themselves were involved in the stunt.

The San Diego Union said in an editorial box:

"The hoax was vicious. It was contemptible. It was arranged by cheap promoters to get cheap advertising for a cheap movie. There was no zest of ignorant humor to the affair—merely a thoroughly sordid, penny-pinching desire to get advertising without paying for it, no matter what it might cost others. The immediate results of the thing may prove tragic. The indirect results can hardly be counted.

"The perpetrators of this affair are not merely contemptible, nor merely ridiculous. They are dangerous. The damage they have already done cannot be repaired, and the harm that may result cannot be forestalled. They should not escape, then, merely with a burden of contempt and ridicule.

"Steps are of course being taken to prosecute the offenders for their violation of law, and to get action on the case by leaders in the motion picture industry. It is hard to believe that a mature man, mentally normal, could have been persuaded, or hired, to take part in a thing of this kind."

Kansas Daily Changes Hands

The Augusta (Kan.) Daily Gazette has been sold by W. K. Leatherock, publisher, to Burns Hegler, former publisher of the El Dorado (Kan.) Times, more recently general manager of the Whichita Falls (Tex.) Record-News. The retiring publisher has been in charge of the paper for the past five years. Formerly a weekly, the Gazette became a daily in 1919.

RENAUD EXPLODES MYTH OF CYNICISM

(Continued from page 12)

the Chapparal, the undergraduate humorous magazine. He also edited the college annual.

Out of college, the present New York sub-editor experienced the usual economic depression. Instead of accepting the glowing offers to become insurance salesman at high commissions and loss to shoe leather, he called on San Francisco newspapers with clock-like regularity. His money gradually diminished.

One day, when he literally was "down to his last nickel," the San Francisco Examiner relented sufficiently to give him a street job at $12.50 a week. Renaud remained on San Francisco dailies for nine years becoming dramatic critic on the Bulletin, and later holding the same position on the San Francisco Chronicle.

After the earthquake of 1906 he faced east, and 1912 found him on the staff of the New York Globe. With a little money in his pocket, and ambition, he decided to free-lance a while. This was partially successful, but unsteady, and he eventually determined to indulge another interest. He became manager of B. F. Keith's Chestnut Street Opera House in Philadelphia.

"From 1913 and 1914," Renaud tells himself, "I had a burst of playwriting. I believe I wrote more unsuccessful plays in a given time than any other man who ever lived.

"The number? Oh, I'd have to open my trunk and spend a week counting," he laughingly declares.

It is public record, however, that Jane Cowl played in one of his productions, "Betty Behave," which lasted all of two weeks in 1916.

After this episode, Renaud, who had spent all his ready cash, had to go to work on newspapers again. He got a job on the New York Tribune. Two years ago he spent about a year as night managing editor on the New York Herald. He returned to the Tribune before the Herald-Tribune merger.

On the Herald Tribune Renaud has filled practically every position. His fellow workers declare him to be one of the most efficient all-round newspaper men in the business.

But Renaud himself, being a modest man, grumblingly admits:

"Well, one thing, I've never written fashions."

But some day, perhaps, he will.

RADIO PICTURES NEW SCIENTIFIC TRIUMPH

(Continued from page 5)

international affairs," he said at that time, "is a device whereby the front page of the London Times, for instance, can be put into a machine and zip!—it will be in New York."

The next day E. F. W. Alexanderson, consulting engineer of the General Electric Company and at that time chief engineer of the Radio Corporation, told Gen. Harbord that within a week he could lay before him the engineering data on which Mr. Young's suggestion could be made good. He did this and the work of devising and developing the machines Mr. Alexanderson outlined was immediately taken up by Mr. Ranger and his associates. Three months ago, it required four hours to transmit the same picture which came through in the public tests last Sunday in 20 minutes. The entire invention has been developed in less than two years.

In addition to sending pictures across the Atlantic, there are several other uses for this new process, such as:

Enabling signatures to be sent instantly to prevent delays in waiting for signed documents by mail.

Sending facsimiles of any printed ter instantaneously.

Transmitting portraits of crim across the Atlantic or to ships at for identification purposes.

In sending pictures or other pr matter across the Pacific from York, Capt. Ranger said it would ably be done in relays.

"To transmit a picture to Japan would first send it across the count the Radio Corporation's station in fornia. Here it would be relayed t Hawaiian Islands, where there is an high power station, and then to J These relaying stations work autom ally and it would not be necessary t ceive the picture in California and start it over again."

N. Y. Times Warns of Imposte

The New York Times this week i warnings against a man represe himself as a subscription agent o Times, who has obtained money false pretences in Philadelphia, C land and other cities. The man has the names of "Harold M. Marsl "Harold A. Frazer" and "Harol Willing."

Trade Marks and Trade Names

Our Washington correspondent enables us to keep our readers posted on important trade marks and trade name decisions.

WESTERN ADVERTISING

566 Market St., San Francisco

6 months' trial subscription with Big January Annual $1

Herman Bernstein sailed for Europe November the 27th

WATCH

for his first

CLOSE-UPS

of

ENGLAND

New York Territory has been secured by the Brooklyn Daily Eagle

Federal Feature Syndicate

160 Fifth Ave., New York

Our Features:

Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service
11 Spruce St., New York

1925 will be a Prosperous Year

AN immediate gain of thousands of NEW prepaid subscribers is the best possible way to start the New Year. Our campaigns offer the one SURE way to obtain this circulation increase, as is proven by over twenty years of unquestioned supremacy and the number of leading metropolitan dailies who use and endorse our services.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

afraid of love

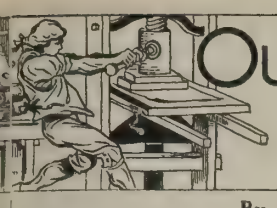
By Christabel Russell
(The Hon. Mrs. John Hugo Russell)

A gripping story by the mother of the famous "dream baby," sensational figure in one of the most remarkable divorce cases ever contested in the English courts.

A novel of married life by a woman of extraordinary experience.

Don't miss it—wire your reservation. Immediate Release.

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.



799 Broadway New York City

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping—Tr
fic — Gasoline — Upkeep
Roads — Legislation
Taxation — Insurance
Garaging — Used Car Bu
ing and Selling and all t
other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORI COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Servi
Woodward Bldg., Washington, D

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

(T only for the newspaper library ut also for every library, whether ol or private, one of the books of the r's unquestionably "Joseph Pulitzer—s Life and Letters" by Don C. Seitz ron and Schuster). To sum up the uts of this volume of something like ages requires more space than can aorded in this department. Briefly, olume tells the Pulitzer story from me a penniless seventeen-year-old pumped off a sailing vessel in Boston rbr until this same boy, who had be-wa great, fearless editor of crusading vspapers with large circulations, died pard his palatial private yacht, bty," then cruising in southern ei.

Between these two incidents are chap-elling of Pulitzer's political career, truggles to make his newspaper p ties dividend payers, his tragic at-p to substitute six secretaries for wo blind eyes, and his remarkable ections, for the most part, to news-e causes. To write this volume must been an assignment of love on the t of Mr. Seitz, who was for many ran intimate friend and trusted busi-s adviser of Joseph Pulitzer.

h book especially appeals to me be-s the author, in covering his assign-n has not overlooked the human side h former chief. The latter, for ex-ol when Col. Harvey was being bat-c nore or less in the editorial columns te World by Frank I. Cobb and rao W. Seymour, its chief editorial tes, sent the following wire from Harbor:

eh Cobb, Seymour, etc., to treat Harvey e ently, even when he is wrong. Able, n fellow and one of my boys. A little w and then all right, but don't handle t severely. I like him.

gin the author recalls many for-e chapters in the history of New k journalism, such as when Frank A. n y gave New York its first tabloid s aper—the Daily Continent. He s the editorial writer a wonderful n of the political battles in which World was on the firing-line—chap-hich supplement but do not sup-t "The Story of a Page," a book by n Langdon Heaton, describing in de-te editorial page of the World under it r.

o the readers of this department a pr which should be well-thumbed is o outlining Pulitzer's idea of news-er editing and making. (Chapter I. A good example of his system found in the memorandum which e sent to Charles M. Lincoln, then ing editor of the World, to con-ne on these objectives:

1. What is original, distinctive, dramatic, n , thrilling, unique, curious, quaint, hu-u odd, apt to be talked about, without c good taste or lowering the general od tone, and above all without impair-h confidence of the people in the truth of st ies or the character of the paper for p y and scrupulous cleanness.

2. What is the one distinctive feature, usade, public service or big exclusive? a r can be great, in my opinion, if it de-s mply upon the hand-to-mouth idea, news ign anyhow. One big distinctive feature ay at least. One striking feature each ould contain, prepared before, not left ate.

3. Generally speaking, always remember di erence between a paper made for the n for the masses, and a paper made for cl es. In using the word masses, I do xude anybody. I should make a paper th judges of the Supreme Court of the ed States would read with enjoyment, bly, but I would not make a paper that th judges of the Supreme Court and their ould read. I would make this paper u lowering the tone in the slightest degree.

4. Accuracy, accuracy, accuracy. Also ne, intelligent, not stupid, condensation. ic re or illustration unless it is first class in idea and execution.

yp al of the pungent criticisms which a hor says fell from Pulitzer in con-howers on Mr. Lincoln is the fol-ng e han who wrote the enclosed story on y nessee will Elect a Republican Governor," certainly ought to be discharged and the copy reader and the man who passed it. Who is Hopper? Banker, cow puncher, astronomer, or what? The story does not say, except that he was an orphan found in the streets. Somebody ought to be ashamed of himself.

Apropos of the sketch of Stimson in the paper of Sunday, Oct. 2, what is ordinary height? Would it not have been just as easy to have said "The man is five feet six, or seven, or eight?" Just ask any number of men "What is ordinary height?" and see whether you can get two men to agree.

If Pulitzer often "spanked" these editors, as Mr. Seitz says, he did, almost as frequently, "pet" them with notes of praise such as the following:

I want to thank you for your notes during the summer and your effective efforts. You certainly cannot complain about my having interfered or being disagreeable. I am in a very appreciative mood, although disappointed about Curate. If you don't know the word, ask Seitz. It is either a dreadful word or a very fortunate one. You should always have it on your mind.

Mr. Seitz explains the word "curate", which was a code word for circulation—something that was never out of Mr. Pulitzer's mind.

The New York World under Pulitzer and the New York Evening Post under Godkin were strange newspaper bedfellows. When Godkin died, however, Pulitzer issued the instruction:

Mr. William B. Merrill must write an editorial, a tribute to Godkin's ability, all the more so because the man never failed in fifteen years to abuse the World, and no doubt hated me. I think the profession has lost the ablest mind since the death of Greeley. It is a great loss to the independent thought of the press.

To the Pulitzer School of Journalism at Columbia University Mr. Seitz has devoted practically a chapter. In it I wish he had put some of those things which he told me in that chat I had with him in his private office—but that is another story. It is especially appropriate, on the other hand, that the two members of the publishing house issuing the volume should have been trained in the Pulitzer School of Journalism. It may be said in passing that Mr. Seitz urged Pulitzer not to establish a school of journalism, but endow the World and thus make it fool proof.

In writing "thirty" I want to say that Don Seitz has produced a biography that needs no editing before being sent to the composing room. In preparing his copy he has followed the instructions of his former chief as to what makes a good story. Its "curate" ought to be large. To show my appreciation I mark this review "'Led' All—Top of Column".

TO the December issue of The World's Work Carl C. Dickey contributes the fourth article of his series, "The Truth About the Newspapers." He entitles his December article "Dragoons of the Press." For the most part he considers how crime is handled by newspapers and in metropolitan dailies in particular.

After being somewhat critical of the man at the copy desk and the men on the street Mr. Dickey concludes his discussion with the following:

The American press is undoubtedly the finest and freshest in the world, but it could be infinitely finer and freer if it developed a conscience to match its power. Its reversions to barbarism now are too frequent, especially in the gathering of news. It has developed a conscience in its presentation of advertising much more rapidly than in its presentation of news. There is no doubt that it will develop that conscience in time, and that its dragoons will learn to use their heads more and their feet less.

This article by Mr. Dickey is not illustrated by photographs, but there is something in it by inserts which gives the dictum on news as set forth by Charles Anderson Dana, and the functions of a newspaper as set forth by E. Lansing Ray, publisher of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and James T. Williams, Jr., editor of the Boston Transcript. An interesting quotation for the record made of the first-page stories during the month of January is printed in the Cleveland Plain Dealer and compiled by the editor, E. C. Hopwood.

Illinois

The Most Populous State West of Alleghanies

Although Illinois with a population of 6,485,280, ranks third among all the States, it holds first place west of the Alleghany Mountains. Of these 6,485,280 beings, 5,278,339 were native born—while 67.9 per cent of the number constitute urban population.

Of the 1,767,600 persons between the ages of six and twenty-one, residing in Illinois, 1,127,560 were enrolled in the public schools while the enrollment in private schools was 241,739 making the total school enrollment 1,369,299.

It can be clearly seen from these figures that not only does an advertising campaign centered in Illinois reach a large number of people, but also an educated, thinking, discriminating people. Tell them the merits of your product and their own good judgment will make them try it.

These listed dailies are well worthy of your trust as well as that of the intellectual public they so conscientiously and effectively serve.

	Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
*Aurora Beacon-News .....(E)	17,408	.06	.06
*Chicago Herald & Examiner .....(M)	348,005	.55	.55
*Chicago Herald & Examiner .....(S)	1,018,917	1.10	1.10
Chicago Daily Journal .....(E)	120,449	.26	.24
*La Salle Tribune .....(E)	3,230	.025	.025
*Moline Dispatch .....(E)	10,680	.045	.045
*Peoria Star—(E) 29,197 .....(S)	22,236	.075	.06
*Rock Island Argus .....(E)	10,605	.045	.045
*Sterling Gazette .....(E)	5,734	.04	.04

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

KANSAS GROUP IN N. Y. TO EXPLAIN AD DRIVE

Seven Newspaper Publishers and Managers Give Luncheon to Advertising Men — Outline Their Cooperative Campaign

To present the facts on marketing conditions in Kansas, representatives of the Kansas Daily Newspaper Advertising Association were to give a luncheon Dec. 5, at the Waldorf Hotel, New York, to representatives of leading New York advertising agencies. Marco Morrow, general manager of the Topeka Capital, is association president, and Charles L. Nicholson, advertising manager, Hutchinson News, secretary.

Speakers at the luncheon were to be: Senator Arthur Capper, publisher of the Topeka Capital; Henry J. Allen, publisher of the Wichita Beacon, and former Governor of Kansas; Marcellus M. Murdock, publisher of the Wichita Eagle; George W. Marble, publisher of the Fort Scott Tribune-Monitor, and president of the National Editorial Association; and W. A. Bailey, general manager of the Kansas City Kansan.

The association, which includes 24 Kansas newspapers in its membership, has drawn up a new and definite plan of cooperation with advertisers, which the speakers will explain.

Last week the association gave a similar luncheon to the advertising men of Chicago.

CAMDEN DAILY EXPANDS

Post-Telegram Staff Enlarged Following Sale to Business Group

Many changes and improvements in the Camden (N. J.) Post-Telegram have followed the sale of that newspaper Nov. 17 to a syndicate of New Jersey business men headed by Killam E. Bennett, president; David Baird, Jr., vice-president, and Albert Woodruff, secretary.

Additions have been made to the local staff, and make-up and appearance has been almost completely changed.

P. I. Prentice, formerly of the New York Tribune, is the new general manager, succeeding F. F. Patterson, Jr., and Frederick Blair Jaekel, the new editor, replacing Upton S. Jeffrys. M. J. Donovan has been named circulation manager. Frank Albright remains as managing editor.

The night typesetting force has been doubled and a new Linotype machine has been installed.

VETERAN SPECIAL DIES

Frank R. Northrup Suddenly Stricken in New York, Nov. 29

Frank R. Northrup, widely known special newspaper representative, died suddenly in New York Nov. 29.

For 30 years he had conducted his own agency with offices at 350 Madison avenue, New York, and in the Association Building, Chicago. At his death he was representing about 45 newspapers. Prior to entering the specials' field, he was connected with the newspaper in his home town of Rome, N. Y.

He is survived by a wife and a daughter. Funeral services were held Dec. 1, at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, and burial was at Rome, N. Y.

Hearst Praises Rival's Plant

William Randolph Hearst and his son George Hearst, assistant publisher of the San Francisco Examiner, inspected the new plant of the San Francisco Chronicle, Nov. 29 as the guests of M. H. de Young, publisher. The "finest newspaper plant in the world," said Mr. Hearst. "It has gone several strides beyond the perfect point." Mr. Hearst admitted he was seeking new ideas for newspaper plants he said he was planning for Los Angeles and other cities.

DANVILLE, VA., MERGER FAILS

News Stockholders Disapprove—Vote to Sell to W. B. Smith, Manager

A proposed merger of the Danville (Va.) News and the Danville Bee fell through at a recent meeting of the stockholders of the News when they voted against merger of the two papers but approved a proposal for sale of the News to William B. Smith, manager and editor of the News since its organization about 18 months ago.

Some of the stockholders of the News had been negotiating for some time with R. A. James, Jr., owner of the Bee, for a consolidation of the two properties, and Mr. James, it was said, favored the proposal. However, action of the News' stockholders blocked further action in this direction.

Mr. Smith, it is understood, paid $10,000 in cash and assumed the obligations of the News. In an editorial announcing acquisition of full control of the property Mr. Smith said he would continue operation of the paper on a progressive plane.

Mr. Smith went to Danville from Richmond, where for many years he w newspaper work.

Both the News and Bee are after papers. It is understood that Mr. J will continue publication of the Bee. also is the owner of the Danville ister, morning paper.

Canadian Paper Revived

Shediac (N. B.) Le Moniteur Ac which suspended publication several ago, has been revived by Powl Robi son of the former publisher, Ferd Robidoux.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.
MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis Minn.

Used Newspaper Presses
Scott Quadruple Press Four Deck Two Pages Wide prints 4 to 34 pages.
Hoe Right Angle Quadruple Press, prints 4 to 32 pages.
Hoe Sextuple Press, prints 4 to 24 pages.
These three presses cut off pages 22¾ inches long, print 7 or 8 columns to the page.
PRESSES AVAILABLE FOR EARLY DELIVERY
Walter Scott & Co.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY
441 Monadnock Block CHICAGO
1457 Broadway NEW YORK

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and business bought and American Typefounders' products, pri and bookbinders' machinery of every de tion. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Bee St., New York City.

Web Presses for Sale:
Hoe 12-page web press; Hoe 16-page web Goss 16-page Junior straight line; Pott page with color; Hoe 20-page web press 32-page right angle quad; Goss half-to color press for comics, etc.; Scott five press. All above presses with stereotype ment. Campbell Multipress 8-page, fro forms (no stereotyping). All good outfit all but one at very low prices. For deta dress Baker Sales Company, 200 Fifth A New York City.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.
USED BY THE
ST. LOUIS STAR
St. Louis, Mo.
We refer you to them for their opinion
CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO CHICAGO — QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE
MAIN OFFICE Fisher Building 343 S. Dearborn St. CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE Marbridge Building Broadway at 34th St. NEW YORK

We can increase your business—you want it increased.
You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.
BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

MODERNIZ
your COMPOSING ROO
with
HAMILTON EQUIPMEN
Made in both wood and ste
Manufactured by
The Hamilton Mfg. C
Two Rivers, Wis.
For sale by all prominent Type Fo ders and Dealers everywhere.

Hoe Pedestal Saw Table

A compact, convenient and efficient Saw Table with a world-famous Hoe Saw that has the requisite number of Teeth properly set for cutting Wood or Metal. The Table is adjustable as to height to vary the protrusion of the saw while the Side Gauge can be set quickly through a Hand Wheel and a Lock Nut.
IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST
R. HOE & CO., Inc.
504-520 Grand Street New York City
7 South Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.
7 Water Street BOSTON, MASS.

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY
Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

10c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

5c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.

30c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Executive.
Thoughly trained from bottom up on large and small dailies in all departments. Circulation, advertising (display, classified, copywriting, etc.), credit and office management. Now employed looking for a position with live on small but financially sound daily that needs development in all departments. Prefer Indiana, or—Illinois, Ohio, or Kentucky. Married. Family. Age 28. Change January 1st. Box C-520. Editor & Publisher.

Advertising, Business Executive.
Result getter in modern promotional methods. Trained under country's most successful publishers. Highest character references. Available on reasonable notice. Confidential correspondence solicited. Box C-521, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
1st class, for paper having or desiring fixed rate and space contracts. Available after January first, on reasonable notice. Box C-527, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Triple salesman; first-class copy writer and layout man; seeks affiliation with progressive publication about January 15th. Energetic, middle man, protestant, married, permanently employed; excellent record; valuable newspaper experience. Box C-535, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager,
now member of staff of metropolitan newspaper in Central West, desires change Jan. 1. Age 36, married, 12 years as a publisher, business manager and advertising manager. Knows layout and copy preparation as well as selling newspaper merchandising. Address C-529, Editor & Publisher.

All-round Newspaperman.
Of three years in Boston; rapid, accurate, reliable editorial assistant, 31, best references; wants responsible desk job on high-grade daily; good writer, discriminating editor, knows news values and make-up; available if needed. Alger S. Beane, Box 2364, Boston, Mass.

Business Manager.
Now engaged, will consider offer from publisher desiring to turn over entire mangement of business; 20 years' actual experience in all departments. C-510. Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager
Who has had experience on large Eastern and Southern papers, wishes to make change. Best reference furnished, now employed. C-507, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Possessing ability to increase circulation on any newspaper solicits publishers' proposition immediately. Best of references to publisher in need of my services. Address Box C-513 Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager
Desires position on daily in South with 10,000 circulation or under. Will buy circulation or work for salary and commission. Eight years experience. Can furnish references from present employer. Will accept position on two weeks notice. Circulation, Box 18, LaGrange, Ill.

The Key to the Publisher's Office

YOU want to locate a good position. You have excellent qualifications. You want to let publishers know of your ability. You want to get your story through the door marked "Private".

A Situations Wanted advertisement will open that door. It is the key to the publisher's office.

Situations Wanted

Composing Room or Plant Superintendent.
Knows methods and men. Old enough to have ripe experience. Young enough to devote energy to place. Mentality enough to study the job and produce at a figure compatible with service demanded. Knows systematization and standardization, and where to apply for best results. Address C-531, care Editor & Publisher.

Feature Writer.
With all-around newspaper training desires connection. Background includes three years on The Springfield (Mass.) Republican. University trained and World war veteran. References and examples of work on request. Address Box B-986, care Editor & Publisher.

Editor,
All round experience, young, wants post in medium-sized town as news or city editor. Now on A. P. telegraph deck. Doing make-up. Box C-518, Editor & Publisher.

Editor.
Young man, 30, desires position as reporter or editor on small paper. Eight years' experience. Send copies of paper. References. Box C-506, Editor & Publisher.

Editor,
28, married, experienced in weekly and daily fields, desires connection with New England or Eastern afternoon daily as managing editor, editorial or dramatic writer. Training includes legislative reporting. Interview desired. C-528, Editor & Publisher.

Editor.
Young married man with seven years' experience at news, telegraph, city desks, editorial and feature writer, paragrapher, reporter, backed by university education, travel and linguistic attainments, now on morning paper, seeks change to evening daily. Available January 1, possibly before. B-988 Editor & Publisher.
Advertising Solicitor.

Editor or Reporter.
Young newspaper man wants job as editor, deskman or reporter. Capable head of news department for papers of 4,000 to 10,000 circulation. Steady and responsible. References. Address C-525, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial.
Telegraph editor, copy reader, editorial writer, understand make-up, seeks change. Good personality, industrious. Address C-526, Edwards, care Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Department Man.
Sixteen years' experience on news, telegraph and city desk and as head of universal desk; rapid and accurate; considered unusually good "make-up" editor. Thirty-five, family man. A-1 record. Ability to handle men. C-534, Editor & Publisher.

Manager
Seeks situation on paper needing man able to materially reduce expenses and build business. Actual experience in all departments qualifies me to take full charge of advertising and circulation departments, supervise all mechanical departments and to direct in general, the making of the paper from a news standpoint and able to handle all details of the business and accounting departments economically and systematically. Hard worker, giving from 10 to 16 hours daily to business. Secures utmost results from others in addition to personally producing business. In present situation, in large city; changed a loss of over $40,000 in 1923 to a profit of $14,000 in 1924. Able to take full rehabilitation, and with proper moral co-operation will undertake the reliabilities of any daily paper or other paper needing a man able to make from 25 per cent to 50 per cent annually on investment. Able to supply good credentials from present and all other papers upon which arvertiser has been employed. Address Box C-532, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent.
Now employed, desires to make change. Qualified from 20 years' actual experience to supervise all departments. Will consider proposition of salary plus percentage of savings effected. C-509, Editor & Publisher.

Superintendent or Foreman
Of newspaper composing room wishes permanent position with newspaper where efficiency and good work is required; have had practical and executive experience in large and small plants; in charge of one composing room over twelve years. Arthur Heath, 108 Malvern place, Cincinnati, Ohio.

HELP WANTED

Advertising Manager.
Magazine of 100,000 circulation desires experienced young man as office manager of advertising. Give particulars by letter of experience and salary desired. Nature Magazine, Washington, D. C.

Help Wanted

Advertising Solicitor.
Daily newspaper of 20,000 circulation in Central Pennsylvania city. Is in need of solicitor competent to write copy, make lay-outs and develop new accounts. Good opportunity for young man who really likes newspaper work. Address Box B-999, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor.
One of the largest and best known daily newspapers in the United States has opening for experienced advertising solicitor who has record of successful results in the last several years. This position is permanent with liberal salary, also opportunity for advancement. Applicant should give at least five references regarding character and ability, also forward photograph of himself. No need to answer this advertisement unless you can produce a large volume of new business. Box C-508, Editor & Publisher.

Afternoon And Night Desk Man.
Close editor. Good head line writer. Hours noon to 10 p. m. Evening newspaper. City of 145,000. Must understand rewriting and news digest. No snap. First letter tells the story. Address Box C-503, Editor & Publisher.
Wanted.

Associate Editor.
National magazine, published in New York, is looking for an associate editor who has ideas and initiative. The man we seek is probably a Sunday editor in a city of less than half a million people. Give your age, salary expected and full details of your experience in your reply, which will be held confidential. C-517, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Managers.
Two ambitious circulation managers, must be over 30 years of age, with experience in hiring and training canvassers. Further expansion of large circulation organization opens two desirable positions, with earning possibilites ranging from $2,600 to $5,000 per year. Answer with full particulars regarding last ten years' experience and references as to personal habits and character. Ernest A. Scholz, Circulation Director, Butterick Publishing Company, Butterick Building, New York.

Rewrite Editor.
Thoroughly experienced, wanted on a suburban paper. Reply, stating salary expected, experience received, to the Staten Island Advance, New York City.

Wanted.
Managing-editor for progressive and prosperous weekly newspaper in Connecticut. Must have $3,000 to invest. Address C-533, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Ohio daily; 30,000 circulation, needs an advertising man. Regular and special work. Excellent opportunity for producer. Write Box C-519, Editor & Publisher. State age, experience and past connections. All replies will be considered strictly confidential.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

For Sale.
Other business interests compell me to sell the controlling interest in the only daily newspaper in an Eastern town of 16,000 population. Paper making money; $15,000 cash required. C-522, Editor & Publisher.

For Sale.
A fine little daily newspaper property for sale. Great opportunity for development. Now making money. Only daily in town of 16,000 population. Price reasonable. C-523, Editor & Publisher.

For Sale.
If you are a newspaper man and want to develop a splendid little newspaper which is now making some money, here is an opportunity. Only daily in Massachusetts town of 16,000. Owner of controlling interest must sell; $15,000 cash required. C-524, Editor & Publisher.

FEATURE ARTICLES

Publishers—Attention!
We furnish MSS on all subjects by competent authors. Will take advertising in exchange for all or part of our service. Reasonable rates. Write up your wants. Literary Bureau Pub. Dept MOJ4, Hannibal, Mo.

CLASSIFIED ADS ARE FAST WORKERS

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

FOR $12,500 CASH, balance deferred, you can buy a small city afternoon newspaper, now breaking even, inventory $28,000, annual business $35,000. Sale price is $25,000. Owner is engaged in other business which demands his entire time. Mention our No. 319.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L. BLD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

ST. LOUIS TO ADVERTISE IN 175 NEWSPAPERS

$70,000 Raised for Trade Zone Campaign in 19 Neighboring States to Attract Retail Buyers—John A. Bush, Chairman

Trade zone advertising in newspapers with the purpose of bringing buyers of retail stores to St. Louis for their spring and fall merchandise again will be one of the units in the Municipal Advertising Campaign of 1924-25, as outlined by Walter B. Weisenburger, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, and chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Campaign.

This trade zone advertising will run in 170 to 175 newspapers in 19 neighboring states to the South and Southwest in January and the first week of next February and next fall, and will be supplemented by copy in two trade papers.

During October the campaign included the use of space in the following New York newspapers: the Times, World, Herald-Tribune, Post, Journal of Commerce and Commercial. The Post-Dispatch, Globe-Democrat, Star and Times in St. Louis will also be used to inform St. Louis of the activities of the campaign.

A group of national magazines will also be used.

An added unit this year is a news editor, who will supply articles about St. Louis to newspapers and magazines. Gus V. Kenton, formerly city editor of the St. Louis Star, has been appointed to this position, and began his duties this week.

The advertising is being placed by the John Ring, Jr. Advertising Company. The total fund subscribed this year is $70,000, of which the city appropriated one-half and one-half was raised by popular subscription. John A. Bush, president of the Brown Shoe Company is chairman of the general committee in charge of the campaign.

Operation Fatal to R. C. Holmes

Roy C. Holmes, 45, for the past four years with Kimberly-Clark Company, paper manufacturers of Neenah, Wis., died at his home in Haskell, N. J., Nov. 30, following an operation for appendicitus. Mr. Holmes was associated with the sales department of the eastern division of Kimberly-Clark Company, with headquarters at 51 Chambers street, New York. His work brought him into close touch with many of the more prominent eastern newspaper and magazine publishers.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

ALL hands in daily newspaper offices at work to satisfy the Christmas rush, of course, but do not overlook the fact that the threshold of 1925 is just around the corner.

Make it a year of promotion! Sell your newspaper to new faces! Find a hundred or a thousand new causes to serve! Do not "fall" for a lot of "pretty" booklets, or broadsides, or wasteful novelties, which mainly add to the burdens of postmen and janitors, but sell your paper by established means of advertising which carry the message and do the business!

SOMETIMES a little social conversation with some "hard" prospect will reveal some point about his business concerning which he is particularly proud. Later draft some displays about this point and bring them to his attention. This plan has proved practical in a number of instances for an Iowa newspaper.—B. A. T.

Among the Christmas gift advertisers, photographers should wish to call attention to the advisability of sitting for a portrait to be given as a gift, and they should not be neglected at this period because they are not frequent advertisers. —C. M. Litteljohn, Washington, D. C.

Bad weather, rain and slippery pavements. Before long will come the first wet snow. Slush, mud, and more treacherous streets and roads. Motorists must have chains! Many of them, especially those who drive fast, should have chains on all four wheels. To the garage man who consistently urges the use of chains through his newspaper advertising there will be a big profit. A series of advertisements to run in your newspaper will meet with favor when you show them to the garages in your town. Here's a chance for a campaign that will run many weeks.—R. John Gibler, St. Louis, Mo.

City stores do a large business through C. O. D. orders. A page or more could be devoted to "Shop By Telephone" and under this boxed advertisements of firms with their phone numbers and their business. In the centre of the layout might be a large telephone cut with "Use Your Phone," "Shop C. O. D." "Pay When Goods Are Delivered" and other phrases, and a small phone cut inside the box of each advertiser. This would make a striking display and could be cut out and saved by housewives.—V. G. Dawson, Halifax.

Due to the constantly increasing or decreasing of automobile prices, some of them quoted as delivered to your city while other prices are not, several pages can be worked up on this stunt. Announcement is carried on the page that the prices quoted for each of the cars is delivered to your city, ready to run. It is best to sell about quarter size page advertisements with appropriate headings on each page, like "Automobile Prices Up-to-Date." Head each advertisement with the cut or trademark of the automobile mentioned. An additional page can be worked on filling stations, repair shops, garages, etc., to run along with it. This on one occasion made the writer an edition of twelve pages—Chas. H. Carson, Roanoke, Va., Times-World Corporation.

A stunt that gained six pages of advertising for a Lowell, Mass., newspaper should prove equally attractive elsewhere. It was announced that a $20 check has been hidden somewhere in the business section of the city. The exact location could be learned by reading the advertisements on a double page spread in the paper.

In each advertisement one word had been inserted that had no connection with the copy. These 25 or 30 words when found and put together formed a sentence that disclosed the place where the check had been hidden.

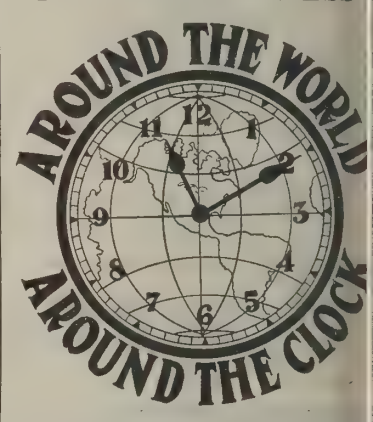
The novelty of this idea appealed to many small advertisers, and practically all advertisements obtained came under the head of "new business." The stunt proved so popular that it was repeated three times.—Arthur N. Stackpole, Lowell.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

THERE ought to be a group of excellent suggestions you can embody in a pre-Christmas article on decorating the Christmas trees in the homes of your town, in order to prevent fires, as well as provide the maximum enjoyment to each home circle.—C. M. Litteljohn, Washington, D. C.

Christmas shopping was urged and made the theme of a novel newspaper contest conducted by the Burlington (Ia.) Hawkeye this year which gave prizes of $10, $5, $2, and three $1 prizes for the best essays of not less than 50 nor more than 200 words on the subject "Why You Should Do Your Christmas Shopping Early." "Shop Early" and "Buy in Burlington" were points to be emphasized in the essays and the newspaper hooked up these two in a novel publicity stunt to co-operate with its advertisers and merchants in promoting early Christmas shopping and the buy-at-home idea.—J. S. L., Rock Island, Ill.



There is a new ruling in basketball this year which permits the player to pivot. That is, he may step in any direction he pleases as long as he keeps one foot in position on the floor. He must also pass the ball before that foot leaves the floor, when he does move it. Many inexperienced referees have blundered in this ruling and have called a penalty when there was no call for it. A story going into this rule in detail and giving practical illustrations might be interesting to basketball fans.—H. C. M., Logansport, Ind.

Who in your city has erected the greatest number of homes in the past five years? Go to the various leading contractors and builders and get some figures from them regarding the numbers of homes they have constructed.—F. H. W.

The Des Moines (Ia.) Capital fr time to time runs a short list of new books of interest to business men av able at the public library. The feat is interesting and provides a real serv to business men.—L. J. Jellison, I buque (Ia.) Times Journal.

With steamships, airplanes and au mobiles pushed daily to set new sp records, the railroad companies seem c tent to let the other modes of transpor tion establish new marks while they c centrate upon raising the average sp of all trains on their lines instead creating one or two world beating tra Railroad officials can make some pr able remarks about their reluctance enter into the speed contests. Their r sons for abandoning even the mile minute express will prove interesti Whether or not America will ever ag see locomotives that will equal the miles an hour record set by old 999 prove unique speculation.—A. C. Re Eau Claire, Wis.

BY UNITED PRESS

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

A New Serial
"Baroque"
by
LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE
An American Girl
in
The Clutch
of the Dreaded Black Hand
Society
Write for Terms.
THE McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE
373 Fourth Ave., New York City

CHRISTMAS SHORT STORIES
Full Page Mats or Setting Copy
Melville Davisson Post
Sophie Kerr
Katherine Holland Brown
Sylvia Chatfield Bates
Wire Quick
These stories are part of the Metropolitan Weekly Short Fiction Services, but are available separately.
Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.
150 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK CITY

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service
Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.
4 page ready-print color comics.
Magazine Feature Pages.
Write for samples and rates
NEA SERVICE INC.
1200 W. 3RD. STREET,
CLEVELAND, OHIO

Thomas W. Briggs Company
Memphis, - Tenn.
Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page
Look us up in Dun or Bradstreet's

Get the very best
DAILY CROSS-WORD PUZZLE
Not just a feature—
Not just a problem—
But the best seller on the market
TODAY!
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc
241 West 58th Street
New York City

GOLDEN RULE SUNDAY

DECEMBER SEVENTH

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND children in the Near East cannot live except you practice the Golden Rule. Put yourself in their place for a day.

Eat an orphanage dinner and then make such provision for their support as you would like to have made for your children if conditions were reversed.

MEASURE YOUR GIFT BY THE GOLDEN RULE

Will you fill their bowls for another year?
It costs $60.00 per child

Remember

"WHATSOEVER YE WOULD THAT OTHERS SHOULD DO UNTO YOU (OR YOUR CHILDREN LEFT DESTITUTE), DO YE EVEN SO UNTO THEM"

Send contributions to

NEAR EAST RELIEF

151 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK CITY

Golden Rule booklet and menus furnished on request

THIS ADVERTISEMENT IS CONTRIBUTED BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER

RIGHT AGAIN!

STUART P. WEST, head of the financial staff of the Consolidated Press Association, has again proved his right to be classed as America's greatest financial writer.

During the spring and summer of 1924 leading up to the bull market that has been a sensation ever since election day, Stuart P. West has pointed out in his dispatches day after day the unprecedented ease in credit, the absence of speculation in mercantile lines and the evidences of extraordinary volume in the general distributive trade. He insisted that these were constructive factors of the first magnitude which must ultimately tell upon security values once political uncertainties were out of the way. He made a striking forecast of the wonderful boom of recent weeks in railway stocks.

The essential difference between the Stuart P. West dispatch and other material that finds its way into some financial pages is that his is not a mere "market story," reciting scarcely more than is told by the record of fluctuations in the daily stock table, but an explanation and an analysis of what goes on each day—the things which bankers, investors and traders most want to know and which the general reader finds of incalculable help in his everyday relationship to the business world.

With Stuart P. West on the Consolidated Press financial staff are such specialists as George T. Hughes on bonds; William F. Heffernan, curbs; George Schnackel, grain, and L. C. Grundeland, livestock.

It's the best financial service in America.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York	Chicago	San Francisco	Paris
Eighth Floor	Fourth Floor	Third Floor	Fourth Floor
World Building	Daily News Building	Spreckels Bldg.	19 Rue d'Antin

OURNALISM LIBRARY
o to be taken from this room

THIS ISSUE:—CHRISTMAS PRIZE STORY

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1924

SUITE 1117 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Offie at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879
Issued Every Saturday

Vol. 57. No. 30 NEW YORK, DECEMBER 20, 1924 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

Features that are carefully selected and edited to build circulation for The News, New York's Picture Newspaper, and for The Chicago Tribune. The News, in four years, amassed the largest newspaper circulation in America and The Tribune is second only to The News in the morning field. The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate offers only features used regularly in The Tribune or in The News of New York.

Blue Ribbon
FICTION
First Run Work of First Class Authors
Blue Ribbon Serials for Sunday (one release a week)
Blue Ribbon Serials Week day (six days a week)
Blue Ribbon Short Stories—from 8,000 words down.
Well Written Tabloid Short Stories of 300-600 words
BLACK & WHITE Strips
The Gumps by Sidney Smith
Gasoline Alley by Frank King.
Harold Teen by Carl Ed
Winnie Winkle by M. M. Branner.
Moon Mullins by Frank Willard
Smitty by Walter Berndt.
COMICS IN COLORS
8 Chicago Tribune Comics offered in an 8-page color comic section either tabloid or full size.
THE GUMPS
By Sidney Smith
GASOLINE ALLEY
By Frank King
HAROLD TEEN
By Carl Ed
WINNIE WINKLE
By Branner
SMITTY
By Berndt
THE PIXEYS
Two color comic by William Donahey
MOON MULLINS
By Willard
LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE
Daily Strip and Sunday Page
GOOP ETIQUETTE
By Celett Burgess
W. E. HILL
PAGE OF COMICS
in Gravure or Black and White
HEROES OF THE WEEK
Half Page by Sals Bostwick.
CARTOONS
John T. McCutcheon—Carey Orr—Gaar Williams
H. L. MENCKEN
Weekly Literature Letter
GEORGE M. COHAN
Weekly Letter
BURNS MANTLE
Weekly New York Theatre letter
WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED CHILDREN'S STORY
Raymond Kelly
DR. EVANS
The first and best of newspaper Medical Writers
WEEKLY COMIC STRIPS
JOLLY JINGLES
By Hunter
EMBARRASSING MOMENTS
By McCullough
SENTENCE SERMONS
Roy L. Smith
Daily and Sunday
CROSS WORD PUZZLES
Daily and Sunday
DAILY TRUE LOVE STORY
Men's Fashions, Women's Fashions, Woods and Waters, Farm and Garden, Love and Beauty, Cookery, Etiquette, Home Harmonious, Line o' Type, Sports, Science and Embroidery, Club Ethics, Wake, In Motordom, Outline of Science, Character Reading, Weekly Home Page, Women's page and page of Sports.
LEASED WIRE SERVICE
Foreign—National—Local PACIFIC & ATLANTIC
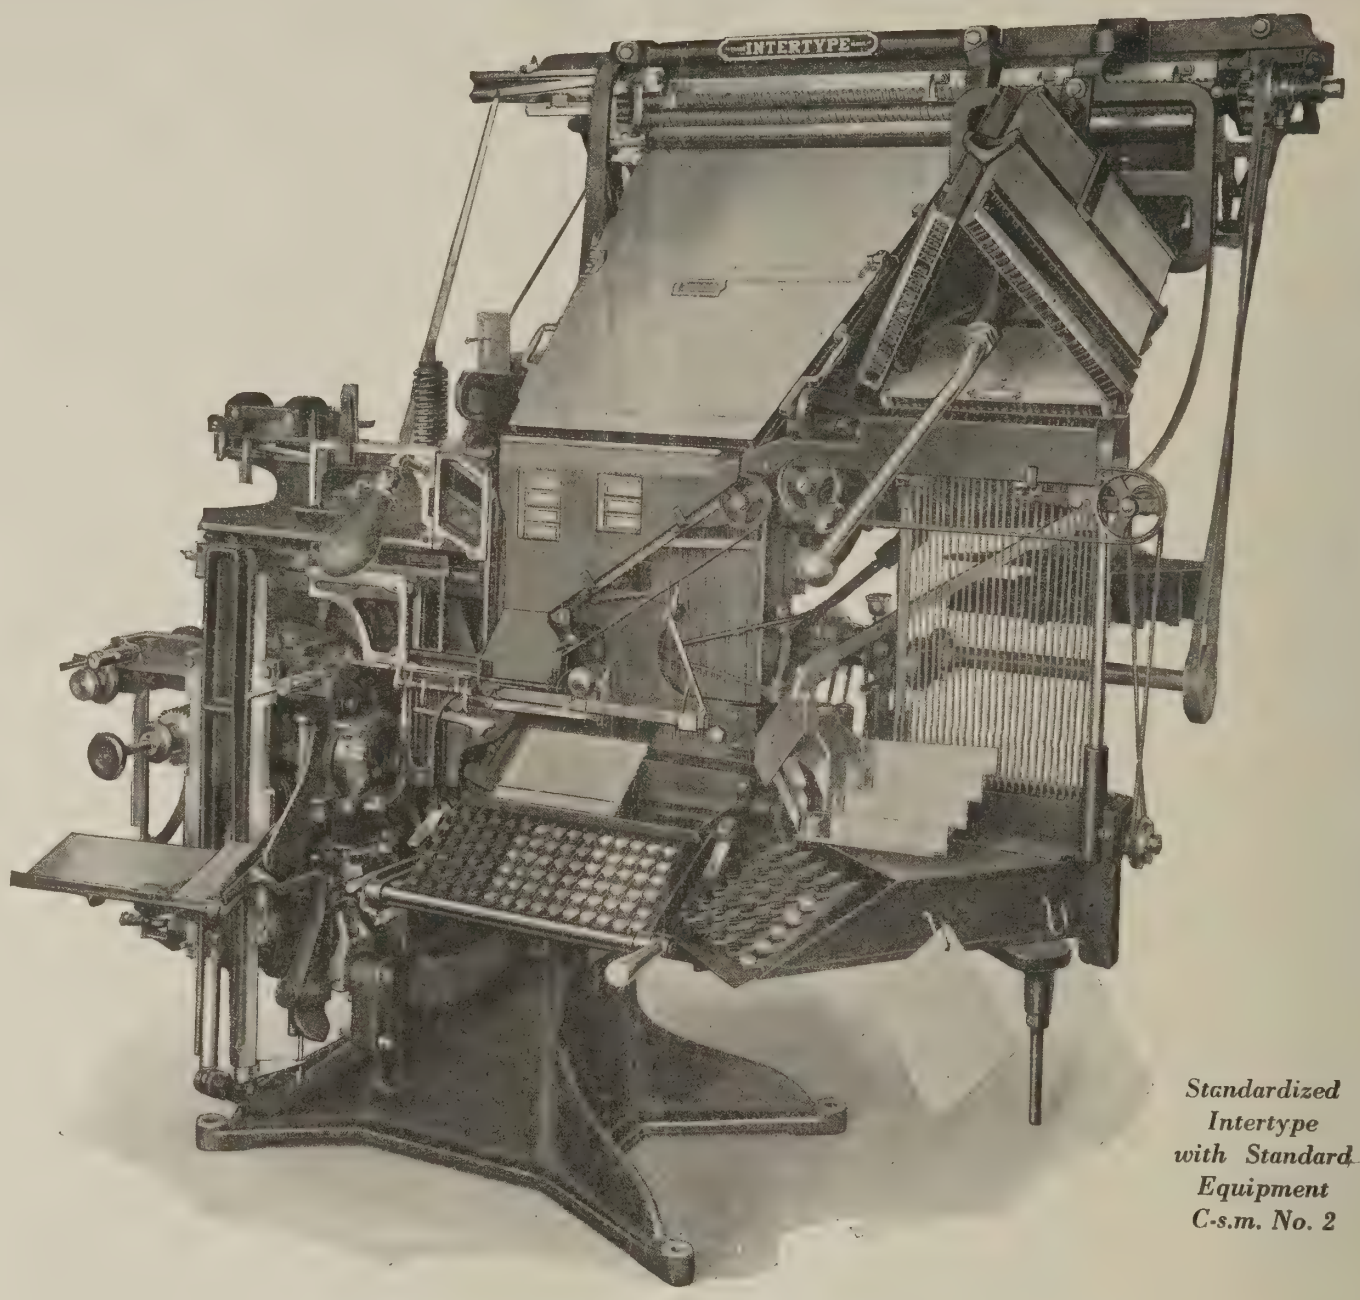
Photos
Organized by the Chicago Tribune and the New York Daily News
25 Park Place, New York

HAROLD GRAY IS A new artist in the comic strip family. He came to The Tribune on the recommendation of John T. McCutcheon, and for the past five years has been assisting Sidney Smith in the preparation of The Gumps. The orphan strip was Sid's idea. For years he has considered a cartoon with an orphan boy. Harold Gray took the idea, but chose a heroine in preference to a hero. The Chicago Tribune considers this strip so highly that, crowded as it is for space, it has made a place for Annie without eliminating any other comic.

There are tears and laughter in this new Chicago Tribune comic strip.



LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE IS A different kind of comic strip. It isn't all comedy. In fact the basis of the strip is the tragedy of a homeless, misused, unlucky waif of the asylum who cheerfully encounters her daily adventure and provides many a laugh at the end. Little Orphan Annie is like the stage comedy—invariably the most popular of shows—where laughter and tears mix in almost instantaneous succession. It is the comic strip Cinderella, the great child story of the ages,—the story of the girl who accepts the frowns of fortune with fortitude and the smiles of fortune with grace and kindliness.

It won't take Little Orphan Annie long to win the affection of your readers. The strip was tried out first in a new, early edition of The News of New York. When the edition was discontinued, the public insistence on having Annie every day was so strong that it had to be placed in the regular editions. It has received a thorough trial both in The News of New York and in The Chicago Tribune. The Sunday page—in color or black and white—has proved its popularity with children as has the daily strip with the general public. Your request for proofs and rates will bring an immediate reply.

The CHICAGO TRIBUNE
Newspapers SYNDICATE
TRIBUNE SQUARE CHICAGO

BUY -- -- -- -- -- LEADERSHIP

NO STANDARDIZED INTERTYPE HAS EVER BECOME OBSOLETE

Standardized Intertype with Standard Equipment C-s.m. No. 2

Ready for the Future

With Standardized Intertypes changes in requirements mean buying only other Equipment Units.

You buy only such Standardized Equipment Units as you need now—and add more Standardized Equipment Units only when you need them.

Intertype Standardization makes it unnecessary for you to gamble on your future requirements. And it protects your investment against loss through obsolescence.

Write for "Profit-Making Intertype Features" and Other Literature

Standardized INTERTYPE TRADE MARK

50 Court Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

CHICAGO BOSTON MEMPHIS LOS ANGELES SAN FRANCISCO

This Is Baltimore—

¶ Pick up a Sunpaper and there can be no doubt as to where it was published.

¶ The news of the world is in its columns — covered as thoroughly as by any newspaper in the country.

¶ But first and last, a Sunpaper is a Baltimore product—unmistakably a cross-section of the daily life of its home town.

¶ Articles by special writers on subjects of outstanding interest, to be sure, and entertainment features in plenty—but these are only added as a dessert on the Sunpaper menu.

¶ It's the news of Baltimore and the things that are Baltimore which furnish the material to fill the pages of the Sunpapers with the flavor that is the Sunpapers'.

¶ It is because the Sunpapers cover their own city so thoroughly and so interestingly that Baltimore has taken them so closely to its heart.

¶ The real measure of that "indispensability" is revealed by the circulation figures.

November Average Net Paid Circulation

Daily (M. & E.) . . 247,023

Sunday 181,673

A Gain of 4,676 Daily and 4,008 Sunday over November, 1923

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"; They Say "SUNpaper"

Sell Philadelphians

through The Bulletin

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"Nearly every Philadelphia retail merchant that advertises uses The Bulletin. Follow him—he knows."

Dominate Philadelphia, the third largest market in the United States. Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is larger than that of any other daily or Sunday newspaper published in Pennsylvania, and is one of the largest in the United States.

Circulation for 6 months ending September 30th, 1924—516,609 copies daily.

Copyright, 1924—Bulletin Company

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by
The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

o 57 NEW YORK, DECEMBER 20, 1924 No. 30

ublishers Challenge Postal Cost Figures; Nation-wide Protest Against New's Rates epresentative Kelly Says Parcel Post Should Provide Added Revenue—Small Chance of Legislation at Congress Short Session

(. Telegraph, to Editor & Publisher)

ASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—The fight of the publishing interests on cost ascertainment" report of the s Office Department was brought oly to the attention of Congress in n ways during the past week.

Den letters addressed to senators by e American Newspaper Publishers' sriation served to emphasize further mazing juggling of figures disclosed careful study of the report. Repretive Clyde Kelly, of Pennsylvania, iman of the Postal Rate Sub-comtt of the House Post Office Committ, nd one of the chief sponsors for the osed postal wage increase legislation, dEditor & Publisher the newspaper hagazine interests could depend upon ing the fullest hearing and fairest anent once a congressional review of eport is begun.

M. Kelly announced he would insist o Postmaster General Harry S. New d Joseph Stewart, the Department tician who compiled the report, be summoned before the Senate and te Post Office committees, meeting in n session, to explain how the conclun were arrived at.

M. Kelly expressed himself in accord the growing belief that the report is om being an accurate or fair reflecnf actual postal conditions.

Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, this e had the editorial "The Postal Case" d Washington correspondence appearn the subject previously published Editor & Publisher read into the ressional Record so both the Senate d House might be fully informed of nted copies of the report are exd to be in the hands of every member te Senate and House when Congress cvenes after the Christmas recess.

B unanimous consent, the Senate rd to begin on January 6 considerano f President Coolidge's veto of the sl wage increase bill. Opinion rei d divided as to whether there re d enough Senate votes to override e veto or whether the measure is e to be recommitted to the Senate s Office committee to which the e ing-New postal rate bill has already n sent.

Te text of the unanimous consent r ment follows: "It is agreed by a mous consent that at the conclusion utine morning business on the calenr lay of January 5, 1925, the Senate l proceed to the reconsideration of the l (S1898) reclassifying and adjusting l es and compensation on an equitable s and for other purposes, heretofore ned by the President of the United a s without his approval.

"hat, on that calendar day, no Sena- r hall speak longer than one hour on e ill or any subject, and

"hat if the bill is not finally disposed o that day, then thereafter no Senator a speak more than once or longer a 20 minutes upon the bill or any subject, and the bill shall be finally disposed of not later than 4 o'clock on the calendar day of January 6, 1925.

"Provided, that this unanimous consent shall not prevent a motion to be made and disposed of on January 5, 1925, to recommit the bill and the message of the president to the committee on post offices.

By J. BART CAMPBELL

POSTMASTER GENERAL NEW REPLIES TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER EDITORIAL

POSTMASTER GENERAL NEW in a letter to Editor & Publisher, dated Dec. 13, replied to the editorial carried in this paper last week attacking the idea that the Post Office should be run at a profit.

The letter follows: I have your letter of Dec. 12, enclosing an editorial from Editor & Publisher on the subject of "The Postal Case." It was evidently written under a misapprehension as to what the recommendation of the Postmaster General for increased rates is to be. I quite agree with the statement that the Post Office Department is not created to make a profit and I have stated time and time again in every speech I have made at postal conventions or before chambers of commerce that the prime consideration is to give service. While I abate not a particle of that conviction it is at the same time true that the Post Office Department of the United States is the only one conducted by any government that is run on that principle, so far as I know. Practically all of them are so conducted as to yield a revenue to the government. I do believe, however, that the service should approximately pay its way. You cannot run a concern spending more than $600,000,000 a year without some regard to ordinary business principles.

The deficit of $163,000,000 in 1921 was not an operating deficit; it was made up of an aggregation of sums due the railroads for services rendered covering a number of years and was necessarily charged to 1921 because paid in that year, and to some additional expenses imposed by the Reclassification Act of that year.

Neither was there a "profit" of $64,000,000 in 1918. If you will consult the report of Postmaster General Burleson page 2, you will find that it was there officially placed at $19,979,798.

I have nowhere stated that $40,000,000 was "lost" last year.

There is one perfectly plain fact that cannot be avoided and that is that when the expenses of Government that is maintained by taxing the people are increased the money to meet the added expense must come from source. The question to be decided is whether it shall be left to be paid by the general taxpayers or whether it shall be distributed among those who get the service of the Post Office Department as equitably as possible. It has been the view of the President, in which I most unreservedly concur, that the latter is the correct solution, and to that end the Post Office Department has complied with the request made by Senator Sterling, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, by submitting a bill which is meant to provide for these increases in the most equitable manner possible.

There has been so much misapprehension on the part of Congressmen and the public as to the cost of carrying different classes of mail that the recently concluded cost ascertainment is of great value in clearing up these misunderstandings. I have the most implicit faith in the accuracy of this report. I am perfectly certain it cannot be successfully attacked. Upon its completion it was submitted to the well known accounting firm of Ernst and Ernst with instructions to analyze it most scrupulously and if it failed in any respect to point out the failure. They have given it their complete endorsement.

In assessing the new rates the Postmaster General has taken care to so distribute costs as not to bear with undue severity upon any class. First class is highly profitable but one feature of it is carried at a loss of about $12,000,000, which we recommend shall be made up.

Third-class, consisting of circulars and direct mail advertising, now carried at a loss of $16,000,000 is called upon for $18,000,000, thus causing it to pay its way.

Fourth-class, or parcel post, is carried at a loss of a trifle less than $7,000,000 and is asked for $12,000,000 on the theory that it has been rightly regarded as commerce and should therefore pay its way and leave a slight margin of Safety.

The service loses money on registered letters, money orders, collect-on-delivery and insurance, all of which partake to some degree at least of the character of commercial transactions, and the charge for them is recommended to be increased to the extent of several millions.

Second-class, against which is charged a deficit of over $74,000,000, is asked for less than $10,000,000, the Postmaster General conceding many of the numerous points urged in favor of cheap newspaper and magazine circulation.

The aggregate to be raised by the Postmaster General's recommendations about equals the $68,000,000 estimated as the increased cost to the Department as the result of the increased pay bill. The alternative to the administration's plan is to assess the whole cost against the general taxpayer. These are the two solutions and there is none other.

Harry S. New.

A careful canvass of the situation in the Senate and House by the correspondent for Editor & Publisher developed the general opinion among both Senators and Representatives that whatever the fate of the Edge-Kelly postal wage bill it is highly improbable there will be any legislation enacted at the present short session for a complete revision or increase of postal rates, including those involving second-class matter.

Representative Kelly said he was so convinced the complete rate revision based on the cost ascertainment report before the next Congress is improbable or impracticable that he intends to push his pending bill to provide a five cent additional charge on every parcelpost package irrespective of its weight or size.

Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, who sponsored the bill in the Senate, agreed to join Mr. Kelly in a final drive to push it through at this session, despite the insistence of Senator Sterling, of South Dakota, Chairman of the Senate Post Office Committee, the Sterling-New bill providing for complete rate revision be passed instead.

"Our parcelpost bill would provide $50,000,000 additional revenue for the post office department, and would amply provide for the proposed postal wage increase," Mr. Kellly said on Thursday. "We do not need $68,000,000 or any sum approximating it. The clear gain of $15,000,000 made annually by the post office department would more than take care of any amount over $50,000,000. The parcelpost can well stand the burden of a five cent fee."

At a series of conferences with Senators at the White House this week, President Coolidge was understood to have again expressed a desire the postal wage increase bill not be passed over his veto, or enacted into law until revenue for it has been provided. Administration spokesmen professed confidence the President's veto will be sustained in the Senate after a motion to recommit the bill has failed.

Such action would throw Congress back on the Sterling-New postal rate bill, which, in the judgment of Administration leaders, has slim chance of getting through the legislative mill before the present session ends.

The breath of scandal swept the situation on the same day when President Coolidge was informed by Senators of a charge that an employe of a Senate committee was involved in a $10,000 "slush fund" alleged to have been raised to influence Senators in behalf of the postal wage increase bill.

Representative Clyde Kelly predicted

(Continued on page 25)

For complete discussion of the postal rate situation see pages 26, 27, 28, 30 and 32 of this issue.

TACOMA DISPUTE ENDED BY ARBITRATION

42-Hour Week Eliminated by New Three-Year Agreement in Favor of Variable 42 to 45 Hour Week at Same Hourly Rate

(By Telegraph, to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 15.—Certain conditions existing for 15 years are eliminated in the arbitration award in the case of Typographical Union No. 170 vs. Tacoma, Wash., publishers, the decision on which has just been announced. It is the first time unrestricted arbitration, covering not only hours and wages but also working conditions, was resorted to.

The award becomes effective on the date rendered for a period of three years from May 15, 1924, the union's demand having been for an eighteen months' agreement. The flat 42-hour week is eliminated and a variable week of 42 to 45 hours (exclusive of lunch period) is established at the same hourly rate as formerly existed. The old scale was $7.40 for day work and $7 for night work.

The arbitrator, John A. Rea, former president of the board of regents of the University of Washington, calls attention to the acceptance of the principle laid down by Judge Devlin in the award made in San Francisco in the case between the union and the job shop employers wherein wage scales of compositors in cities of like size are used as a basis of comparison instead of the average scale of the U. S., as was requested by the San Francisco employers.

The cities selected for comparison are Spokane, Vancouver, Victoria.

Demands of the union were for $7.50 day side and $9.50 night side 7-hour shift. These, Mr. Rea finds, were "indefensible and if allowed, $51 and $57, respectively, for a week's work, would outrun Los Angeles, $48.50 and $51, and the Tacoma week 42 hours, Los Angeles 40 hours. The injustice, if any, in the arbitrator's decision runs against the publishers."

An important change in the old contract is that it eliminates all reproduction excepting such as is provided by international law. Under the old contract the union exercised sole jurisdiction over disputes, and its decision was final. The new contract refers disputes to a joint standing committee composed of equal representation from the publishers and the union.

Mr. Rea devotes considerable space in his opinion to a résumé of the arguments advanced for and against the 42-hour week at the meetings of the arbitration board.

"The union representative put in the record a table showing the working hours of more than 18,000 employes," he says. "Of that number fewer than 1,300 worked 42 hours and less a week and the number working more than 42 hours up to 48, exceeds 17,000. Evidently the rule is not 42. Forty-five and above is the rule under this showing."

Summing up the discussion on "the Tacoma standard," a 42-hour week for which the union held out Mr. Rea says: "Is the industry prospering beyond its living wage? Until we are shown by competent testimony that it is, the unqualified seven-hour day, or the possible six-hour day is not considered feasible."

Attention is also called to the fact that the testimony, which covered more than 900 pages in addition to numerous exhibits, did not show that the cost of living in Tacoma was appreciably greater in 1924 than in 1922. The year in which the previous agreement was negotiated.

The papers affected by the award are the Tacoma Ledger, Tacoma News-Tribune and the Tacoma Times. The arbitration board consisted of Mr. Rea, chairman; F. M. Halbert and Thomas N. Phillips for the union; Frank S. Baker and Harvey J. Kelly for the publishers.

Ralph M. Coghlan has resigned as national advertising manager of the Louisville Post to join the editorial staff of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Christmas Suggestion

The Press That Is of the People Is for the People

By MARLEN PEW

THOSE who make newspapers understand people.

The perplexities of life which harass the ordinary family are perhaps better comprehended in newspaper offices than in the office of the mayor, or in any parsonage, or any court. Human affairs are the clays from which newspapers are molded.

You are frequently astonished by questions, concerning individual problems, that are asked by people, of all classes, whom you meet in newspaper practise. They seek authorities. You are amazed every day by the wholly anomalous, abnormal, unconsidered, blind or wavering conduct of people who become news subjects. Often you wonder why splendid public and private institutions, created for the people, have not functioned in specific cases. It is a phenomenon in every city.

The life of a child, let us say, has been sacrificed through the ignorance of the parents that as common a thing as a dispensary was available in connection with an orthopedic hospital.

To whom can the average working man or his home isolated wife turn for reliable advice when he is tempted to invest his life's savings in an oil well? You know, but does he?

How can a mother test her imperfect knowledge and decide the vital question whether her child is manifesting an artistic quality which, if cultivated, might yield benefits? You know, but does she?

To whom should one complain of private fraud or misadministration of public affairs?

In all questions of soul distress to whom may people turn? A man is driven to suicide through obessions which, if submitted to an authority, might instantly have been dispelled. A girl might believe that a temporary misfortune had closed to her every avenue of respectability and count her life a useless burden. An authority could show her the light of the future. Clergymen know best of the terrific pressure upon people thus perplaxed, but does the average disconnected and deeply afflicted man or woman know where to turn for true and safe advice?

There are myriads of questions of education, health, conduct, judgment, aspiration, privilege and practical doubts and uncertainties which hinge upon ordinary information which is easily available when one knows where to turn to find it. But millions grope through life. Who is strong enough to stand without a friend?

It is EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S suggestion that newspapers, in service to the public welfare, create as a part of office equipment, and thoroughly advertise, a People's Service Exchange, which would be as good by any other name.

Its business is not to give opinion or even advice to anyone. Its business is to clear to established public or private institutions, or qualified individuals, all questons referred to the newspaper by the public. A woman who telephones that a dying neighbor is helpless and friendless is told to call a local visiting nurse organization or a hospital. She did not know of their existence, else she would not have called. A woman troubled in spirit, is sent to the right person for comfort and assistance. Your telephone number or your office represents to any distressed or perplexed person a dependable source of information and guidance.

In small offices a member of the regular staff might very well function. In the largest offices a single person might be able to handle the service. The equipment would be a well-selected list of directories, local, state and national.

A vital element, essential to the welfare of the idea, is that the confidences of the public must be held inviolate. Wonderful stories would come to the paper, but the concern of the bureau would not be to make news copy. A valuable column might be run concerning exchange activities.

Behind the exchange, of course, would lie an organization of existing institutions which would recognize the newspaper's function and would co-operate. Governmental, philanthropic, social, religious, educational and many business organizations would harmonize and assist a cause of such good purpose. Then, there would be a list of individuals of influence, character and authority who would naturally aid by acting in special cases on request.

This is the outline of an idea, subject to amplification or revision to meet local requirements or different opinions. It is not set forth as valuable because of novelty. Doubtless thousands of newsaper men have discussed it and perhaps some newspapers are even doing it better than we may know. It is suggested as a legitimate and practical newspaper enterprise.

From a purely business point of view, can anything better be said of a newspaper than that it is the true and active friend of all of the people of a city?

N. Y. AMERICAN CITE[D] FOR RADIOING NEW[S]

Asked to Appeal Before Associa[ted] Press Board of Directors, Janu[ary] 28, for Alleged Violation of Rules

The New York American was cite[d] by the Associated Press to appear before [the] board of directors Jan. 28 for a hea[r]ing on the charge of violating associa[ted] rules in broadcasting election return[s] was learned this week.

The broadcasting, upon which the a[c]tion is based, was from station WN[Y] on Nov. 4, operated by the City of [New] York. Edwin J. Clapp, the editor of [the] American, acted as announcer.

While it is reported that all A. P. m[em]ber newspapers who utilized radio a[nd] bulletin board extension election day [were] summoned to appear before the direc[tors] to present their explanations, the c[ase] of the American and the New York [Sun] are the only two which have so far c[ome] to the attention of the newspaper field.

The Americans' citation is couched [in] practically the same terms as that [of] Frank Munsey, A. P. member for [the] New York Sun, printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER Dec. 6.

The two newspapers are charged [with] violating the association's by-laws w[hich] seek to maintain the exclusiveness of [the] A. P. report.

The specific rules alleged violated [are] Article VII, section 5, and Article VI[II] section 7. The former provides that A[P] news can only be published in the ne[wS]paper, the language, and the place sp[ec]ified in the membership certificate. [The] latter rules against furnishing news [to] non-members, which, under the by-[laws] belongs exclusively to the associatio[n]

SEEKING BEST NEWS STORIE[S]

Reporters Asked to Submit Them [for] Anthony's Book

Newspaper editors and reporters h[ave] been invited by Small, Maynard & [Co.] New York, to submit their best n[ews] stories of the past year as candidates [for] inclusion in a volume similar to that [pu]blished this year of the best news sto[ries] of 1923.

Joseph Anthony, who edited the 1[923] book, is also in charge of the new publi[ca]tion, and announces that the same cla[ssi]fications and rules of judgment will [pre]vail. There is no limit on the numbe[r of] stories which may be submitted by [any] newspaper or writer.

MacFadden Firms Combine

The Macfadden Publishing Comp[any] Inc., was formed Dec. 12, by consolida[tion] of Macfadden Publications and the M[ac]fadden Newspaper Publishing Comp[any] publisher of the New York Even[ing] Graphic.

Capital stock was given as $10,000 [in] in articles of incorporation filed at [Al]bany. Principal stockholders are Bern[ard] Macfadden, Orr J. Elder and H. [J.] Miller.

Salt Lake Men Promoted

H. F. Robinson, business manager [of] the Salt Lake City Tribune, has [been] appointed assistant general manager, [and] E. H. Holden, editor, has been gi[ven] title of editor-in-chief. No successor [to] General Manager A. N. McKay who [died] recently, has been named.

Two Hearst Magazines Merge

The Cosmopolitan Magazine [and] Hearst's International Magazine, [both] under the control of William Rando[lph] Hearst, have merged, it was formerly [an]nounced last week.

Paper Firm Increases Capital

The Honolulu Paper Company, L[td.] organized in October, 1918, with a capi[tal]ization of $50,000, has increased its ca[pi]tal stock to $150,000.

Editor & Publisher's 1924 Prize Winning Christmas Story

A Christmas Special

BY L. N. FULLER

Assistant Editor, Watertown (N. Y.) Daily Times

CHARLIE BATES, city editor of the Eagle, was making up the date book and the assignment sheet for the next day. The rest of the city staff had left. It was two days before Christmas and it was one of those days in late December which are neither fall nor winter. A drizzling rain had turned to snow late in the afternoon, snow which quickly melted as it fell and turned into a muddy slush. Big sticky flakes wandered down through the air and the street lights shed a murky glow through the darkness of the late afternoon. Belated Christmas shoppers were hurrying with their last minute errands. Cars slipped and slithered through the soupy mess, sending up showers of slush.

Just as Bates' shears wandered over a story which afforded the opportunity for a good follow-up the next day, the door of the city room opened. An unshaven face surmounted by a greasy cap was stuck through the opening. A nondescript form eased itself through. The visitor wore a tattered overcoat two sizes too small. Where buttons and button holes failed to meet a piece of jute string was employed. The trousers were frayed around the bottom and water dripped from them. Battered shoes squished and left tracks on the floor. An apologetic and husky cough released the fumes of cheap whisky which filled the room.

The newcomer was not given the bum's rush. "Hello, Walt," said the occupant of the desk.

"Hello, Charlie," extending a dirty hand in greeting which was accepted.

"Where bound?"

"Just passin' through. Say, Charlie Do me a favor. Let me have a dollar. It ain't a loan, because I'll never pay you back."

"How about a quarter?"

"You know, Charlie, a quarter ain't nothin' now. I can't get a drink for that. I used to hold you up for a dime, but you can't get a shot of home-spun for that."

"You never did cut out the booze, did you, Walt?"

"No, and I guess I won't. I guess this is my last trip. Got the T. B. Trying to get south. Cough something awful. Sleeping in box cars, booze and not enough to eat. Got to have a shot of booze. Remember, Charlie, when we were kids together and you pulled me out of the creek. Guess you might better have let me stay there. I wasn't such a bad sort then."

"Yes, Walt," said the city editor rather softly. "I remember all that. We did have great times when we were kids. And your mother has no idea of—what you are."

"No, she thinks I'm on the road building bridges. An engineer. That's the worst of it. I have to lie to her. I write to her once in a while and tell her I'm too busy to come home. Last spring I got three months for vagrancy up in North Dakota and I wrote and told her I was starting for South America and would be so far inland I couldn't write. I'm still the boy to her I was when I was a kid. Ain't it great, the faith a mother has in her boy?

"I dropped off back home last night. No one knew me. I sneaked up the street where mother lives and saw her sittin' there. I had all I could do from bustin' right in on her. There was the same old chair, the same old pictures and the same old mother waiting for her boy to come home Christmas."

"Yes, Walt," replied Bates, "your mother thinks you're all right. She thinks you're just what you think she thinks. I was up home on my vacation last summer and she told me all about you, how you were making good with a big bridge company. She felt you were working too hard and hoped some day you'd come home for a rest. She asked me to fix up a piece in the paper about you. It went against the grain to fake a story like that, but I did. I also printed one about your South American trip."

"Now, ain't that just like mother, Charlie. And it's just like you. I'd like to see her before I kick in, but I can't. And when I do kick in, how will she understand? I'll crawl off somewhere and die like a sick dog, or fall off a rattler and they'll find what's left of me along the right of way. Next day there will be two or three lines about a bum being found dead. When she don't hear from me she'll worry. I wish I could fix it up so she will never know. But don't let me bother you, Charlie. How about the dollar?"

Bates reached in his pocket. It was Tuesday and pay day was not until Friday. Six dollars stood between him and the next appearance of the "ghost." He drew out a bill and looked at it. He reached his hand in his pocket and pulled out another.

"Here's five, Walt. It's most Christmas, you know. Don't spend it all for booze."

"Thanks, Charlie. I knew you were a good scout. Well, I've got to be moving on. Good-bye, Charlie."

"So long, Walt."

Shoes squished as they moved out the door. Charlie looked out the window. A moment later a figure shuffled into the gathering snow. It leaned against a lighting post and shook violently with coughing. Then it shuffled on and disappeared in a place which had twice been raided by the federal agents, but was still doing business.

Next morning Jimmie Lane, who covered undertakers, came in after going around his beat.

"Nothing doing," he reported, "except a bum found run over down in the freight yards. Must have fallen off a freight. Gillman got it."

"We're short on space today," said the city editor. "Make about three lines."

When the city editor went out to lunch he stepped into Gillman's undertaking parlors.

"Hello, Bill," he said to the man of all work. "Jim said you had a bum here found down in the yards."

"Ye-ah. Don't know who he is. Funny thing about him. All he had was a half pint of bum booze and four dollars. Mystery is where he got the four dollars. Want to see him? He's in the back room."

Bates went to the back room where a form was covered with a sheet. He pulled down the covering, looked at the figure for a moment, and drew it back.

"Know him?" queried Bill.

"Never saw him before. What are you going to do with him?"

"The coroner ordered him buried in potter's field this afternoon. Another one of those charity cases."

That night there were two stories in the Eagle among the many others. Down in an obscure position was this:

"The body of an unidentified tramp was found beside the C. L. & N. tracks this morning. The body was badly mangled. There was nothing to reveal its identity. It was taken to Gillman's undertaking parlors and was buried in potter's field this afternoon with a brief prayer service."

In the lead position of page one was this with a four deck head:

(Special to The Eagle)

"New York, Dec. 24.—In an attempt to rescue a five-year-old boy who had fallen from a Staten Island ferry boat, Walter J. Marvin, aged 32, a well known bridge engineer, was drowned shortly before noon today. Marvin was standing on the deck of the boat when the child, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kinsella of the Bronx, in a spirit of adventure, clambered to the rail and lost his balance.

"Marvin, who saw the child fall, jumped overboard and swam for him. The boat was quickly stopped and a life boat was put out. The child had disappeared and before aid reached his would-be rescuer, he too, had sunk, weighted down by his clothing.

"Those who witnessed the tragedy pay tribute to the heroism of Marvin, who did not hesitate after seeing the child fall but plunged in without removing his coat. The bodies were not recovered and were swept out to sea."

Below was this, under a jim:

"Walter J. Marvin was the son of Mrs. Mary A. Marvin of Putney, 50 miles north of this city. He was born in Putney and spent his boyhood there. For the last eight years he had been a construction engineer for a large bridge company, his work frequently taking him to all parts of the world. His mother is the only surviving relative."

That Christmas eve in Putney a white-haired woman looked with pride through the mist of tears as she read a certain "special" in the Eagle. Then her eyes fell on a rather obscure item in the lower left hand corner.

"Poor boy," she said, as she wiped away her tears. "He was some mother's son."

STORY WINNER ONCE PRINTER'S DEVIL

LEE N. FULLER, winner of EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S Christmas Story Prize of $50.00, is assistant editor of the Watertown (N. Y.) Daily Times.

LEE N. FULLER

He was born in Hermon, N. Y., Feb. 12, 1889, a village of about 500 inhabitants. At the age of 12 he worked after school hours and Saturdays on the Hermon News filling the duties of printer's devil, reporter, press feeder, bill collector, and "nursemaid to the Editor's horse."

At the age of 16 he went to Michigan and obtained a job in a job printing office; after getting fired he says he took it out on the foreman by distributing eight point type in a nine point case, carefully avoiding that section of the city for several weeks. Fuller next became a boiler maker's apprentice on the G. R. and I. Railroad and drew 49 hours' pay.

In 1907 he came to the Watertown Times as cub reporter. After working about five years as reporter he went on the state desk and subsequently became telegraph editor, assistant city editor, city editor, and assistant editor.

He has long cherished the ambition to write the "Great American Novel" and the "Great American Drama." He is married and has one son. He is secretary of the Jefferson County Historical Society and his hobbies are civil war history and cross word puzzles.

FRED EDWARDS' SUBWAY STORY BROKE UP A MAGAZINE CONFERENCE

New York Herald Tribune Writer's Transit Yarn Halted the Nation's Meeting and Drew Praise from Oswald Garrison Villard

FEW are they who will ever be permitted to gaze upon a conference of The Nation's editorial board.

But one may imagine it. Very grave. Very sedate.

Oswald Garrison Villard raps for order and an awful silence ensues. Then the serious work begins.

But not long ago Mr. Villard rapped for order—quite loudly, too.

"Tee-hee," gurgled someone. Perhaps it was Freda Kirchway.

Bang! went the gavel.

"Haw-haw!" came the answer from behind a copy of the New York Herald Tribune.

Mr. Villard is by habit a reporter.

"What? When? Where? and Why?" he wanted to know.

And then he learned this, that Frederick B. Edwards, New York Herald Tribune reporter, had written one of the best bits seen in New York newspapers for some time under the headline:

"SUBWAY REBEL GETS TRAIN ALL FOR HIMSELF."

"Ho!" said Mr. Villard, and "Ha! Ha!"

This kept up for 10 whole minutes, delaying the conference by just that time, and ending in such a manner that today Mrs. Frederick B. Edwards has a letter to her husband from Mr. Villard stored away, telling that Mr. Villard thinks the "Subway" story one of the best pieces of newspaper reporting he has ever seen.

The story, which made every subway rider both chuckle and applaud, follows:

Benjamin Mehlig, a small man with an office at 132 Fulton street, who had a habit of leaving the West Side Interborough subway at 157th street and Broadway every evening at a little before 6 o'clock, set his teeth firmly together yesterday afternoon, looked a squad of subway guards firmly in the eye and started what may become a Movement.

Life in New York is like that. A plain citizen leaves his place of business immersed in conventional affairs. His thoughts are on this or that; his job, income tax, cross-word puzzle, the price of a new overcoat, or what he has forgotten that his wife told him to be sure and remember. Then without warning the Fates seize him and hurl him for a loss square into the middle of a revolution, a banditry, a fire or a Movement.

No vast impulses yeasted within the soul of Benjamin Mehlig as he boarded a subway train at Pennsylvania Station at a little after 5 o'clock last night. He wished to go home. A train came along empty, having been run through for the benefit of the midtown rush hour crowds. Benjamin Mehlig was among the surge, wishing merely to go home. He noted that the train was marked Van Cortlandt Park, and Benjamin Mehlig's heart was lifted within him. It was his train and it was empty!

Benjamin Mehlig's moment was at hand. But had some prophet, gifted with vision, whispered into his ear, "Benjamin, you are shortly to achieve something that Napoleon never even thought of attempting," he would have said "Go away, you nut," or words to that effect.

The ten-car train was quickly filled. Times Square added a quota to the grand 5 o'clock shove. Seventy-second street decanted merely a handful and others took their places. Benjamin Mehlig read his Wall Street edition and wondered what was for supper.

At Ninety-sixth street a guard poked his head into the car and shouted something that sounded to Benjamin Mehlig like "Awsingeackwowshoawlwow!" Benjamin's interest was merely casual until he observed a general restlessness among his fellow-passengers.

"What did he say?" asked Benjamin Mehlig, whose great moment was even now upon him.

"He said," a neighbor replied with bitterness, "that we should all change at 103d street because the train is going to the car barns."

Benjamin Mehligh pondered this for a while. He was not surprised. It had happened to him before. But somehow this time it was different. The soul of Benjamin Mehlig was in revolt. He felt filled with ire. He arose in his seat and shouted at the guard. Benjamin Mehlig, the small man of 132 Fulton street, yelled at a subway guard!

"Hey, you!" said Benjamin Mehlig. "What is this?"

"Yawlsingecawwahbaw," the guard replied, and Benjamin Mehlig said.

"Like hell!"

The guard tottered and caught at the door frame for support. He shook his head, puzzled. It appeared to his bewildered senses that the small Benjamin Mehlig was in revolt. That there was, in fact, a mutiny on board. Yet . . . impossible, surely.

The guard came into the car and addressed Benjamin Mehlig, whose strange conduct was now beginning to excite the interest of the other passengers.

"Whaddidyuh say-y-y?" demanded the guard.

Benjamin Mehlig stood up.

"I said like hell," replied Benjamin Mehlig. "That's what I said. What do you think of that? Like hell I'll change at 103d street. I'm going to 157th street. That's where I'm going."

"Ho!" said the guard. "Not on this train, brother, you ain't."

"Ho!" said Benjamin Mehlig, climbing on a seat. "But I am. On this train. An' don't you call me brother, you—you subway guard."

The train had stopped. It was 103d street. The passengers gathered around Benjamin Mehlig, who stood on his seat in a corner. Other passengers sensing a murder or a hold-up or some other mildly exciting vicarious adventure, crowded from other cars. People who had left the train got back on. Benjamin Mehlig was now making a speech.

"You're a lot of sheep," said Benjamin Mehlig the small man. "That's what you are—a lot of sheep. You let a subway guard tell you where to get off a train. You paid your fares, didn't you? You paid to go to wherever it is you're going to, didn't you? You're a lot of sheep—all but me. I'm not a sheep. I'm going to stay on this train until it gets to 157th street. Thank God I'm not a sheep."

"Yuh look like one," said the guard bitterly.

"I would rather," said Benjamin Mehlig gazing coldly down at the guard—he was still standing on the seat—"look like a sheep than like a subway guard."

Benjamin Mehlig was applauded by the other passengers. The Movement was begun. Other protestants arrived. There were cheers for Benjamin Mehlig, who, standing on his seat, implored every one not to be a sheep.

More guards arrived. The Interborough held a conference. The guard who had originally encountered Benjamin Mehlig's Movement favored an immediate slaughter with as much mayhem as possible thrown in. Calmer counsels prevailed.

"We'll take you people to 110th street," the spokesman of the guards conference conceded at last. "You'll have to get off there. This train is going to the car barns."

"No," said Benjamin Mehlig. "Only the sheep will get off at 110th street. I am not a sheep."

The train moved to 110th street. Some passengers left. They were going to 110th street anyway. Benjamin Mehlig remained, remarking at frequent intervals that he was not a sheep.

Another conference and a further compromise. The train would go to 137th street. Cheers. Mr. Mehlig, the small man, announced that he was prepared to tell the world that he was not a sheep.

At 137th street everyone left the train except Benjamin Mehlig and two others. The faithful disciples of the anti-sheep movement on the subway who stood by the grand old flag were Arthur Weiner, of 134 West 180th street, and Eleanor Booth Simmons, a writer and a suffragist, who was going to Dyckman street and who also is not a sheep.

The crowd at 137th street cheered Benjamin Mehlig, Arthur Weiner and Eleanor Booth Simmons. They cheered for themselves. They jeered the guard and the Interborough and the turnstiles and the slot machines. Jeers, cheers; and Benjamin Mehlig, standing on his seat, declining to be a sheep.

"You gotta get out," announced the guards' conference.

"At 157th street," said Benjamin Mehlig. "Don't kid yourselves that I'm a sheep."

"We'll put you out," said the guards' conference, and the voice of the original guard was heard lifted above all the rest begging to be allowed to get at him.

"You lay a finger on me," said Benjamin Mehlig, "and you'll hear from my lawyers. I got lawyers. Sheep haven't got lawyers, but me, I ain't a sheep."

The train continued. Ten cars. Three passengers, one of them Mr. Mehlig, but none of them sheep.

The train roared through 145th street and howled into 157th street. The brakes shrieked. The train, all ten cars of it, came to a stop. The doors were flung open.

Benjamin Mehlig walked out.

"I hope you choke," shouted the guard.

"I am not a sheep," announced Benjamin Mehlig, and went home to supper.

While Edwards personally still wonders whether or not he is a humorist, he has definite ideas which make him anxious to keep to the funny side as often as he can, although preferring straight newspaper reporting.

"The funniest things," he declared, "are often alleged serious meetings, accurately reported.

"Shorthand notes of some conventions, would make millions roar with laughter.

"We're living in a humorous age," he continued, trying to take himself seriously. "Too many things are happening for people to sit down and gloom. Americans like the ridiculous and they can take a joke on themselves philosophically.

"Movements, however worthy, are always disposed to think themselves more important to the world than they really are.

"Kidding is good for them. It helps them preserve their sense of proportion."

Somebody must "kid" Edwards sufficiently, because he doesn't think he is more important than he is. Only 37 years old, now, he has already had an eventful newspaper career.

His sense of humor was first tickled when he was at 14 a copy boy on the Birmingham (England) Argus.

The Argus wasn't equipped with many modern appliances. There was no pneumatic tubes and few telephones. Every newspaper had what was called a "fudge box," a space left open on the front page for late news bulletins. The trick was to get the late news from the editorial to the composing room. The Argus solved it by furnishing its copy boys with tennis balls, which were cut in two, the copy inserted, and then thrown down the dumbwaiter shaft, four floors to the composing room.

"While copy boys still have lots of fun, they miss one opportunity we had," he recalled. "That was throwing fudge balls down the dumbwaiter shaft, and counting the number of times we could hit the composing room foreman."

Edwards' first contact with big news was at the time of the Birmingham riots. Lloyd George, a pro-Boer, came to Birmingham to speak at the famous town hall. As a copy boy, Edwards duty was to get the stories written by Argus reporters within the hall and rush them to his newspaper office. But no reporter ever got out in time to make the deadline that day. The hall was mobbed, and Lloyd George was taken under police body guard to a room in the hall's basement, remaining there until quiet was restored. Edwards played ball with other copy boys on the outskirts of the crowd.

Coming to Canada when he was 17, he obtained his first position as a reporter on the Montreal Witness, receiving $8 a week. His first assignment was to report a sermon preached by the Bishop of Ontario. After six months he changed to the Moncton Transcript, where he was paid $15 a week.

From here he progressed upwards, working on the Cobalt Nugget, the Montreal Herald, Montreal Star, Montreal Evening News, Philadelphia North American, Philadelphia Press, Philadelphia News and Baltimore Star.

Edwards, while on the Star, was offered an opportunity to come to New York. But he was afraid to take the step.

A short time afterwards, however, he was "fired" from the Star, and he came to the Tribune, where he has been ever since.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

By Henry Edward Warner

GREETINGS

Friends of the Craft, these greetings of the Yule
From me to you. I may not know your name,
But we have felt the rod in life's same school,
Have bucked the line together in The Game!
We've felt the thrill that only comes to one
Whose restless reaching is a lot o' fun!

Stranger to Wealth, I cannot trim your Tree
Nor stuff your Chest with pearls from some far land;
I cannot give you more than sympathy,
The feel of Brotherhood, a comrade's hand.
But what I have, I give with faith, because I honestly believe in Santa Claus!

So may you have a Christmas full of joys,
A season filled with everything that's good;
I cannot send you money, bonds or toys—
I cannot give you gifts—I wish I could!
But I can give an earnest wish to you,
Better than gold, if half of it comes true.

The author of Songs of the Craft expresses above, in the only language he understands, a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all who read in this place; and he hopes that each of you will accept the greeting as a personal one, sincere and whole-hearted. May every good thing be yours now and through the year to come, and if you ever have any troubles, may they be overshadowed and forgotten in the enjoyment of life's richest compensations.

H. E. W.

NEWSPAPER MEN DISCUSS "IS THE PRESS KEPT?"

William P. Beazell, Bruce Bliven and William G. Shepherd Arrive at "Yes and No" As Best Answer at Nation Dinner—Oswald Garrison Villard Presides

WHILE Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The Nation, did his best to ish on three dogs of war over the ques- on "Is the Press Kept?" at a banquet- bate in New York late last week, he me closer to arousing a mild sensation futility than the roar of fury.

The war dogs, supposed deadly en- mies, succeeded one another in howl- g at the moon in almost the same ellow key, but their mouths, it seemed, ere lacking in teeth.

Between howls, Mr. Villard did his est to incite anger somewhere. He iled.

His lashings, however, provided sen- ation in plenty.

"I have before me," he said at one me, "a scientific survey of the atti- ude displayed by 200 newspapers towards ie recent railroad reorganization bill. of the 200, the survey shows, 185 pub- shed repeatedly absolutely false state- ients about the bill."

The loudest bark from the scheduled ebators, with a real suggestion of snap, ame from the last speaker, W. G. Shep- erd, for many years with the United ress, and he attacked the allegedly ept foreign correspondent rather than he press.

What made the affair only "mildly utile," was the very evident entertain- nent afforded by three excellent speakers o the 450 people who attended the lebate under the auspices of The Nation.

Bruce Bliven, managing editor of the New Republic, formerly of the New York Globe, was the war dog expected o prove the press was kept. His an- swer was:

"Yes—and no."

William Preston Beazell, assistant managing editor of the New York World, therefore, was not over-taxed in the press defense, declaring in summation that some newspaper publishers desired success, some influence, but the majority were most interested in doing public good.

Shepherd hit harder, attacking the "kept American reporter in foreign capitals."

"The Foreign Offices," he charged, "have control of our foreign correspondents. Their only value to their newspaper is their ability to go to the foreign offices and get alleged stories about important questions.

"I have no doubt," he added, "that tonight, were you allowed a movie radiophotogram view of our press representatives in London, you would see a good many in some well-known bar, where, should they be queried on some story by their home editors, they could find some agent of the British foreign office nearby, ready to furnish them with the British point of view.

"It is the same at all capitals—only the bars are different.

"The only remedy I can suggest is that the home editors pick some intelligent reporter from the streets of their city, send him abroad to seek news in the same way he does at home, and keep him there until he comes under control of the foreign office. Then bring him back and send another.

"We have heard a little about the revolutionary flutter in Spain, but not all the truth from Madrid, because if our press representatives there told all the truth, they would be embarrassed in their foreign office relations."

Outlining the course the debate was to take, Mr. Villard first traced the history of American journalism, beginning with the Herald of the Bennetts and ending with what he called the "terrible tabloids." Because of his final conclusion, the three speakers referred to the small-sized newspapers, Bliven attacking their "vulgarity," Beazell declaring them "not so bad," and Shepherd endorsing them with enthusiasm.

Mr. Bliven, opening the debate, began by saying he was a liberal—"the man, you know, who walks in the middle of the road and gets the bricks from both sides."

"If the press is capitalistic," he declared, "the condition grows out of the present-day society, and cannot be criticized alone. It is no more subject to criticism than our schools or our churches. All are colored by the character of society.

"And after all, a great many newspaper publishers have found that their private interests are sometimes best served by being devoted to public interest. This devotion is sometimes bogus; sometimes real."

Mr. Bliven devoted a large portion of his address to asking and answering his own questions in pseudo-Socratic manner.

"Are editorial writers dishonest; are they all professional prostitutes ?", he asked himself first, and answered by expressing the belief that the majority do write as they believe, "drifting, if not swimming, to the newspapers that interest them."

"Not only editorial writers, but all newspaper executives, I believe, go through the same process," he said. "Metropolitan newspapers of today are large business properties. The man in charge is not likely to be the dreamy editor of the old school. He is very apt to become the same type of man as the owner of his paper."

The second question: "Do advertisers control a newspaper's policy?", he answered with an emphatic "no," citing a personal experience on the old New York Globe, when, he said he had the opportunity once to play the part of a movie hero, when he told an advertiser, in trouble in the courts, to "Go to Hell," when requested to suppress the story.

"I can't get excited over the suggestion that many of our newspapers are run by capitalists in high silk hats decorated by dollar signs, who sit back and pull the strings to make their jumping jacks jump," he concluded, "but I do deplore the moral failure of the American press.

"The present press battle for circulation is having a serious effect upon the moral and intelligent quality of our newspapers. When you print pictures of ladies with their legs crossed, you have a fine circulation builder.

"The whole movement of the press is towards superficiality, standardization, decreasing interest in public affairs, and the evil of 'giving people what they want.'"

Mr. Beazell found it easy to defend the press when called upon.

"The surest fire hokum I know of," he commenced, "is to attack the press. But the still rising tide of abuse cannot last much longer."

In answering the question: "Do advertisers influence newspaper policy?", he cited the case of Mrs. Irving I. Bloomingdale, the story of whose attempt to escape duty payment on a string of pearls, was carried prominently by all New York newspapers, despite the fact that the Bloomingdale department store spends $250,000 a year on newspaper advertising.

Concluding, the World executive charged there was more dishonesty in the labor press than in the so called capitalistic press.

"It has been proved," he said, "that a labor newspaper cannot exist without a subsidy.

"The daily newspaper publisher may have desire for success, hunger for influence, but the majority are really concerned in doing public good.

"It is easy, you say, for New York newspapers to be honest, because they are successful. I need only tell of one example out of many I know about to prove that small papers can be both honest and successful.

"That is the case of the Fort Worth Press, with a circulation of between 9,000 and 10,000, the newspaper which led the attack against fake oil stock promoters which brought about the arrest of Dr. Cook."

The touch of prophecy, which ended the evening, came from Mr. Shepherd.

"Not so very long ago, reading and writing was in about the same stage that radio is today. One hundred years from now, we may no longer be buying newspapers. We may be singing or dancing our news, which will come to us from the air."

JUDGE'S PLEA FOR CRIME NEWS BAN OPPOSED BY CANADIAN DAILY

THE Canadian attitude toward the reporting of crime news before trial was outlined in an editorial appearing in the Toronto Globe, recently, in which the practices of the newspapers in this country was also discussed.

The editorial follows in part:

"Chief Justice Martin, in reopening the civil courts in Montreal, deplored 'great newspaper publicity before trial.' He claimed that the law ought to make some restrictions on what papers are allowed to print, and, in his opinion, such news ought to be confined to official statements by the police and Crown Attorney. He alleged that much publicity now appearing frequently aroused public sympathy or hostility for or against an accused person which might be calculated to influence the verdict of a jury. Of course, he added, any restrictions he had in mind would be balanced at the trial itself by the publication of full details.

"Canadian newspapermen will find themselves almost in total disagreement with the remedy proposed by the Chief Justice. In this country the law of libel may be readily and easily invoked against newspapers which have done any person an injustice through inaccurate or premature publication. Average readers, and perhaps Chief Justice Martin himself, likely have little or no conception of the time, labor and expense employed in newspaper offices to keep within the libel law. * * *

"The restriction of news of crime or the details of the more important criminal cases to formal statements by the police or Crown Attorney would be calculated to excite suspicion on the part of the public. As matters now stand, reporters and news editors seek out the facts from these officials; and in addition from anyone else who is in a position to give authentic information of the offense in question. * * *

"Chief Justice Martin doubtless has more in mind the curbing of what is known as 'trial by newspapers.' There is no doubt that in some criminal trials in the United States the issues have depended far too much upon newspaper statement or allegation or coloring. Comment on the evidence and observations of one kind or another, all written by newspapermen or persons hired by newspapers, tend to influence the public mind as to guilt or innocence. In countless cases what look like deliberate attempts to create sympathy for the accused have been made by so-called 'sob sisters' and psychologists. There is no doubt that 'trial by newspaper' is practiced in the United States to such an extent as to make it detrimental to the ends of justice, and many leading jurists and journalists of that country are gravely concerned over a dangerous tendency. Were a Canadian paper to attempt to imitate such proceedings, its editor would promptly appear on a charge of contempt of court. While some Canadian papers do print comment on cases before United States courts, they take no such liberties with Canadian cases before Canadian courts. * * *

"Newspaper publicity in Canada has never had the effect of bringing the law into disrespect, as in some instances across the border. Examples are rare, indeed, where publicity by Canadian newspapers has made law enforcement more difficult. We do not believe that there will be any agitation for some time looking to a change in our present system. The ideas as expressed by Chief Justice Martin will not meet with any hearty approval on the part of the public; neither do we think that police officers or Crown Attorneys would care to be burdened with the task of giving out all the news of crime the public will continue to demand."

MERTON BURKE JOINS NEWS

Former N. Y. Daily News M. E., Now Managing Editor, Washington News

Merton E. Burke, former managing editor of the New York Daily News, and later with the Baltimore Sun, has joined the Scripps-Howard forces as managing editor of the Washington Daily News evening tabloid.

Prior to Mr. Burke's work in New York he was for 12 years on the editorial force of the Boston American, Mr. Hearst's evening paper in that city, and received his earlier training on the Boston Post. He was one of the accredited correspondents at the Peace Conference in Paris, and travelled extensively in Italy and the Balkans writing magazine articles, some of which appeared in Scribner's.

Mr. Burke is a member of the Overseas Writers, and of the National Association of Editors, and was one of the original incorporators and board of governors of the Newspaper Club of New York, of which he is still a member.

Woolen "Mills" Restrained

The Superior Woolen Mills, of Louisville, Ky., has been ordered by the Federal Trade Commission to discontinue doing business under the corporate name of Superior Woolen Mills or any other name which includes the words "woolen mills" or "mills" unless the respondent actually owns or operates a mill in which raw wool is converted into cloth. Another clause of the order prohibits the respondent from using in its advertising or otherwise the phrases "Direct from the Weaver to the Wearer with one Small Profit," or "Direct from Weaver to Wearer, Saving You the Middleman's Profit," or any other phrase having the tendency to create the belief that respondent manufactures the cloth from which it makes its suits and overcoats.

Employes Honor Publisher

To mark the 25th anniversary of his connection with the paper, employes of the Toronto Star on Dec. 13, presented J. E. Atkinson, president of the Star Printing and Publishing Company, with a handsome grandfather's clock. An address was read by Harry Parr, foreman of the composing room.

Spanish Daily to Move

The management of La Tribuna, Spanish daily published in Houston, Tex., has announced intention to remove the paper to San Antonio by Jan. 1. Rodolfo Avida de la Vega is editor.

NEW YORK TIMES CELEBRATES AS AD TOTAL TOPS 25,000,000 LINES

Interesting Comparative Figures on Volume of Times Advertising Given at Luncheon—Ochs, Wiley, Butterworth Address the Staff

THE New York Times celebrated the achievement of attaining a record of 25,000,000 agate lines of advertising this year, at a luncheon in the Times Annex restaurant, Saturday, Dec. 13.

This record volume of advertising, never before reached by any New York newspaper in a single year, was passed Friday, Dec. 12 and is a notable event in New York newspaper history.

About 70 members of the business and advertising departments joined with Mr. Ochs and other officers of the Times in commemorating the record.

B. T. Butterworth, advertising manager, presided. He gave interesting comparative figures of the Times volume of advertising over a period of years. Beginning with 1919, the Times attained the leadership, gradually gaining in volume, until it is expected that for 1924 the Times will outdistance the second newspaper by considerably more than 8,000,000 agate lines of advertising. Mr. Butterworth also mentioned that only three other newspapers in the United States have reached or exceeded 25,000,000 lines of advertising for a year—these being, in the order of record: Los Angeles (Cal.) Times, Detroit (Mich.) News, and Chicago (Ill.) Tribune.

In an address that will long be remembered by those present, Mr. Ochs emphasized the fact that the Times tremendous advertising lineage of 25,000,000 represents the highest class of newspaper advertising. Mr. Ochs said:

"We are striving to have in the Times only advertising that has character; that is unobjectionable; that can be trusted—that readers can respond to with a feeling that there has been effort made to protect them from improper and useless expenditures of time and money. We have accomplished a great deal in that direction. The 25,000,000 lines were closely scrutinized before acceptance, and we can boast of some measure of success in our endeavor to protect the public.

"Our advertising has grown nearly 16 times in value, but we have multiplied our rates scarcely four times. In 1897, we had about 2,400,000 lines of advertising and that year we received about $360,000 for it, approximately 15 cents a line. Our rate is now much greater. Our circulation has grown from less than 25,000 in 1897 to nearly 400,000 in 1924, sixteen times, but we have only increased our net advertising revenue from 15 to 60 cents a line. We are certainly showing great consideration for our advertisers. We have in fact materially reduced the cost of high class advertising in New York City—the best, largest and most profitable field in the world for newspaper advertisnig. Ten, twelve, fifteen, or twenty years ago, it cost from two to three dollars a line for the circulation that the New York Times now gives for less than a dollar a line.

"Has it ever occurred to you how inexpensive is newspaper advertising? Take, for example, the Christmas shopping column as an illustration. Five lines there—about five dollars. Suppose you were to go into a shop, and say, 'I see something in your window that is attractive and interesting. If you will give me a thousand of your business cards, I will furnish the envelopes and address them and send them to my friends who may be interested. All I ask you to do is to give me the cards and pay the postage.' The cards would probably cost five dollars, the postage twenty dollars; a total expenditure of $25. Do you think any sane shopkeeper would decline the proposition? Now the New York Times will place the announcement before 600,000 people and asks less than $5—one fifth the cost and 600 times the service.

"Now, another observation. You have heard that the Times is a national newspaper. We have no such aspirations. We are a New York newspaper of national interest, of national circulation. The Times is made for a New York audience, and if it interests hundreds of thousands of people throughout the world, it is because they are interested in what interests this great center of population.

"I have talked on advertising a little more seriously than I had expected, but I wish you to better understand the management's point of view; that we may go from strength to greater strength with pride in our achievements.

"We have not only occasion today to celebrate the acquiring of 25,000,000 lines of advertising, but we have today made another record, for we passed over the total of $1,000,000 sent in cash to the Times for the 'Hundred Neediest Cases'—growing from $3,000 twelve years ago to $175,000 last year and a prospect of $200,000 this year. That is a record never equalled by any other newspaper in the world. No direct appeal, no mail announcements, no canvassers, no soliciting, but wholly left to the drawing qualities of the columns of the Times. It is strictly and solely an appeal to the charitable sympathies of the readers of the Times, and the response is entirely spontaneous. Twenty odd thousand people responded last year—every year more and more. It is a lesson to advertisers to 'keep everlastingly after it.' Incidentally, it may interest you to know that this annual campaign for the 'Neediest' actually costs the Times over $10,000 for editorial and clerical service and print paper."

Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor, who represented the editorial staff, said:

"I suppose you advertising people think the editorials do not have much to do with the newspaper. We appreciate that we editors could not exist without this wonderful foundation of 25,000,000 lines that has been built under us. But I want to say just this: we are trying to tell the truth.

"When I was a college president, I used to divide those who did not tell the truth into three classes. First, those who didn't know what the truth was. Of course, if they ever told it they told it by accident. The second, were those who know what the truth is but don't want to tell it. So they don't tell it. The third class consisted of those who know the truth and want to tell it but don't know how to tell it.

"We know how to tell the truth, and certainly those in the advertising department of the Times have made that demonstration. I don't belong to the millionaire club. I think we editors are only in the hundred thousands. But I am proud to be associated with the millionaires of this institution."

Mr. Louis Wiley, business manager of the Times, spoke as follows:

"I feel that it is not incumbent on the members of the advertising staff to actually sell advertising space. In view of its high and recognized qualities as an advertising medium it is frequently necessary, however, to give information about these qualities—that is the province of the advertising representatives of the Times.

"There is not a newspaper in the world with so great an avenue of approach to the public for advertisers, not only in this Metropolitan District but throughout the nation.

"The advertising staff, under the intrepid and intelligent direction of Mr. Butterworth, deserves the highest praise and commendation for the achievement of 25,000,000 lines so far this year."

Makers of the New York Times celebrate record advertising achievement and million dollar charity enterprise.

VANDERBILT SETS DATE

Miami Morning Tabloid to Start Next Month

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 16.—Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., today announced he would begin publication here early in January of a tabloid newspaper. It will be a morning paper, according to present plans.

Tentative dates were announced as Jan. 5 or 12.

Mr. Vanderbilt designated the organization as follows:

Alfred Birdsall will be mechanical assistant to the publisher; Verne Collier, managing editor; Charles E. Fisher, organizing business manager; B. B. Marcum, organizing circulation manager; Gus Thornrose, chief photographer; H. K. Rhodes, chief of the art department; George Lemonds, organizing advertising manager; Thomas H. Fowler, foreman of the engraving department; T. H. Kanagan, foreman of the composing room.

Vanderbilt today has contracted for the United Press Service for a period of three years. No publishing site has been announced and no machinery has arrived. Local reports are that Vanderbilt may take over the old plant of the Miami News when former Governor J. M. Cox moves the News into its new building. No confirmation could be obtained of reports that Cox and Vanderbilt had formed an alliance.

Advertise Bonds As Christmas Gifts

Ten bond houses are co-operating this month in placing a series of 10 full page advertisements in Boston newspapers advocating the giving of bonds as Christmas presents. The copy was handled by Doremus & Co., New York, which claims the series to be the first of its kind in the country.

Gunnison Heads Eagle

At the monthly meeting of trustees of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle Wednesday, Herbert F. Gunnison was elected president to succeed the late William Y. Hester. Raymond M. Gunnison was elected vice-president. William Van Anden Hester, Jr., was elected secretary and also trustee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his father. Harris M. Crist was elected treasurer.

NEW BUFFALO POST LIKES COOLIDGE IDEAS

Generally Republican, It Promises Independence When Needed—For City Reform and "Light Wine" Laws

The Buffalo (N. Y.) Commercial ceased its existence Monday, Dec. 15, appearing as the Buffalo Evening Post, Tuesday, Dec. 16, following its sale last week by Charles A. Finnegan, to the Richard R. Coley Publishing Company. Mr. Coley is now editor and publisher.

The new company is incorporated for $800,000. It has unionized the mechanical department whereas the Commercial had been on an open shop basis.

The Post was scheduled to make its first appearance on Monday, Dec. 15, but Mr. Finnegan, holding the new owners strictly to a clause in the contract which provided he need not vacate the Commercial building until midnight, Monday, Dec. 15, kept the Coley forces from assuming control until Monday evening. It is also understood that the contract signed by Mr. Finnegan in selling the Commercial requires that personal theatre passes be furnished the former owner of the Commercial for a long time.

It stands for the present national policy of the Republican party, but the statement is made that the paper desires to be regarded as independent.

The Post comes out against the present Commission form of city government in Buffalo, but asserts it will support the administration which places efficient men in municipal posts.

Modification of the Volstead Act by permitting the sale of light wines and beer as "the best guarantee for the suppression of strong drink" is one of the aims of the new paper.

W. A. Schweizer is treasurer and will act as financial manager of the Post. Mr. Schweizer has been assistant treasurer of the Statler Hotel company. He is a Chicagoan and a graduate of the University of Illinois.

A. H. Longbotham, general manager is another Buffalo man. Fourteen years of newspaper work are included in his business record. For four years past he has been publicity director of the Hotels Statler company, and editor of Statler Salesmanship.

The other incorporator of the Coley Publishing Company is Clarence Webster but he will have no active part in the management of the paper. Mr. Webster is a former Buffalo man but is now president of the Curtiss Exportation Company of New York.

The Post succeeds a paper which has been prominent in Buffalo since 1811 although not always known as the Commercial.

Under the name of th Buffalo Gazette, the first issue appeared Oct. 3, 1811, as a weekly. Smith H. Salisbury and Hezekiah A. Salisbury were the owners and publishers. The paper was forced to move to Harris Hill during the war of 1812 but never missed an issue.

In 1818 the name was changed to the Niagara Patriot, but two years later the paper again was changed to the Buffalo Patriot. Another change followed in 1834 and the paper became known as the Buffalo Patriot and Commercial Advertiser. One year later the name Buffalo Commercial Advertiser was first used.

The paper went into the hands of Rufus Wheeler, Joseph Candee and James D. Warren in 1861 and until 1918 was conducted by some member of the Warren family. The final change in the name of the Commercial, before the present one, came in 1890.

It continued under the management of the Warren interests until 1918 when it was sold to Mr. A. Finnegan.

The Commercial passed without a swan song. All editorial department employes are retained for the present but the entire mechanical force was discharged. The sale price was between $200,000 and $250,000.

Advertising Men Acclaim Space Buyers' Guide Achievement

EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week was deluged with superlatives as members of the advertising profession expressed their appreciation to the SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE number issued last week as a 268-page supplement to the regular issue.

Advertising agencies, newspaper representatives, publishers, and chamber of commerce officials joined in acclaiming the issue a distinct contribution to the science of advertising.

Following are some of the comments received from various parts of the country:

A Tremendous Achievement

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your tremendous achievement in the production of the SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE number for 1924 compels me to send you my compliments and congratulations.

In addition, I wish to acknowledge the outstanding service you have rendered in putting into one great issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER the basic market data of the more important of 1,200 cities in the United States.

In making widespread such a vast amount of knowledge of market conditions you have done much to stabilize advertising and to enable it to render a still wider service to the general prosperity.

JAMES O'SHAUGHNESSY,
Executive Secretary, American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Of Practical Value

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Have examined your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE carefully. It contains much data of practical value to us in service to our clients. Congratulations!

GEORGE BATTEN COMPANY,
New York.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE came today. It is very complete and a valuable right-hand aid to rate and data service.

DEFORREST PORTER ADVERTISING SERVICE, INC.,
Buffalo, N. Y.

A Great Contribution

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—I consider the SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE number for 1924 a great contribution.

F. D. REINHART,
Wm. H. Rankin Company.

Splendid Contribution to Advertising

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—I want to congratulate you on the EDITOR & PUBLISHERS' special feature SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE number for 1924. It seems to me you have produced something here well worth while—a splendid contribution to the advertising business that I am sure will be appreciated by agents and advertisers generally. With the compliments of the season,

DAN A. CARROLL,
Publishers' Representative, New York.

Concise and Convenient

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Please accept my congratulations on your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE number for 1924.

The issue is filled with information, concisely and conveniently arranged. The condensed surveys of the principal towns and cities of the United States and Canada is a service that advertisers, advertising agents, publishers, and allied interests will appreciate.

This contribution to the cause of advertising and selling is another evidence of the progressiveness of EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

EDWIN S. FRIENDLY,
Business Mgr. New York Sun.

Has Ready Reference Value

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I should have hated like the devil to read proof for your 1924 SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE number. This, however, is simply another way of indicating or expressing to you my appreciation for its completeness and ready reference value.

ALBERT J. STOWE,
Secretary, Jacksonville (Fla.) Chamber of Commerce.

Of Constructive Value to Advertising

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Space buyers and advertising agencies are deeply obligated to EDITOR & PUBLISHER for the big spirit in the production of the SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE, 1924. No one asked you to incur an expense of this kind, you did so for its constructive value to we, of the advertising profession.

CHARLES F. W. NICHOLS,
President, Charles F. W. Nichols Company, Chicago.

A Most Remarkable Issue

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE is the most remarkable issue that has come to our notice in a long, long while. It contains a vast fund of valuable information. Congratulations!

H. H. CHARLES,
President, H. H. Charles Agency, New York.

Another Achievement

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE is a most valuable compilation.—Just another one of those achievements which we have grown accustomed to expect from you—and greatly augments the value of your remarkable and continuous service to the profession.

ALBERT A. SNOWDEN,
President, Snowden Advertising Agency, Inc., New York.

"A Real Monument to E. & P."

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE is certainly a great boon to the science of selling advertising, also a real monument to EDITOR & PUBLISHER. We join in extending to you our unbounded gratitude and appreciation.

A. F. BAUMGARTNER,
President, The Thompson Koch Company., Cincinnati, O.

Most Complete to Date

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—We consider your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE the most complete and useful compilation of its kind we have seen. Congratulations!

THE JOHN VANHAAGEN ADVERTISING AGENCY, Philadelphia.

Most Comprehensive Digest Published

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE is invaluable. It is the most comprehensive and helpful digest ever published. Hearty congratulations on your great achievement.

FOX & MCKENZIE,
Philadelphia.

Distinct Assistant to Agencies

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—We have always appreciated your Year Book and your current SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE is certainly highly valuable and should be of distinct assistance to every agency.

GUNDLACH ADVERTISING COMPANY,
Chicago.

"A Most Thorough Compilation"

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—The new SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE is a most thorough and complete compilation of valuable space buying data. Congratulations and best wishes for success during the coming year.

THE EUGENE MCGUCKIN COMPANY,
Philadelphia.

Comprehensive and Compact

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:— Congratulations on your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE number. It is comprehensive, compact, and should be of tremendous service to the advertising world.

H. KRAWITZ,
Peck Advertising Agency, Inc., New York.

Invaluable Agency Reference Work

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE is an invaluable reference work for agency media and research departments.

A. J. SLOMANSON,
Manager, Plan and Media Department, Dorland Agency, Inc.

Opens Door to Profits

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your standardized town and city service in the SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE opens the door to immeasurable profits for the advertiser and merchandiser. We congratulate you on this far reaching contribution to business development.

The DAVIS SMITH COMPANY,
Boston, Mass.

"My Hat Is Off to You"

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE number received at my home this morning. You have done a big job very well. It has involved an enormous amount of work that will never be half appreciated by newspaper publishers. They in the large do not seem to recognize the fact that only through advertising and the assembly of such data their newspapers and fields may become known for what they are.

My hat is off to you.

With best good wishes for a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year, I am

JASON ROGERS,
Editor, The Advertisers' Weekly.

Value Cannot Be Over-Estimated

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—The value of your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE cannot be over-estimated. Congratulations.

C. B. LOVELL, Advertising Manager,
Poster Advertising Company, Inc.

Tops Them All

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—We received in this morning's mail your Dec. 13 issue, including the SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE for 1924.

The first paragraph of this section says that you present this book "with unconcealed pride." You certainly have every right in the world to be proud of this work.

This department searches everywhere for information on the markets. We have surveys and market information from almost every publisher that has such a service, but we unreservedly say that this is the most complete and satisfactory layout of market information that we have ever seen.

We hope it is possible for us to buy additional copies for the several offices in this organization. We would like to have you tell us by return mail what the cost will be. We presume that it is within reason, and in such a case we would like to have you send us ten additional copies of this Space Buyer's Guide number.

Please accept our hearty and sincere congratulations on publishing a work of this kind.

D. HEER, Vice-President.
The Miller Agency Company.

"An Invaluable Aid"

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE is an excellent contribution towards advertising. We will find it an invaluable aid during the coming year and will look forward each year to its publication. Heartiest congratulations on your good work.

FRANK J. REYNOLDS,
President, Albert Frank & Co., New York.

A Great Help to Agencies

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Congratulations to EDITOR & PUBLISHER on the SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE just received. A number of the metropolitan newspapers send us market surveys on local conditions from time to time. The great thing in your SPACE BUYER'S GUIDE is the fact that you rolled all into one volume on all the cities and towns of the United States and Canada in a concise manner which is a great help to the advertisers and the advertising agencies.

You have rendered a great assistance to newspaper advertisers and a debt of gratitude should be yours from all the advertisers, agencies and publishers. You have done your work well and we extend our hearty congratulations and hope the good work will continue.

CHARLES C. GREEN,
Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, New York.

Valuable to Every Agency

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE is well worthy of the highest commendation and will prove to be very valuable in every advertising agency.

FRANKLIN P. SHUMWAY,
Boston, Mass.

He Puts It in Latin

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Congratulations on your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE. Truly Multum In Parvo.

C. W. BUGGY,
Oklahoma Publishing Co.

A Credit to E. & P.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE a real service to advertisers and much credit to EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

J. D. BATES ADVERTISING AGENCY,
Springfield, Mass.

Very Good

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE very good.

JOHN O. POWERS,
Publishers' Representative.

Wants Another Copy

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE edition far exceeds our expectations and we hasten to congratulate you upon a splendid piece of work.

Please send us another copy of this edition, as we wish to present it to our Chamber of Commerce.

H. L. OPIE,
President, Staunton (Va.) Leader and News-Leader.

"Most Helpful"

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE number received last week. We consider it most helpful from the Space Buyers' standpoint.

THOS. F. LOGAN, INC.,
New York.

MARTIN H. GLYNN, EDITOR AND FORMER OWNER, ALBANY TIMES-UNION, DIES

Was Former Governor of New York and Prominent in Democratic Politics—Author of Wilson Phrase "He Kept Us Out of War"

MARTIN H. GLYNN, 53, editor and former owner of the Albany (N. Y.) Times-Union and president of the New York Daily Mirror, died of heart disease at his Albany home Dec. 14. In addition to his newspaper career, Mr. Glynn had played an important part in New York politics, and was a former Governor of the State.

The story of Mr. Glynn's life is the story not only of a poor boy who upheld the American tradition by struggling upward in success in one line of endeavor, but that of a man who, starting with nothing but his own brains, courage and determination, won to a position of eminence in several fields—journalism, law, government, statesmanship, politics and oratory.

Mr. Glynn and Mr. Hearst had long been intimate personal friends, and he entered the Hearst organization with his usual zest.

Recently he was chosen to be President of the New York Daily Mirror, Mr. Hearst's tabloid nature.

At Albany he was well-known to all classes of people and greatly beloved.

Mr. Glynn was born in Kinderhook, near Albany, on Sept. 27, 1871, the son of Martin and Anna G. Glynn. He received his preliminary education in the public schools of the neighborhood and later earned degrees of A.B. and A.M. from St. John's College and Fordham University. In later years he received honorary degrees from Syracuse, Union and Georgetown universities and from Fordham.

He was admitted to the New York bar in 1897, but never practiced law to any extent, entering newspaper work at an early age, and later becoming managing editor of the Albany Times Union. He gained financial control of the paper, but last spring sold it to William Randolph Hearst, continuing to direct the paper as editor.

For the greater part of his life Mr. Glynn was interested in politics, and for many years was prominently identified with the Democratic party. He began his political career by being elected to the 56th Congress as Representative of the 20th New York District. He was named vice-president of the National Commission of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in 1901. He became Comptroller of the State in 1906.

He was elected Lieutenant Governor in 1912, and became Governor on August 14, 1913, after Governor William Sulzer had been impeached and removed from office by the State Legislature. He ran for the office in 1914, but was defeated by Charles S. Whitman, the Republican candidate.

Mr. Glynn was credited by the late Theodore Roosevelt with making the greatest single contribution to the re-election of Woodrow Wilson as President through his invention of the phrase, "He kept us out of war." The Governor said this at the Democratic National Convention of 1916, in St. Louis, of which he was temporary chairman. The phrase swept the country and was used in all of the campaign literature of the Democrats.

That speech established him as one of the foremost orators of his day. He defended President Wilson's policy of neutrality.

Several years later, in a dingy room in London, Mr. Glynn made what he himself considered his most important contribution to mankind. He arranged the interview between Lloyd George and Eamon De Valera, out of which grew the peace between Ireland and England and the creation of the Irish Free State.

Lloyd George, in a speech in Albany in October, 1923, paid him the compliment of saying "no man did more to bring a settlement of the Irish question than Martin H. Glynn."

Mr. Glynn married Mary C. E. Magrane, of Lynn, Mass., in 1900, who survives him. He also leaves three brothers James T. Glynn, of Albany, who was associated in the management of the Times-Union; John J. Glynn and Frank M. Glynn, of Valatie, N. Y., and two sisters, Mrs. John E. Hickey, of Valatie, and Mrs. P. J. Shaughness, of Boston, Mass.

MARTIN H. GLYNN

British Outlook Bright

The British market is easier for American goods than it has been since pre-war days—that is the summarized verdict of the American Chamber of Commerce in London after an examination into this market for U. S. products.

An interesting sidelight upon the exploitation of the British market by American manufacturers is the fact that whenever a new American line is introduced by advertising, a British manufacturer rises to the occasion and launches a native-made production. And both sell. I could give a dozen instances of the kind, from refill pencils to soap, dentifrices, and automobiles.

The American Chamber of Commerce in its report refers particularly to toilet preparations, and says that in these lines American products are very well known and widely used. The importation of American articles into the British market is undoubtedly much larger than before the war. There was a considerable change in the attitude of the public towards toilet preparations during the war. This psychological change, combined with educational work and advertising, has made for a much larger use of all kinds of toilet requisites.

M. E. FOSTER WOULD BAN USE OF "XMAS"

M. E. FOSTER, editor of the Houston (Tex.) Chronicle, in his daily first page column recently joined the attack on the use of "Xmas" for Christmas.

"Let's stop it," he said. "Conservation is all right, but why butcher the English language to save a few letters in a word many centuries old, especially when the change is inexcusable and borders on the sacrilegious? We are talking about that good word Christmas and its abbreviation to Xmas. Isn't that a disgrace to philology, euphony and even to Christianity itself? Probably the newspapers are partly responsible, therefore editors and reporters should now join in the movement to end the miserable misspelling or makeshift abbreviation. This is notice to all Chronicle writers and contributors to stop it. We also urge our advertisers to show a little more respect for a word that ought to mean so much to us at this glad time of the year."

"H. A. Kelly, writing in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, calls attention to the fact that X is an unknown quantity in algebra, and certainly means worse than nothing when substituted for Christ in Christmas. He urges the elimination of the undignified X, and we are ready to join with him in the reform movement. Stop calling it Ecksmas; stop writing it Xmas. If you are a Christian you certainly don't want to be called an Xian. Would you refer to the Golden Rule as Xlike, or to the sermon on the mount as X's gospel? Then eliminate the X when trying to abbreviate Christmas. There are some words too good and sacred to be shortened. You might as well describe "love" as Y, or "good" as Z, as to attempt to shorten the sacred name that describes the season we are preparing to celebrate."

DAY OF SPECIALISTS I NEWS WRITING HERE

"All-Round" Men Being Distanced b Men With Special Knowledge of Single Subject, Dean Walter Williams Says

"I'm looking for a job," remarked th young man to the editor.

"Well, what can you do?"

"I've had general newspaper exper ence."

"Fine, but what can you specificall do? Politics? Radio? Business? Fi ance? Law? Economics? Literature Agriculture? What is your specialty?

These are the questions asked ne phyte newspaper men today, according Dean Walter Williams of the Universit of Missouri, School of Journalism Columbia, Mo., who was interviewed i New York this week, and who believe that "specialization is the chief charac teristic of the new journalism."

In the course of the interview, Dea Williams made the startling statemen that the demand for newspapermen fa exceeded the supply. This state affairs, he said, is true in the smalle cities of the country.

"But what the newspaper editors today are looking for are specialists i some line", he added.

"The trouble with the old-school news paper man was that he knew a litt about a lot of subjects, but stopped righ there.

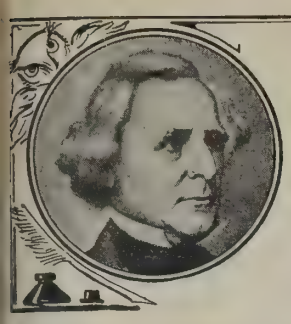
"He had a thin smattering of know edge on a great variety of matters. he was vivacious and facile with his pe he could play on this knowledge to certain extent over a period of time.

"It was, however, an ability, which soo wore out; and after it was gone, th newspaper man was thrown to the dis card by the editor, who was continuall on the outlook for new talent.

"Now the tendency is for men wh plan to enter journalism to sink thei roots down into some one subject i which they can become an authorit They are the sort of men sought for b the editors. Their job remains sure.

"Authoritativeness is what holds dow a job."

Dean Williams traced the developmen of this "new journalism" as seen in th work of the school he heads. When th school was founded 17 years ago, h said, there was considerable hesitation o the part of editors to ask journalism graduates to become members of thei staffs. But now this attitude has en tirely changed. They are asking for me trained along some specific line, wel grounded, however, in general knowl edge.



"It is remarkable", he explained, "th number of calls we receive for agricul tural editors, for instance. We are als being requested for men who have studie radio, who have taken a course in gen eral electricity, plus a history of the de velopment of radio itself.

"A foreign correspondent came to m a short time ago, and told me he wishe he had spent more time in college study ing international politics, governments and economics. It would have helpe him far more than the idea of genera newspaper training and writing, whic he had followed.

"The specialist makes journalism profession," he concluded. "He has field, which no one can take away fro him."

New Canadian Printer Circuit

A considerable increase in the volum of news interchanged between the Eas and the West by the Canadian Press wa brought about this week by the openin of an automatic printer telegraph servic between Ottawa and Winnipeg. Con gratulatory messages were exchanged be tween E. Norman Smith, president of th Canadian Press and vice-president of th Ottawa Journal, and Honorary Presiden E. H. Macklin, president and general man ager Manitoba Free Press.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

Stanley's Meteoric Career

Probably one of the most interesting and romantic journalistic stories is that of Henry M. Stanley's rise to fame as an explorer of world-wide eminence and finally as a member of the British House of Commons. It also incidentally shows how unerring was the junior Bennett's judgment in the selection of the best men for his purposes. Stanley, naturally a reticent man, withheld all information as to his birthplace and the years of his boyhood; the statement that he had been born in New Orleans was never denied by him, and it remained practically a secret until the time of his death, that he was born in Denbigh, Wales, in 1841, in obscurity and extreme poverty. As his parents were unable to support him, he spent several years of his boyhood in a workhouse, registered under his real name of John Rowlands, and attended the free school of St. Asaph. At the age of 16 he came to New Orleans as a cabin boy on a cotton ship and by chance attracted the attention of Henry M. Stanley, a merchant of that city, who adopted him and by whom the expenses of a good high school education were defrayed. His benefactor dying intestate, the young man, now known as Stanley, was thrown on his own resources, and after a temporary residence in Arkansas, in 1862 enlisted in the Confederate Army. Taken prisoner, he was liberated on joining the United States Navy, where his abilities caused him to be promoted to be ship's clerk, and finally he became secretary to the Admiral, on the flagship "Ticonderoga," and at various times contributed important news items to both the Herald and the Tribune. After his discharge from the Navy in 1865, he joined an expedition under command of General Hancock, sent against the western Indians and became correspondent for the Tribune. Later on he represented the Herald as correspondent with General Sherman's forces on the Plains, and his accounts of the campaign received high praise.

When the junior Bennett took control of the Herald, with vast cash resources at command, as previously stated, he evolved his policy of secretly sending correspondents to accompany military or other expeditions to distant lands, and selected young Stanley in 1867 to go to Abyssinia and report the military operations of Sir Robert Napier against King Theodore of that country.

The first intimation the Herald's contemporaries had of Bennett's costly enterprise was the appearance on the morning of Feb. 20, 1868, of a page of correspondence from Stanley, telling of the landing of the expedition at the port of Mulkatto, and which at once demonstrated Stanley's abilities as a descriptive writer and as an energetic correspondent. His splendid news letters appeared in the Herald, at intervals, up to June of that year, the final one giving, through the Herald, the first news to the world of Napier's success, and enabling Bennett, with becoming pride, to supply the British Government and press with the news in advance of their own despatches. Stanley's fortune was made. Mr. Bennett sent him a congratulatory letter with a draft for a large bonus enclosed. Stanley's name had not been appended to the correspondence, and much curiosity was manifested as to who was the brilliant writer that was so ably representing the Herald in the wilds of Africa.

The Bennetts, father and son, now realized that they had in Stanley a courageous explorer and a reliable, resourceful correspondent, and he was kept busy on various secret journeys, supplying his paper with stories of his ascent of the Nile; visits to Tartary and Syria; interviews with the chiefs of the Cretan rebellion; and finally was hurriedly sent to witness the enforced departure of Queen Isabella from Spain.

On Oct. 16, 1869, Stanley, then in Madrid, received a telegram from the junior Bennett to hasten to Paris. On his arrival, Bennett asked him:

"Where do you think Livingstone is?"

"I really don't know, Sir."

"Do you think he's alive?"

"He may or may not be," Stanley guardedly replied.

"Well, I think he's alive and that he can be found, and I'm going to send you to find him."

"Yes, Sir."

"My instructions are these: Draw one thousand pounds now; when you have gone through that, draw another thousand, and when that is spent draw another thousand, and when you have finished that, draw another, and so on—but find Livingstone."

Stanley didn't hesitate. His naval and journalistic training had accustomed him to implicit obedience. Just as he had done when the Herald proprietor had given him 10 minutes to consider whether or not he would accept the mission to Abyssinia, so now he drew a long breath and agreed to find Livingstone living or Livingstone dead!

The journey, which was to be kept a profound secret, to avoid exciting competition, was to begin after he had first attended the opening of the Suez Canal in November, 1869; then to visit Jerusalem to describe Capt. Warren's antiquarian work, and it was not till December, 1870, that he sailed from Bombay to Zanzibar, which he reached on Jan. 6, 1871.

Stanley had to act with great tact and diplomacy, for he was still under instructions of secrecy. Hiring 200 armed men for a year, and carrying immense supplies of all kinds, including sheeting and beads for barter with the native tribes, on March 21, 1871, he left the coast, and after a 236-day march, after overcoming obstacles of all kinds, arrived at Ujiji and found Livingstone. Stanley with enforced calmness greeted the great pioneer, later admitting that he felt like rushing into the forest to give vent to his feeling of joy. After doing some exploring on his account in an endeavor to locate the sources of the Nile, Stanley parted from Livingstone on March 14, 1872, with pathetic farewells and returned to Zanzibar.

On May 2, 1872, his first despatch, announcing the finding of Livingstone was published in the Herald, creating a great sensation, and as Bennett wrote editorially, it draw forth "a number of manly and cowardly recognitions—recognitions anyhow—of Herald enterprise."

Stanley on his return journey landed at Marseilles and was met, on behalf of the Herald, by Dr. Hosmer, who gave him the first intimation that the Royal Geographical Society questioned the truth of his reported discoveries. However, this unwelcome news did not disturb him, and he received a warm welcome in Paris; was spoken of as "The Lion of the Day" by the French press, and suddenly found himself a great man, banqueted by the Americans in the city, and on which occasion he first fully described his journey in Africa, and reviewing his achievements, gave hearty recognition to the Herald's enterprise.

Mr. Washburne, the United States Minister to France, entertained Stanley at breakfast, the principal guest being Gen. William T. Sherman, then a visitor to Paris.

Mr. Washburne, in speaking of Stanley's successful journey to the heart of Africa, said:

"It is a great thing. I only know of one other great expedition brought to so successful a termination. That is Sherman's march to the sea."

Proceeding to London, Stanley found that the public and press generally recognized the importance and value of his expedition and he was congratulated warmly on his having found Livingstone. Queen Victoria complimented him and presented him with a magnificent gold snuff box set with brilliants.

The Royal Geographical Society at first had looked with suspicion on his report, and he reviewed its criticisms in a somewhat caustic style. However, later on the Society voted the Victoria Medal to him, and Sir Henry Rawlinson, its president, complimented Mr. Bennett for "the generous and philanthropic spirit in which he conceived the idea of relieving Dr. Livingstone, and also for having supplied the funds for that purpose."

The London Saturday Review was the only journal that persisted in its criticisms of Stanley, for keeping back Dr. Livingstone's letters until he had reached Paris, and also claiming that he had prevented the sending of a British Relief expedition to the doctor.

Stanley was ordered back to New York, where he was enthusiastically received, was entertained by the Lotos Club on Nov. 22, 1872, and was the honored guest of the American Geographical Society at a banquet on the 27th, and his name figured prominently in the Herald's stories.

An amusing incident occurred shortly after Stanley had been put on waiting orders. One morning while sitting in the city room reading the paper, he was requested to see Mr. Connery, who asked him if he would not kindly go over and report the Police Court trials as the city editor was short a man.

Stanley is said to have flushed up at the request, but obeyed the order and went over. That Bennett intentionally slighted him is altogether unlikely.

Where, now, an enterprising newspaper would arrange to syndicate news gathered on such costly expeditions as those of Stanley and MacGahan, in those days the proprietor of the Herald bore the entire cost, content with the added reputation and fame thus acquired as against present-day monetary profit.

(To be continued next week)

WILLIAM V. HESTER, BROOKLYN EAGLE PRESIDENT, DIES AT 66

Succeeded His Father, the Late Col. W. H. Hester in Paper's Management in 1921—Began as Counter Clerk on Daily in 1881

WILLIAM VAN ANDEN HESTER, 66, president and general manager of the Brooklyn Eagle, died Dec. 14, at his summer home at Glen Cove, L. I., following an illness of several months. He had succeeded his father, the late Col. William H. Hester, at the head of the Eagle in June, 1921.

He was born in Brooklyn on Dec. 1, 1858, and was an only son. As a youth Mr. Hester prepared himself to carry on the work of his father by going to work as a clerk in the business office of the Eagle. Other employes always observed that he was quiet and unassuming in his manners, and that he applied himself as diligently as any of his associates to selling newspapers, receiving advertisements and performing other duties.

The younger Hester grew up with the Eagle. He submerged his identity in the publication as completely as did his father and by perseverance fitted himself for its eventual control.

He was educated at the Brooklyn Juvenile High School, Polytechnic Institute and the Bryant and Stratton Business College. After leaving school he went to work for Thomas T. Barr & Co. He was employed in the coffee department and remained with that firm for a year and a half. From Dec. 6, 1881, he was connected with the Eagle.

As a counter clerk Mr. Hester sold papers that carried the news of the death of Henry Ward Beecher. He sold others with the story of the opening of the Brooklyn Bridge. He rose step by step, and on June 9, 1891, was elected secretary of the Eagle Corporation. He was made secretary-treasurer on Dec. 4, 1900. He then became vice-president and president of the corporation.

As a young man Mr. Hester joined Company H, Twenty-third Regiment, New York National Guard, and throughout his life always maintained an active interest in that military organization and in all military events.

Mr. Hester was a member of the Dutch Reformed Church. He was interested in many charitable organizations, including the Home for Aged Men and Women.

Mr. Hester was a director of the Eagle Warehouse and Storage Company, and of Frederick Loeser & Co. Previously he had been a director of the Brooklyn Edison Company and the Corning Light and Gas Company, secretary of the Nassau Development Company and a trustee of the Long Island Loan and Trust Company.

Editor Awarded $1 Damages

Nate E. Reece, editor and publisher of the Pratt (Kan.) Daily Tribune, was awarded a verdict of $1.00 damages growing out of an attack made upon him in September, 1923, by Walter Peacock, son of the then Mayor, because of editorials in the Tribune. Reece sued Peacock for $5,133.

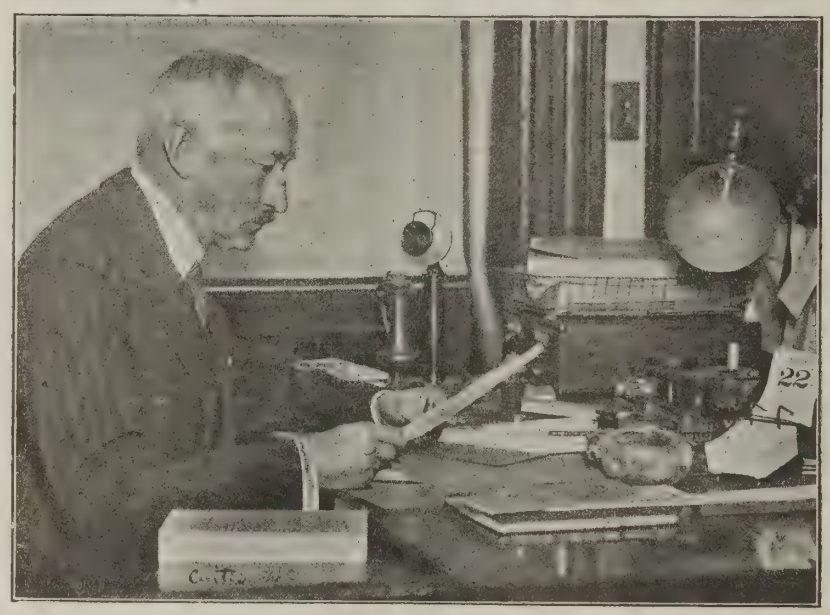
RADIO AIDS NEWS SERVICES

Pressed Into Service When Storms Break Western Wires

How radio came to the rescue as news conveyor Dec. 4, after storms had crippled wire service in Colorado, Nebraska, and other points on the East-West circuit, was learned this week. All press associations made use of broadcasting stations in delivering their news reports to clients.

The Associated Press, when wires were blown down, at first routed their report over the Canadian Press wires in Canada. Later, however, news for members in Colorado and Nebraska was put on the air from an Omaha station.

Tom Ingoldesby, United Press correspondent at Omaha, immediately got in touch with station WOAW, the Woodmen of the World, which began broadcasting the U. P. report. Ingoldesby was able to notify some U. P. clients by telegram and about 20 U. P. client newspapers were able to tune in and were furnished with complete news protection through his resourcefulness.



News messages, aggregating 10,000 words a day, were transmitted by International News Service from New York, during the storm period. The Universal Service sent a similar volume of news from the same station, that of the Radio Corporation of America.

SWISS HAVE SPOKEN NEWSPAPER

Public Crier Announces News Each Sunday in Champery

A spoken Sunday newspaper in the Swiss village of Champery was described by James Melvin Lee, director of the Department of Journalism, New York University, and conductor of the "Our Own World of Letters" department in EDITOR & PUBLISHER in a radio talk broadcast by station WNYC, New York, recently. Each Sunday from a balcony overlooking the principal street "public cryings" are held immediately after mass. The public crier announces, first, the decisions and decrees—both federal and state, the ordinances passed by the municipal council, fines or penalties decided upon by the local police court, and other news items.

Advertising is not neglected. For a small fee the crier announces wares for merchants and gives publicity to lost and found articles.

WILLIAM V. HESTER

IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS?

Originally printed in the New York Sun on Sept. 21, 1897, when Charles A. Dana was editor of that newspaper, and often reprinted—but never too often.

IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS?

WE take pleasure in answering at once and thus prominently the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of THE SUN:

"DEAR EDITOR—I am 8 years old.

"Some of my little friends say there is no SANTA CLAUS.

"Papa says 'If you see it in THE SUN it's so.'

"Please tell me the truth is there a SANTA CLAUS?

"VIRGINIA O'HANLON.
"115 West Ninety-fifth street."

VIRGINIA, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, VIRGINIA, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, VIRGINIA, there is a SANTA CLAUS. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no SANTA CLAUS! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in SANTA CLAUS! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch SANTA CLAUS, but even if they did not see SANTA CLAUS coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees SANTA CLAUS, but that is no sign that there is no SANTA CLAUS. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, VIRGINIA, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No SANTA CLAUS! Thank GOD! he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, VIRGINIA, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

R. W. HOWARD SHARES IN EDITORIAL CONTROL

W. W. Hawkins Made General Business Manager and G. B. Parker Editor-in-Chief of Scripps-Howard Organization

Roy W. Howard, for five years in control of the business management of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, has now assumed a share in the editorial direction of the organization, held before solely by his partner, Robert P. Scripps, EDITOR & PUBLISHER learned this week.

Mr. Scripps will continue to dictate editorial policy on major matters, relinquishing only partial and the more active direction to his partner, who now will function in both editorial and business departments.

This realignment has occasioned two changes in the executive staff. W. W. Hawkins, formerly executive manager, has been made general business manager, and George B. Parker, general editorial director, has been appointed editor-in-chief.

Mr. Parker succeeds W. B. Colver, whose five-year contract expired this month. Mr. Colver, when questioned by EDITOR & PUBLISHER over long distance telephone to Washington, said he was not ready to announce future plans. Mr. Parker became general editorial director Feb. 1 of this year, being promoted from editor-in-chief of the Southwestern group of Scripps-Howard papers.

Both Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Parker will act under Mr. Howard's direction.

CHIROPRACTOR SUES

His Radio Device Challenged, Texan Demands $1,000,000 Damages

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Dr. George D. Rogers, San Antonio Chiropractor and former Dean of Texas Chiropractic College, filed in District Court here a suit for $1,000,000 damages against the Experimenter Publishing Company of New York. The suit is based upon an article by Hugo Gernsback, editor of Radio News, in the December issue of that publication. The article headed "The Latest Radio Swindle," dealt with an invention by Rogers called the "Neurophonometer" and claimed to be capable of measuring the conductivity of the nerves of the entire human body.

Rogers' suit asks $500,000 actual and similar exemplary damages claiming the article was untrue and printed maliciously with intent to injure his reputation and expose him to public ridicule.

The article by Gernsback, who is a member of the American Physical Society, was accompanied by an offer, in which Radio News challenged Rogers to demonstrate his invention before a body of six physicians and six scientists of repute. If the twelve found claims for the "Neurophonometer" based on scientific truth, Radio News offered to pay Rogers $1,000 and expenses to New York.

Guide Has Many Uses

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—Your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE is a comprehensive compilation of essential information and should prove its value and usefulness in a hundred and one ways to the man who wants to know where to find what he wants to know when he wants to know it. Thanks for it.

ANDREW CONE GENERAL,
ADVERTISING AGENCY.
New York.

Valued Highly by Agency

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—We value the SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE very highly and commend you upon its completeness.

THE ADAMARS COMPANY,
St. Louis, Mo.

Wisconsin
Daily Newspapers

Choose The News To Tell Detroit

THE selection of The Detroit News as the medium in Detroit to carry their messages of Wisconsin prosperity and achievement is significant of the reputation that The Detroit News enjoys among the members of its own fraternity. No other Detroit newspaper is publishing this series of Wisconsin publicity for the reason that The News, alone, reaches practically everyone in the great Detroit territory.

More than 86% of Detroit's executives, earning $10,000 or more a year read The News. Actual investigation has shown this. Practically every retailer reads The Detroit News; a survey has verified this fact, and every English-speaking home receives The News. Naturally the advertising agents of Michigan do so.

No other city of Detroit's size in America is so thoroughly covered by one newspaper as Detroit is by The News.

The Detroit News

Greatest Circulation Week Day and Sunday in Michigan.

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

Idealism Is Economically Sound—GEORGE MARBLE

"A NEWSPAPER can make or break its own community."

With this truism as introduction, George W. Marble, editor and owner, Fort Scott (Kan.) Tribune Monitor and president, National Editorial Association, this week told EDITOR & PUBLISHER how his newspaper in a town of 12,000 population pays profits by playing commerical prophet to its circulation field.

In the telling was woven the intimate story of a printer's devil of New England ancestry, who from raw disheartening beginnings at $10 a week on a struggling country newspaper finally became owner and taught the town where and how to find prosperity.

"Idealism on the part of a newspaper is economically sound," was what Mr. Marble said he learned through his experience.

"It is sound for the simple and obvious reason that a newspaper with ideals is always doing something to make its community better. And of course, unless the newspaper is left behind in the good work it sets in motion, it prospers equally with the prosperity of its town.

"A newspaper, more than any other agency, can analyze the needs of a town. It should always be on the look-out, ready to originate constructive movements.

"Naturally they must be intelligently directed. They cannot be mere fads or hobbies, wild guesses at what is best for the community. Any suggestion should be proved economically sound before attempted."

To illustrate his point, Mr. Marble need only consult his own experience. Twenty years ago Fort Scott faced a period of depression. It was then primarily an agricultural center. But the farms were run down. The farmers couldn't pay their taxes. They didn't have money enough even to paint their houses. Two alternatives faced them: they must find some new means of making a living, or move elsewhere.

Mr. Marble's newspaper lead the movement to meet the dilemma. Experts were caled in; the soil analyzed; and the authorities directed the farmers towards dairying.

"This was in 1912," Mr. Marble recalled. "An opposition newspaper was started then. I didn't stay in Fort Scott to fight them. Instead, I jumped on a train for Wisconsin to study dairy farming."

When he returned, he was equipped to help the farmers through his newspaper. Fort Scott became a great creamery center, and the city rallied to support the benefactor-newspaper, which became, again, as it is today, alone in its field.

Mr. Marble was born a mile from the office his newspaper now occupies. His father had come to Kansas from Massachusetts. The younger Marble started as printer's devil on the then Fort Scott Tribune, when he was 17. His first taste of newspaper work fired him with the ambition to study journalism in some Eastern college. But the publisher persuaded him to stay where he was and eventually gave him a reporter's job at $10 a week.

When he was 20, the publisher allowed him to apply one week's salary every month towards the purchase of one-third interest in the property. Marble made extra money as correspondent for larger city newspapers, his salary was increased to $12 a week, and in three years he became a partner in publication of the Tribune.

Six years later another newspaper entered the field. On Marbles shoulders fell the burden of fighting this rival. He bought the first linotype ever set up in Kansas to help him, and after being reporter and advertising solicitor during the afternoon, he would go to bed early and get up at four o'clock in the morning to put his own stories into type. In this way, the Tribune was able to get out first and with more news.

"You're carrying all the load" said his boss one day," "If you want to buy the paper, I'll sell reasonably."

Marble borrowed money and became owner of the Fort Scott Tribune in 1904, a four-page, seven-column newspaper. By consistent effort always working for his community, he has built up a newspaper several times as large, with a volume of business increased 1,000 per cent.

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"

The World.
MORNING EDITION

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

Indiana Celebrities Revel

Many men prominent in the newspaper and advertising world were among those present Saturday night when the Indiana Club of Chicago held its annual meeting in the Congress Hotel. The club is composed of Indianians who have achieved note in their respective callings. John T. McCutcheon, famous cartoonist, presided at the meeting, which was designated as an aviation party in honor of Wilbur Wright, one of the guests. Others present were Wilbur D. Nesbit, John C. Shaffer, Carroll Shaffer, George Ade, Carey Orr, Gaar Williams and a host of other newspaper and advertising men.

Daily to Enlarge Plant

The Beloit (Wis.) Daily News has announced plans for a three-story addition to its plant. A new press will be installed.

Daily Starts Home Contest

Beginning with last Sunday's issue, the Kansas City Journal-Post instituted an "Own Your Home" contest, major prizes to be two homes constructed by the newspaper, one valued at $7,782 and the other at $6,369. Winners may have the homes or $7,000 and $6,000 in cash. The contest will center around identification of photographs of Kansas City scenes and institutions.

Editor's Wife Acquitted

Florence M. Waldron, wife of Malcolm Woldron, editor of the Stamford (Conn.) Sentinel, has been acquitted of charges of theft after trial in a Darien court. Harry T. Lutterman, alleged to be the King Kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan in Connecticut, brought the charges. He accused Mrs. Waldron of stealing information from his home which later found its way into newspaper articles.

Will Be Constantly Used

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Nineteen Twenty-Four Edition SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE Number of EDITOR & PUBLISHER has just reached my desk. There it will remain until the 1925 edition is received. If you could see the physical condition of the 1923 INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK you could appreciate the usages your publications receive in this office.

F. B. AVERY, Chicago.

Women's Civic Club of Wilbur, Wash., will edit a day's issue of the Wilbur Register some time in January.

MORNING PAPERS GET ACTION
THE SAME DAY

WITHOUT "DEDUCTS"

First Place in Cincinnati

—for the greatest amount of advertising lineage published during November, 1924, goes to

The Cincinnati Enquirer

The Enquirer carried during November

1,306,335 Lines

of paid advertising, leading both evening newspapers

One by .....131,133 Lines
The other by .....623,695 Lines

In this tabulation no evening paper classification has been omitted. No deduction of any sort has been made and no alibi is advanced by The Enquirer for something it may not have or cannot get. These figures tell the whole truth about newspaper supremacy in Cincinnati.

WHY THIS SUPREMACY?

Because The Enquirer taps the real purchasing power day after day—because the advertiser knows it and gets results. No waste circulation—no padded orders sent to and paid for by dealers and newsboys but not sold to the reading public.

The Enquirer ALWAYS leads the other newspapers in Classified, Automobile, Radio, Furniture, Resorts and Travel, Financial, and Building Material Advertising.

I. A. KLEIN
Chicago
New York

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market Street
San Francisco

The CINCINNATI ENQUIRER

One of the World's Greatest Newspapers

25,000,000 Lines

THE NEW YORK TIMES published this record volume, 25,000,000 agate lines of advertising in 1924, up to Friday, December 12th.

The Times' record has never before been equaled by any other New York newspaper, and it exceeds by 8,000,000 lines the advertising in the next New York newspaper in 1924.

The volume of this advertising is significant, for not more than one or two other newspapers in the world publish a greater quantity.

But a more significant achievement, one unsurpassed and heartening to the newspaper world is the character of advertising printed by The New York Times. It is free from objectionable and questionable "catchpenny" offers; it is all subject to rigid censorship to protect the columns of The Times from those who misrepresent, raise false hopes and spread nets to catch the unwary.

THE VOLUME could have been millions of agate lines more if The Times had been lax in the enforcement of its rule that only honest and decent advertising would be accepted; or if The Times had been willing to grant single advertisers many pages in a single issue.

The New York Times takes more pride in the quality of advertising it publishes than in its quantity; but in both it has made a record in 1924.

The Times gives no concessions or rebates to advertisers that are not openly offered to all.

The unrivaled news reports of The New York Times are reflected in the character and volume of its ever-increasing circulation as well as in the appeal of its advertising columns.

ADVERTISING

Year	Agate Lines
1896	2,227,196
1900	3,978,620
1905	5,958,322
1910	7,550,650
1915	9,682,562
1920	23,447,395
1923	24,101,226
1924 (to date)	25,000,000

The circulation of The New York Times, average daily and Sunday, for December, 1924, is 388,000.

CIRCULATION

October	Copies
1896	21,516
1900	82,106
1905	120,710
1910	191,981
1915	*318,274
1920	*342,553
1924	*383,005

*Average net paid daily and Sunday circulation reported to the Post Office Department for the six months immediately preceding.

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

ELMER DAVIS, the author of the "History of the New York Times" and formerly a member of the editorial staff of that paper, sends the editor of the Times the following letter which was printed in the Sunday issue:

Why must the Monday morning paper be filled up with the outgivings of the reverend clergy of the previous day? Monday morning is hard enough anyway without having it embittered by several columns of envy, malice, hatred and all uncharitableness poured forth from the pulpit. It may be argued that envy, malice and hatred from the pulpit are news, since this is not what we expect from the pulpit, and that a minister who merely preaches brotherly love is as lacking in news value as a minister's wife whose remains are not found in the furnace. But I suspect that a quantitative analysis of all sermons from the dawn of time might show that they assayed about as much envy and malice as brotherly love. At any rate, envy, malice and hatred are the sole stock in trade of certain eminent divines in this city, and a strict sense of journalistic ethics would require their invectives to be paid for at regular advertising rates.

Possibly a comment about this letter more properly belongs to the editorial page than in my department. At any rate, I want to say that many newspaper men share, to some extent, the views set forth by Mr. Davis. Preachers in their pulpits have called other ministers names for which they could be sued for libel. I am also of the opinion that newspapers printing these remarks could equally be held responsible in a court of justice.

Of one thing I am very proud, and that is, that in this controversy now raging in Christian churches the American newspaper has played down, rather than up, the element of bitterness and hatred set forth in the pulpit and at ministerial conventions. The press has had to print the news, but it has done so with a Christian charity that, at times, has been sadly lacking in many sermons. The rebuke from Mr. Davis should recall preachers from their petty squabblings, and direct their attention to the Man who preached "peace on earth, and to men good will."

Preachers can learn something from the experience of insurance solicitors. In bygone days these solicitors used to attack competing companies until the public almost questioned the ability of any insurance company to meet its death losses. Today the insurance agent no longer attacks a competing company, but devotes all his time to setting forth the merits of life insurance in general, and his company in particular. The result of this change may be found in the annual reports of the various insurance companies, which show remarkable gains from year to year. Might not a similar change produce a like effect in religious circles?

ARTHUR BRISBANE, beyond the permissibility of a doubt, draws the fattest pay envelope of any editorial writer. Consequently, any collection of editorials from his pen has unusual interest. His latest published collection is entitled "The Book of Today."

This volume well repays the newspaper worker who makes a careful study of its contents, not only for subject matter but also for mode of treatment. Brisbane has a wonderful catholicity in topics selected for special treatment. Usually he is especially fortunate in the selection of form for the presentation of a special topic.

One blueprint which he often uses effectively is a note, either at the foot or the head of the editorial. For example, in his editorial "The Snail Goes Like a Rabbit" he prints the following little chat about his theme:

This is perhaps the oldest editorial in the world. The cave man recited it to his son when he told him how to hunt for his prey. The squaws out West told it to their little papooses as soon as they were old enough to listen. Lord Chesterfield wrote it to his boy. Every mother in the country impresses it upon her children once a month. Yet, over and over, the same thing needs to be said. Meet opportunity when it comes toward you. If you wait until it passes you will never catch it.

His long editorial condensed into a thumbnail variety is as follows:

Opportunity comes like a snail, and once it has passed you it changes into a fleet rabbit and is gone.

Another secret of Brisbane's success is his remarkable ability to put a new dress on an old form. For example, the principal thought in "The Snail Goes Like a Rabbit" is repeated in "The Desert of Time Wasted." In connection with the latter editorial Brisbane inserts the following chat:

"If only the years would come back again, and bring their chances once more." That is the cry of millions of remorseful, disappointed men. The cry is vain. The hand of time writes and passes on. We cannot call it back. But regret for time wasted can become a power for good in the time that remains. And the time that remains is time enough, if we will only stop the waste and the idle, useless regretting.

Brisbane is often, like William Allen White, a wonderful lay preacher. Possibly the best lay sermon in this volume is the one entitled "The Unknown Land." But the Brisbane sermon which members of the working press ought to hear is "Well, It's Just Friendly Game." Like the Man of Galilee whose birthday is celebrated next week, Brisbane, in this editorial sermon, preaches in the form of a parable—the way more regular preachers ought to preach if they want their pews filled.

Sometimes Brisbane takes his editorial text directly from the Bible, as in the one which begins on page 91: "Young Men Shall See Visions—Old Men Shall Dream Dreams." But the sermon which immediately follows the one already mentioned strikes the highest religious note found in the volume—"The Importance of Religion in Man" (page 96). This editorial, by the way, was written by request to be read in a Young Men's Bible Class. No contribution in a denominational paper has ever set forth so ably the reasons why Bible classes should be organized for young men, and why those already established should be more largely attended.

If the following were printed separately and readers were asked to name the author I imagine it would require more guesses for the name than will be found in the attempt to solve the most complicated crossword puzzle that ever appeared in an American newspaper:

In all the history of the world there is no picture such as that on Golgotha, the patient, upturned face of the sufferer destined to change the world, the Roman soldiers at the foot of the cross gambling for His scanty garments, the rabble hooting, the thieves on either side denouncing Him because the miracle they hoped for did not come; the faithful women, Mary Cleopahs, Mary of Magdala, Joanna, wife of Khouza, and Mary, the mother of Jesus, watching patiently until death should come, and give His body back to them.

Many are the wonderful scenes of heroism and self-sacrifice painted in history by men willing to die for the truth. But there is nothing to compare with that one great picture, the crucifixion and the last words of Christ: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

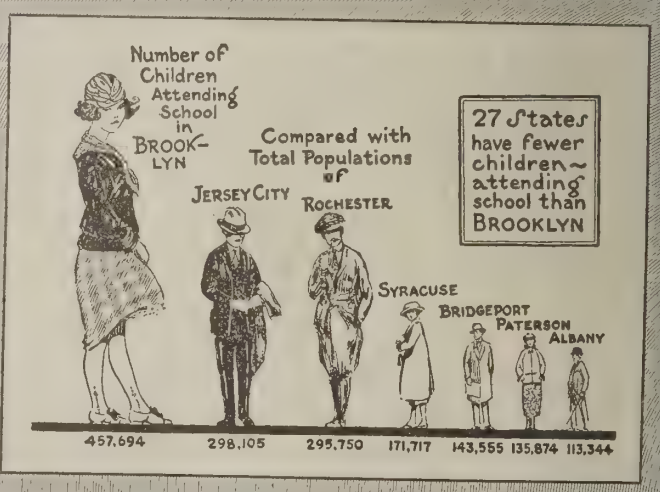
Until a man has studied the character of Christ, and the effect of His teachings, no other study is worth while.

This is what Arthur Brisbane, the newspaper man, says in his collection of editorials—"The Book of Today."

WILLIAM G. SHEPHERD, who used to be a foreign correspondent for the United Press but is now connected with Collier's Weekly, took an assignment to interview eleven prominent clergymen of the United States. He has put the interview with these eleven divines into a volume called "Great Preachers as Seen by a Journalist" (Fleming H. Revell Company). Doubtless it is mere coincidence, but all of these eleven clergymen have, for various reasons, attracted considerable attention in the press.

An interview with David James Burrell, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church on Fifth Avenue, opens the volume. Dr. Burrell's sermon, "Wanted—A Newspaper," when it was printed in pamphlet form was mentioned in this department. Of course Rev. John Roach Straton of the Cavalry Baptist Church, who so frequently gets first-page position in the press, is represented in the volume. But it is from Shepherd's interview with Christian F. Reisner of the Chelsea Methodist Church that I want to make a somewhat startling quotation:

I must frankly admit that I have discovered my newspaper impressions of every great clergyman I have met in preparing this book to be utterly wrong. Meeting the men face to face, hearing them talk and finding out what they stood for and what they aimed at, changed my early opinions in every case. These really great leaders have exactly that effect on men. When they come face to face with you, you may then measure their greatness, their sincerity and their sympathy. All of your preconceived ideas fade away; the impressions you have received of them through hearsay and through reading are usually quickly altered.



A perusal of this volume will change the opinion of many members of the working press about clergymen—especially those represented in the volume. Incidently, the volume gives many practical points to the wideawake reporter on the matter of interviews. For this reason—if for no other—it ought to have a wide reading in newspaper circles.

BOTH The Saturday Evening Post and Collier's Weekly for Dec. 13, have a feature that deserves mention in this department. The Post has a short story "Sssssssssshhhh!" by Richard Connell—the adventure of a journeyman reporter. Collier's prints "Hitting Bottom" by Samuel Merwin—as good a piece of work as George Gissing ever did.

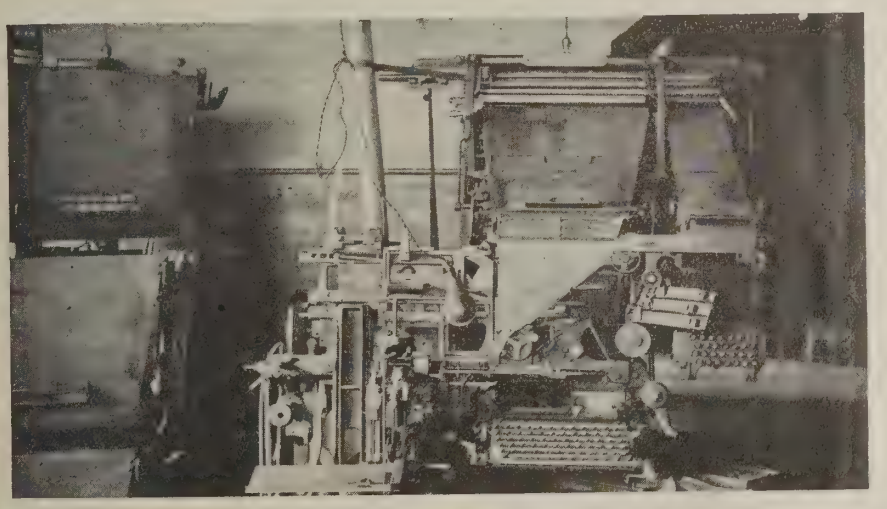
W. E. DONAHUE, manager of local advertising of the Chicago Tribune, gives some valuable tips to advertising managers in "How Tribune Ad Solicitors are Picked" printed in The Trib for November. The Trib is the employes' magazine of the Chicago Tribune.

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Always Reliable
The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia
and GROWING!

Nearly half a million children attend Brooklyn schools.

500,000 children eat up a lot and wear out a lot in necessities, comforts and luxuries.

The Standard Union never prints anything a school child ought not to read.



R. J. R. Stevenson
President

LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY BROOKLYN NEWSPAPER

MORE COLUMNS OF ADVERTISING AT A LOWER PRODUCTION COST

Modern Plant of the Gary Post-Tribune

Model 22 Linotype in Composing Room of Gary Post-Tribune

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

Gary Post-Tribune Cuts Page Cost from $7.93 to $5.58 with Model 22 Linotype

Typical of the saving that can be effected even in the most efficiently operated composing room through the installation of a Display Linotype is the experience of the Gary Post-Tribune. Without the Display Linotype, holiday advertising meant added help, overtime, extra work and worry all around.

With the Model 22 an even larger volume of holiday advertising is handled smoothly and easily by the regular force with a saving of almost 30% in the cost per column.

Similar results have been noted in practically every one of the hundreds of newspaper plants that are now setting their display on the Linotype.

Get Ready for a Big Year

All indications point to an unprecedented volume of newspaper advertising throughout 1925. Keep the profits that 1925 will bring; don't waste them in overtime and inefficient methods.

Wire the nearest Linotype Agency today to send a representative who can make a survey of your plant and recommend a display equipment that will set a Big Year's advertising efficiently and profitably.

Comparison of Advertising Production Costs—Four Weeks of December

	Columns of Advertising	Payroll—Advertising Composition	Cost per Column	Cost per Page—9 columns
1921 Without Model 22	1782	$1572.20	.882	$7.93
1923 With Model 22	1834	$1138.93	.661	$5.58

Comparative costs for 1922 are not available because of a fire which interrupted operation during the holiday rush

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Agencies in the Principal Cities of the World

532.24.12-F

Set entirely on the LINOTYPE in the Bodoni Series

"COLYUMISTS" QUAIL BEFORE WOMEN

New York Wits Bow to City Editors When Asked to Be Brilliant at Newspaper Women's Club Christmas Party

An unprecedented modesty afflicted the columnists of the New York press when the Newspaper Women's Club gave a dinner in their honor at the Hotel Algonquin, Sunday, Dec. 14. Some never showed up at all, and others fled before the speechmaking began. The result was that Miss Nellie Revell, honorary member of the club, and S. Jay Kaufman shared all the glory which had been accumulated for a much larger number of wits.

Miss Revell, at her own request, was allowed to "sit in at a Hotel Algonquin round table" instead of at the speakers' table. This gave Mr. Kaufman the distinction of being the only columnist on the platform, from which he looked down and observed.

It was the Christmas celebration of the Newspaper Women's Club, with Santa Claus and small tinselled trees and red candles for decorations. Miss Jane Dixon, president of the club, opened the dinner and then turned the program over to Mrs. Josephine Ober, chairman of the dinner committee.

Mr. Kaufman was introduced as the most versatile colyumist in New York, since he could not only conduct a newspaper column, but conduct also a band of girl singers. He proved this by summoning his band of 18, who sang classical music, jazz and negro spirituals.

Major General William Weigel paid his tribute to Nellie Revell as mother of a soldier who died in France.

Andrew Ford, city editor, New York Telegram and Mail; Dwight S. Perrin, city editor, New York Herald Tribune; Zoe Beckley, who runs a corner instead of a column; Rube Goldberg, cartoonist, and Albert S. Crockett, formerly with the New York Herald, made short speeches for the newspaper people present.

Miss Fannie Hurst and Laurence Stallings were at either side of the toastmistress. The dinner committee consisted of Mrs. Josephine Ober, society editor of the New York World; Miss Ruth Byers, of the Phoenix News Bureau, and Miss Emma Bugbee, of the New York Herald Tribune.

Among the guests were: Philip Payne, managing editor of the New York Daily News; Franklin P. Adams, columnist, New York World; Harold Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Crockett, Miss Rosefa Chisolm, Miss Julia Chandler, Russell Sims, Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson and Miss Lois Willoughby, Peter Brady, Captain Wells, George Boothby, Hyman Rosenblatt and Fred Hawthorne.

H.R.H. Honors R. G. Welsh

A resolution was passed commending Robert Gilbert Welsh, late dramatic critic of the New York Telegram and Evening Mail, for the gallantry he displayed when he lost his life in Bermuda last July in a vain attempt to save a drowning girl was passed at a meeting of the executive committee of the Royal Humane Society held in London recently. A script of the resolution signed by the Prince of Wales, president of the organization, has just been received by Miss Horatio Welsh, sister of the late critic.

New York Newspaper Woman Dies

Mrs Dorothy Carigie Morris, 30, wife of George D. Morris, political editor of the New York Telegram and Evening Mail, and herself a well known feature writer, died at her New York home Dec. 17. Mrs. Morris was associated with newspapers all her life, obtaining her first experience on the Catskill (N. Y.) Examiner, of which her father, Frederick E. Gragie was publisher. Later she was political writer on the Albany Knickerbocker Press, going from there to serve as correspondent for the Evening Telegarm.

Trib Santa Clears Book Pile

The Chicago Tribune will again distribute among employes before Christmas 1,500 books received for review during the year. Employes are permitted to request their preferences from a list printed in the "Trib," the plant newspaper.

Tribune Loans Bought 100 Homes

More than 100 employes of the Chicago Tribune have obtained homes through the Medill Building & Loan Association, maintained by that newspaper. On December 1, 767 employes of the Tribune and its affiliated companies were members of the association.

BALTIMORE POST WINS ITS TAX CASE

Judge Soper Upholds Demurrer to Indictment Decision Announced Tuesday—Government Plans to Appeal

The Baltimore Post did not violate the law when it published the amounts of the income tax paid by Baltimoreans, Judge Morris A. Soper decided in the United States Circuit Court in Baltimore Tuesday.

An appeal will be taken from Judge Soper's decision to the Supreme Court of the United States it was said in Washington. The appeal will be for the purpose of settling with finality exactly what was the intent of Congress in passing the law providing for making income taxes public.

"It is counter to the very spirit of the law," said Judge Soper in his decision, "to punish those who, by added publicity, materially assist to accomplish the very object Congress had in view."

Judge Soper said that he did not find the Constitutional question of the freedom of the press involved. He based his decision entirely on the Act of Congress.

The Judge said:

"Comparison of the two sections which deal with income tax publicity suggests an inconsistency in their terms . . . or confusion of underlying purpose or intention . . .

"The intention of the law-making body, however, should prevail even against the letter of the statute and if literal interpretation of every part of the statute operates unjustly or leads to absurd results, or be contrary to the evident meaning of the act taken as a whole, it should be rejected . . .

"The question is whether the right of public inspection given by Congress incurs a right to print and publish. The purpose of the amendments of the income tax law by the law of 1924 is plain. Congress determined to abandon the policy of secreting the amount of taxes paid from the general public. It was doubtless thought that thereby the chances of fraud, of favoritism, of improper concealment of income would be reduced. The taxpayer and the officials would be more likely to do their duty.

"To give consistency and clearness to the statute it is necessary to hold that Congress had no intention to apply the penalties against printing and publishing to so much of the returns as should be given out on the internal revenue commissioner's list. As to the other parts of the returns, the prohibition remains in effect. The demurrer to the indictment will be sustained."

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, said in Washington that Amos W. W. Woodcock, the United States District Attorney in Baltimore, would be asked to file an appeal immediately. This would be done for the purpose of clearing up the situation. Such action would take the case to the United States Court of Appeals and probably finally to the United States Supreme Court.

WATCH OUT FOR ANOTHER TEA PARTY!

They met last week in New York, these four—William Griffin, vice-president of the American Press Association; Governor Scott C. Bone of Alaska, who never lost his taste for the society of newspaper people; Sir Thomas Lipton, able seaman and tea merchant; and William H. Rankin, expert in advertising tea and other marketable commodities. Rankin appears to be the only member on business bent.

"We Congratulate You"

To Editor & Publisher:—There is always a lot of information that can be gotten together for any city or territory but little information is used because few have the courage or time to get it together in usual form. But you have done it and we congratulate you.

Hooves Advertising Company.
Chicago.

THE CELEBRATED WEEK-END MYSTERY

Serialized in 32 Instalments for Daily Release.

For Terms and Sample Proofs Wire

LEDGER SYNDICATE
INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA

The Business Men

of your community will value the authentic statements of

ROGER W. BABSON

on the business and financial situation, above any other single piece of news that you can print.

Supplied weekly through the Babson News Service, Publisher's Financial Bureau, Babson Park, Mass.

SPECIMEN RELEASES AND RATES ON REQUEST

NEW ENGLAND

Near the Top in Banking Facilities

A territory with money to save and money to invest, is an ideal merchandising territory, since there is always plenty of money to spend, as well. Advertising in such a territory will bring results that can be definitely valued on a dollar and cent basis.

New England is an Ideal Merchandising Territory

New England has 40% of the country's savings, as well as 11% of the total bank deposits in national and state banks and trust companies. Yet this territory has only 7½% of America's population. 85% of New England's population is urban, living in cities where there is greater desire and greater need to spend money and where the money to spend is within easy reach of all.

National Advertisers and Manufacturers owe it to their salesmen and themselves to use advertising in these listed dailies, over 2,000,000 copies of which circulate over the New England territory daily. They are sure result getters.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Attleboro Sun	(E)	5,628	.0275	.0175
*Boston Globe	(M&E)	274,892	.50	.50
*Boston Globe	(S)	322,030	.55	.55
Boston Transcript	(E)	.....	...	...
*Boston Post	(M)	371,124	.60	.60
*Boston Post	(S)	351,527	.55	.55
*Fall River Herald	(E)	15,553	.05	.05
*Fitchburg Sentinel	(E)	11,383	.055	.045
*Haverhill Gazette	(E)	15,400	.055	.04
†Lynn Item	(E)	16,345	.06	.04
†††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader	(M&E)	21,270	.06	.06
*New Bedford Standard Mercury	(M&E)	33,883	.10	.10
*New Bedford Sunday Standard	(S)	26,944	.10	.10
*North Adams Transcript	(E)	9,491	.04	.035
*Salem News	(E)	20,784	.08	.07
*Taunton Gazette	(E)	8,479	.04	.03
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette	(M&E)	86,049	.24	.21
*Worcester Sunday Telegram	(S)	49,849	.18	.15
MAINE—Population, 768,014
Augusta Kennebec Journal		.....	...	...
†Bangor Daily Commercial	(E)	14,750	.055	.05
*Portland Express	(E)	27,251	.10	.07
*Portland Telegram (Sunday Edition Express)	(S)	29,992	.10	.07
NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683
*Concord Monitor-Patriot	(E)	5,104	.0375	.025
†Keene Sentinel	(E)	3,609	.03	.034
*Manchester Union Leader	(M&E)	27,864	.09	.07
RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397
†Newport Daily News	(E)	6,249	.0336	.0296
†Pawtucket Times	(E)	25,555	.07	.07
†Providence Bulletin	(E)	64,524	.17	(B).23
*Providence Journal	(M)	36,686	.10	(B).23
*Providence Journal	(S)	61,575	.15	.15
*Providence News	(E)	26,845	.07	.07
†Providence Tribune	(E)	23,603	.10	.09
*Westerly Sun	(E&S)	4,618	.025	.025
†Woonsocket Call	(E)	13,666	.05	.05
VERMONT—Population, 352,428
*Barre Times	(E)	6,944	.03	.025
†Bennington Banner	(E)	3,067	.0125	.0125
*Burlington Free Press	(M)	12,983	.05	.05
*Rutland Herald	(M)	10,765	.04	.04
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record	(E)	4,024	.0214	.015
CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631
*Bridgeport Post-Telegram	(E&M)	45,795	.15	.15
*Bridgeport Post	(S)	20,017	.10	.10
*Hartford Courant	(M)	37,649	.08	.08
Hartford Courant	(S)	50,247	.11	.11
†Hartford Times	(E)	48,875	.12	.12
*Meriden Record	(M)	7,348	.045	.03
*Middletown Press	(E)	8,050	.0325	.025
†New Haven Register	(E&S)	42,171	.12	.11
*New London Day	(E)	12,079	.06	.045
†††Norwich Bulletin	(M)	12,494	.07	.05
*Norwalk Hour	(E)	5,842	.04	.04
†South Norwalk Sentinel	(E)	4,280	.025	.025
*Stamford Advocate	(E)	9,305	.05	.04
*Waterbury Republican American	(M&E)	22,836	.08	.08
*Waterbury Republican	(S)	15,043	.08	.08

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.

††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

La Nacion, Buenos Aires

ARGENTINA'S GREAT MORNING DAILY

is the first South American Paper to have its circulation verified.

Although there is no Argentine law requiring a verification of circulation figures published, LA NACION does not want its Advertisers to deal with an uncertain factor—

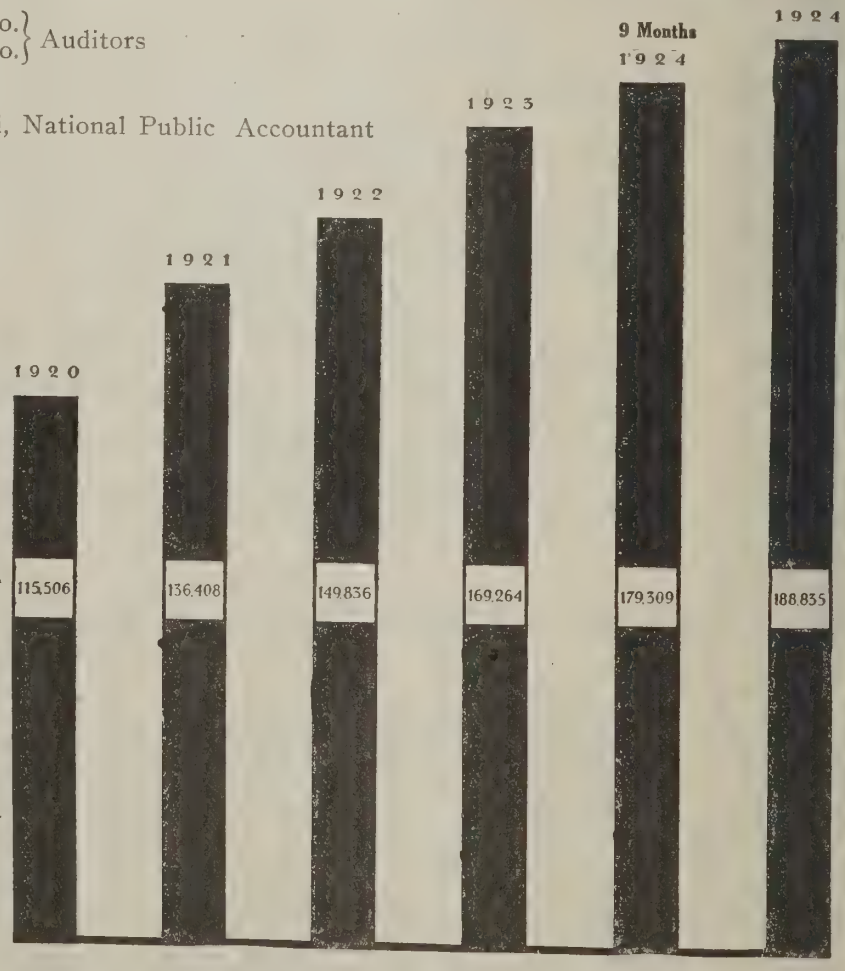
Read the Official Report:

Buenos Aires, October 29, 1924.

To LA NACION, Buenos Aires.

Dear Sirs:

In order to verify the circulation of the Daily Newspaper "La Nacion" during the four years and nine months ending September 30, 1924, we have gone over the records kept by the management, and can now certify that the net sales, exclusive of copies distributed free and those for the use of the newspaper's staff, were as follows:



Period	Total Copies	Monthly Av'ge	Daily Av'ge
Twelve months, 1920.....	41,928,690	3,494,057	115,506
" " 1921.....	49,516,328	4,126,361	136,408
" " 1922.....	54,390,687	4,532,557	149,836
" " 1923.....	61,442,790	5,120,232	169,264
Nine months, 1924.....	48,771,733	5,419,081	179,309

(Signed) Deloite, Plender, Griffiths & Co.)
" Price, Waterhouse, Faller & Co.) Auditors

Very respectfully yours,

(Signed) Arturo A. Zoppi, National Public Accountant

This Graph shows at a glance this newspaper's splendid progress.

LA NACION OF BUENOS AIRES

Argentina's Great Morning Daily

La Nacion, Buenos Aires

has the complete service of the Associated Press as well as its own correspondents and offices in New York and in all the principal European capitals.

The certified circulation figures for the month of September, 1924, tell the story of LA NACION'S healthy, steady growth

SEPTEMBER 1924 CIRCULATION DAY BY DAY

	TOTAL COPIES
1	182.427
2	180.404
3	178.945
4	179.544
5	178.944
6	179.095
7	218.240
8	181.614
9	179.696
10	179.366
11	174.113
12	266.803
13	193.225
14	221.634
15	178.310
16	180.217
17	179.824
18	180.421
19	179.330
20	181.941
21	220.461
22	185.306
23	180.813
24	179.735
25	180.378
26	179.056
27	179,975
28	217.347
29	187.136
30	180.543
TOTAL SALES	5.665.043
Daily Average	188.835

The above figures are certified by:
Deloitte, Plender, Griffiths & Co. } Auditors
Price, Waterhouse, Faller & Co. }
Arturo A. Zoppi, National Public Accountant.

Editorial and general offices in the United States: 383 Madison Ave., New York City
W. W. Davies, Correspondent and General Representative

Advertising Agents—S. S. Koppe & Co., Times Building, New York City

EDITORIAL

SONG OF PERFECT LOVE

THROUGHOUT Christendom this week writers are expressing a seasonable sentiment. The press revives in public thought the eternal principles of peace and good will among men. It leads a song that children dance to, that refreshes the souls of men and women and must temper the coldest heart. It is the song of perfect love.

We are born into the world with such tender sentiments as the core of our being. Smiles, tears, yearnings for sight and touch, groping faith, hope soaring with birds, complete devotion to the objects and symbols of affection are attributes of all youth, flowers in the hand of every child.

Why do we ever drop the flowers?

What could compensate for their loss?

At Christmas time, in such contemplation, we realize how futile and unrequiting has been the yielding of any native grace as price of passion which could but burn to dross.

There are those who play with children around the Christmas tree who are young in wrinkled skin, gay in silvered hair, fresh in spirit throughout life. Such do not live with the great fact of this season as a mere calendar edict. The flowers are still in their hands. Love and good will are their treasures of life, ten thousand times enriching the great experience. Such are the beneficiaries of immortal truths which mock vanity and strife and crown the victories of the defeated.

What of our own hearts today? Is hate there? Is envy there? Are all men brothers? May heaven be here? May each clasp in his arms another child and sing at the Christmas tree? It is the song of perfect love.

The cross-word puzzle serves splendidly to return thousands to an interest in the language. Newspapers can publish nothing more valuable, as a feature, than sugar-coated educational matter.

HAS THE BREAK COME?

THE publishing business in this country has been built up on an economic formula consonant with the political theory that the post office is a public service without respect to profit.

Graven on the Post Office Building at Washington is this inscription: "Carrier of news and knowledge, instrument of trade and industry, promotor of mutual acquaintance, of peace and good will among men and nations."

On page thirty of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, this week, will be found reproductions of the writings of high authorities on postal policies, representative of public thought from the creation of the republic and firmly holding that the responsibility of diffusing knowledge is joint between the privately owned press and publicly owned postal system. The idea that the post office should encourage the free press has been repeated thousands of times by the best thinkers of each generation.

The press has kept faith!

Nowhere else on this round globe is the average man, woman and child so well informed of current events. The per capita consumption of printed material in the United States simply out-distances the records of the world.

The American newspaper business is founded upon a seeming economic paradox—few newspapers or periodicals retail at prices covering cost of manufacture, and thousands sell for less than the cost of print paper alone. Publishing, therefore, is possible because, to a greater extent than any people in the world, we have discovered and developed the advantages of display advertising, itself an incalculable service to the people and a pillar upholding the entire commercial and industrial structure. Advertising revenue makes possible our good press service. It has made publishing profitable, with honor. Our journalism has not been compelled to "sell out," to live. It has made information so cheap in the street that any man may possess it.

The biggest individual question now pressing Congress for decision is whether the time-honored and, we submit, highly successful tacit partnership between

AND there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said to them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

—St. Luke, 11; 8-14.

the postal department of the government and the privately owned press shall be torn asunder and shattered.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week quoted the highest newspaper authority, S. E. Thomason, President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, as stating that, to conserve the proposition of a profitable postal service, the Postmaster General had made known that "American newspapers are threatened with a legislative program at the present short session of Congress which, if carried through, will prove to be one of the most serious blows ever dealt by Congress to the distribution of newspapers outside of the metropolitan centers." He added that the Postmaster General's recommended increased rates would be ruinous to the country circulations of all newspapers distributed by mail.

In short, the menace is such that newspaper men are being called upon to prepare for a complete revision of out-of-town delivery methods. Driven from the mails by excessive rates, they must find cheaper means, such as privately-owned express companies and railroads.

The Postmaster General does not meet the issue when he recommends that increased second class rates apply only to the advertising sections of the press, thus perpetrating Mr. Burleson's intolerable zone system.

We are confident that the Postmaster General sincerely believes he is doing a public service by pressing his recommendations. He is trying to live up to the new, but totally false, standard of "business efficiency" in the conduct of his department. We contend that ordinary business rules do not apply. The work calls for far-sighted statesmanship, which does not neglect the high essential of public information service through the press, nor slight the rights of small newspapers and magazines and the minority opinion they express.

To the advertising portions, which make the "reading portions" possible, is to tax the whole. The issue is whether the press is to be driven out of the post office by excessive rates.

We have not gone into questions raised by the recent "cost ascertainment" report, which showed second class matter "losing" $74,000,000 in 1923, but information is that there is great doubt that there was a proper or just allocation of cost charges against second class. That matter is being sifted and it may be revealed that second class has not been nearly so expensive as other classes of mail.

Postmaster General Harry S. New favors EDITOR & PUBLISHER with a letter concerning our editorial of last week, in which we stated that there was no valid reason why the postal department should make a profit or break even. At the time of our publication his recommendations had not been made public. But now we learn from him that his proposed rate increases are specifically to meet a demand for $68,000,000 increased postal pay. The cost ascertainment report showed a postal "loss" of $40,000,000. We do not understand from Mr. New's letter that his proposed new rates have anything to do with meeting the alleged current deficit, but are being arranged to accommodate raised pay for postal workers.

With due respect to the Postmaster General we do not agree that the sole alternatives are making the taxpayers pay the whole or increasing postal rates. There is the alternative of denying increased pay to a vast number of postal employes who have had three raises in four years and, according to studies recently made, are as well or better paid than men doing similar work in private institutions. The postal carrier, who elicits our sympathies, represents but 9 per cent of employes who would benefit from a blanket pay increase. We think there are other alternatives. But taxpayers have never seriously complained of postal deficits in the past, but poor service has always been bitterly protested.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER's figures for 1921 and 1918 were found from the published "receipts" and "expenses" of the postal department in those years.

General New declares he believes that the "prime consideration is service," but not to the extent that the post office should lose money. On that basis rural free delivery and parcel post would never have been undertaken—on straight business logic the public service would have been limited in many directions.

The Postmaster General thinks that "you cannot run a concern spending more than $600,000,000 a year without some regard to ordinary business principles." Several other great departments of the government spend huge sums annually, without regard to ordinary profit principles of business.

If postal departments of other countries are all operated to produce revenue, as he says, perhaps something is to be said regarding the merit of our system over others in fostering and perfecting an informed public opinion upon which a democracy may safely operate.

Either return to first principles or definitely declare that the United States post office and the press have broken their long and successful partnership in publishing competent instruments of information and opinion, to sell at low prices, and distributing them, quickly and safely, to the people of this country as the basis of their judgments!

This week clean up the 1924 slate and prepare for greater achievements!

December 20, 1924 Volume 57, No. 30

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Bldg.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout, 10 Radcliffe Road, Winchmore Hill, N. 21.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

PERSONALS

H. R. SWARTZ, president of the Intertype Corporation, returned to New York, Dec. 15, on the "Majestic," following three months' visit abroad.

Mrs. William Randolph Hearst returned to New York from a visit abroad on the "Majestic," Dec. 15.

Ralph Beaver Strassburger, publisher of the Norristown (Pa.) Times Herald, has leased a cottage in Palm Beach for the coming season.

W. H. Hornibrook, the new publisher of the Provo (Utah) Daily Herald, is a former Minister of the U. S. Government to Siam. He served during the period of the World War.

Mrs. Margaret H. Cobb, widow of Frank I. Cobb, editor of the New York World, with her two children, is preparing to leave soon for Italy where they plan to spend the winter.

Carlos Avery, publisher of the Henderson (Minn.) Leader, former Minnesota state game and fish commissioner, has been appointed vice-president in charge of all work of the American Game Protective and Propagation Association, New York.

Jonathan F. Comstock, publisher of the Cranston (R. I.) News, is on a short vacation in Louisville, Ky.

Jess M. Adams, editor of the Plainview (Tex.) News will make a trip around the world, early in 1925, embarking for Honolulu at San Francisco, Jan. 7. E. Q. Perry, his son-in-law, will have charge of the News in his absence.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

TRACY W. ELLIS, formerly assistant advertising manager of the Indianapolis News, has been named advertising manager of the Indianapolis Times, succeeding Albert O. Evans, who recently resigned.

Russell E. Smith, formerly manager of the Promotion Department of the Star League of Indiana Newspapers, is now manager of the Merchandising Cooperation Service of the Springfield (Mo.) Republican.

William K. Hoyt, advertising manager of the Trenton Times, who recently left Trenton for a trip to Texas and the Pacific Coast, was given a dinner by the Kiwanis Club, of that city, before his departure, and presented with a wrist watch by the club members.

Kenneth Bourne, of the advertising department of Salt Lake City Deseret News, and Mrs. Bourne are parents of a son, born recently.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

HARRY HATFIELD is now assistant night city editor of the New York American.

Orville A. Welsh, formerly head of the New York Graphic copy desk, is now head of the New York American copy desk.

Charles A. Roberts, night editor of the Springfield (O.) Daily News, is now telegraph editor, succeeding Kenneth A. Simons who goes to the Lima (O.) Gazette.

E. M. Mecer, editor of the Princeton (Ill.) Bureau County Tribune for 40 years, and a veteran of the Civil War. celebrated his 80th birthday Dec. 6.

Jefferson D. Dickerson, court reporter for the Witchita (Kan.) Daily Beacon, was elected probate judge of Sedgwick County, Kan., recently.

Ernest Lindley has resigned from the staff of the Witchita (Kan.) Beacon to go to New York.

J. J. Shores of the Toledo Blade copy desk has resigned to make a motor trip to Florida.

Edward J. Hunter, city editor of the Philadelphia North American has joined the Philadelphia Bulletin staff.

Joseph Emsley, of the sporting department, Providence (R. I.) Evening Bulletin has been transferred to the news department of the Pawtucket office of the Bulletin.

Franklin Collier, cartoonist on the Boston Herald addressed the Greater Boston branch of the Direct Mail Advertising Association at a recent meeting in Boston.

Raymond Williams is doing the night police beat for the Toledo Blade. He is the son of Tom Williams, labor reporter for the Blade.

A. K. Mills, market editor of the Kansas City Star has joined the staff of the Booneville (Mo.) Republican as news editor.

Ted McDaniel, of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette staff, is recovering from a recent operation.

Emily Jane McLaughlin, daughter of Drew McLaughlin, editor and owner of the Miami (Kan.) Republican has joined the staff of the paper as a reporter.

Carol Carpenter, associate editor of the Oswego (Kan.) Democrat, and Mrs. Carpenter, are parents of twin girls.

Harold G. Place, former editor of the Des Moines (Ia.) News, last week joined the staff of the Cleveland Press. Mr. Place left the Iowa paper when it merged with the Des Moines Tribune.

Ed Bang, sporting editor of the Cleveland News and Sunday News Leader; Henry P. Edwards, sporting editor, Cleveland Plain Dealer, and Billy Evans baseball writer for the Cleveland Press, returned last week from a five day assignment to New York, covering the annual meeting of the American League.

J. E. Wilson has turned to the San Antonio Evening News as reporter.

Joe Williams, formerly of the sport staff of the Cleveland News and Sunday News Leader under Ed Bang, was named sporting editor of the Cleveland Press, Dec. 10, the first official appointee to this post since the death, early in the year, of Ross Tenney.

William Kingsbury, for the past two years news editor of the Booneville (Mo.) Daily Republican has resigned.

Garland N. White, formerly with the San Bernardino (Cal.) Sun, and a former St. Joseph, Mo., reporter, is now with the Pomona (Cal.) Bulletin.

John W. Sheridan, son of Barney W. Sheridan, for 44 years editor of the Paola (Kan.) Western Spirit, has succeeded his father as editor.

H. R. Cox has left for his home in Austin, Texas, after doing rewrite on the Chicago Journal.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

C. D. McLUCAS, from classified manager, Altoona (Pa.) Tribune, to classified manager, Canton (O.) Daily News.

V. V. Hostetter, from copy desk, New York World, to copy desk, New York Graphic.

David H. Neill from copy desk, Minneapolis Tribune to staff, Minneapolis Daily Star.

Clayton Pryor, from copy desk, Cincinnati (O.) Commercial-Tribune, to staff, Springfield (O.) Morning Sun.

James Morgan, from Columbus (O.) Dispatch, to staff, Springfield (O.) Morning Sun.

J. Frank Quinlan, from city hall reporter, Bridgeport (Conn.) Times, to staff, Bridgeport Sunday Herald.

MARRIED

C. B. AXFORD, formerly with the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times and the Akron (O.) Times, now in advertising work in St. Petersburg, Fla., to Miss Mary Hughes, formerly feature writer for the Charlestown American, at Daytona, Fla., recently.

Charles A. Merrill of West Somerville. Mass., to Miss Evelyn M. Erilksen of Cambridge, Mass., last week. Both are members of the Boston Globe's editorial staff.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

WALTER S. DICKEY, publisher of the Kansas City Journal-Post, now figuring in the fight for freedom of the press, has only been in the newspaper business three years, but he entered with the enthusiasm of a "cub" reporter, and that enthusiasm has not dimmed.

WALTER S. DICKEY

In April, 1921, Mr. Dickey, rated at several times a millionaire, became owner and editor of the Kansas City Journal, a long established morning newspaper. In May of the following year, he acquired the Kansas City Post, afternoon daily, the Kansas City Journal-Post resulting.

Mr. Dickey was born in Toronto, Canada, June 26, 1862. He left school at the age of 16 and obtained a job as accountant and entry clerk in a wholesale dry goods store at $50 a year. In 1885 he established in Kansas City a clay products manufacturing concern, which has become one of the largest concerns of its kind in the world.

He long has been an active worker in the Republican party, and has enjoyed the confidence of four Republican presidents, Roosevelt, Taft, Harding and Coolidge. On numerous occasions he has been called into consultation by national party leaders.

During breathing spells between looking after his newspaper and the clay products manufacturing company, Mr. Dickey looks after varied other interests of wide extent.

Mr. Dickey has become a serious student of his newspaper, and is an active guiding hand in its policy and conduct. A son, W. Laurence Dickey, is publisher of the Journal-Post.

WITH THE ADVERTISERS

CHARLES GOULD has been appointed advertising manager and director of sales of the Gray Motor Corporation, succeeding L. R. Martell, resigned.

B. W. Randolph has been appointed advertising manager of the Kny-Scheerer Corporation, 119 Seventh avenue, New York, manufacturers of surgical instruments and hospital equipment.

William Kier, formerly of the Kier Letter Company, Chicago, is now manufacturing the Kier letter press under the name of the Individualizing Company of Illinois, Chicago. He is in charge of sales and advertising.

George A. Brusch, formerly general sales manager of Osborn, Abston & Co., wholesale distributors of automotive and shop equipment of Memphis, Tenn., and Atlanta, Ga., is now general sales manager of the Walker Manufacturing Company, Racine, Wis., manufacturers of automobile jacks.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

PLAINFIELD (N. J.) Courier-News, 56-page edition, Dec. 12, the largest edition ever printed by the paper.

Fort Wayne (Ind.) Journal-Gazette, a 54-page edition celebrating the 100th anniversary of Fort Wayne, Dec. 12.

Davenport (Ia.) Democrat and Times, 20-page supplement Dec. 10, celebrating the opening of the First National Bank's new building.

Billings (Mont.) Gazette, 16-page "Greater Montana" edition supplementing the national advertising campaign of the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Burlington railroads, Dec. 14.

Norristown (Pa.) Times Herald, a 48-page edition, Dec. 10.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

DELTA, (Ia.) PRESS has been sold by G. Huntoon to Mahan Brothers of Des Moines, Ia.

Ernest Douglas, formerly publisher of the Jerome (Ariz.) Verde Copper News, has sold his interest in the paper to H. J. Minhinnick and C. H. Powell. Minhinnick will continue as editor of the paper, and Powell has been made general manager.

Joseph W. Kubler, for 20 years publisher of the Custer (S. D.) Chronicle, has turned over the management of that newspaper to C. W. Trent.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

L. E. CAGLE, foreman of the Independence (Kan.) Free Press, and Mrs. Cagle are parents of a baby daughter.

William Byrne, foreman of the proofroom of the Chicago Tribune, has returned from his honeymoon trip to Havana.

I C. Spencer, head pressman for the San Antonio Evening News, has resigned to join the Wichita Falls (Tex.) Record-News.

Chester W. Hutchings has resigned as foreman of the Bangor (Me.) Commercial composing room, and returned to his home in Salem, Mass.

"Make ready" to be alive in 1925

GO after the good will of your readers. Earn it by delivering an agreeable and valuable free educational service furnished by Frederic J. Haskin from Washington, D. C.—four top-notch features that develop recurrent reader interest. Write now.

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

CONRADO MASSAGUER, caricaturist and editor of Havana, Cuba, arrived in New York last week on his honeymoon trip with his bride, formerly Senorita Elena Menocal, a niece of the famous General Mario Menocal, former

CONRADO MASSAGUER

President of Cuba. Senor and Senora Massaguer expect to remain in New York most of the winter. He is widely known in the field of caricature. For the last several years most of his work has been drawn for Social a magazine published in Havana of which he is part owner.

The Metropolitan Newspaper Service, Inc., New York, has bought the newspaper syndicate rights to a book-length western novel, "The Valley of Strife," written by Marshall R. Hall, financial editor of the Cleveland Times and Commercial. Max Elser, Jr., manager of Metropolitan, signed the agreement. The story appeared originally in the December issue of the Frontier, new Doubleday, Page fiction magazine.

Paul Robinson, who has animated "Felix," and other comics for the moving pictures, is now drawing H. C. Witwer's "Samson and Delila" strip for the King Features Syndicate, New York.

Henry D. Ralph, of Beloit, Wis., is now a member of the staff of the National Newspaper Service. Ralph was formerly with the United Press. Another new member of the same service is Charles Edgar Randall, of San Jose, Calif.

A new radio review for the smaller papers has just been put on the market by Carl H. Butman of the Washington Radio News Service. This service will specialize on short items of general interest to all radio fans. A "pony service" on national and foreign radio developments will be included in the radio review. Governmental regulations and changes in broadcasting stations will be carried.

Christy Walsh, head of the Christy Walsh Syndicate, New York, left this week for California where he will take personal charge of stories covering the Notre Dame-Stanford and the Pennsylvania-California football games Jan. 1, at Pasadena and Berkeley, respectively. Glenn Warner, coach of Stanford, will report the Pasadena game as will also Knute Rockne, Notre Dame coach. Coach Lou Young of Pennsylvania will report the Berkeley contest.

Edwin Balmer's "Keeban" has been prepared in 11 weekly illustrated pages for syndication by the McClure Newspaper syndicate, New York.

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, has increased their cross word puzzle service from six a week to seven.

King Features Syndicate, Inc., New York, is now offering to newspapers the daily short stories printed in the New York Mirror.

Robert (Rip) Ripley, sports cartoonist and creater of the "Believe It or Not" pictures is an athlete also. Ripley recently won the handball championship of the N. Y. A. C. He ranks as one of the leading handball players in the country.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

CHALMERS PANCOAST, recently resigned as eastern advertising manager of Liberty Magazine, has purchased a substantial stock interest in the Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, New York, and has been named vice-president of that concern.

CHALMERS PANCOAST

Other associates with him in the agency include Charles C. Green, Douglas Wakefield Coutlee, Raymond Highet, and A. S. Bennett.

Pancoast was formerly advertising director of the Calumet Baking Powder Company. He has also been connected with System, the Martin B. Kelly Agency, and the Chicago Tribune.

George Coleman Dawson, formerly associated with Frank Seaman, Inc., and other agencies in New York City and for the past three years active in Pacific Coast advertising, is now a member of the firm of Kelsey-Mooney-Stedem, Inc., of San Francisco.

In his new connection he will direct the preparation of plans and supervise production.

The Advertising Corporation of Waterloo, Ia. will open a branch office in Cedar Rapids to accomodate its clientele in that city. An art and advertising service will be maintained there with Lee Lewis in charge of the art department. The Cedar Rapids office will be in the Bever building on First avenue.

E. I. LaBeaume has resigned his position as advertising manager of the Hercules Powder Company, Wilmington, Del., to become a member of the recently organized firm of Cross & LaBeaume, Inc. advertising agency with offices at 250 Fifth avenue, New York.

The Henry P. Boynton Advertising Agency, Cleveland, has moved to new offices at 703 Union Mortgage Building.

T. J. Villeneue has joined the copy staff of the Industrial Advertising Agency, Detroit, Mich.

The Harris Advertising Company, Philadelphia, has changed its name to the George F. Ingram Company, Inc.

New Haven Register

is New Haven's Dominant Paper

Circulation over 42,171 Average

Bought every day by more New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.

New Haven Register

The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

ASSOCIATIONS

OKLAHOMA ASSOCIATED PRESS EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION, of which Walter M. Harrison of the Oklahoma City Oklahoman-Times is president, held its annual meeting in Oklahoma City, Dec. 14, in conjunction with the Good Fellowship Club of the A. P. Edgar T. Cutter, Chicago, division superintendent of the Associated Press; Milton Garges, New York, chief of the traffic department, and E. T. Wolford, division traffic chief, of Chicago, attended.

Seventh Minnesota District Editorial Association at its recent meeting at Olivia elected J. R. Landy, Olivia Times, president; B. K. Savre, Glenwood Herald, vice-president; M. J. McGowan, Appleton Press, secretary, and H. C. Sherwood, Fairfax Standard, treasurer. The spring business meeting will be held at Litchfield and the annual summer outing at the summer home, on Green Lake, of C. Burges of the Clara City Herald.

Oklahoma Press Association will hold its annual mid-winter meeting in the Huckins Hotel, Oklahoma City, Jan. 9 and 10, with George Marble of Fort Scott, Kan., president of the National Editorial association, principal speaker.

Theatrical Press Representatives of America will launch their own periodical, The T.P.R.O.A. Quill this month. Dixie Hines is chairman of the committee in charge. The membership of the organization includes press agents for dramatic productions, dramatic editors and managing editors of the principal daily newspapers, and theatrical producing managers.

NEW DAILY ANNOUNCED

Bristol (Va.-Tenn.) Bulletin, Evening Paper, to Start January 5

Beginning Jan. 5, 1925, Bristol, Va.-Tenn., is to have a new afternoon newspaper to be known as the Bristol Bulletin. The establishment of this publication is the consummation of plans laid more than two years ago by the publishers of the Johnson City (Tenn.) Chronicle and Staff-News.

GUY L. SMITH

Guy L. Smith, president of the Appalachian Publishers, Inc., Johnson City, Tenn., will be president of the new company and will continue to make his headquarters in Johnson City. Carroll E. King, vice-president of the Appalachian Publishers, Inc., managing editor and publicity director of the newspapers owned by the company, will be in charge of the Bulletin.

The new paper will be a six day afternoon daily and will carry the International News leased wire service.

The new paper will be represented in the national advertising, east and west, field by Frost, Landis & Kohn, New York newspaper representatives.

Your True-Cut Caslon series of typefaces is most satisfactory says San Francisco Chronicle

IN writing of their Ludlow, Mr. Perry Epstein, Advertising Manager of the San Francisco Chronicle writes:

"Congratulations upon the new typefaces furnished by Ludlow. Your Caslon True-Cut series is most satisfactory for all advertising purposes, and I am glad it is being added to our Ludlow equipment.

"My experience is that advertisers are exceptionally well pleased with the Chronicle's Ludlow set-ups. Printing surely is making marked strides, at this time, and it must be a source of satisfaction to all Ludlow users to know that the Ludlow Company is keeping in the very front rank of this advance."

Ludlow Typograph Co.

2032 Clybourn Avenue

San Francisco Hearst Bldg. — CHICAGO — New York World Bldg.

SET IN LUDLOW TRUE-CUT CASLON WITH ITS ITALIC

HON. CLYDE KELLY'S POSTAL COMPARISONS

Herewith is Representative Clyde Kelly's comparison of the original, present, proposed Kelly, and departmental parcel post rates with express rates, and also the present and departmental proposed rates on second class advertising matter:

	Local delivery				Second class rates
Pounds	Original rates	Present rates	Kelly rates	Department rates	Express rates	Present rate	Proposed rate
1.....	$0.05	$0.05	$0.10	$0.10	$0.37	$0.02	$0.03½
2.....	.06	.06	.11	.11	.37	.04	.07
3.....	.07	.06	.11	.11	.38	.06	.10½
4.....	.08	.07	.12	.12	.39	.08	.14
5.....	.09	.07	.12	.12	.39	.10	.17½
6.....	.10	.08	.13	.13	.40	.12	.21
7.....	.11	.08	.13	.13	.42	.14	.24½
8.....	.12	.09	.14	.14	.42	.16	.28
9.....	.13	.09	.14	.14	.43	.18	.31½
10.....	.14	.10	.15	.15	.43	.20	.35
11.....	.15	.10	.15	.15	.44	.22	.38½
12.....	.16	.11	.16	.16	.45	.24	.42
13.....	.17	.11	.16	.16	.45	.26	.45½
14.....	.18	.12	.17	.17	.47	.28	.49
15.....	.19	.12	.17	.17	.48	.30	.52½
16.....	.20	.13	.18	.18	.48	.32	.56
17.....	.21	.13	.18	.18	.50	.34	.59½
18.....	.22	.14	.19	.19	.52	.36	.63
19.....	.23	.14	.19	.19	.52	.38	.66½
20.....	.24	.15	.20	.20	.53	.40	.70
21.....	.25	.15	.20	.20	.54	.42	.73½
22.....	.26	.16	.21	.21	.54	.44	.77
23.....	.27	.16	.21	.21	.55	.46	.80½
24.....	.28	.17	.22	.22	.56	.48	.84
25.....	.29	.17	.22	.22	.57	.50	.87½

PUBLISHERS CHALLENGE POSTAL INCREASES

(Continued from page 3)

the alleged scandal had any real foun-tion and were aired thoroughly it ould probably lead in the direction of rcel post rates rather than in that of ostal employes. He intimated "there ould be another story to tell if the hole truth about parcelpost rates comes ut." He laughed at the suggestion the arge of scandal was likely to "kill" e postal wage increase bill, which he ill insisted was bound to become a law.

Mr. Kelly agreed, however, second class atter as represented by the cost ascer-inment report should not be made the sis for providing the revenue necessary meet the postal wage increase bill. He nounced he was preparing figures of s own to demonstrate that parcelpost tes and not second class rates should singled out as a means of providing ore money for the post office department d its employes.

He displayed one table he had pre-red for submission to Congress in port of this argument which he pointed t demonstrated clearly second class atter is now not only paying per 25 unds a rate close to the express rate, t the proposed increase would jump cond class matter beyond the express tes, whereas, the "small advance pro-sed for parcelpost, through either the ggested five-cent parcel fee, or the rates ggested by the Postmaster General ould not bring parcel post rates within iling distance of express rates."

Mr. Kelly said a study of his table ould prove to any impartial person the undness of his contention which he is ing to press upon Congress once the ttle over the cost ascertainment report started.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

Dec. 30-31—Assn. of American Schools and Departments of Journalism annual meeting, Chicago.

Jan. 9-10—Oklahoma Press Assn., meeting, Oklahoma City.

Jan. 10-17—Winter Golf League of the Advertising Interests, Pinehurst, N. C.

Jan. 10—Alabama Press Assn., northern section, mid-year meeting, Birmingham, Ala.

Jan. 16-17—Virginia Press Assn., mid-year meeting, Charlottesville.

Jan. 17-23—American Society of Newspaper Editors annual meeting, Washington, D. C.

Jan. 29-30—National Advertising Commission, meeting, Detroit, Mich.

FLASHES

Many a politician, blown into office by a popular gust, is blown out by the poular disgust.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

Polygamy has its advantages. Think of having an entire harem to look for your collar button.—Cleveland Times.

Anyway, there is some consolation in knowing that it is almost impossible to transmit a cross-word puzzle by radio.—Hudson Dispatch.

An Oregonian was refused admission to the poorhouse because he was the owner of a motor car. Did they expect him to walk over the hills and risk being run down by a car?—J. R. W. in Milwaukee Journal.

Mere cash seems to mean nothing to the lords of Cashmere.—New York Herald Tribune.

The plain people will continue in hard luck so long as the political machine is a mere auxiliary to the adding machine.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

The fellow who rocked the boat last summer has just finished firing at everything that moved in the woods.—J. R. W. in Milwaukee Journal.

Having several hundred of its own, the United States Shipping Board declines to become excited over Germany's sailless ship.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

The new advertising technique has unearthed a lot of queer words, but at least it has buried "elegant."—Detroit News.

"Almost every girl wants to marry a rich man."

"There aren't enough rich men to go around. What's the next step?"

"Marry what offers and nag him up the ladder."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

If Pittsburgh is to have a skyscraper college, why let professors' salaries remain the bungalow type?—Brooklyn Eagle.

Many a wife is now able to buy Christmas cigarets for her husband intelligently —Buffalo Enquirer.

Once there was a mother who didn't suspect her little daughter of musical talent.—Rochester Times-Union.

Perhaps knights would be bold even now if the maidens weren't.—Baltimore Sun.

Another state governed by women is the state of matrimony.—New York Telegram and Evening Mail.

Grantland Rice always a winner

The prize winning story was just a part of the Rice service to newspapers. Rice covers all big sporting events—prize fights, golf tournaments, tennis matches, football games, the World's Series.

In addition you get, six days a week,

"The Sportlight"

a bit of verse, an expert survey of sport events of national interest, a crisp editorial on big sporting questions.

Ask your Sport Editor about Grantland Rice and about what the Rice service will mean

The New York
Herald Tribune
Syndicate

POSTAL REPORT ANALYZED

EDITOR & PUBLISHER has in its possession the full Post Office Department Report on Cost Ascertainment, covering more than 200 pages. This report was submitted to Frederic W. Hume, secretary of the National Publishers Association, who for six years has been actively connected with the postal situation. Mr. Hume, after study of the report submited the following analysis:

IT is somewhat of a difficult matter to summarize a report made by the Post Office Department which required over a year's time to produce and bring out clearly the amount of detail compiled and the methods utilized so that they would be comprehensible to the average layman, or even to a great many publishers.

The original purpose of the appropriation for the compilation of the Cost Ascertainment of the Postal Service was to determine, as far as possible, the expenses of each class of mail and the revenues from each class, also the volume of the various classes and a correct allocation of expenses attributable to the services rendered to the several classes and whether or not the various classes were handled at a loss or a gain, from which an intelligent policy could be adduced.

The advance copies of the Cost Ascertainment Report, comprising over 200 pages, goes into infinite detail as to the forms used and the methods employed, and to render a definite opinion on just a cursory observation of this report would be hazardous and possibly subject to considerable controversy. However, from quotes of this report it is very easy to establish the fact that the methods employed are fallacious as compared with good modern business practice, and the protests that have already followed upon the introduction of the proposed revenue measure to raise the necessary revenues are thoroughly justified.

When the United States Senate [illegible] for the Cost Ascertainment Report [illegible] Senate resolution of Senator Sterling, on December 2nd, the Postmaster General promptly submitted the same and the closing paragraph of his letter read as follows: "The report is merely a fact finding statement and does not make any recommenadtion with respect to postal rates." Within ten days following this the Post Office Department undertakes, at the request of the Chairman of the Post Office and Post Roads Committee of the Senate, to recommend rates, as embodied in his letter of December 12th, which will bring about increases in the first and second zones of 100 per cent, a 33⅓ per cent increase in the reading matter of second-class other than newspapers, and a general increase of nearly $11,000,000.

The report, of which EDITOR & PUBLISHER has secured an advance copy, dwells a great deal upon the forms that were used in the gathering of these figures. It is well to bear in mind that these many forms and diagrams were but data collecting sheets and did not imply or convey the policies that would be used in the deductions after such figures were compiled as a whole. All of which brings out the methods that were adopted by the Department without consultation of any of the interests that would suffer from such proposed changes.

A hasty study of this report reveals the fanciful and mythical methods used, as exemplified in the method of computing the average haul, which reads as follows: "The average hauls for the several classes of mail obtained for each office in the first group during the destination weighing period, were used as multipliers for the total annual weights of such mails respectively at such offices, producing annual pound-miles for each class of mail matter." This brings out the theories that were carried, apparently, throughout the entire investigation, that is, of placing each class on an equal basis, regardless of the service rendered. Again, later on in the report, in the analysis of the methods of pro-rating the cost of the carrier service, the report states: "On stops where but one class of mail matter was delivered or collected, or but one special service was performed, a full stop unit, 100, was noted. In the example given on stop number one where first, third and fourth classes were delivered, the relative values would be 33 for the first class, 33 for the third class and 33 for the fourth class. These processes were carried through for all the stops on each trip made during the entire 30-day period on each character of route tested. After the checked columns were converted into units and fractional parts of units in this manner, each column was totaled." Thus further briging out the point of pro-rating expense equally to each class of mail handled. The report also adds: "It will be noted that with the exception of fourth class the average time per stop for first class is generally slightly higher than for the over classes and sub-classes." Which only draws our attention to the special privilege or license which throughout the entire report seems to be cheerfully accorded to fourth class matter or parcels post, which in the final report is shown as losing the least of any of the four classes of service.

One could go on and quote innumerable instances of the methods employed in this report such as the subdivision of services in third and fourth class offices which constitute, more or less, the rural districts, where again they persist in prorating equally not only the services of postmasters therein, but all of the overhead expenses and time consumed, whether it be for the writing of money orders or sorting first class mail, which is all important. The total expense is again equally divided between the four classes; which brings out the woeful lack of business policy that evidently our Post Office is in great need of.

How well I recall the well-known Penrose-Overstreet investigation, which consumed a great deal of time and money in 1904, and later, in 1909, the report of the Hughes Postal Commission. The findings of these reports were that the Post Office never knew and never would know the cost of any of its classes under the methods employed. After we have waited all this time and spent all this money, it does not seem as though we were going to get any further enlightenment through the present report on the methods pursued.

It is incomprehensible that with so large a business as the Post Office, constituting today over $600,000,000 a year, that any one representative of a Department could assume the responsibility for policies that affect so many users of the mails. Imagine, if you can, an arbitrary body laying on a tax on the processes of business in freight rates. We have the Interstate Commerce Commission, which is supposed to hear both the carriers and the shippers of all classes of commodities and appropriate rates are established for them. Rate hearings are common practice. But in this compilation there has been no opportunity offered to any of those who contribute to this tremendous mail business to state their case. The methods employed even though, as the Postmaster General points out, they were endorsed by well-known firms of accountants and engineers (yet it is simple enough to account for such endorsement), would show that the figures were correct and undoubtedly represent a picture of their present costs. All of which does not in any way change the question of the formula used. The very fact of establishing such an amateur method of prorating equally these costs can be readily likened to similar public utilities such as railroad companies.

Primarily the railroads of this country were built and operated for passenger service. Road beds and monumental stations, easy of access, constitute the great fixed overhead expense. Over these same lines express freight traffic is carried. Definite policies are established for the allocation of overheads to the various classes of service. Likening it to the poundage basis, the passenger service would run about $30.00 a hundred on passengers from New York to Chicago. Imagine, if you can, if they should apply them to merchandise; or in an analysis of the operating costs of a railroad if they were to take an average car of coal weighing 60,000 pounds and figure it on a pound basis and then count each piece of coal in the car to ascertain the price per piece. This would be just as practical as the methods empoyed by the Post Office Department.

The same might be argued about telegraph companies, which are considered a public utility, that the actual cost of transmitting a word whether it was sent as a day message or a night message is physically the same, as it requires overhead, personnel and delivery; yet today the successful public utility companies will send fifty words at night at the same rate as ten words in the day time. So with the telephone companies. All these economic and business considerations have been omitted from this Cost Ascertainment Report. But fundamentally in the operation of any public service, it must be submitted to those best acquainted with business practice as to what any traffic will bear.

The elaborate appendix which accom-

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE

TACOMA

Population, 112,000 People

Local flour mills export over 1,500,000 barrels of flour each year; Tacoma Smelter largest in the West; 2 High Schools, 6 Intermediate Schools, 39 Grade Schools, College of Puget Sound, Annie Wright Seminary and 145 churches.

You can blanket the rich and prosperous territory of Tacoma and Southwest Washington through the columns of the News Tribune; A. B. C. Audited Circulation, 32,643.

Frank S. Baker, President. Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave., New York City.
Ford, Parsons Co., 360 No. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

R. J. Bidwell & Co., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

MOST NEWS

The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Post

MORNING AND SUNDAY

October circulation (net paid)
Daily Circulation.....137,824
Sunday Circulation.....197,347
Member A. B. C.

NEW YORK STATE

Westchester County's

Fastest Growing Cities

Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns

Are Covered Completely By

THE DAILY ARGUS

of

Mount Vernon

THE STANDARD STAR

of

New Rochelle

(Both Members of ABC)

Westchester Newspapers, Inc.

Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.

Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

THE PASSAIC DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities

TRADING POPULATION

167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.

National Advertising Representatives

(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)

New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

EVENING HERALD

Los Angeles, Calif.

Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.

Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:

H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

Stops Newsprint Waste

REDFIELD, FISHER & WALLACE. Advertising Agency of NewYork points out a tremendous WASTE that is going on:

"The only part of a newspaper we are interested in is the page containing our advertising account. During the past year we have used practically every newspaper in the country on one account alone and the receipt of thousands of complete newspapers has taken up considerable space in the handling, and we feel sure that much labor and news-print could have been saved by the receipt of tear-pages throughout."

An expensive waste that our service will stop for you.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26 St., NEW YORK

A NEWSPAPER CHECKING PROOF SERVICE,

The Pittsburgh Press

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

Daily and Sunday

Has the Largest CIRCULATION IN PITTSBURGH

MEMBER A. B. C.

Foreign Advertising Representatives

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.

New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

nies this report is made up most graphically at the same time presenting most attractive subdivision and allocation based upon these fundamental principles employed, but it does not change the injustice that has been done to the ers of the mails when it is accompanied by such radical recommendations are embodied in the Post Office Department suggestions of December 12th. The utter hopelessness of ever convincing the Representatives of the rural districts that this increased postal charge must be passed on to the readers in an increased price of subscriptions on the newspapers and periodcials of their constituents is impossible to believe. The attempt to discriminate between the reading matter of newspapers and periodicals will arouse no end of protest. The very subtle and sinister suggestion of making this increase in the first three zones indicates a far greater knowledge of this question than would be ordinarily implied in the report as a whole, because it is readily seen that this would mark the greatest hardship on newspapers whose distribution is in a radius of some 300 miles of their point of publication, and at the same time deal a death blow to those larger publishers of periodicals who have been utilizing the shipment by freight to far removed entry points and then distributing in the first, second and third zones.

The report itself shows the utter futility of adopting business principles to Government functions if left to the Department. The success of the Interstate Commerce Commission in its dealing with railroads and shippers of various kinds of merchandise proves the necessity for some intelligent adjustment of policy both as to the methods to be employed in the proper allocation of fixed overhead expenses, as well as the correct ratio and proportion of supervisory personnel, such as postmasters, assistant postmasters, the supervision of the service of the city letter carrier in the large cities, where he makes from five to seven deliveries a day, with the slower service given for the other classes of mail.

The principal opposition that has been brought forth to this report by the publishers is the allocation of the above mentioned expenses, together with that of Rural Free Delivery, of which second class matter is charged with over 40 per cent. The Rural Free Delivery was never meant for second class matter. Primarily it was established for the benefit of the farmer, to save him the time and expense of going to his post office to get his first class mail. By transposing this service to piece per stop basis, it is readily seen that such an allocation works a great injustice particularly on second class mail.

There is one point that has not been brought out in the discussion of the report, and that is that parcel post, which represents 64 per cent of the total weight against second class, which represents but 24 per cent, bearing in mind the unusual paradox that the Government pays for transportation on a space basis per zone mile and collects by the weight, and that with the variable bulk of parcel post made up of all shapes and sizes of parcels, taking up a great deal of room in many cases and weighing very little, would only lose $6,000,000 as against second class matter, which is about as close a weight per pound as is handled on the mails, which is shown as losing as much as $74,000,000. Taking into consideration also the fact that each package of parcel post must be stamped, weighed and handled at the point of entry and, secondly, that it requires vehicle space in the transmission from trains to local post offices, sorting in bins and ultimate delivery in wagons, necessitating the employment of two or three additional employees, and the further fact that it possibly constitutes equally as big a factor in the Rural Free Delivery wagon service, for which second class is taxed so high. It is hard to reconcile one's mind to such glaring statements even though they are partially justified by this report. It is high time that the users of the mails, including first class, second class, third class and fourth class, present their cases to some impartial body capable of reflecting standard business practice in the handling of so large a volume of business.

If the present postal salary bill should be enacted regardless of its merits in its present form and these recommendations suggested by the Postmaster General enacted, I predict that it will reduce revenue rather than increase it, because of the fact that has already been proven in a great many instances, that even the existing rates established by the War Revenue Act of Oct. 1917, have forced some of the largest publishers out of the mails. It is a well known fact that the largest of our weekly magazines are at least some 70 per cent out of the mails. This is only the working of an economic law and would be applied to newspaper mail, and some joint organization would produce a delivery system that would enable them to reach some of their own mail trade. Nevertheless, it would withdraw revenue from the Post Office Department.

This is proven in this report when it brings out that newspapers (daily and weekly) are alleged to cost $66,000,000, creating a deficit of $54,000,000, whereas all other magazines cost but $13,000,000 and produce a deficit of $4,000,000, which explains what has happened with the large shippers of magazines. However, there is little encouragement or hope offered in the methods employed in this report. It must be attacked from a basis of good business policy, whether it be under Government supervision or private operation. It is a simple matter to point out the glaring irregularities of the methods that they have employed, and the strong appeal being made by the newspapers at this particular time will undoubtedly produce some method of creating a policy which would be acceptable to those who are forced under present conditions to use the mails.

ELISHA HANSON OF A. N. P. A. CHARGES POSTAL COSTS ARE IMPROPERLY ALLOCATED

THE American Newspaper Publishers' Association, through Elisha Hanson, its Washington representative, Tuesday addressed a letter to Senator Dale in which it alleges that in the preparation of their cost-ascertainment report officials of the Post Office Department improperly allocated as against the paying users of second-class mail a total of $82,507,565.98.

The publishers attack the method in which the department allocated overhead to the paying users of second-class mail.

Mr. Hanson's letter to Mr. Dale says:

You are undoubtedly familiar with the fact that for a number of years the Post Office Department, through its rate experts, consistently has claimed that it suffers a tremendous loss on account of handling second-class mail. The publishers of daily newspapers have contended, in opposition, that the Post Office Department actually makes a profit on the handling of newspaper mail.

The cost ascertainment report recently submitted to Congress shows that the department does make a profit on the transportation of second-class mail by railroad. In order to prove that the department suffers a tremendous loss in the handling of second-class mail, the officials of the department in this cost ascertainment report have allocated to the second class mail approximately 46 per cent of the cost of the rural free delivery service.

This allocation, the publishers contend, is not only improper, but unjust and unfair. In addition to this, the officials of the department have charged second-class mail with more than $35,000,000 of expense incident to the handling of certain classes of publications which have been sent through the mails free of charge or at a nominal rate since the establishment of the Post Office Department.

Consider for a moment the allocation of costs of the rural free delivery service. Table No. 75 of the cost-ascertainment report shows that $30,000,000 out of a total expense of more than $87,000,000 incident to the rural free delivery service is charged to first-class mail, while more

Announcing

The Morning Tribune

NEW ORLEANS

New Morning Paper

Issued by the publishers of the New Orleans Item and offered to national advertisers jointly with without increase in current rates—for the present.

The New Orleans ITEM

The Morning Tribune and the New Orleans Item jointly on week days fifteen cents a line.

The Item Tribune on Sundays eighteen cents a line.

All day coverage in New Orleans at one cost.

JAMES M. THOMSON, Publisher — A. G. NEWMEYER, Associate Publisher

National Advertising Representatives

The JOHN BUDD Company

9 East 37th Street, New York — Union Trust Bldg., Chicago — Chemical Bldg., St. Louis — Healey Bldg., Atlanta

Chancery Bldg., San Francisco — Title Insurance Bldg., Los Angeles — Securities Bldg., Seattle

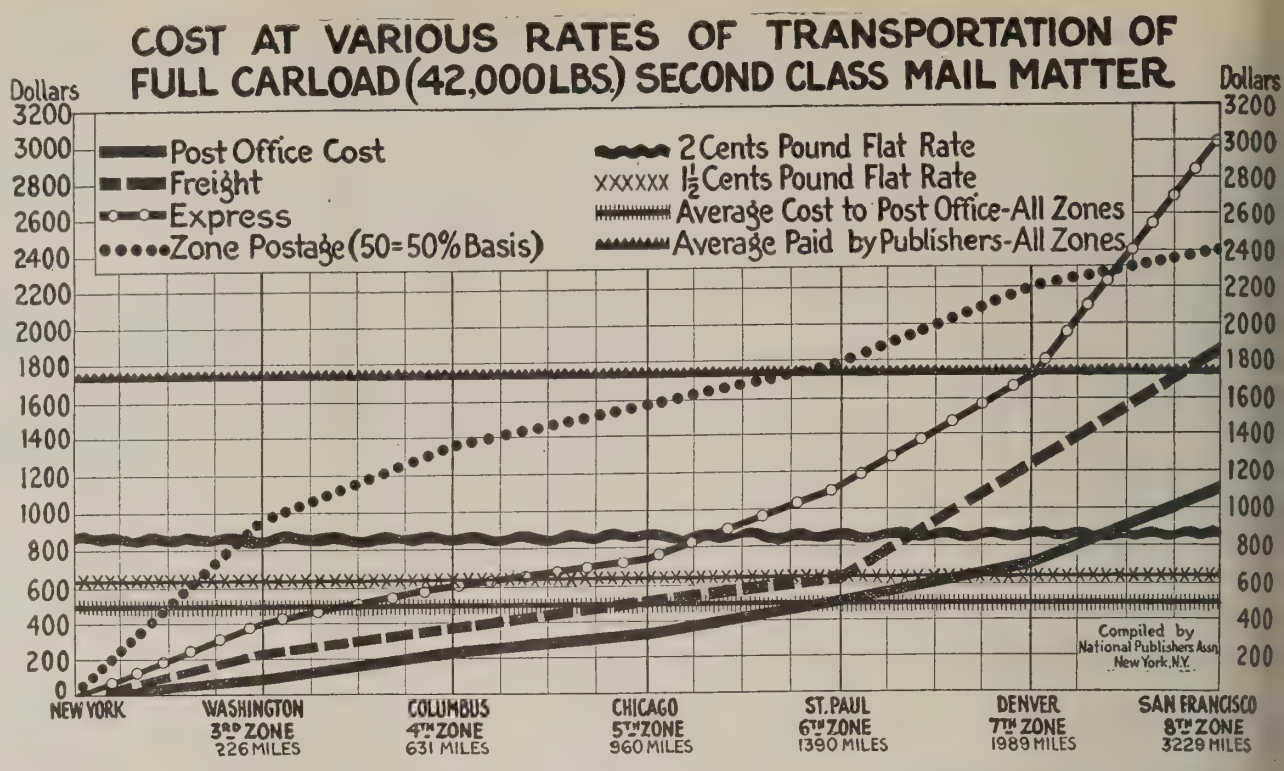
than $34,000,000 of this expense is charged to second-class mail. The balance is distributed over third and fourth class. * * *

When this service was created Congress had no idea that it could ever pay for itself by revenues received therefrom, and made no provision that the rural free delivery service should be put on a revenue-producing basis.

The Post Office Department, notwithstanding this situation, and having contended for years that it has been carrying second-class mail at a loss, has allocated to the users of second-class mail more than 46 per cent of the cost of the rural free delivery service. The department has done this by counting the number of pieces of mail carried on the rural routes of this country, by figuring the stops made by the rural carriers on those routes, and then by figuring the cost per piece as per stop.

The utter absurdity of this method of calculation can easily be demonstrated. The cost of rural free delivery service differs from that of every other service in the Post Office Department in that it is not based either on the weight or number of pieces of mail handled or the hours required by carriers to serve their routes.

The only proper and fair method of allocating the cost of the rural free delivery service is to spread that cost over the general postal service and to apportion to each class of the mail its proper percentage of cost incident to the rural free delivery service in proportion to the gross receipts from the various classes of service.



If this proper and fair method of allocation had been adopted by the cost ascertainment officials of the Post Office Department we would find that, instead of charging the users of second-class mail with approximately 46 per cent of the rural free delivery cost, or a gross total of $34,375,097.11, the department would have found that the proper charge to second-class mail on the basis of receipts would be only about 6 per cent, or $5,250,000. In other words, the department improperly has added more than $29,000,000 to second-class costs.

For a good many years it has been the contention of the publishers of this country that those portions of the second-class mail which pay the full rate to the department are handled at a profit. According to the department's own figures, it makes a profit on the transportation of second-class mail by railroad and other carrier service. * * *

The department's own figures show that daily newspapers pay approximately $12,000,000 a year for the use of the mails. As against this, the department expends $8,500,000 a year for the transportation of these newspapers on the railroads. Practically the only other service performed by the department for daily newspapers is delivery by rural carrier. If the entire cost of the rural free delivery service properly applicable to all second-class mail—namely, $5,250,000—is added to the cost of transportation of newspapers only, it will be found that the department suffers a loss of but little more than $1,000,000 incident to that service. To offset this charge of approximately $14,000,000 in expenditures, the department has an income from second-class mail in excess of $30,000,000 a year.

It has been the policy of our Government, since the Post Office Department was founded, to give the small weekly newspapers the right of free distribution in the counties wherein they are published. According to the department's calculations, this service cost $20,112,153 annually above all receipts from such publications. The Postmaster General, in his letter to Senator Sterling, ignores this alleged deficit, but in other communications has insisted the county free service should be maintained.

With this policy the publishers of daily newspapers agree in full, but they most emphatically disaprove of his effort to charge this special service cost of more than $20,000,000 to their amount, as he has done. It should no more be charged to second-class mail generally than the franking privilege of Congress or the postage free privilege of the various Government departments.

It has also been the traditional policy of the Government to allow scientific, agricultural, religious and fraternal publications to go through the mails at a favored rate. This public service is performed at a cost above receipts of $14,951,858 per year.

So, by analyzing these figures, we find that in order to prove a deficit to second-class mail of more than $74,000,000 annually the Postmaster General improperly has charged it with a loss of $29,125,097.11 incident to rural free delivery; a loss of $20,112,153 incident to the county free circulation privilege, and the loss of $14,951,858 incident to the distribution of scientific, religious and fraternal periodicals, or a total charge of $64,189,108.11, which, under no theory of fairness, propriety or good accounting, should be loaded on the backs of those publishers who pay their full postage bills.

The remainder of this alleged deficit is easily got at in the allocation of general overhead for the entire postal service. Under this allocation daily newspapers are charged $9,447,754.49; county free papers, $8,455,955.04; scientific and religious, $9,862,502.83; all others, $4,383,060.05.

The total overhead for the scientific and religious papers added to that of the county free papers is $18,318,457.87. Again, the newspaper publishers, contend, it is not only improper and unfair, but entirely unjust, to put this charge against them, for this allocation of overhead, added to the improper charging of $64,189,108.11 above referred to, brings the total charges improperly assessed against second-class mail to $82,507,565.98. This sum exceeds by $7,794,697 the deficit charged to second-class mail generally.

To indicate not only the absurdity, but the absolute unfairness, of such overhead allocation, I want to cite the case of one publication, the Minneapolis Journal. The Minneapolis Journal has a mail circulation of more than 40,000. It is one of the largest contributors to the receipts of the Post Office at Minneapolis, if not the largest single contributor of any business institution in that city.

Now, what service does the Post Office at Minneapolis perform for the Minneapolis Journal? Out of an entire mail circulation of upward of 40,000, but 34 single copies go through the Minneapolis Post Office and are handled by the clerks of that office. The entire remainder of this circulation is addressed, tied in bundles, perfectly routed, sacked in the office of the paper and delivered by employees of that paper to the mail trains which emanate from Minneapolis.

One clerk of the Minneapolis Post Office, and one clerk only, checks the weight of these sacks of mail. For the service of this one clerk and for the handling of thirty-four single wrapped copies of that newspaper, the Minneapolis Journal, is charged 12.35 per cent of the overhead of the Minneapolis Post Office and the general postal service by the department's ascertainment report.

The same situation is identical in all other cities where daily newspapers are published.

Mr. Hanson makes it plain that the association expects to have full opportunity to present it views before a Senate committee. He recalls the increase made on postage rates during the war, and goes on:

It is a matter of record in the Post Office Department that the first two increases of a quarter of a cent a pound produced $15,000,000 additional revenue to the department, whereas the fourth increase of but a quarter of a cent a pound caused the revenues to fall off nearly $500,000. In the light of that situation it is impossible to understand how the department, at this time, can sustain its position that a further increase of 2 cents per pound in the first and second zones, which will cover 95 per cent of the mail circulation of daily newspapers, will provide additional revenues, when less than three years ago an increase of but a quarter of a cent a pound caused a falling off in revenues.

Mr. Hanson concluded by declaring that if the proposed increase of rates is put into effect, it will drive all the newspapers from the mails and will cause a loss of $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 to the Post Office Department.

LUMBER MEN AGREE TO FIGHT WASTAGE

Vote to Accept Task of Carrying on Utilization of Forest Products Work Following Washington Conference

The government will depend largely upon the lumber industry for practical results from the recent national conference on the utilization of forest products.

The Departments of Agriculture and Commerce are planning to co-operate with the committee in furthering the objectives of the conference.

At the quarterly meeting of the directors of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, held in Washington immediately after the conference, it was decided to give the full support of the association to these objectives.

John W. Blodgett, announced the lumbermen had voted to "accept the task of permanent direction of the utilization campaign and provision was made in the 1925 budget for its full quota of financial assistance for its new work."

Mr. Blodgett added that "with the lumbermen taking the lead in this way and having already achieved great results through lumber standardization and other channels of economical utilization of forest products, the success of the conference as a permanent body would be up to other organizations."

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Comic Cartoons

WALT MUNSON'S "TIME TO CRAB"
Appearing in Brooklyn Eagle
Tri Feature Syndicate, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y.

Editorials

TIMELY TOPICS, DAILY SERVICE
Exclusive Territory
Three Days' Service and Rates
Gladly Sent
Reid Editorial Service
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
2048 East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WORLD'S FAMOUS AUTHORS
Unexcelled selection, serials, novelettes, shorts.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., New York.

Radio

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that make radio fans regular newspaper readers. A com plete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn

FOR SMALLER PAPERS
A new and snappy weekly radio review
By CARL H. BUTMAN
Washington Radio News Service
1422 F St. Washington, D. C

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSO
The Standard Religious Feature of America
Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuou publication. Non-Controversial, Readable. Timely
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Sport Cartoon

"BUDDIE SHEEL'S" DAILY COMMENT O
the Sport World. Featured by Brooklyn Time
Tri Feature Syndicate, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y

Industrial Recruits Increase Southern Population

The rate of increase in population among the Southern States, in many cases exceeds the country's average of 15%. Florida shows an increase of 28% and North Carolina, 16%.

Throughout the United States there is a constant trend towards the concentration of people into cities. In the South, however, two and one-third times as many people live on farms and in villages as do in its larger centers.

From the two foregoing facts two deductions can be made. First, agriculture, always the cornerstone of Southern business, still remains unchanged. Second, new industrial workers are recruited from beyond Southern borders.

The growth of population is generally most evident in those cities where large manufacturing establishments and great markets are located. This has been caused through an influx of workmen and their families from the North and West.

The varied opportunities offered in the South increase population, which in turn increases sales possibilities.

The one best way for National Advertisers to reach and sell this market is through these daily newspapers.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA
Birmingham Age-Herald (M)	33,184	.08	.08
Birmingham Age-Herald (S)	41,448	.10	.10
Birmingham News (E)	76,312	.18	.18
Birmingham News (S)	86,185	.18	.18
Mobile News-Item (E)	11,722	.05	.05
Mobile Register (M)	20,824	.07	.07
Mobile Register (S)	33,130	.085	.086
FLORIDA
Daytona Daily News (ES)	2,648	.03	.03
Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville (M&S)	37,564	.10(S.12)	.10(S.12)
Miami Herald (M)	18,300	.06	.06
Miami Herald (S)	21,681	.07	.07
Orlando Sentinel (M&S)	4,473	.035	.035
†St. Petersburg Independent (E)	6,007	.04	.04
Tampa Times (E)	15,176	.05	.05
Tampa Tribune (M&S)	24,783	.07(.08S)	.06(.07S)
GEORGIA
Augusta Herald (E)	15,095	.05	.05
Augusta Herald (S)	15,554	.05	.05
Macon Telegraph (M)	26,822	.07	.07
Macon Telegraph (S)	27,376	.07	.07
Savannah Morning News (M), 21,372. (S)	22,671	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
Lexington Leader (E)	19,395	.06	.06
Lexington Leader (S)	19,368	.05	.05
Paducah Sun (E)	8,616	.04	.04
NORTH CAROLINA
†Asheville Citizen (M)	14,066	.055	.055
†Asheville Citizen (S)	14,540	.055	.055
Greensboro Daily News (M)	24,423	.07	.06
Greensboro Daily News (S)	31,592	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (M)	29,921	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (S)	33,403	.07	.07
Winston-Salem Sentinel (E)	14,855	.06	.06
SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia Record (E)	16,107	.05	.05
Columbia Record (S)	15,907	.05	.05
Columbia State (M)	24,246	.07	.07
Columbia State (S)	24,442	.07	.07
Greenville News (M)	20,190	.065	.06
Spartanburg Journal (E)	3,940	.05	.05
Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,726 (S)	9,357
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga Times (M)	24,189	.08	.08
Chattanooga Times (S)	24,726	.08	.08
†Nashville Banner (E)	54,189	.11	.11
†Nashville Banner (S)	53,069	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
Danville Register and Bee (M&E)	12,128	.05	.05
Danville Register (Sunday)	7,184	.05	.05
Newport News Times-Herald (E)	7,326	.05	.05
Newport News Daily Press (S&M)	5,622
Roanoke Times & World-News (M&E)	24,993	.07	.07
Roanoke Times (S)	16,894	.06	.06
Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader (E)	6,424	.035	.035

 A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

POST OFFICE FOR SERVICE, NOT PROFIT, IDEA OF MANY STATESMEN

Washington, Andrew Jackson, Sumner and Woodrow Wilson Attacked Profit Making Principle Now Being Pushed at Capital

THERE is ample historical support for the proposition that the United States Post Office is not and never was established as a profit making institution.

Time and again, when an increase in second class postal rates has been under discussion, or the principle attacked, brilliant minds have risen in opposition.

From the many quotations in history on the subject, the following few are cited as typical.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

In his fourth annual message to Congress, in 1792, George Washington said:

"It is represented that some provisions in the law which establishes the post office operate, in experiment, against the transmission of newspapers to distant parts of the country. Should this upon due inquiry be found to be the fact, a full conviction of the importance of facilitating the circulation of political intelligence and information will, I doubt not, lead to the application of a remedy."

And in his fifth annual message to Congress, 1793, with this subject still in his mind, he again lays emphasis upon the social function of the post office and of publications in these words:

"But here I can not forbear to recommend a repeal of the tax on the transportation of public prints. There is no resource so firm for the Government of the United States as the affections of the people, guided by an enlightened policy, and to this primary good nothing can conduce more than a faithful representation of public proceedings, diffused without restraint throughout the United States."

PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON

President Wilson, when a socially destructive postage increase law was being urged, stated:

"It must be that those who are proposing this change of rates (magazine postage rate increase) do not comprehend the effect it would have. A tax upon the business of the more widely circulated magazines and periodicals would be a tax upon their means of living and performing their functions.

"They obtain their circulation by their direct appeal to the popular thought. Their circulation attracts advertisers. Their advertisements enable them to pay their writers and to enlarge their enterprise and influence.

"This proposed new postal rate would be a direct tax, and a very serious one, upon the formation and expression of opinion—its more deliberate formation and expression—just at a time when opinion is concerning itself actively and effectively with the deepest problems of our politics and our social life.

"To make such a change now, whatever its intentions in the minds of those who propose it, would be to attack and embarrass the free processes of opinion.

"Surely, sober second thought will prevent any such mischievous blunder."

BENJAMIN RUSH

Benjamin Rush, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, in 1787, wrote an article entitled—"The Revolution is Not Over"—in which among other observations, he made the following:

"For the purpose of diffusing knowledge, as well as extending the living principles of the Government to every part of the United States—every state, city, county, village, and township in the Union should be tied together by means of the post office.

"This is the true non-electric wire of Government. It is the only means of carrying heat and light to every individual in the Federal Commonwealth. 'Sweden lost her liberties,' says the Abbe Reynal, 'because her citizens were so scattered that they had no means of acting with each other.' It should be a constant injunction to the postmasters to carry newspapers free of all charges for postage. They are not only the vehicles of knowledge and civilization, but the sentinels of the liberties of our country."

ANDREW JACKSON

Andrew Jackson in his message to Congress in 1829 declared:

"In a political point of view, this department is chiefly important as affording the means of diffusing knowledge. It is to the body politic what the veins and arteries are to the natural—conveying rapidly and regularly, to the remotest parts of the system, correct information of the operations of the government, and bringing back to it the wishes and feelings of the people. Through its agency we have secured to ourselves the full enjoyment of the blessing of a free press."

CHARLES SUMNER

Senator Charles Sumner's great speech on postal principles of June 10th, 1870, is clear and convincing:

"There is nothing in the Constitution or in reason to distinguish the Post Office in this respect from the Army, the Navy, or the Judiciary. The Constitution confers upon Congress the power 'to establish post offices and post roads' precisely as it confers upon Congress the power 'to raise and support armies'—the power 'to provide and maintain navies,' and the power to 'constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court,' and in each of these cases it is empowered 'to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers.' Nobody suggests that now in peace our armies shall amplify their commissariat by enforced contributions; that our Navy shall redouble its economies by supplementary piracy; or that our tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court shall eke out a salary by requisitions on the suitors—to the end that each of the departments may be in some measure 'self-supporting.' Why, then, should the Post Office be subjected to a different rule? Not, surely because it is less beneficent; not because it is the youngest child of Government, a very 'Benjamin' coming into being long after the others. But such is the case.

"The rule for others is discarded when we come to the Post Office, and here for the first time we hear that a department of Government must be 'self-supporting.' As there is no ground in the Constitution for this pretense, so is there none in reason.

"Of all existing departments the Post Office is most entitled to consideration, for it is most universal in its beneficence. That public welfare which is the declared object of all the departments appears here in its most attractive form. There is nothing which is not helped by the Post Office.

"Is business in question? The Post Office is at hand with invaluable aid, quickening and multiplying all its activities.

"Is it charity? The Post Office is the good samaritan omnipresent on all the highways of the land.

"Is it the precious intercourse of family or friends? The Post Office is carrier, interpreter, and handmaid.

"Is it education? The post-office is schoolmaster with school for all and with scholars counted by the million.

"Is it the service of Government? The Post Office lends itself so completely to this essential work that the national will is conveyed without noise or effort to the most remote corners, and the Republic becomes one and indivisible.

"Without the post office where would be that national unity with irresistible guarantee of equal rights to all, which is now the glory of the Republic? Impossible—absolutely impossible. Therefore, in the name of all these, I do insist that now, in these days of equality, the post office shall be admitted to equality with all other departments of the Government, so that it may discharge its own peculiar and many-sided duties without being compelled to find in itself the means of support. It has enough to do without taking thought of the morrow. On every side and in every direction it is the beneficent helper. To the Army it is a staff; to the Navy it is a tender; to the Treasury it is a support; to the judiciary it is a police; to President and Congress it is an adjunct; and to all else, public or private, whatever the interest, aspiration, or sentiment, it is an incomparable ally. Better than two blades of grass where only one grew before, and when the precious product is measured by millions you see the vastness of the benevolence."

WILLIAM F. VILAS

Postmaster General Vilas, in his annual report, June 30, 1887, stated:

"The paramount duty of the Government, so far as concerns this department, is to furnish the most perfect and useful postal facilities to the people, within the authority of the Constitution, which the skill of man can provide. It is due to the character of the citizens of this country, to their freedom and enlightment, to their enterprise and activity, to their wealth and power, and especially to the intimacy of their personal relations maintained over so great an expanse of territory, to an extent never equaled, hardly aimed at, elsewhere on the globe, from which arise the fraternity of feeling and community of interest that furnish the safest guarantees for the future stability and value of our Federal institutions. It is, indeed, their due as a personal, individual right, because the Government monopolizes the postal business and forbids them all other attempts of self service.

"Upon every ground the postal service rightfully urges a constant and exacting demand upon legislative and executive wisdom and labor for its enlargement and improvement to the utmost of perfectibility."

Will Aid Mercantile Census

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I just had an opportunity to glance over hastily your issue of Dec. 13, called your SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE NUMBER for 1924 and have found it very interesting, indeed.

The writer is withdrawing from the Domestic Commerce Division in the immediate future to devote his entire time to the work of the Committee for the Promotion of a Mercantile Census, i.e. a census of wholesalers and retailers, which will be comparable with our present Census of Manufactures. I believe there is a great deal of information in this number of your publication which will be of material assistance to me in the work.

W. LEONARD THOMPSON,
Acting for Mr. Feiker, Vice Chairman
Committee for the Promotion of a Mercantile Census.

New Press Installed

The Jamestown (N. Y.) Evening Journal printed its Dec. 13, issue with its new Goss sextuple press. The press has a capacity of 24,000 twenty-four page papers per hour. A new 3-story plant will be built soon.

Advertise For Better Morality

Newspapers which have asked for proofs of Series No. 6 have available a suggestive advertisement which will stimulate church attendance, and which ties up with New Year's.

The churches of your town and the business men who are interested in church work may be very willing to underwrite space to put this message before your readers. Some papers are using this material in space they donate themselves in order to build up the morale of the community and stimulate everything that is good.

This department asks 3 cents per week per thousand circulation for the use of this copy. This small income is used for promoting church advertising. Proofs of Series No. 6, 52 ads, are available from Herbert H. Smith, 723 Witherspoon Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A. A. C. W.

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World
383 Madison Ave. New York City

More Customers With More Dollars Per Square Mile in

New York State

New York State is the Most Populous State in the Union
New York State is the Wealthiest Community in the World

There are more people per square mile in New York State than in any similar area in America. The average number of persons per square mile is 217.9. The ten million people living in New York State constitute a market that exceeds that of many European countries as well as any country in South America except Brazil.

This population is for the most part centered in 59 cities, six of which have over 100,000 inhabitants and the rest have from 25,000 to 100,000. The city people in New York State number 8,589,844.

New York State with a total wealth of $36,986,638,000 represents the greatest concentrated wealth in the world. The per capita wealth is $3,431. This wealth is derived from various sources, chiefly its industrial, agricultural and commercial pursuits.

Besides this, vast sums of money are annually left within the borders of New York State by the millions of transients, vacationists and foreign visitors that temporarily become a part of this great Empire State.

Where there are people in such stupendous numbers, there are customers. Where there are so many dollars there must be sales.

The New York State newspapers represented in this list are able, through successful co-operation and unexcelled business-getting ability, to bring both of these to your door.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
*Albany Evening News .....(E)	21,982	.08	.08
*Albany Knickerbocker Press .....(M)	33,239	.10	.10
*Albany Knickerbocker Press .....(S)	53,649	.14	.14
*Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat .....(E)	7,502	.04	.04
Auburn Citizen .....(E)	6,429	.04	.035
*Batavia Daily News .....(E)	8,737	.04	.04
*Binghamton Press .....(E)	32,006	.09	.09
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle .....(E)	67,646	.22	.22
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle .....(S)	77,839	.22	.22
*Buffalo Courier and Enquirer.....(M&E)	78,058	.18	.18
*Buffalo Courier .....(S)	118,603	.25	.22
†Buffalo Evening News .....(E)	125,618	.25	.25
*Buffalo Evening Times .....(E)	93,202	.21	.21
*Buffalo Sunday Times .....(S)	89,844	.21	.21
*Buffalo Express .....(M)	51,288	.14	.12
*Buffalo Express .....(S)	53,362	.18	.14
*Corning Evening Leader .....(E)	8,613	.04	.04
*Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser.....(E&M)	33,102	.11	.11
*Geneva Daily Times .....(E)	5,052	.04	.04
*Gloversville Leader Republican.....(E)	6,852	.035	.035
*Ithaca Journal-News .....(E)	7,411	.04	.04
*Jamestown Morning Post.....(M)	11,112	.04	.035
*Middletown Times-Press .....(E)	6,714	.03	.03
*Mount Vernon Daily Argus.....(E)	9,293	.05	.05
*Newburgh Daily News .....(E)	11,591	.05	.05
*New Rochelle Standard-Star .....(E)	7,741	.04	.04
*The Sun, New York .....(E)	253,763	.60	.56
†New York Times .....(M)	352,100	.70	.686
†New York Times .....(S)	569,623	.90	.882
*New York Herald-Tribune .....(M)	270,159	.594	.576
*New York Herald-Tribune .....(S)	316,585	.6435	.624
†New York World .....(M)	378,807	.595	.58
†New York World .....(S)	558,779	.595	.58
†New York Evening World .....(E)	314,489	.595	.58
*Niagara Falls Gazette .....(E)	18,103	.055	.055
*Port Chester Item .....(E)	4,359	.03	.03
*Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise.....(E)	12,110	.05	.05
*Rochester Times-Union .....(E)	64,727	.20	.18
*Syracuse Journal .....(E)	42,103	.14	.14
*Troy Record .....(M&E)	22,621	.06	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

NEW OUTLINES POSTAL RATE CHANGES IN LETTER TO SENATOR STERLING

POSTMASTER GENERAL HARRY S. NEW outlined his proposals for increasing postal revenues in the following letter to Senator Thomas Sterling:

My dear Senator Sterling:

In compliance with your request for the suggestions of the Post Office Department as to the sources from which may be derived revenues approximately aggregating the additional cost the Department would be compelled to meet in the event of the passage of the bill increasing the pay of post office employes, I transmit herewith the following in the form of a bill, which will, in the judgment of the Department, meet the desired end. It will be observed that the suggestions affect every class of mail on which the Department now sustains a loss, as revealed by the result of the cost ascertainment just completed by direction of Congress, except foreign mails, and it is the purpose to distribute these with due regard to equity.

By practice of every economy possible consistent with good service and by reason of the gradual increase in the volume of business, the Department has been slowly approaching the point where its receipts would balance its expenditures. According to Departmental estimates, the postal pay bill will add approximately $68,000,000 to the annual expenditures and it is at once obvious that the money to meet this must come from somewhere. The question is whether it shall be assessed against the general taxpayer or whether it shall be obtained by providing increased rates for mail now carried at a loss. It is my belief that the latter is the correct method.

Inasmuch as these suggestions are based upon the conclusions arrived at by the cost ascertainment, I desire to say that I have implicit faith in their accuracy. It has been made by some of the most efficient and experienced experts in the postal service and has later been most carefully analyzed by two of the best known firms of expert accountants in the country, and both the accountants and the Department are prepared to explain and defend it if attacked.

The loss incurred by fourth-class mail, or parcel post, is much less than had been popularly believed. Most extravagant statements have been repeatedly made concerning the deficit incurred through carrying parcel post, but the figures demonstrate these exaggerations. In submitting the rates proposed herewith, the Department proceeds upon the theory that while the handling of this class of mail is a very useful and in fact indispensable feature of the postal service, it is nevertheless commerce and should be regarded as such when it comes to making rates for carrying it. Fourth-class mail is made up of commodities and not of intelligence. It should pay its full way and leave a slight margin of safety sufficient to provide for unforeseen changes. The loss sustained on this class of mail closely approximates $7,000,000. In order to wipe this out and provide the margin referred to, the Department suggests increases amounting to about $12,000,000. However, after the cost of the salary bill is added to the expense of the Department, the proportional share chargeable to fourth class will practically balance this margin.

Third-class mail consists largely of circulars and of direct mail advertising. It has to some extent the treatment of first-class mail. Concerning it, it is the view that, like parcel post, it also should pay its way and leave a slight margin. The loss on this class is $16,000,000. It is proposed to increase receipts by $18,000,000 by means of the new schedule of rates herein proposed.

First-class mail as a whole yields a profit in excess of $80,000,000, but the postal card feature of it is carried at a loss of about .45 of a cent on each card. It is proposed to cover this by increasing the price of postal cards to 1½ cents. There will be those who will regard this as much more difficult of accomplishment than the Department believes will prove the case. Postal cards are principally used by those who buy them in considerable numbers and employ them in sending out notices of various kinds and the individual sales are not nearly so numerous as is popularly believed. By this means we estimate added revenues of $12,500,000.

Second-class mail consists entirely of publications, newspapers and periodicals. and the loss on it is placed at $74,712,000. Nothwithstanding this, the recommendation for increases on second-class calls for $10,876,000. One million of this is expected to be derived from newspapers mailed by individuals and not by the publishers.

In holding the increase on this class within the limits named the Department has been governed by numerous considerations. It has been the traditional policy of the Government to give publications the benefit of low rates, recognizing them as distributors of general information. It always has and still does recognize the desire of the public for daily news and current information and reading matter. The increases proposed will apply to the advertising pages of both newspapers and magazines, with a slight increase on the reading portion of magazines.

About $4,000,000 is estimated from registered letters, and about $3,500,000 from money orders, on which under present rates there are very substantial losses. These features are more or less in the nature of banking transactions and may be fairly so regarded, but the rates fixed cannot be so large as to make them greater than those charged by the banks and express companies for a similar service, and it is believed that the sums are as large as can be justified.

On insurance and collect-on-delivery services increases of $3,058,000 and $1,103,000, respectively, are estimated for.

The total increases provided by the rates in this bill are estimated to yield $66,390,750.87 and will approximately cover the $68,000,000 estimated as the cost of the bill S. 1898 providing the increased schedules for the pay of employes.

The Department will be glad through the Postmaster General, and still better through the experts of the Department, to give to your committee any further information desired.

HARRY S. NEW,
Postmaster General.

PROPOSED CHANGES IN POSTAGE RATES AND FEES

FIRST-CLASS matter; postal and post cards: These rates are increased to 1½ cents each, being an increase of ½ cent.

Second-class matter: No change in rate on reading portion of newspapers. No change in rate on reading portion of periodicals classified as scientific, agricultural, religious, fraternal, etc., when published and mailed by organizations not conducted for profit of any private stockholder or individual. The present rate on reading portion of newspapers is 1½ cents per pound; this is not changed. The present rate on the reading portion of scientific, agricultural, etc., publications not conducted for profit is 1¼ cents per pound; this is not changed.

The rate on the reading portion of all other publications is increased from 1½ to 2 cents per pound.

The present rates on the advertising portions of publications now subject to zone rates are increased 2 cents per pound in the first, second and third zones and 1 cent per pound in the fourth, fifth and sixth zones, over present rates. No increase is proposed in the 7th and 8th zones. It is also proposed that the increased rates on the advertising portions of publications now subject to the zone rates will apply alike to advertising portions of all publications, except publications where the advertising matter is 5 per cent or less of the total printed space.

Under the Department's recommendation any publisher or registered news agent may elect to mail a portion or all of the issues of any publications entered as second class matter under the rates recommended for fourth-class or parcel post matter, such rates to be applicable to each piece for each addressee. This will enable publishers and registered news agents to ship large bundles of second-class matter to a single addressee at the parcel post rates.

The rates on transient second-class matter are changed from 1 cent for four ounces to 1½ cents for each two ounces, up to and not exceeding 8 ounces and parcel post rates to apply to weights above 8 ounces.

Third-class matter: Third-class matter is changed so as to limit the weight to 8 ounces. All matter now in third-class weighing more than 8 ounces will go at parcel post rates. Third-class rates of postage on matter not exceeding 8 ounces are increased from 1 cent for each 2 ounces to 1½ cents for each two ounces, with the exception of books, catalogues, seeds, bulbs, scions, etc., which will go at present rates of 1 cent for each two ounces.

Fourth-class matter: The recommendation provides that fourth-class matter shall be limited to weights in excess of 8 ounces, embracing all matter now in the third-class weighing in excess of 8 ounces. The proposed schedule of increases in the zone rates averages approximately 2 cents per package for all zones with increases averaging more than 2 cents per package in the nearby zones, with a lesser increase in the sixth zone, and no increase in the seventh and eighth zones, with a proviso that rates on books, catalogues, etc., weighing in excess of 8 ounces shall be 1 cent per piece less than the rates applicable to merchandise.

Insurance and C. O. D.: The minimum fee on insurance is increased from 3 to 5 cents with lesser adjustments in the higher fees. In lieu of the present fees of 10 and 25 cents for C. O. D. services the proposed legislation provides for fees of 12, 15 and 25 cents.

Money orders: In lieu of the present fees on money orders ranging from 3 to 30 cents, a schedule of fees has been devised ranging from 5 to 22 cents.

Registered mail: The present fee of 10 cents on registered mail is increased to 15 cents, with a proviso that when the sender shall request a return receipt, a fee of 3 cents shall be paid therefor.

Special Delivery: The present fee of 10 cents for the special delivery of mail matter applies to all mail matter regardless of weight. The Department's recommendation proposes a fee of 15 cents for the special delivery of mail matter weighing in excess of 2 pounds, but not in excess of 10 pounds, and 20 cents for the special delivery of packages weighing in excess of 10 pounds.

Fought With Grant

Levi Willits Myers, 94, correspondent for St. Louis papers with Grant's army during the Civil War, died Dec. 6 in Portland, Ore. At the close of the war he bought the Wapello (Ia.) Republican, which he conducted for 26 years.

Selecting Pretty Girls

Kansas Daily Newspaper Advertising Association, composed of 24 of the leading daily newspapers in Kansas, is conducting a State-wide popularity campaign to select "The Kansas Wheat Girl" to carry a message to President Coolidge on Jan. 29, Kansas Day.

Sammis on Annalist

Walter Sammis, formerly of the business department of the New York Times, has joined the staff of the Annalist, published by the Times.

Color Advertising Salesman

To the man who has had experience,

—who knows the national field,

—who likes to travel, working out of New York and Chicago when conditions warrant it,

—who can plan and visualize possibilities to the maximum.

We will aid by every legitimate form of newspaper cooperation. None but the best will suit.

This unusual opportunity is presented by a leading and influential newspaper in the Eastern field.

We are keen to expand our color advertising, on which considerable missionary work has already been done.

In answering, please give all details which we will hold in the strictest and fullest confidence.

Address Box C-552, care Editor & Publisher

The Cathedral Towns of England

RIPON (Yorkshire)

Ripon, a city of picturesqueness and charm belonging to the Middle Ages, is taking rank among the inland Spas of England, but it is chiefly noteworthy on account of its Cathedral. One has to go back as far as the 7th Century to find the beginning of Ripon. St. Wilfrid founded a Monastery there of which the remarkable crypt, entered from the nave of the Cathedral, still remains. The Cathedral is of exceptional interest by reason of its varied styles of architecture.

The old Saxon custom of blowing the horn at 9:00 o'clock each day before the Mayor's house and afterwards in the Market Place is still observed.

On the London & North Eastern Railway

Apply for free booklet describing
ALL YOU OUGHT TO SEE IN BRITAIN

H. J. KETCHAM
General Agent

LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY,
311 Fifth Avenue (at Thirty-Second St.),
New York

ROM POOR IMMIGRANT BOY TO A $40,000 INCOME TAX PAYER

I. Annenberg Couldn't Count Change When He Started Selling Newspapers, and Now He Is Circulation Director of Chicago Tribune Publications

By LUCILE BRIAN GILMORE

A NINE-YEAR old newsboy stood on a Chicago street corner, calling his ares timidly in broken English. When patron handed him a coin that required ange, he dug into his pocket, held out handful of pennies, and permitted the stomer to pick out the correct amount. he intricacies of American coinage were ill beyond the immigrant boy.

And thus—approximately 40 years ago did Max Annenberg make his debut in e newspaper business. Today Mr. nnenberg is director of circulation for e Tribune papers, which include the hicago Tribune, the New York Daily ews and Liberty Magazine. His in- me tax last year was more than $40,000, it it's safe to say that no matter what e size of his present income may be it no larger than the few hard-earned ollars he managed to eke out seemed him those many years ago.

Mr. Annenberg was born on a farm ar Koenigsberg, Prussia, 49 years ago. hen he was just nine years old, his arents and the eight children in the mily came to America and settled in hicago, where the father opend a small rocery store at 1,255 S. State street. or three years Max attended grade hool at Fifteenth street and Wabash venue.

Then the father died and Max's hooling came to a sudden end. During ie previous three years he had helped ie family's finances by selling news- apers after school, in the mornings and n Sundays. When he first began, he ouldn't even pronounce the strange names f his wares, and making change was ompletely beyond him. But never, he ys, did a customer take a cent too much, spite his ignorance.

The death of the father put it squarely p to Max, and he was forced to look for job. The newspaper business, being his rst commercial venture, naturally cap- ired his fancy, and it wasn't long before e was working for the Chicago Tribune. his was immediately after the World's air in 1893. He didn't have any par- cular job, but he drove a wagon, solici- d subscriptions and did anything else at came his way.

Perhaps this work, more than anything se, gave him the insight into the work- gs of newspaper distribution that have ade his fame. It didn't take him long move up step by step in the Tribune rganization, until 1900, when the Hearst ewspapers obtained the services of this ising young circulator. In 1904 he was ade circulation manager of the Hearst ewspapers, and "Circulation Manager", e has been ever since, although in 1910 e returned to his first love—the Tribune.

Mr. Annenberg makes it his particular im to keep in close touch with the news- oy and newsdealer.

"From personal experience I know the ials and tribulations they encounter," e explains. "I want to help them make eir services worth while. Any success that I have attained would have been impossible without their co-operation and support."

M. ANNENBERG

Many circulation innovations have been introduced by Mr. Annenberg, and although some of them have been radical, all have been justified. For instance, Liberty, the newest publication of the Tribune company, does business with news dealers only. It solicits no subscriptions, has no cut rates and does not club with any other paper.

After the Daily News, New York's tabloid picture paper, was well started, it instituted an independent delivery system to news dealers. Now the paper is handled by more than 8,000 of them.

The Chicago Tribune was also among the first newspapers in Chicago to institute an independent delivery system.

Mr. Annenberg divides his time between Chicago and New York. His working hours are half days and half nights. In the daytime he does detail work, in the evening he watches the product in the making. He keeps in close touch with the editorial departments of the three papers and knows what they have to sell. He considers the merchandising of newspapers and magazines as much a place for salesmanship as any other field.

He believes in using his own medium for selling purposes, too. The Tribune company exploits its newspapers exclusively through other newspapers. It uses no outdoor advertising or promotional advertising of any kind. Its promotion funds are all spent in other newspapers.

Mr. Annenberg is married and has three married children—two daughters and one son. He also has one grandchild, six years old.

Friends of Mr. Annenberg say he is a bundle of energy, and his career amply bears this out. Throughout his years of hard labor he has kept physically fit in spite of his average of only five hours of sleep. He has two rules for keeping in condition—outdoor exercise and recreation. Riding is his favorite pleasure, and he has three fine horses in his stable. When he cannot ride, he resorts to golf.

A. P. DIVISION CHIEFS TO MEET JAN. 2

Second Annual Conference Called to Discuss Possible Service Improvements—Executive Committee Meets

To discuss possible service improvements and effect stronger co-ordination, the annual conference of Associated Press superintendents will be held in New York, Jan. 2-4, 1925.

This announcement was made coincident with the regular monthly meeting of the A. P. executive committee, held at New York headquarters, Dec. 17.

The January conference of superintendents will be the second in the association's history. The first was held last February. The A. P. board of directors, meeting the following April, were enthusiastic over results obtained and directed that similar meetings be held annually at the call of the president and general manager.

In attendance at the executive committee meeting were: Frank B. Noyes, Washington Star, president; E. H. Butler, Buffalo News, first vice-president; Melville E. Stone, secretary; Frederick Roy Martin, general manager; J. R. Youatt, treasurer; Charles Hopkins Clark, Hartford Courant; E. H. Baker, Cleveland Plain-Dealer; Robert McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin; Adolph S. Ochs, New York Times.

While not members of the executive committee, John H. Perry, Pensacola (Fla.) Journal and News, and B. H. Anthony, New Bedford Standard, were also present.

Kent Cooper, assistant general manager, returned from a business trip to the Pacific Coast in time to attend the committee sessions.

The Associated Press officials declined to disclose the business discussed.

While the executive committee was in session, a meeting of the advisory board of the eastern division was held in the office of Edward McKernon, eastern division superintendent.

The board commended the expansion of Associated Press regional organizations. There are now six such organizations in the east, representing members in New York state, New Jersey, West Virginia, New England, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut.

Members of the board present were Richard Hooker, Springfield (Mass.) Republican, chairman; Frank E. Langley, Barre (Vt.) Times; and Frank E. Gannet, Ithaca (N. Y.) Journal News.

All Louisiana and MISSISSIPPI Listens In For RADIO NEWS in the NEW ORLEANS STATES

The state's representatives in the National Field—
THE JOHN M. BRANHAM CO.
New York — Chicago — St. Louis
Atlanta — Detroit — Kansas City
San Francisco—Los Angeles

New Orleans States

first!
—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results
The Indianapolis NEWS

Detroit Times
Evening 220,000
Sunday 250,000

A Stable Market
THE Milwaukee-Wisconsin market offers your most dependable sales opportunity in 1924! The first city of diversified industries located in the world's richest dairying center—an unbeatable combination — thoroughly covered by one advertising medium—
The Milwaukee JOURNAL
FIRST - by Merit

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?
Because
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.
Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

Mr. Publisher
or
Business Manager
The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write
CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.
Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

SUPREMACY
Publishes more lineage in practically every important classification than any other New York evening newspaper.
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

SUNDAY ADVERTISING

"THE world is full of people most of whom are extremely busy. Sunday is their one day of leisure—of relaxation. And if daughter is to have that evening dress or that set of costly fur it is on Sunday that she coaxes Daddy for it. Sunday is the ideal day to advertise better grade merchandise—the most costly items."—Harry Casey, Allied Promotion Service.

* * *

STRAIGHT NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING WINS

"DON'T let anyone tell you there is a better and cheaper way to get business for yourself, at Christmas time or any other time, than by using newspapers. Selling a city is like selling merchandise. Make your business attractive, keep your charge accounts in order and advertise both as individuals and as a community and you can't lose. We have conducted a most successful six months' campaign through our merchants' association. We avoided stunts, circulars and accessories. We used newspapers only and our Christmsa business is such that we know it has paid."—W. J. Talty, President, Moline (Ill.) Retail Merchants' Association.

* * *

NEWSPAPERS BETTER THAN THEIR READERS

"ON the whole, the press today is better than its readers. Not so long ago the system of newspapers was chiefly to print that which people would talk about. This opened the door to salacity and sensationalism. Certain successes, so-called, proved that theory to be sound, from the standpoint of mere circulation. But today, the best part of the press prints mostly what its public OUGHT to read, although, at the same time, if it is to continue to live it must supply, in some measure, what the public WANTS to read."—Herbert Bayard Swope, Executive Editor, New York World.

* * *

WHEN AN AD "DOESN'T PULL"

"WHEN an advertiser states that his advertising is not 'pulling,' I often wonder why he does not analyze his advertising methods as he does his business. Too many advertisers today have pet ideas which they enjoy seeing in type in the daily newspapers. If these ideas would get as much business as they give personal satisfaction to the advertiser, they would be 'world beaters.' Until the advertiser can put himself into the position of the average reader, regardless of his personal opinions, so long will there be a great quantity of advertising that does not have the pulling power it should."—B. P. Perkins, Automobile Depatrment, Portland (Me.) Express.

* * *

POSTOFFICE IS PUBLIC SERVICE

"IN view of the fact that the extensive circulation of newspapers and magazines is a means of intellectual enlightenment and a contribution to national well-being, there seems to us no serious objection to the national government bearing the extra cost on second class postal matter and making up the deficit through general taxes. We are quite certain that the imposition of an extra hundred per cent on the already burdensome second class postal rates will raise a serious storm throughout the country. The great sufferers from the extra burden will not be the publishers, although they will first feel the effect of it, but the reading public who will either have to pay more for their reading matter or have less of it."—George D. Lindsay, in the Marion (Ind.) Chronicle.

* * *

HIGH SCHOOLS SHOULD TEACH NEWSPAPER READING

"I BELIEVE that a systematic study of the newspaper, in the form of a course in 'How to Read a Newspaper,' should be offered in every high school. * * * The purpose of such a course is not to direct young persons into newspaper work, nor is it to increase newspaper circulation—in fact, some newspaper circulation would probably suffer from the study. But the relation of the newspaper to the community is such that no citizen can avoid being a newspaper reader. And it's a great deal better for him to read it intelligently than to dally through it, using it ar a form of amusement. * * * America has never known a better newspaper than is produced today—nor does any other country. For all the froth and comics and screaming headlines the modern newspaper is delivering at a smaller price a greater quantity of accurate, useable, timely information than any newspaper ever has pretended to do before—a more honest, disinterested product."—Prof. Grant M. Hyde, University of Wisconsin.

AD-TIPS

George Batten Company, 383 Madison avenue, New York. Has secured the account of the Kolynos Company, dental cream, New Haven, Conn.

Bellamy-Neff Company, 345 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders with some New Jersey and Connecticut newspapers for the Copp Sales Company, glassmobile, Long Island City.

Bloomingdale-Weiler Advertising Agency, 1420 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Reported will place account of J. Harker Chadwick, Atlantic City Gardens, real estate, Longport, N. J.

Burnet-Kuhn Advertising Company, 605 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Preparing copy for a large list of newspapers on Liberty Magazine.

W. K. Cochrane Company, 30 North Dearborn street, Chicago. Preparing copy and campaign on the Dolphin Chemical Company of Chicago.

Collins-Kirk, Inc., 752 North Michigan avenue. Chicago. A list is being prepared on the James S. Kirk Company, Chicago.

J. H. Cross Company, 1500 Locust street, Philadelphia. Renewing newspaper contracts for H. H. Munyon Remedy Co., Scranton.

Dorland Advertising Agency, Preston Building, Atlantic City, N. J. Reported will place account of the India Tea Growers Association, New York, after January 1, 1925.

Dorland Advertising Agency, 244 Madison avenue, New York. Reported will place account of the French S. S. Line, New York, after January 1, 1925.

E. N. Erickson Agency, 15 Park Row, New York. Making 1,000-line contracts with newspapers generally for the Alcock Mfg. Co., porous plasters, New York.

Erwin, Wasey & Company, 844 Rush street, street, New York. Making contracts with newspapers in various sections for the Hoover Company, suction sweeper, Canton, Ohio.

Evers, Watrous & Company, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making contracts with newspapers in selected sections for Schleicher, Inc., radio furniture.

Charles Daniel Frey, 30 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Reported will shortly make newspaper contracts for the Simmons Company, bed springs and mattresses, Chicago.

Gardner Advertising Company, 17th and Locust streets, St. Louis. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the Reichmann Company, "Thorola" loud speaker radio, Chicago.

E. J. Goulston Advertising Agency, 18 Tremont street, Boston. Reported to be planning a newspaper campaign in New England for the Georgian Cafeteria Company, Boston.

Charles C. Green Agency, 450 4th avenue, New York, recently obtained account of Viavadou, Inc., of New York and Paris, cosmetics, to be placed largely in newspapers. Also placing account of Bovinine Company, New York, Foot Tonic, exclusively in newspapers.

H. W. Kastor & Sons Advertising Co., 52 Vanderbilt avenue, New York. Reported to be making plans for newspaper campaign which will begin after January 1, 1925, for the Sleeper Radio Corp., Long Island City.

Kling Gibson Company, 220 South State street, Chicago. Planning a campaign in a number of metropolitan papers on Edna Wallace Hopper.

Lennen & Mitchell, Inc., 366 Madison avenue, New York. Will handle 1925 advertising of the Elgin National Watch Company, Elgin, Illinois.

Lord and Thomas, Wrigley Building, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Sending out copy to a number of papers in the West on the California Prune and Apricot Growers.

McJunkin Advertising Company, 5 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Has secured the account of the Edmonds Shoe Company, Milwaukee.

Matteson-Fogarty-Jordan Company, 215 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Newspapers in scattered territory are receiving orders and contracts on Fawcett's Triple X Magazine, Fawcett Publications, Robbinsdale, Minn.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 410 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making local contracts with newspapers generally for the Horlick Malted Milk Company, Racine, Wis. Said to have recently taken over the advertising of the U. S. Alcohol Company.

Williams and Cunningham, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making contracts with newspapers in different parts of the East on the Ingersoll Redipoint Company.

Young & Rubicam, Atlantic Building, Philadelphia. Making contracts with newspapers, copy to start in June, for Gilpin, Langdon & Company, "Black Flag," insecticides, Baltimore.

TRENTON N E W JERSEY

It serves an industrial city of 129,000, also prosperous suburban territory.

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg. Chicago

ONE out of every THREE Homes in Milwaukee receive

THE MILWAUKEE LEADER

"Unawed by Influence and Unbribed by Gain."

Advertising Representatives
FRALICK & BATES
Chicago, New York, Atlanta, Los Angeles

The Plain Dealer
has the Largest Circulation of Any Cleveland Daily Newspaper
205,569
J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St. New York — Woodward & Kelly, Security Bldg. Chicago

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 126,763
Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y. — Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

The Greatest

The New York Sun's Radio Section of last Saturday, December 13th, consisted of 48 pages. It carried 34,480 agate lines of advertising, a greater amount than was ever published in any New York newspaper.

There is only one BEST—The New York Sun's Saturday Radio Section is IT.

The Sun
280 Broadway New York

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED

SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK.

Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE, KY.

THE same standards of quality are maintained by The News today that caused this paper to be recognized as one of America's best dailies long years ago.

The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

Obituary

LFRED F. HOWE, for years a political ter for the New York Herald and the w York Evening Journal, died Dec. 13, New York. He had been a member he Connecticut Legislature and had ed three terms as mayor of Derby, n.

RDMAN DOLAINSKI, 65, business agent Typographical Union 7, and for 30 s a compositor on the New York nan Herald, died suddenly in New k, Dec. 13.

ILLIAM H. GOFFE, 82, former bus- manager of the Boston Sunday nscript, and associated with the ton Evening Telegram, died in Provi- e, R. I., Dec. 7.

HN BENNIGSEN, 50, for thirty years harge of advertising in the programs ost of the larger theaters in Chicago, recently in Chicago. Bennigsen was ciated with the Claude W. Riley Ad- ising System.

EVI WILLIAM MYERS, 94, for 26 years isher of the Wapello (Ia.) Repub-, following the Civil war, died re- ly in Portland, Ore. He was a U. S. t in the Bering Sea controversy be- n this country and Great Britain and appointed consul to Victoria, B. C. resident Harrison.

URY IRWIN DASENT, former dramatic r of the New York Herald and a ew of the late Sir George Dasent of London Times, died recently in Los eles.

HOMAS TRACY, 66, connected with the neapolis office of the Western News- r Union for 40 years, died Dec. 13.

L. WITHEROW MCCLELLAN, 36, of editorial staff of the York (Pa.) atch, died Dec. 14, as the result of njury sustained when he fell on the t Hanover, Pa., last March.

B. CLAWSON, 78, treasurer of the ren (Pa.) Times, died at his home 14.

HOMAS B. DONNELLY, a veteran spaper man of Pittsburgh, died at his e there, Dec. 16, after a long illness.

J. R. PITTENGER, 49, a compositor for Des Moines (Ia.) Register and Trib- News for several years, died Dec. 6.

ENTON B. CLARK, 60, advertising man- of the Wichita (Kan.) Daily Stock- died suddenly Dec. 12. He formerly advertising manager of the Wichita y Beacon.

ASON J. ROCKWELL, 71, father of Guy ockwell, financial editor of the Cleve- Plain Dealer, died Dec. 10, at his e in Cleveland.

HN GEYE, 56, for many years linotype ator on the Independence (Kan.) Press and Reporter, died in a hos- in Topeka recently.

ILLIAM L. REID, 60, for the past six s editor and owner of the Fayette .) Advertiser, died recently follow- an illness extending over nearly six s.

RACE DOUGLAS JONES, 65, died in and, Cal., Dec. 5. Mr. Jones years was a reporter on the San Francisco nicle, later was connected with the ciated Press and was city editor of Portland (Ore.) Journal in 1903.

ISS CATHERINE FORSYTHE, sister of mas Forsythe, owner and publisher of Boston Post, died Dec. 5, in San o, Cal., after a three weeks' illness.

NEW NEW YORK DRAMA EDITOR

ard Kaufman Succeeds Miles on New York American rnard G. Kaufman is now editor in e of the dramatic page of the New American, succeeding Connie Miles, ned. He came to the New York paper from the now defunct Newark J.) Press, which he joined after y three years' service with the ester (N. Y.) Journal and Post- ess and the Rochester Sunday erican.

ior to his Rochester experience, Mr. man served on the staff of the New World, coming to this country from and, where, with the exception of the war period, when he was with the British army, he was associated at different times with the London Daily Mail and the London Times as special correspondent.

Rhode Island Circulator Dies

Luke A. Keenan, 52, assistant treasurer and circulation manager of the Providence (R. I.) News, died Dec. 14 of pneumonia. In addition to his newspaper work, he had served as Representative and Senator in the New York State Legislature, and was at one time Deputy Secretary of the State of New York.

William B. Walker

William B. Walker, 40, since 1910 a member of the New York office of the John Budd Company, newspaper representative, died in New Rochelle Dec. 13. He began his newspaper work in the business office of the Richmond Times-Dispatch at the age of 18.

RECEIVERSHIP ASKED

Lynn Wilson Says Bridgeport (Conn.) Times' Debts Exceed Assets

Lynn W. Wilson, editor of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Star, formerly editor of the Bridgeport Times, has applied for the appointment of a receiver for the Times Publishing Company, now under management of Kendall B. Cressey.

Judge John R. Booth, of the Fairchild County Common Pleas Court, has named Stiles Goodsell, local real estate man and director in several banks, and Don C. Seitz, of the New York World, to appraise the stock of the publishing company in which Wilson still owns 499 shares, two less than half the entire issue.

Wilson's application charges that debts of the Times exceed the assets.

Dublin Daily in Receivership

The Dublin (Ireland) Freeman's Journal is in financial difficulties, and is now in the hands of a receiver, acting for debenture holders. A Chicago Tribune dispatch dated Dec. 14 stated Republicans have been trying to purchase the newspaper for some time. The staff, according to the dispatch, is working on a week-to-week engagement. Dr. James McDonnell is managing director of the Freeman's Journal, which is 160 years old.

Kerr Named Receiver

United States Judge R. L. Williams, at Muskogee, Okla., has appointed Eugene M. Kerr, former owner of the Muskogee Times-Democrat, as receiver of the Okmulgee (Okla.) Daily Democrat.

Daily Buys Printing Firm

The Mankato (Minn.) Daily Free Press last week purchased the business of Walter S. Booth & Son, Minneapolis, one of the oldest manufacturers and printers of legal blanks and publications in Minneapolis.

Illinois Daily Increases Capital

The Mattoon Journal Company, publisher of the Mattoon (Ill.) Journal-Gazette, has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $150,000. H. F. Kendall is president of the company and E. B. Tucker, secretary.

A.A.C.W. Trophy Comes from London

The "News of the World Golf Trophy" won by Dr. A. R. Gardener, of the Waterbury Dental Company, New York, at the London convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, is due to arrive in this country from England on the Leviathan Dec. 20. It will be placed in the Advertising Club of New York until the Houston A. A. C. W. convention, when it will again be put in competition.

Money and Good Business Await You In

West Virginia

There is enough good business in West Virginia to make rich a good advertiser in its daily newspapers.

West Virginia is a hustling state, and the people of this state respond readily to the right merchandising appeal.

Of the 1,500,000 people in West Virginia, 89.9% were born in America ranking this state second compared with all the states in the Union.

West Virginia ranks first in the Union in percentage of farm lands free from mortgages. West Virginia farmers are 93.6% American born. This is the highest per cent of native-born farmers to be found anywhere.

West Virginia has money to spend, and National Advertisers should use extensively the dailies listed below to show these people how their dollars can bring the best results.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Bluefield
*Telegraph	(M)	11,605	.05
*Telegraph	(S)	15,752	.06
Charleston
*Gazette	(M)	19,619	.07
*Gazette	(S)	23,493	.08
Clarksburg
Telegram	(E)	9,479	.04
Telegram	(S)	11,797	.045
Huntington
Advertiser	(E)	11,170	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(M)	14,803	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(S)	14,482	.04
Martinsburg
*Journal	(E)	4,830	.03
Morgantown
†Post	(E)	5,005	.025
Parkersburg
*News	(M)	7,261	.025
*News	(S)	8,840	.025
*Sentinel	(E)	7,751	.03

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

OFFICIALS SATIRIZED AT GRIDIRON DINNER

Washington Newspaper Men's Annual Fun Fest Attended by President Coolidge and 400 Guests

President Coolidge was forced to laugh this week at the raillery offered Dec. 13 by the Washington newspaper men at the annual dinner of the Gridiron Club.

There were 400 persons at the dinner. The President, heading the array of guests, sat next to William W. Brigham of the Boston Transcript, club president.

An interlude was devoted to paying tribute to members of the club who have died since the last dinner—John H. Nolan, Frank G. Carpenter, world traveler, and David R. McKee, who was for many years the Washington agent of the New York Associated Press, and was one of the organizers of the Gridiron Club.

Members of the club performed a skit which served to initiate into membership James L. Wright of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, and Henry Suydam of the Brooklyn Eagle. They were presented to the company as the first fruits of a direct primary system in the election of club members, and this gave an opportunity of pointing out some of the results of that system in American politics.

"The Electoral College Glee Club," its members wearing mortarboard caps and gowns, produced an operetta, which furnished a vehicle to satirize the recent political campaign, with no favors shown as between the three parties. The words of the songs were all set to the music of old college glees.

NEW LOUISIANA DAILY

New Orleans Morning Tribune Started by Item Publisher

James M. Thomson, publisher of the New Orleans Item, evening daily, surprised his field this week, when he started publication of the New Orleans Tribune, a morning newspaper, Dec. 16.

The new daily is being issued from the Item plant and is at present under the same executive management. United Press night wire service is being used.

The Sunday edition will be a combination under the masthead Tribune-Item.

John Budd, Inc., who represents the Item, will also handle national advertising for the Tribune.

A. G. Newmyer is associate publisher with Thomson, and Marshall Ballard, editor.

TO INITIATE LAWSON

To Be Made Sigma Delta Chi Honorary Member in Chicago

Victor F. Lawson, publisher, Chicago Daily News, recently chosen as national honorary member of the Sigma Delta Chi, journalistic fraternity, will be initiated by members of the Northwestern Chapter at a luncheon to be held at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, Dec. 29.

Journalism teachers attending the national convention of the American Association of Schools of Journalism will attend the luncheon. The initiation will be incident to the meeting of the fraternity executive council.

WIRE NEWS
For Evening and Sunday Newspapers
International News Service
11 Spruce St., New York

BALTIMORE SUN TABLET FOR NEWSBOYS

A BRONZE tablet will be erected in the spring over the graves in Loudon Park Cemetery, Baltimore, of the five boys who lost their lives in the destruction of the steamer "Three Rivers" on the Chesapeake Bay last July. The boys were members of the Evening Sun Newsboys' Band and the tablet will be erected by the Evening Sun.

The tablet is by J. Maxwell Miller. It is four feet high and 27 inches wide and is set in a stone 7 feet high.

The band was returning from an outing when the steamer caught fire. Three hundred and fifty persons were rescued. There were many acts of heroism by members of the band.

Hearst Names New Rochester Chief

Charles F. McCahill has been appointed publisher of the Rochester (N. Y.) Journal and American. He was formerly associated with Veree & Conklin, Inc., publishers' representatives, New York.

Read EDITOR & PUBLISHER—$4 a year.

Independent
NEWS AND PHOTO SERVICE
General, Industrial, Technical News and Features
BY ASSIGNMENT
any news or feature story covered by assignment conventions, shows, expositions, etc.
NEW YORK SHIP NEWS AND PHOTOS
Inquiries Invited
HOLMES FEATURE SERVICE
1947 Broadway, New York
London Paris Berlin Munich
Los Angeles San Francisco Dallas

1925 will be a
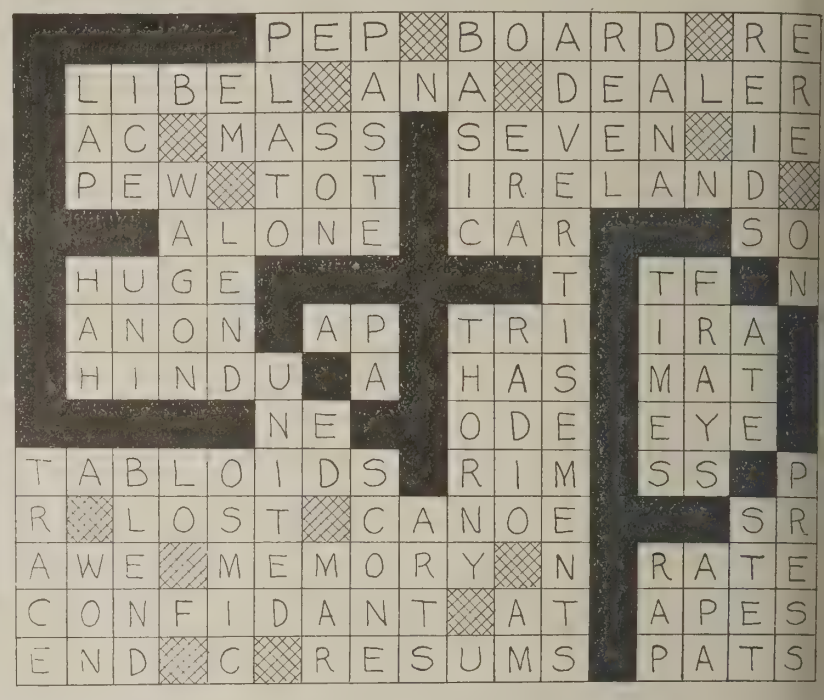
Prosperous Year



AN immediate gain of thousands of NEW prepaid subscribers is the best possible way to start the New Year. Our campaigns offer the one SURE way to obtain this circulation increase, as is proven by over twenty years of unquestioned supremacy and the number of leading metropolitan dailies who use and endorse our services.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

AFTER "THIRTY"

Solution of Newspaper Cross Word Puzzle Published Last Week

Compiled by WILLIAM KIDWELL HUTSON
Editor of the Advertising Club News, New York

National Commission to Meet in Detroit

An advertising exhibit and an important session for financial advertisers will be features of the program being prepared for the annual meeting of the National Advertising Commission to be held in Detroit, Jan. 29-30.

New York A. A. A. A. Council Meets

The New York Council of the American Association of Advertising Agencies held a joint dinner meeting with the Six Point League, newspaper publishers' representatives, Dec. 10. Robert H. Cornell, executive secretary, A. A. C. W., spoke

Our Features:

Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

500 words of weekly joy

As Dr. Traprock, he wrote that hilarious tale, "The Cruise of the Kawa," that brought instant fame.

As himself, he is now doing an equally amusing weekly series—

IN THE MIDDLE OF THINGS
By George S. Chappell

"Old Clothes," "The Woman's Vote," "Cross Words" are among the titles. Send for sample sheet.

Immediate Release

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New York City

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service
Woodward Bldg., Washington, D.C.

YOU MUST TELL THE BUSINESS MEN OF YOUR TOWN ABOUT

BUSINESS

If you don't it will
COST YOU MONEY

John T. Flynn's Daily Business Reviews deal with fundamental business conditions of vital interest to every business man. They are backed by the greatest business news collecting organization in America, The United Publishers Corporation, publishers of Iron Age, Dry Goods Economist and a score of other nationally known business publications.

Write for Particulars to
Edward F. Roberts, Editorial Director
U. P. C. NEWS SERVICE, INC
243 W. 39th St., New York City

J. S. SEEKING GREATER CONTROL OF RADIO

Department of Commerce Will Ask More Authority to Regulate from Next Congress—Want Amateur Encouraged

The Department of Commerce will gain seek at this "short session" f Congress to have greatly enlarged its uthority to regulate radio broadcasting. A fresh effort will be made to obtain ne enactment of the White bill which ould give the department that extended risdiction over radio transmission Sec- tary Hoover thinks it should have.

The department now possesses only a inimum of authority over the "air," al- ough it is pointed out in its annual re- ort just issued the cooperation of the adio industry has enabled it to supervise adio communication "under the existing w without hardship to anyone."

"The question of who will pay for roadcasting does not appear to require mmediate consideration," the report tates. "The public will probably con- nue liberally through cost of equipment urchased. At present there does not ppear to be a more equitable way of dis- ributing the cost, while on the other and, stations must have considerable ad- ertising value justifying the expense of peration where owners are not benefited hrough sales of radio products.

"It seems probable that broadcasting s permanently established as a public ecessity and may be considered as in- ispensable in the average home as the elephone. The broadcasting of the pro- eedings of the Republican and Demo- ratic conventions demonstrated its value n enabling the public to keep in imme- liate touch with important events of general interest."

Emphasis is also placed by the report pon the fact that amateur radio op- rators, in their search for new fields, ave succeeded in affecting transconti- ental communication and have even ound it possible to intercommunicate with European stations on short wave engths.

The report suggests further develop- nent in this direction may be expected, nd should be encouraged. It states on June 30, last, there were 15,545 licensed mateur stations as compared with 16,570 a year ago.

"The broadcast listener is an unknown quantity," the report continues. "De- pendable figures indicating the number of persons deriving pleasure and benefit from his new and fascinating service cannot be furnished. Its effect cannot be fore- cast, nor its value estimated. An accu- rate expression of its views is unobtain- able."

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

B. B. B. Booklet in Demand

To Editor & Publisher:

A number of important newspapers throughout the country have recently pub- lished a series of articles on "How to Invest Your Money," and have distrib- uted the Better Business Bureau's book- let on that subject. Among these news- papers has been the New York Evening Journal, the Minneapolis Journal, the Peoria (Ill.) Journal-Transcript, the Utica (N. Y.) Press, and others across the country.

The New York Evening Journal has been offering copies of this booklet to its readers through an announcement on its financial page, and through a run of paper display advertisement. They have already distributed over 1,000 copies of the book- let to readers, on one day having received 250 requests by mail.

I mention this as a matter of mutual interest for whatever possible news value it might have to your readers. We are quite ready to send our proof sheets of the series of articles to newspapers throughout the country, if they may re- quest them.

H. J. Kenner,
General Manager, Better Business Bu- reau of New York City.

E. & P. Progress

To Editor & Publisher: I doubt if any newspaper in this particular field in the United States has made more prog- ress than has the Editor & Publisher. I have known the paper since its birth. It is my hope that it will continue to grow even more than it has, but I am inclined to believe that it has its field so well filled there is little room for expan- sion.

Milton A. McRae,
San Diego, Cal.

"You Ought to Raise the Price"

To Editor & Publisher: Chet John- son's "In the Good Old Days" is the best thing I have read in a Blue Moon.

You ought to raise the price of Editor & Publisher.

Charles A. Fell,
Managing Editor, Birmingham (Ala.) News.

SUNDAY EDITIONS MERGED

Austin Statesman and American Combined Following Purchase

The Sunday issue of the Austin States- man has been discontinued and is now being run under the name of the Austin American-Statesman, following the re- cent purchase of the Statesman by the American, making both newspapers units in the Texas League, of which E. S. Fentress and C. E. Marsh are sole own- ers.

The League now has five newspaper properties in Texas as follows: the Waco News-Tribune, Austin American-States- man, Wichita Falls Record News, Port Arthur News, Orange Leader. All are represented in the national field by Knill- Burke, Inc.

New York Times Sued

Susan Laurence Davis, author, brought suit in United States District Court, New York, Dec. 12 against the New York Times, Adolph S. Ochs, publisher, and Louis Kantor, for $100,000 damages. Miss Davis alleges a story written for the Times by Mr. Kantor on "How Grant Broke the Old Ku Klux" was copied from her copyright book on the history of the Klan. She alleges she offered a similar story to the Times before Kan- tor's article appeared, but it was refused because it was too old.

Given 90 Days for Libel

John Morrison, editor and publisher of the Duluth (Minn.) Rip-Saw, was con- victed last week of criminal libel and sentenced by Judge Thomas Brady to serve 90 days on the county work farm. Morrison said he would appeal the case and was released on bond. He was charged with having written malicious articles about Victor L. Power, former mayor of Hibbing, Minn., and candidate for Congress at the last election.

Griffin Gives Luncheon to Governor

William Griffin, vice-president of the American Press Association, gave a luncheon recently to Governor Scott C. Bone, of Alaska, at the Advertising Club of New York. Guests included: Mel- ville Stone, counsellor of the Associated Press; Louis Wiley, New York Times; Frank Presbrey, Herbert Houston, Frank W. Harwood, William H. Rankin, Paul Block and Irvin Cobb.

News Pictures Displace Classified

The London Daily Express, acceding to the prevailing demand for pictures, on Dec. 1, replaced the classified and dis- play advertising on the back page with news pictures.

UNSURPASSED IN

Rail Transportation
Water Transportation
Farm Land Value
Crops
Grain Distribution
Food Manufacture
Cheap Coal
Abundant Raw Materials

ILLINOIS IS A MIGHTY GOOD TERRITORY TO CULTIVATE

One billion, two hundred million dollars' worth of meat products are produced annually in Illinois. This is big money, but it is only twenty per cent of the value of the manufactured products which take revenue into that State every year.

Illinois as the center of mighty rail- roads, vast grain and meat packing in- dustries, the dominating commercial core of the progressive West, with ves- sels and barges crowding its numerous waterways, offers unique opportuni- ties to the National Advertiser and Manufacturer.

To reach the buying millions of Illinois with certainty, Illinois News- papers are absolutely necessary. The advertiser using these Illinois News- papers gets the first chance to make sales.

		Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
*Aurora Beacon-News	(E)	17,408	.06	.06
*Chicago Herald & Examiner	(M)	348,005	.55	.55
*Chicago Herald & Examiner	(S)	1,018,917	1.10	1.10
Chicago Daily Journal	(E)	120,449	.26	.24
*La Salle Tribune	(E)	3,230	.025	.025
*Moline Dispatch	(E)	10,680	.045	.045
*Peoria Star—(E) 29,197	(S)	22,236	.075	.06
*Rock Island Argus	(E)	10,605	.045	.045
*Sterling Gazette	(E)	5,734	.04	.04

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

GOMPERS DEATH TOLD BY TEXAS REPORTERS

Small Group Present at Last Illness of Great Labor Leader—Mexico City Death Rumor Explained

Responsibility of telling the world about the death of Samuel Gompers fell upon a mere handful of newspaper men. Death stole upon the internationally prominent labor leader almost before the press generally had definite information that it was near. The big story, therefore, was covered by men resident in San Antonio except three or four rushed in from nearby cities.

Reporters who covered the story had a gruelling night watch. Mr. Gompers, arriving from the Mexican border about 5 o'clock Friday afternoon, was reported to have been greatly improved, but several newspaper men, believing the veteran labor leader's condition more critical than indicated by public announcements decided to remain all night at the St. Anthony hotel, where Mr. Gompers died.

At 3 o'clock in the morning came word that the end was near. When the official announcement of the great labor leader's death was made at 4:05 A. M., C. L. Barnard of the San Antonio Evening News filed overhead bulletins to the New York World and New York Herald Tribune, which he was protecting; and Bob Bennett, San Antonio correspondent of International News Service, filed the news overhead to Universal Service.

The Associated Press was the only news service which was holding a press wire open. W. C. Grant of the Austin bureau and H. M. Sheppard, staff man and mail editor from Houston handled the A. P. Story.

J. C. Oslin, United Press correspondent at San Antonio, had a complete story ready when the U. P. wire opened at 7 a. m. S. A. Barker, of the Austin U. P. bureau, came down during the day.

The Evening News was the only San Antonio paper to issue an extra on Gompers' death. It was on the street shortly before 7 o'clock, prepared under the direction of A. W. Walliser, managing editor, and O. W. Burge, assistant city editor.

Chester M. Wright, press representative of the American Federation of Labor, assisted the newspaper men. Incidentally Wright said Mexico City correspondents were not to be blamed for the erroneous report that Gompers had died on Thursday, while between Mexico City and the border. The report did not originate on Gompers' train, but was telegraphed to Gen. A. R. Gomez, chief of military operations for a northern section of Mexico, by an unknown person, thought to be a railroad employee, from San Nicolas, Mexico.

"Either a mistake in translation or a misunderstanding caused the mixup," said Wright.

PARIS CORRESPONDENTS ELECT

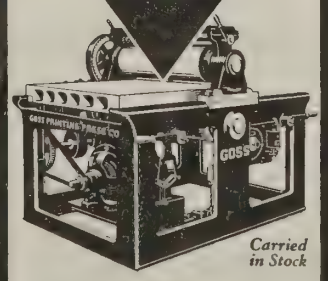
H. W. Smith, London Daily News, Succeeds P. S. Mowrer as President

The Anglo-American Press Association of Paris held its annual general meeting at the Hotel St. Petersbourg, Paris, Wednesday, Dec. 3. President Paul Scott Mowrer, being absent in Egypt, Wilbur S. Forrest, vice-president, took the chair. Guy C. Hickok, the secretary, reported that during 1924 22 active and eight associate members had been admitted to the association.

H. W. Smith, London Daily News, was elected president. Wilbur S. Forrest, New York Herald Tribune, was elected first vice-president, and George E. Slocombe, London Daily Herald, second vice-president. Last year's secretary, Guy C. Hickok, and treasurer, J. D'Arcy Morell, were re-elected.

The four American members of the committee elected were Frank E. Mason, International News Service; William Bird, Consolidated Press Association; Arno Dosch-Fleurot, New York World, and Laurence Hills, European edition, New York Herald Tribune. The English members of the committee for 1925 are Percy Philip, Birmingham Daily Post; Hubert Walter, London Times; Roland Atkinson, London Westminster Gazette, and André Glarner, London Exchange Telegraph.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING



For Sale.
We wish to dispose of Stereotype Equipment purchased from R. Hoe & Co., and never used by us, consisting of: 1 Hoe No. 5 Single Platen Bob-tail, hand power Steam Drying Table, with apron, size 60 in. by 33 in.; 1 No. 3 size flat casting Mould No. 924, complete; 1 gas heated Melting Pot, Ladle and Skimmer. We are giving up this part of our Printing Plant. C. Berthel & Co., Manufacturing Chemists, 142 Lincoln Ave., Bronx, New York City.

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY

Carried in Stock

Some outstanding and exclusive features of The Goss Combination Wet and Dry Matrix Roller: Patented stretching roller produces dry mats without a wrinkle. Both ends of cylinder are set at same time. Heavy cast-iron cylinders with forged steel shafts. Extra heavy bed—no racks—large enough to run chase with columns crosswise. Rolls wet mats in 11¼ seconds; dry mats in 22½ seconds. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

Used Newspaper Presses

Scott Quadruple Press Four Deck Two Pages Wide prints 4 to 34 pages.

Hoe Right Angle Quadruple Press, prints 4 to 32 pages.

Hoe Sextuple Press, prints 4 to 24 pages.

These three presses cut off pages 22¾ inches long, print 7 or 8 columns to the page.

PRESSES AVAILABLE FOR EARLY DELIVERY

Walter Scott & Co.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY
441 Monadnock Block, CHICAGO — 1457 Broadway, NEW YORK

MODERNIZE
your COMPOSING ROOM
with
HAMILTON EQUIPMENT
Made in both wood and steel.
Manufactured by
The Hamilton Mfg. Co.
Two Rivers, Wis.
For sale by all prominent Type Founders and Dealers everywhere.

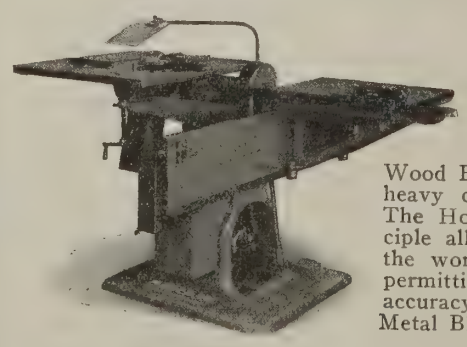
For Sale.
New 8 Ton Metal Furnace complete. Two used Junior Autoplates and Autoshaver for 14½" cylinders. Newspaper presses of all sizes and a general line of stereotype machinery. Griffiths Publishers Exchange, 154 Nassau Street, New York.

A Rare Bargain.
Rotary Gravure printing equipment for producing full newspaper pages or tabloid papers, or commercial work. Product delivered either flat or folded. For sale at an extremely low price for quick action. Wire for details of our No. 599. Baker Sales Company, 200 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT
SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis, Minn.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.



Presses and Equipment for Sale.
Hoe Octuple Press, X Pattern design, 22¾" Cut-Off. Hoe Plate Finisher included. Early delivery. Complete newspaper plant with 20 page Goss Press. Several other desirable presses of various sizes. A big list of stereo and composing room equipment. Let us know your needs. Griffiths Publishers Exchange, 154 Nassau Street, New York.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.
USED BY THE Middletown Journal
Middletown, Ohio
We refer you to them for their opinion

CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO. CHICAGO — QUALITY, NAME, SERVICE, FAME — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

MAIN OFFICE, Fisher Building, 343 S. Dearborn St., CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE, Marbridge Building, Broadway at 34th St., NEW YORK

Hoe Combined Saw Table and Mono-Rail Trimmer

This Machine combines the advantages of the Hoe Pedestal Saw Table and the Hoe Mono-rail Trimmer. The Trimmer is supplied with either Style "A" Cutter Head for trimming Wood Blocks or Style "B" for extra heavy cutting on Zinc or Copper. The Hoe Patented Mono-Rail principle allows the Operator to follow the work beyond the Cutter Head permitting more speed and greater accuracy in trimming Wood or Metal Blocks of varied sizes.

IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST

R. HOE & CO., INC., 504 Grand Street, New York City
7 So. Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL. — 7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

C per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other sification.

C per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

ertising Man.
ng man, 25, wants to learn advertising on th Carolina or Virginia daily. Good edu-on; no bad habits. Please state require-ts first letter. Box 412, Raleigh, N. C.

ertising Manager.
st class, for paper having or desiring fixed e and space contracts. Available after uary first, on reasonable notice. Box C-527, tor & Publisher.

ertising Manager.
able salesman; first-class copy writer and out man; seeks affiliation with progressive lication about January 15th. Energetic, able man, protestant, married, permanently loyed; excellent record; valuable news-er experience. Box C-535, Editor & Pub-ler.

ertising Manager.
eleven years' successful experience on ling dailies, desires a permanent connection an advertising or business executive. I am nan with broad vision and high standards, ability to produce and hold the confidence both publisher and public. Age 32, married. lege education. Address Box C-559, Editor Publisher.

Advertising Salesman.
ng man of practical newspaper advertising smanship on metropolitan paper desires to ate as manager or assistant in a city of ,000 or more. First class references. Ad-ss Box C-557, care of Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor
nts work. Scotsman, 20 years' successful erience American and foreign newspapers, de journals and agencies. Expert copywriter, ckerjack promoter, big producer. Commis-, with drawing account. C-554, Editor & blisher.

Circulation Manager.
ening paper in town under 200,000 have been ined under best circulation system in coun-. Now employed on large paper; reference m present and past employers; good reason changing. If you are in need of a hard rker, with good sound judgment, answer this Box C-551, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager or Assistant.
ve had ten years' experience as Assistant culation Manager on large daily and Sunday wspaper. Age 34. Employed. Wish to be-ne connected with progressive newspaper on ary or salary and bonus basis. Please ad-ss Box C-561, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
teen years' experience as Circulation Mana-r morning, evening and Sunday papers. An to date knowledge of various building thods, A. B. C. records, etc. Capable of ndling any size paper and showing satisfac-ry results. Prefer city between one and two ndred thousand population. A-1 references. dress C-568, Editor & Publisher.

Avoid Errors

Write your EDITOR & PUBLISHER classified ads as neatly as possible, spell out all words and start your ad with the kind of position you desire, the position you have open or the article you have for sale,

and

Get Quick Results

by telling ALL THE FACTS in your ad. It will save much unnecessary letter-writing.

Situations Wanted

Circulation Manager.
Able executive, who has proven ability and long practical experience, available January 1st. C-562, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Consistent hard work builds bonified, increased circulation. I will give this to some News Publisher who needs my services and wants action. C-564, Editor & Publisher.

Composing Room or Plant Superintendent.
Knows methods and men. Old enough to have ripe experience. Young enough to devote energy to place. Mentality enough to study the job and produce at a figure compatible with service demanded. Knows systematization and standardization, and where to apply for best results. Address C-531, care Editor & Publisher.

Display Advertising Solicitor.
Age 30, who has shown excellent results and can show proof of producing ability—now employed on combination daily as assistant advertising manager—seeks similar connection in Florida, on account of wife's health. Will consider salary or commission contract. C-563, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial.
Telegraph or news editor, copyreader, ten years' experience, including largest dailies, university graduate, desires position. C-556, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer.
Experienced newspaper man, good editorial writer, open for engagement. C-566, Editor & Publisher.

Feature Writer.
With all-round newspaper training desires connection. Background includes three years on The Springfield (Mass.) Republican. University trained and World war veteran. References and examples of work on request. Address Box B-986, care Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor.
An aggressive, reliable and thoroughly qualified newspaper man, now holding executive position on big city daily, seeks change. Am married man; 33; know every angle from A to Z; will be glad to submit full details and references; record will stand acid test. Address C-558, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent.
Mr. Publisher, let me relieve you of your composing room and mechanical department troubes. Sixteen years' experience as an executive, and know all departments. Can handle men and get results. Prefer snappy afternoon daily with several editions. References furnished. C. G. Manuel, 1615 College avenue, Fort Worth, Texas.

Newspaper Artist.
Tired of big city, desires change to smaller place, experienced in all art, including cartoons. C-542, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Woman
Graduating from Walter Williams' School of Journalism next month, wants opening. Have held responsible positions. Under thirty. Doris Crump, Columbia, Mo.

Reporter.
Young man of some writing experience desires to learn newspaper work thoroughly. Willing to make a modest start if position promises opportunity for all-round newspaper work. P. O. Box 403, Grand Central Station, New York City.

To Newspaper Owners:
A man with a record of newspaper publishing success in cities of the types of Pittsburgh and Milwaukee wants an arrangement as publisher without much salary but with assurance of a substantial part of the increased profits resulting from his efforts. Prefers paper not now in first place. C-567, Editor & Publisher.

Young Newspaperman.
Experienced editor, deskman and reporter, capable as news editor of paper up to 10,000 circulation, or would like subordinate place with larger paper. Steady and aggressive. Address Box C-560, Editor & Publisher.

North Carolina Papers Merged

A. C. Huneycutt, publisher of Albemarle (N. C.) Stanley News-Herald, and owner of a chain of weekly and semi-weekly newspapers in Piedmont, North Carolina Counties, has purchased his rival the Albermarle Stanley Republican.

HELP WANTED

Advertising Solicitor.
Protestant Monthly. Liberal commission. Real opportunity for producers. State age, qualifications and references. Address P. O. Drawer D, Chicago.

Circulation Managers.
Two ambitious circulation managers, must be over 30 years of age, with experience in hiring and training canvassers. Further expansion of large circulation organization opens two desirable positions with earning possibilities ranging from $2,600 to $5,000 per year. Answer with full particulars regarding last ten years' experience and references as to personal habits and character. Ernest A. Scholz, Circulation Director, Butterick Publishing Company, Butterick Building, New York.

Classified Manager.
A morning and Sunday newspaper published in a city exceeding 100,000 located in the central South. Applicant must have had several years experience, must be a thoroughly competent executive, able to organize and run his department. Best opportunity in the country. Give references and experience, salary wanted, and such information as will prove valuable to the employer. Address Box C-555, care Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
An opening on a New England Newspaper, for a desk man who can edit and head copy. Must have breadth of view, ambition, originality and be accurate in handling details. Give full details and salary expected. An interesting position in an interesting city. Box C-549, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Newspaper and advertising men to learn the value of classified advertising. If you want a position, want to fill a vacancy on your staff, want to sell your used machinery or want to buy or sell newspaper property, make your wants known through the classified route. Put all the facts in a classified ad and mail to the Classified Department of Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

For Sale.
If you are a newspaper man and want to develop a splendid little newspaper which is now making some money, here is an opportunity. Only daily in Massachusetts town of 16,000. Owner of controlling interest must sell; $15,000 cash required. C-524, Editor & Publisher.

For Sale.
Half or whole interest, Western Daily Newspaper. Good money maker. Publisher has other interests that demand his attention. Address Box C-565, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Party would like to buy interest in New England daily, could take position as assistant business manager or mechanical superintendent, has had the experience and can handle help; also can travel and solicit ads; paper must be making expenses. C-553, Editor & Publisher.

PORT JERVIS DAILIES MERGED

Evening Gazette Purchased and Combined With the Union

The Port Jervis (N. Y.) Evening Gazette on Friday, Dec. 12 was purchased and merged with the Port Jervis Union, the consolidation to be known as the Port Jervis Union-Gazette.

Daniel F. Cock, publisher and owner of the Gazette, plans to leave Port Jervis to make business connections elsewhere.

In a first page box announcing the consolidation, F. R. Salmon, publisher of the Union, stated that combinations of daily papers in smaller cities had come to be an established fact, and that "the Union and Gazette merger was merely following the trend of the times."

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

FOR $12,500 CASH, balance deferred, you can buy a small city afternoon newspaper, now breaking even, inventory $28,000, annual business $35,000. Sale price is $25,000. Owner is engaged in other business which demands his entire time. Mention our No 319.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L. BL'D'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

ASTOR CALLS TRUTH NEWSPAPER IDEAL

Owner of London Times Discusses Modern Journalism—Says Reporters Need Expert Knowledge as Well as Facile Pens

The newspaper "steered by the compass of truth and not by the weathercock of public favor" can do a great deal to elevate a nation's taste, to sharpen its conscience, and to help form sound political judgment, Major John Jacob Astor, owner of the London Times declared in an address on "Modern Journalism," delivered at the American Women's Club in London Dec. 3.

Such a newspaper, he added, should have writers who had not only facile pens but character and expert knowledge.

Major Astor said a newspaper should give the newest and truest news and present it in the most attractive way. Great newspapers all went a step further. Having given the news they gave their own views and opinions on it, and the test of this side was not whether one agreed or not with the newspaper, but whether, as an ordinary fair-minded individual, one was prepared to admit that it held its opinions honestly and presented them with sound argument and good sense.

There was temptation to keep up a high note of excitement at all times of the year, sometimes when there was no news. To try to keep up a daily splash at such times was to sacrifice the benefit which a newspaper could confer, that of showing the relative importance of the pieces of news it had to give. "Stunting" might tickle the palate, but in the long run it killed the appetite and undermined the sense of proportion.

Radio News Travels Far

The Johannesburg (Transvaal) Star was able to publish a half column descriptive report of the banquet to Owen D. Young in New York, Dec. 11, when speeches radiocast from the Waldorf Astoria were picked up by a station at Hendrina and telephoned to the newspaper office. The distance between New York and Hendina is about 8,000 miles.

To Cover Yale Bowl Press Section

Yale University has announced that next year when the football season opens the press section of the Bowl will have a wooden cover. In the recent Yale-Harvard contest newspaper men worked in the drenching rain.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

IF second class postage means anything in your life, this is the time to act. Take the long view and the big view this week by writing letters to your representatives in Congress!

THE holidays are a sport season in themselves. Go after the sporting good stores and hardware stores in your city and get them to advertise sleds, skates, hockey clubs, snow shoes, guns, traps, and all of the gloves, sweaters, boots and clothes that go to make up sporty costumes. Here is some advertising that is timely and profitable.—R. John Gibler, St. Louis, Mo.

Make arrangements with the building managers of all office buildings and secure a list of the tenants taking offices in these buildings the first of each month. Many display and classified advertising prospects will be secured this way, and you will be able to get to them before your competitor knows of their existence. —J. B., Binghamton, N. Y.

The Waupun (Wis.) Leader recently ran 3-column advertisement, 9 inches deep placed by the local chief of police giving safety rules to pedestrians and automobile drivers. Could your local police chief be sold space on this idea?—W. L. B.

Who's Who and What's What at Your Home Movie is a new feature of the Boston Post, which devotes space daily to reviews of the programs given at the various suburban theatres. A series of suburban theatre advertisements run in connection to a column devoted to news of these theatres would prove a source of increased advertising as well as a means to increase the circulation of a metropolitan paper in the suburbs.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston, Mass.

The Monterey (Cal.) Peninsula Daily Herald made an interesting news feature and secured a page of advertising for once a week for a year by making up a page composed only of the best art and gift shops and tea room advertising.

Advertisements are run down each side of the page with space in the center for a story each week of one old building, interesting traditions, or institutions. The first story, for example, was about the old Custom House, where the American flag was first raised in California.

Another interesting feature of the page is that the contract requires that the advertising copy shall be changed each week. This brings better results for the advertiser, makes the page cleaner, and makes the reader really read the advertising.—A. B. Fenger.

Glance around your city and think of some wide awake merchant who is a good advertiser and has a store that will stand for twice as big a contract as he now has. We did this in a city of 5,037 and after this merchant tried it for six months he was convinced that it was by far the best advertising he had ever done. This is his contract. Fifteen inches every day on the back page of our daily. Thirty inches additional of Friday. In his Fifteen inch ad he has a special that is a real-for-sure-enough-bargain displayed very attractively on a certain table in his store. He uses the top part of this ad to tell of the many other articles that can be found in his store. The special is in a box and is set in black face type with big figures. His Thirty inch ad is usually larger because he has much to say along other lines. Has he found it paid? Most certainly yes. It not only sells the special article but other merchandise as well as he has clerks that need only to get people in to sell them. It has not only made this particular merchant a larger advertiser but we have two new contracts for every day advertising. And our women readers say it is the best thing we have in the paper. It will work for any merchant providing he will give them REAL specials and not fool them on some.—R. K. Kerr.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

FAKE claims for damages alleged to have been sustained in train wrecks or trolley accidents are a big source of expense and trouble for railroads and public utility companies. The tricks fakers resort to and the means used by the companies to detect fraudulent claims can be made interesting reading for a special Sunday article. Railroad claim agents have a vast fund of stories of persons who claim they were injured in wrecks. An article of this kind will prove to be well received by the utilities.—A. C. Regli, Eau Claire, Wis.

A "Calendar Story" always goes well about the first of the year. For example, how many "Fridays the Thirteenth" are there on the books for the 12 months? How do the holidays fall; will there be many opportunities for getting away for the week-ends? When does Lent start; when comes Easter? School vacations, etc. It's the sort of an article which will be "clipped for reference."—R. M. Campbell, Framingham, Mass.

Under the heading, "Uncle Sam in Wichita," the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon is publishing short sketches of each of the federal employes in Wichita, with photos. One sketch of 200 to 300 words is printed daily. This includes the postmaster, collector of internal revenue, U. S. Marshal and the heads of departments.—R. H. Richards, Wichita.

The Boston Herald of last Sunday featured a half-page description of its "morgue" as a memory storehouse, describing in detail the important place this branch holds in the news office. A story of this nature always appeals to the public, and other papers might do well to give it to its public a story of this nature, including many interesting and amusing facts that always can be found in this graveyard of the newspaper office.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston, Mass.

The Sacramento (Cal.) Bee has initiated a new human interest series in the form of daily interviews with prominent men of the city on the subject of "If I Were a Boy Again," in which the interviewed tell what would be their choice of a life work if they had the choosing again, what education they think necessary and similar thoughts. A cartoon heading is used and half-column cuts of the subjects lighten the matter. Three hundred words is the limit of space.—M. H. Stewart.

One newspaper has already started or will in a few days, a short column headed "To-day's 'Hat and Pipe' News," in which little squibs will be written from day to day on well known men about town who are addicted to the Chas. Bryan type of wide-brim, or the upside-down type of pipe peculiar to Gen Dawes. A little humorous illustration each day would help a lot, and this feature will inject a little human interest into a campaign taken sometimes too seriously.—Enu Ghbert, Chicago.

In any fair or active large city a good story might be produced by inquiring into the percentage of population that is always moving, or finding out from the Post Office how many changes of addresses occur, and what percentage this bears to the population. Moving demonstrates a healthy activity as opposed to stagnation, and a desire for constant improvement, and both news and editorial material may be secured.—C. M. Littlejohn, Washington, D. C.

Get the very best
DAILY CROSS-WORD PUZZLE
Not just a feature—
Not just a problem—
But the best seller on the market
TODAY!
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
241 West 58th Street
New York City

METROPOLITAN WEEKLY SHORT FICTION SERVICE Used AND Praised in NEW YORK — KANSAS CITY
BUFFALO — OMAHA
DETROIT — LOS ANGELES
CHICAGO — SAN ANTONIO
MILWAUKEE — ATLANTA
ST. PAUL — WASHINGTON
ST. LOUIS — PHILADELPHIA
BOSTON
and elsewhere
Why? Send for Samples!
METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Gen'l Mgr.,
150 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

Thomas W. Briggs Company
Memphis, - Tenn.
Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page
Look us up in Dun or Bradstreet's

Give your Radio Readers "Listening in on the United States" by Robert D. Heinl Washington D.C.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFFICE

BY UNITED PRESS
AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK
UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service
Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.
4 page ready-print color comics.
Magazine Feature Pages.
Write for samples and rates
NEA SERVICE INC.
1200 W. 3RD STREET,
CLEVELAND, OHIO

Review of the Year
A One-Page History of the Leading Events of 1924
Domestic and Foreign
The Review is Used Yearly by Nearly One Hundred Papers
Released December 28
Wire Now.
THE McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE
373 Fourth Ave., New York City

THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK NUMBER will be published

JANUARY 31

Don't miss this unequaled opportunity of telling the Advertising Agents of the high qualities of your newspaper as an advertising medium.

Your message will be on the Space Buyers' desks throughout 1925.

LIBRARY
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

RESERVE SPACE IN THIS VALUABLE BOOK NOW

Advertising forms close January 20

THE DOMINANT NEWSPAPER
In Houston

THE Houston Chronicle long has dominated its big field in Southern Texas through a well-rounded, progressive newspaper, appealing to all classes of readers and particularly to the more substantial elements. Throughout Houston's remarkable development, The Chronicle has been a step ahead in the forward movement.

Marcellus E. Foster, president of The Chronicle, writes:

"We have been using the Consolidated Press Association's leased wire service for three years. Your market reports and the wire dispatches on general business and finance have been of great advantage to us. We have far better market reports in our afternoon paper than the morning paper is able to give its readers fifteen hours later. The David Lawrence dispatches and Bob Small special features have attracted a great deal of attention and we consider them very valuable features.

"Taken as a whole we are thoroughly satisfied with your service, and wish to congratulate you and your entire management."

In Houston, as in most of the other important cities all over the country, the Consolidated Press service is in the distinctive, leading newspaper.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York	Chicago	San Francisco	Paris
Eighth Floor	Fourth Floor	Third Floor	Fourth Floor
World Building	Daily News Building	Spreckels Building	19 Rue d'Antin

THIS ISSUE:—FULL TEXT AGENCY COMMISSION COMPLAINT.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1924

SUITE 1117 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Offie at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879
Issued Every Saturday

Vol. 57. No. 32 NEW YORK, JANUARY 3, 1925 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

It isn't advertising until it's delivered to the LIKE Chinese prayer papers scattered from the joss house roof to be borne by the winds to possible gods . . . . advertisements multiply on multiplying pages beyond the limits of the reader's time, patience and interest. . . . In all this flood of print that descends on New York there is one focal spot where eyes stop and linger, where interest awaits every new message. On this limited field of vision your advertising still has its golden opportunity to come before the eyes of the largest daily circulation in America. . . . This cynosure? . . . The small page of the tabloid New York News!

THE NEWS makes it possible to bring your message to the attention of the largest daily circulation in America with smaller copy, less expense! Compare the Chesterfield advertisement.

The tabloid News

Had 32 pages,
Carried 14,444 lines of advertising, and
Had 832,231 circulation.

The Advertisement

Was 672 agate lines (half the size of the same copy in the standard size paper), and Cost $0.82 per line (on a 20,000 line contract), or $551.04—
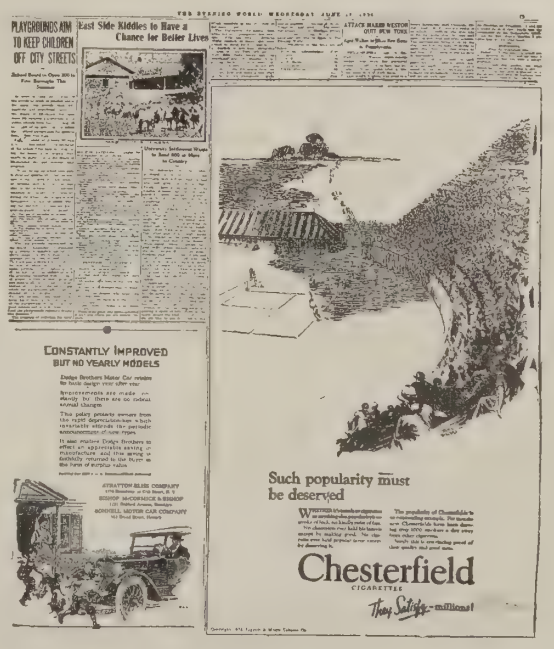
Or $0.00099 per line per thousand circulation.
It filled 67%, or more than two-thirds of the page space, and was a larger advertisement on the tabloid page.
It was 4.7%, or about one-twentieth of the total advertising in this issue, and received one-twentieth of the attention of all the readers.
It cost a trifle more than two-thirds of the standard size paper cost.



The larger paper

Had 28 pages,
Carried 27,476 lines of advertising, and
Had approximately 270,962 circulation.

The Advertisement

Was 1,375 agate lines, and
Cost $0.57 per line (25,000 line rate), or $783.75—
Or $0.0021 per line per thousand circulation.
It was 61%, or two-thirds, of the page space and received two-thirds of the attention on that page.
It was also 5%, or one-twentieth, of all the advertising carried in this issue, and received one-twentieth of the reader's attention.

THE SAME COPY was more effective, with half the space in The News, and it cost less!

THE NEWS

New York's Picture Newspaper

25 Park Place, New York 7 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Where Every Man, his Wife and Children READ Daily Newspapers!

IOWA where there are approximately 550,000 families in the state and where the total circulation of the 31 leading daily newspapers is over 580,380.

A bell rings, the great monster-presses begin to work, men settle down to their tasks, great, white rolls change to ribbons, turn gray, meet, are sucked down and come out below as folded newspapers. Thrown into trucks they are rushed off to meet that demand of the public that says:—"What's happening?" and "Where can I buy what I want?"

Another day's news is born and with it goes the sales message of hundreds of successful and progressive manufacturers, wholesalers and dealers.

In IOWA no resistance is felt by a difference of race, class, creed, color, age or sex. EVERYBODY reads an Iowa Daily Newspaper.

Your sales message in the Iowa Dailies will reach the well-to-do Man, the Man in modest circumstances, Butcher, Baker, Doctor, Lawyer, their wives and children. But, the average IOWA Man is better off than the average U. S. Man because Iowa's per capita wealth is $3,539.00. Iowa leads all other states in low percentage of illiteracy. Iowa also leads all other states in the following: Value of Corn, Oats, Horses, Hogs, Poultry and Eggs; value of Farm Lands and Buildings; total value of Farm Products; combined value of Live Stock; total value of Farm Property; percentage of Farm Land Improved; number of Automobiles on farms and Farms equipped with telephone.

Such a tremendously rich and intelligent market can be thoroughly covered with the combined newspaper circulation of 580,380 at a total cost of only $1.82 per agate line.

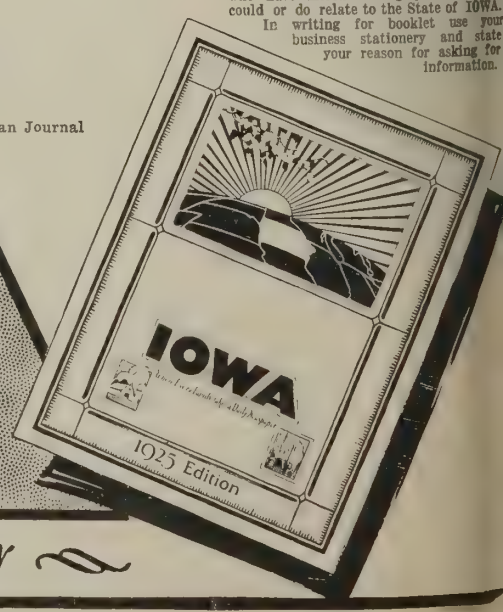
57% A CITY and TOWN STATE

57% of Iowa's population live in cities and towns. The other 43% who live on farms are closer to their nearest store by auto than most large city residents are to their business section.

No Iowan lives more than 20 minutes by auto from his nearest store. Rural IOWA is Suburban and should be considered as such in any sales plan.

THE IOWA DAILY PRESS ASSOCIATION

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA



Ames Tribune
Atlantic News Telegraph
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat
Davenport Times
Des Moines Capital
Des Moines Register and Tribune-News
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Dubuque Times-Journal
Ft. Dodge Messenger & Chronicle
Ft. Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press Citizen
Keokuk Gate City
Marshalltown Times-Republican
Mason City Globe Gazette & Times
Muscatine Journal & News-Tribune
Newton News
Oelwein Register
Oskaloosa Herald
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Courier
Waterloo Tribune
Webster City Freeman Journal

Total Circulation 580,380. Total Rate $1.82

Send for New IOWA BOOK

The new 1925 IOWA book is just off the press and contains the latest and most accurate information relative to the rich Iowa market, its distributing facilities, etc. These books are sent FREE to representatives of business firms (only) who have merchandising problems that could or do relate to the State of IOWA.

In writing for booklet use your business stationery and state your reason for asking for information.

IOWA

Where Every Family Takes a Daily Newspaper

The Milk, The Mail And The Sunpapers—

all three are pretty certain to be waiting at the door by the time a Baltimore family has rubbed the sleep from its eyes and begun to think of breakfast.

¶ Sometimes the letter carrier skips the house because he has nothing to deliver—but never a day passes by without the Sun carrier making his stop.

¶ He has a real and a welcome message to deliver to Baltimore homes every day.

¶ Neither the milkman nor the postman is more faithful to his trust than the carrier who sees the sun rise and set winter and summer while he sees that the Sunpapers are safely delivered at his customers' doors.

¶ The Sunpapers—morning, evening and Sunday—go straight into the home—are read in the home and read thoroughly by every member of the family.

¶ To the editorial staff goes the credit of making the Sunpapers so readable—and to the Sun carrier staff belongs the credit of putting the Sunpapers where they are sure to be read.

December Average Net Paid Circulation

Daily (M. & E.) . . 244,453

Sunday 180,634

A Gain of 5,776 Daily and 5,051 Sunday over December, 1923

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"; They Say "SUNpaper"

54 Million Ice Cream Cones is a Tiny Item in the "Big Fellow's" Purchases

The Bulletin Building houses the largest newspaper printing plant in the world. Tip of flagstaff on dome is 250 feet above street level.

Philadelphia's "Big Fellow" pays the Cone manufacturers over $100,000 per annum—and this figure doesn't account for the ice cream that goes inside the cones.

The Bulletin goes into practically all of the 400,000 separate homes of the city and 100,000 more outside the city limits.

Philadelphia is a huge market of nearly three million people—third largest in America—instantly available through one newspaper, at one cost.

With over half a million copies daily, The Bulletin naturally dominates Philadelphia—there can be no substitute for circulation. The circulation of the Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in America.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

516,609

Average Daily Net Circulation for Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924

Copyright, 1924, Bulletin Company.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by
The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 NEW YORK, JANUARY 3, 1925 No. 32

Brooklyn Eagle's Writer Firmly Contests White House Interview Denial

Henry Suydam Protests Against Disavowal of Rebuke Given Ambassador Jusserand 40 Hours After It Was Issued—Denial Believed Inspired By State Department

ARE "anonymous high official authorities" in Washington today like medieval kings—incapable of wrong?

Must the Washington correspondents and the newspapers they represent continually bear the brunt of official missteps and misstatements?

Leaders of the reporters' corps are asking these questions this week, following a recent occasion when President Coolidge in one White House conference plainly rebuked Ambassador Jusserand of France, and then 40 hours later officially disclaimed his action.

J. Fred Essary, Baltimore Evening Sun; Robert Barry, Philadelphia Public Ledger, and Richard V. Oulahan, New York Times, all wrote stories on the White House reproof of the French Ambassador.

Barry's story in the Public Ledger Dec. 23 bore the headline "Jusserand Plea Brings Reproof from Coolidge" and contained this opening paragraph:

"The effort of Ambassador Jusserand to create a favorable public sentiment for special concessions to France in funding her war debts to the United States provoked an expression of displeasure at the White House today.

"President Coolidge, through a White House spokesman, let it be known the Administration thought Ambassador Jusserand ought to submit French proposals to the World War Debt Commission rather than to the public."

The statement issued 40 hours later follows:

"It was said at the White House today that it was well understood that Ambassador Jusserand had made known his views to Secretary Mellon as to the French debt some time ago, and that this was communicated to the Commission. Nothing to the contrary has been given out at the White House. The comment of yesterday was simply a refusal to discuss in any way a recent address by the Ambassador."

Henry Suydam, Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle, on Dec. 27 turned rebel to established custom, and, in a dispatch to his newspaper resented this state of affairs, courageously and publicly questioning the right of President Coolidge to refuse to assume responsibility for a statement he later disavowed.

Harris M. Crist, the Eagle's managing editor, himself a former Washington newspaper man of 20 years' experience, solidly backed Mr. Suydam.

Mr. Crist gave the story page one position and commended him highly for his courage.

When questioned by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Mr. Crist voiced the opinion that the capital corps too frequently took unmerited punishment silently, suggesting that the Jusserand rebuke and denial offered excellent opportunity for frank discussion of the system, which would allow such a situation to arise, with the full burden of blame placed on newspaper shoulders.

Henry Suydam of the Brooklyn Eagle.

The Suydam story as printed in the Eagle follows in full:

"WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Newspapermen in Washington are disturbed over an incident at the White House, as a result of which it is made to appear President Coolidge's views have been misrepresented to the country. The question whether high officials should not be made to assume responsibility for their own statements is perennially vexing to the corps of Washington correspondents, but this particular incident has revived the whole subject in rather acute form.

"On Monday last Ambassador Jusserand of France went before a women's current events audience here and spoke with considerable frankness on the French debt of $4,100,000,000 to the United States. The Ambassador was quite specific in stating that France would require a moratorium and preferential treatment, as compared with Great Britain or other debtors.

"On Tuesday this speech was rebuked at the White House. The President's spokesman, who is a sort of Siamese twin of the Chief Executive, remarked that if Ambassador Jusserand had any program to suggest it might better be laid before the American Debt Funding Commission than the country. The newspaper men present at this White House colloquy understood that M. Jusserand was being rebuked for his indiscretion and telegraphed that news to their papers.

"What the President's spokesman said left no other impression on those who heard him. The audience included the most experienced Washington correspondents, who usually do not misquote their interlocutor.

"The Ambassador was naturally disturbed at so distinguished a reprimand, especially as he is leaving Washington at the close of a tenure of more than 20 years, during which he has generally enjoyed an excellent reputation for diplomatic discretion. It is understood that there was a hurried exchange of views between M. Jusserand and Secretary Hughes, with the result that on Christmas Eve an official statement was issued at the White House denying what had been said 40 hours earlier.

"The latest White House view is that the President's spokesman did not rebuke M. Jusserand, but simply refused to discuss the Ambassador's speech in any way whatever.

"The corps of Washington correspondents are thus put in the position of having misrepresented the President's sentiments to the country.

"There is little doubt here that the second White House statement, giving a new version of what the President's spokesman said, was inspired from the Department of State. This is the second time within the past few years that Secretary Hughes has found it desirable to correct a White House statement. On Dec. 20, 1921, President Harding told newspaper men that the Four-Power Treaty did not apply to the mainland of Japan, the American delegates having already construed that document in the exact opposite sense. The American delegates called on the President that evening and a statement was later issued to the effect that Mr. Harding had no objection to the construction of Mr. Hughes.

"The present system, under which high Administration officials do not permit direct quotation of their utterances, is one that often proves embarrassing to Washington correspondents, who are thus forced to make statements on their own authority, or on the authority of a vague and anonymous 'official spokesman' or 'high authority.' If a high Government officer, from President of the United States down, finds that he has been wrong or indiscreet, he can disavow his original statement, leaving the newspaper correspondents, who have acted in perfect good faith, looking at least ridiculous and even suspected of deliberate misrepresentation.

"The average newspaper reader, who is naturally not familiar with this complicated back-stage machinery, concludes that 'you cannot believe what you read in the papers.' Whereas, the fact is that you cannot be sure that what the President's spokesman or some other distinguished anonymity says on Tuesday will have any resemblance of his official remarks on Thursday.

"Most Washington newspapermen believe that if a Government officer has something to say to the American public, he should be willing to say it under his own proper name and on his own responsibility. There are naturally any number of reasons why the President should not be subject to direct quotation, but correspondents feel that if they observe his confidence, the rule ought to work both ways and that their good faith should be equally regarded.

"As it is, the advantage is all on the side of the 'high official authority,' who, because he remains anonymous can readily disavow his statements thus placing the entire responsibility on the shoulders of the newspaper correspondents."

Mr. Crist's comment on the questions the Suydam story raise, follows: "It might be quite all right for government officials to inspire a story to the effect authorities were contemplating a certain step in order to study the public reaction.

"I concede that a perfectly proper use of the newspapers is in an effort to learn public sentiment.

"But I have always felt that correspondents frequently took an unmerited punishment in silently permitting officials to repudiate statements authorized by them and later disavowed, when it suited their purpose to get from under the wire.

"There is, to my mind, a question of newspaper ethics and a broader question of public policy involved here, which ought to be frankly discussed."

The correspondent, Henry Suydam, who has brought this old story, long suffered in silence by the newspapers, into public notice, has had a spectacular newspaper career.

At 23 he applied to Mr. Crist for a job, following his graduation from Princeton, expressing willingness to work for nothing. The Eagle managing editor took him up, and for a whole summer made use of his services free. This was in 1912.

He did so well, his descriptive writing was of such quality, that within two years Mr. Crist sent him abroad to represent the Eagle as war correspondent.

Suydam was sent to the front on a roving commission as soon as the war broke out, filing stories from Antwerp, Luxembourg, the Galician front, and sending in analytical studies of the political situation in Roumania and Bulgaria. He was one of three American correspondents who reached the Dardanelles just after the beginning of the Anglo-French attack. Later he visited various portions of the Turkish front on Gallipoli, where he narrowly escaped death by an air bomb. Part of July, 1915, he spent in Italy, making vain endeavors to reach the Italian front unobserved. He got to Venice and there was placed under arrest and expelled from the country.

In addition to several visits of inspection to the French front, he spent some time in the field with the Belgian and British armies. In 1917 he was sent to Petrograd, his arrival there coinciding with the beginning of the revolution. Leaving Petrograd, he crossed Siberia, reaching Peking after a series of interesting adventures in traversing the Russian and Siberian steppes. From Peking he went to Tokio, returning from there to the United States.

When the United States entered the war, he served in a diplomatic capacity. He was sought out by the State Department of the United States to be made chief of the Division of Current Information. He resigned from government service in January, 1922, to become Washington correspondent for the Eagle, replacing the late Chauncey C. Brainerd.

HAM LEAVES CASTORIA

Veteran Advertising Manager Resigns After Forty Years of Service

After 40 years service in advertising the now world-famous Fletchers' Castoria, J. G. Ham, known to newspaper and advertising men the country over, has resigned.

The business was in its infancy when he took command of its publicity, in association with Dr. Fletcher, and largely upon his advice, through paid advertising, Castoria was accepted by a multitude of nursing mothers.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER Mr. Ham said: "I will appreciate it if you will pay my compliments to the hundreds of men in the newspaper and advertising field whose friendship it has been my pleasure to acquire during the many years I was advertising manager of Fletcher's Castoria."

JAMES B. BROWN BUYS KNOTT INTEREST IN LOUISVILLE HERALD AND POST

Purchase of $200,000 New Plant Announced Coincident With Transfer of Stock—Richard G. Knott Retires As Publisher—Jonas Editorial Staff Chief EFFECTIVE Jan. 1, James B. Brown became editor and publisher of the Louisville Morning Herald and Evening Post through purchase of the 3,000 shares of stock held by his associates Richard G. Knott and Mrs. R. W. Knott. With the sale Mr. Richard G. Knott retires as publisher of the papers.

JAMES B. BROWN

Coincident with the announcement of the transfer of stock came the announcement that the Herald Post Company had purchased a $200,000 one floor building on Fifth street between Walnut and Liberty streets as a new home for the papers.

The statement concerning the change printed in both papers Dec. 23 follows in part:

"A development program, calling for immediate expenditure of over $500,000 for a new building and the finest mechanical equipment of any newspaper plant in this section of the country, is announced today by the Herald-Post Company.

RICHARD G. KNOTT

"Effective Jan. 1, Mr. James B. Brown becomes editor and publisher of the Louisville Herald and the Louisville Post, and proposes to give to the development of the properties his active attention. Mr. Brown, heretofore owner of a majority of the stock of the company, has added to his holdings by the purchase of the 3,000 shares of stock held by Mr. Richard G. Knott and Mrs. R. W. Knott.

"Mr. Lewis C. Humphrey, who becomes general manager, in charge of all departments of the papers, retains his holdings in the properties and will devote his chief activities to executive direction of business administration.

"Mr. E. A. Jonas, for many years editor of the Herald and at present associate editor of the Herald and the Post, will become chief of the editorial staff.

"Mr. Benjamin S. Washer, attorney for the company, succeeds Mr. Knott as vice-president.

"With the sale of this stock in the company to Mr. Brown, Mr. Richard G. Knott retires as publisher of the papers and will engage in other activities. The negotiations between Mr. Brown and Mr. Knott involving the purchase were satisfactory to both, and Mr. Knott is deeply interested in the success of the properties. The most cordial relations exist between all parties to the transaction.

"The Herald-Post Company has purchased the land and building of the Louisville Sanitary Market Company, on Fifth, between Walnut and Liberty streets, for a consideration of $200,000. Contracts have been let for extensive improvements and enlargements in the building, in keeping with the requirements of modern newspaper publication. Joseph & Joseph, architects in charge of the reconstruction work, estimate that the cost of the improvements will be in excess of $100,000.

"Two new multi-unit double octuple presses, have been purchased from Walter Scott & Co., manufacturers of Plainfield, N. J., for delivery within three months. These are capable of printing 144,000 sixteen-page or 72,000 thirty-two page papers an hour. Together with a complete new stereotype equipment, also purchased, these presses, when installed, will represent an additional outlay in excess of $200,000.

"Other major and minor mechanical equipment has been purchased for immediate delivery.

"The mechanical changes and improvements herein announced and further extensions later to be made public, are part of the program conceived by Mr. Brown when he purchased the Louisville Herald in January of this year and later, on Feb. 1, consolidated this paper with the Louisville Post. Inadequate housing and inefficient mechanical facilities, of which Mr. Brown found the properties possessed at the time of consolidation, have heretofore handicapped him in his purpose of publishing much larger, more thoroughly complete and up-to-date newspapers.

"Under the new management, the Herald and the Post will be operated at all times for the upbuilding of the commercial, communal and social welfare of Louisville and Kentucky. They will ever seek to be informative, educational, constructive and entertaining."

Mr. James B. Brown is a Kentucky banker and capitalist. He was born Nov. 28, 1872, at Lawrenceburg, Ky. The whole story of his schooling is comprised in the statement that he attended the public school of Shelbyville. What he has accomplished has been due to native ability and industry and to a judgment alert and shrewd.

He is director in many large corporations, some of which responsibilities he has relinquished by reason of the increasing pressure of other business. He continues, however to serve as vice-president and director of the Louisville Gas & Electric Company and as a member of the Boards of the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky, the Kentucky Pipe Line Company, the Louisville Home Telephone Company and the Kentucky Jockey Club.

Mr. Brown has been closely associated with many civic undertakings. For a brief term he was chairman of the Board of Public Works of Louisville.

The Louisville Post was established in 1878 by Richard W. Knott. Since his death in 1918 its publication has been continued by his son, Richard G. Knott, until the consolidation on Feb. 1, 1924, of the Louisville Herald and the Louisville Post.

Mr. Brown purchased the Herald about a year ago from John C. Shaffer of Chicago at a price said to be $600,000.

DAILY INCREASES STOCK

Houston Post-Dispatch Now Incorporated at $900,000

Capital stock of the Houston Printing Company, publishers of the Houston Post-Dispatch, was increased from $300,000 to $900,000 by a charter amendment filed with the state department recently.

Former Gov. W. P. Hobby, president of the company, filed the amendment, which is signed by R. S. Sterling, W. P. Hobby, R. L. Dudley, A. E. Clarkson, George M. Bailey and Judd Mortimer Lewis.

The increase will be made by a stock dividend of $600,000 from surplus and undivided profits. A filing fee of $640 was paid the state, in addition to franchise taxes.

Search for Missing Editor

A nationwide search has been started for George F. Moser, 60 years old, editor of the Louisville, (Ky.) Anzeiger, who has been missing since Dec. 24. He has been a member of newspaper staffs in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago before going to Louisville.

N. Y. WORLD INCREASES PRICE TO 3 CENTS

Rising Publication Costs Given as Reason for Break from 2 Cent Price — Effective Jan. 5

Beginning Monday, Jan. 5, the New York Morning World will increase its price from two to three cents a copy.

Confirmation of this important innovation came this week from J. F. Bresnahan, who, in an exclusive statement to EDITOR & PUBLISHER, outlined reasons for the change.

"New York morning newspapers," he pointed out, "have long been charging three cents a copy outside of Greater New York. The World's circulation is concentrated in the city, with about 300,000 on the two-cent basis, and 70,000 at three cents.

"Costs of publication have increased year by year since the war. Costs in practically all mechanical departments increased nearly 10 per cent in the last year. There is nothing to indicate a reduction.

"While the spectacular increase has been on the mechanical side, salaries have also been raised in the editorial and business departments.

"We have long been deluged by letters from readers, seeking to know why we could operate a morning newspaper at two cents and at the same time charge three cents for an evening newspaper.

"We had contemplated reducing the evening price, but we have decided such a step is impossible unless we want to depend on advertising revenue to a very great extent."

Mr. Bresnahan was asked whether or not he considered a five-cent price of metropolitan newspapers probable.

"Eight or ten years ago," he replied, "the change from one to a three cent price was considered revolutionary. There is less difference between three cents and five cents than between one and three."

K. C. STAR INCREASES PRICE

Star and Times Go from 10 Cents a Week to 15 Cents

Effective Sunday, Dec. 28, the Kansas City Star and Times increased the subscription price from 10 to 15 cents a week. For the new price subscribers receive the Star evenings and sundays and the Times, mornings.

Except for short period in the World War, the Star during its life of 44 years has been delivered by carrier for ten cents a week.

The high cost of print paper and higher mail rates were cited among the reasons for the increase.

The Kansas City Journal Post, 13 issues a week, has been distributed for 10 cents a week since the merger in May, 1922, under the ownership of Walter S. Dickey.

On "Hall of Fame" Jury

Newspaper men, members of the jury to select names to be chosen in 1925 for inscription in the Hall of Fame, New York University, include William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette; Dr. Talcott Williams, of the School of Journalism, Columbia University; Royal Cortissoz, art critic, and Stuart P. Sherman, literary editor, both of the New York Herald Tribune.

New Texas Daily

Harry T. Warner, publisher of the Paris (Tex.) News announces he will begin publication of the Paris Evening Times beginning Jan. 5. Advertising rates are to be in combination, the two newspapers to be issued by the same publishing company. The Texas Daily Press League, New York, Chicago, and Dallas, is the national advertising representative.

ADVERTISING MEN WELCOME FEDERAL PROBE

Say Complaint Charging Conspiracy Will Finally Settle Old Question of Agency Commission on Space Contracts—Allege Newspapers Maintain "Gross" and "Net" Rates—Hearing February 5

COMPLAINT issued during the week by the Federal Trade Commission against the American Association of Advertising Agencies, the American Press Association and the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, on charges involving alleged conspiracy and combination in restraint of trade, came as no great surprise in advertising circles, as for two years it has been known that certain commercial interests were bent upon enforcing the principle that national advertising when placed direct entitled the advertiser to the agency commission.

Many advertising men welcomed the action on the ground that the time had arrived for a thorough and final adjudication of this old question. The case will be hotly contested. The hearing date has been set for Feb. 5, at Washington.

According to the citation newspaper publishers for many years have had "two rates at which they compute and charge for the publication of national advertising in their respective newspapers, known as 'gross rate' and 'net rate.' The 'gross rate' is intended by the publisher to apply only to national advertising placed with the publisher by an agency; the 'net rate' being the amount which the publisher receives as remuneration for himself for the publication of such advertisements."

The respondents are charged with using various alleged methods for the purpose of compelling advertisers to either employ agencies or to pay for direct advertising at "gross rates," such being greater than the "net rates" usually charged by newspapers for advertising when the advertiser deals directly with the newspaper and not through an advertising agency.

The result and effect of the alleged conspiracy and combination, according to the citation, is to hamper and obstruct national advertising throughout the United States; restrict the dissemination and distribution of such advertising, and of the type parts essential thereto, to channels and upon terms and conditions dictated by the respondents; restrict the publication of national advertising to newspapers selected and approved by the respondents; compel newspaper publishers to charge for national advertising at "gross rates" and to prevent them from according "net rates" to direct advertisers; and to compel national advertisers to employ respondent or other agencies in the placing of national advertising in newspapers, or to pay gross rates for direct advertising.

Under the law whenever the commission has reason to believe that an unfair method of competition has been used, and it shall appear to the commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the interest of the public it issues its complaint. However, the question whether or not such method has been used is not passed upon by the commission until after the respondents have had thirty days in which to answer and the issue has been tried.

The complaint was welcomed by the A. A. A. A. as an opportunity "to establish the fact that the advertising agency business represented by our association is perhaps the most ethical business in the country." William E. Griffin, vice-president of the American Press Association, in the absence of John H. Perry, president, declined comment.

Cranston Williams, S. N. P. A. manager, while declining to make a detailed statement, denied his association was guilty of any improper business procedure or methods.

Pending the regular quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the association to be held Jan. 13 and 14, James O'Shaughnessy, secretary, issued the following statement:

"There is no conspiracy and there has been none.

"If we are to be enjoined from conspiracy, it amounts to an injunction against something that does not exist.

"It never occurred to us and never occurred to any publisher, that he had two rates any more than a manufacturer has. The publisher has a selling cost. So has everpone else.

"There is nothing involved in the complaint that effects the methods or principles of our business. As far as I can see, if the complaint were sustained, it wouldn't disturb any principle methods or practice of the agencies in the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

"We are forced to the conclusion that the commission has been misinformed. We know that when the questions raised by the complaint have been clarified by all the facts, the complaint will disappear.

"When this case has been heard, there will be seen the marvelous development of advertising during the last few years has been largely due to the open and ethical standards of good agency practice.

"We deeply regret that the complaint is filed, because any complaint by anybody is always unpleasant, but perhaps we should be thankful in thus being forced to employ the machinery and powers of the Federal Trade Commission to establish the fact that the advertising agency business represented by our association is perhaps the most ethical business in this country.

"We welcome and will use our influence to obtain the fullest light upon every operation, open every method and practice, sanctioned by the A. A. A. A."

FULL TEXT OF COMPLAINT

FOLLOWING is the full text of the complaint filed before the Federal Trade Commission, in the matter of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, its officers, Executive Board, and members, named thus:

Herbert S. Gardner, Roy S. Durstine, R. S. Simpers, H. K. McCann, individually and as president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively, of said association;

A. W. Erickson, James W. Young, John Benson, C. W. Newell, Stanley Resor, Merle Sidener, Milton Towne, Henry S. Humphrey, Norman W. Geare, Walter W. Hoops, John H. Cecil, individually and as members of the Executive board of said association;

James O'Shaughnessy, individually and as executive secretary of said association; American Press Association, a corporation;

Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, its officers, directors and members, named thus: Arthur G. Newmyer, Walter C. Johnson, Cranston Williams, individually and as president, secretary-treasurer, and executive secretary, repectively, of said association, and Victor H. Hanson, Elmer E. Clarke, W. A. Elliott, Clark Howell, Jr., Harry Giovannoli, Col. Robert Ewing, Frederick Sullens, H. Galt Braxton, E. K. Gaylord, George R. Koester, Major E. B. Stahlman, Allen Potts, Roy G. Watson, W. Guy Tetrick, individually and as directors of said association.

Acting in the public interest pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to Create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission charges that each and all the respondents named in the caption hereof, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of the provisions of Section 5 of said Act, and states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH ONE: Respondent American Association of Advertising Agencies is an unincorporated voluntary association of individuals, partnerships and corporations with their respective places of business located in cities and towns throughout the United States, and engaged for and on behalf of manufacturers of and dealers in various commodities and articles of merchandise, in the designing, preparation and placing of advertisements in newspapers, magazines and other advertising media published at various points throughout the United States, all as hereinafter more fully set out. Said members are banded together in said association for the purpose of promoting and protecting their common interests and business affairs.

Herbert S. Gardner, Roy S. Durstine, R. S. Simpers, and H. K. McCann, are respectively President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer of said Association, in charge of, conducting and administering its activities and affairs.

A. W. Erickson, James W. Young, John Benson, C. W. Newell, Stanley Resor, Merle Sidener, Milton Towne, Henry B. Humphrey, Norman W. Geare, Walter W. Hoops, and John H. Cecil are members of the Executive Board of said association together constituting said Board. Said Executive Board conducts and administers, and aids aforesaid officers in conducting and administering, the activities and affairs of said association. Respondent James O'Shaughnessy is executive chairman of said association, and as such is the principal executive officer of said association, in general charge of its activities.

The members of said association are about one-hundred thirty-five in number, which number varies from time to time by the dropping out of old and the addition of new members so that it is impracticable at any given time to name as parties respondent and bring before the Commission herein each and all the members of said association without manifest inconvenience and delay, wherefore, the officers of said association herein named parties respondent individually and as such officers are now here made parties respondent as representing each and all the members of said association.

Respondent American Press Association, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York with its principal office and place of business in the City of New York, in said State. It is engaged in the business of soliciting and securing advertisements from advertisers for and on behalf of newspaper publishers as hereinafter more fully set out.

Respondent Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, is a voluntary unincorporated association of individuals, partnerships and corporations engaged in the publication of newspapers in sundry cities and towns of the States of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Oklahoma and Texas. The newspapers published respectively by the members of said asosciation are distributed and sold by them and circulated in the states wherein they are published and in adjacent and neighboring states and to some extent in other portions of the United States. Respondent Arthur G. Newmyer, Walter C. Johnson and Cranston Williams, are respectively President, Secretary-Treasurer, and Executive Secretary of said association, in charge of administering and conducting its activities and affairs. Victor H. Hanson, Elmer E. Clarke, W. A. Elliott, Clark-Howell, Jr., Harry Giovannoli, Col. Robert Ewing, Frederick Sullens, H. Galt Braxton, E. K. Gaylord, George R. Koester, Major E. B. Stahlman, Allen Potts, Roy G. Watson, and W. Guy Tetrick, are the directors of said association, together constituting its Board of Directors, administering and conducting, and aiding aforesaid officers in administering and conducting, the activities and affairs of said association. The members of said association are more than one hundred in number, which number varies from time to time by the dropping out of old and the addition of new members so that it is impracticable at any given time to name as parties respondent and bring before the Commission herein each and all the members of said association without manifest inconveniece and delay, wherefore, the officers of said association herein named parties respondent individually and as such officers are now here made parties respondent as representing each and all the members of said association.

PARAGRAPH TWO: Respondent American Association of Advertising Agencies is hereinafter called the agency association; the members of respondent agency association are hereinafter called agencies; the remuneration which the agency receives for its services is hereinafter called a "commission." Respondent American Press Association is hereinafter called respondent corporation; persons engaged in the business of soliciting and securing advertisements for and on behalf of newspaper publishers are hereinafter called special representatives; respondent Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association is hereinafter called the publishers' association; the members of respondent publishers' association and other persons engaged in the publication, distribution and sale of newspapers are hereinafter called publishers; advertising in newspapers, magazines and other media published at various points in and circulating throughout the United States or in various sections and areas thereof, with the object and purpose of creating a demand and market for and to promote the sale of the advertiser's goods in a number of states or throughout the United States, is hereinafter called national advertising; manufacturers of and dealers in goods, wares and merchandise who so advertise are hereinafter called national advertisers. National advertisers who prepare their own advertising, secure the necessary type-parts therefor, and place such advertising directly with publishers and without employing an agency for such purpose are hereinafter called direct advertisers; national advertising so placed directly is hereinafter called direct advertising.

PARAGRAPH THREE: The business of respondent agencies referred to in Paragraph One hereof consists, with regard to national advertising in newspaper of the following activities: Said agencies severally contract with advertisers to and do procure for said advertisers advertising space in newspapers published at various points throughout the United States and circulating throughout the United States, or in various sections thereof comprising two or more States and in some instances locally within a state; cause to be inserted in said newspapers advertisements describing and offering the goods of said advertisers for sale, or take over in whole or in part the advertising activities of the advertisers, and either in whole or in part compose, design, illustrate and furnish the text for such advertisements during an agreed period of time, usually for the duration of one year or longer, and, for the purpose of effecting said partial or total advertising activities, procure from others who manufacture same, pictures, cuts, photo-engravings, electro-engravings, matrices and other similar things hereinafter called type-parts, used in the printing of said advertisements, and furnish the said type-parts and advertising copy and instructions to the publishers of the newspapers in which said advertisements are to appear, for use in the printing thereof; select the newspapers in which such advertisements are to appear; contract with the publishers thereof for the insertion of said advertisements in said newspapers, and, as an essential part of their regular business continuously conducted in many states, cause the aforesaid copy, instructions and type-parts to be transported from their respective places of business, or, as regards the aforesaid type-parts from the places of business of said others making said type-parts, into and through various states of the United States to said publishers at their respective points of location; conduct advertising campaigns in the newspapers so selected, in a manner calculated to create, promote and increase the demand for and sale of the advertiser's goods and to maintain and enlarge existing markets and create new markets therefor in selected areas of, or throughout, the United States. As part of aforesaid services the agencies, as a regular course of business, pay the publishers for the publication of said advertising in their newspapers and are by the advertisers reimbursed the sums so expended and paid and additional sum for their above described services, as set out in Paragraph Five hereof. Respondent agencies handle, conduct and place about ninety percentum of the total amount of national advertising in newspapers done annually in the United States and in so doing handle the advertising of about 5,000 national advertisers, at a cost to said advertisers in the aggregate of about $200,000,000 annually. For many years a large number of national advertisers have themselves conducted their national advertising without employing the services of respondent or other agencies in that behalf and have for themselves done and performed all the things and services above set out which are done by respondent agencies when conducting national advertising for and on behalf of national advertisers.

COMPLETE TEXT OF FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH FOUR: Respondent American Press Association is engaged among other things in soliciting from national advertisers and from agencies representing such advertisers, advertisements to be inserted in newspapers published at various points throughout the United States. In soliciting such advertising this respondent acts as agent for and receives its remuneration from the publishers of said newspapers. Said publishers are about 8,000 in number and are severally engaged in the publication of their said newspapers in cities and towns in practically every state of the United States. Said newspapers circulate in the states wherein they are published and to come extent in other states, and in the aggregate circulate in practically every state of the United States. Respondent corporation procures through and from respondent and other agencies practically all the national advertising which it so supplies to said publishers, and procures from the agencies the type-parts which are to be used in the printing of said advertisements, and ships said type-parts to the publishers of said newspapers at their respective points of location throughout the United States. Respondent corporation is also engaged in the publication of a monthly trade periodical devoted to the publishing and advertising business which said trade journal circulates among publishers, including respondent publishers, advertising agencies, including respondent agencies, and special representatives throughout the United States.

PARAGRAPH FIVE: For many years newspaper publishers throughout the United States have held themselves out as having two rates at which they compute and charge for the publication of national advertising in their respective newspapers. Said rates are denominated by said publishers and by respondents and are hereinafter called the gross rate and the net rate, respectively. Said gross rate is so fixed that the sum of money charged for a given advertisement computed at said rate is in excess of the amount which the publisher regularly charges and receives as remuneration to himself for the publication of said advertisement. Said gross rate is intended by the publisher to apply and has for many years applied only to national advertising placed with the publisher by an agency, and such application of such gross rate is intended by the publisher to provide a remuneration for the agency to be paid by the national advertiser to the agency as herein below set out. Said net rate is so fixed by the publisher that the sum of money charged for a given advertisement computed at said rate is the sum of money which he regularly charges and receives as remuneration for himself for the publication of such advertisement. Said net rates are in all instances less than said gross rates, and in most instances are less than said gross rate by and to the extent of fifteen percentum of said gross rates. By a well established practice and course of business during the time said two rates have been in effect as above set out, respondent and other agencies have paid and still pay to publishers for the publication of national advertising, at said net rates, thereafter charging to and collecting for said advertising, from the advertisers represented by them, at said gross rates, retaining for themselves from the sums so collected from the advertisers, those sums in excess of the amounts paid by the agencies to the publishers as above set out, and representing the difference between aforesaid computations at said net and gross rates. Said excess amounts so acquired by the agencies have been and now are retained by them as their commission for the services rendered by them to said advertisers in the premises.

For many years prior to the inauguration of the combination and conspiracy and prior to the acts and things done by respondents to carry out and effectuate same, all as set out in Paragraph Eight hereof, practically all newspaper publishers in the United States had given the benefit of said net rates alike to agencies and to direct advertisers and had charged such direct advertisers for the publication of their advertisements at said net rates upon the same terms and conditions accorded by said publishers to agencies.

PARAGRAPH SIX: National advertising for many years has been and now is an important, essential and indispensable means and instrumentality for the interstate distribution and sale of, and for the establishment and prosecution of a profitable interstate commerce, traffic and business in, goods, wares and merchandise; in that such advertising creates markets and a demand for the commodities so advertised and is the most practicable and in many instances the only practicable means whereby the manufacturer or merchant engaging or desiring to engage in such interstate commerce and business, may place his wares before, and transmit intelligence and information concerning said wares to, dealers and the consuming public in a number of states or throughout the United States, so as to create the markets and the demand for his commodities necessary to the successful prosecution of an interstate business therein. Without national advertising the manufacturer of or dealer in commodities other than those essential to life and comfort and for which there is a natural demand, would be unable to create markets and a demand sufficiently large and covering a territory sufficient in extent to permit the successful prosecution of a general interstate business, and such manufacturers and merchants would in most instances be restricted to the states wherein their places of business are located and to contiguous territory in surrounding states. Further, national advertising is an important and in many instances the only practicable means of creating and keeping alive and active, competition in interstate commerce between commodities of the same or similar kind and class, both with regard to commodities essential and those non-essential to life and comfort, in that in addition to and as a part of the functions performed by national advertising as in this paragraph above set out, national advertising of competitive products advises dealers and the consuming public of the existence of each competitive product so advertised, and transmits to and furnishes dealers and the consuming public with intelligence and information concerning the competitive products so advertised, thus offering to dealers and the consuming public a choice between said commodities and a basis for making such choice. In the absence of national advertising such intelligence and information would be offered to dealers and to the consuming public either inadequately or not at all and trade throughout the United States would be restricted for the most part to those commodities chosen by local dealers for exploitation and sale in the absence of an informed public demand for products competing with those so chosen.

PARAGRAPH SEVEN: Newspaper publishers derive their entire profits and a large part of their gross revenues from advertising. The cost of producing and distributing copies of newspapers exceeds to a substantial amount per copy the amount at which such copies are sold. By reason of the foregoing, the business of publishing and selling newspapers could not be profitably prosecuted without the revenues derived from the publication of advertisements and the prosperity of the publisher's business and the amount of profits which he derives therefrom, depend upon the amount of advertising which he can secure for his newspaper. The amount of money expended by advertisers for newspaper advertising in the United States aggregated annually about $600,000,000, about one-third of which amount is expended for national advertising, for which the publishers uniformly charge a higher rate than the rate charged by them for other advertising, wherefore, the publication of national advertising is a great and important source of revenue to newspaper publishers, and the earning of a profit by them from the publication of their newspapers depends in many instances upon the amount of national advertising which they secure.

PARAGRAPH EIGHT: For a period of about five years last past respondent associations, their officers, executive committees, other committees and members, and respondent corporation, its officers, directors, agents and employes, both among themselves within their respective organizations, and all cooperating together and with others, have been and still are engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy affecting national advertising throughout the United States, entered into with the purpose and intention of compelling national advertisers to employ respondent agencies or other advertising agencies in the placing of national advertising in newspapers throughout the United States, to prevent said advertisers from advertising directly in said newspapers at net rates and to compel said advertisers to pay for direct advertising at gross rates.

In order to carry out and effectuate said combination and conspiracy and its said purposes, respondents, and those cooperating with them, have done and still do the following acts and things:

Respondent agency associations and its members:

(a) Inaugurated said combination and agreed to carry out same and its said purposes, both by cooperation among themselves and by securing the cooperation of respondent corporation, of respondent publishers' association and its members and of others in the premises.

(b) Appointed a newspaper committee to take general charge of the prosecution of said combination and its said purposes.

(c) Through said newspaper committee and otherwise, both orally and by means of written and printed communications, announced and published to publishers and special representatives, including respondent corporation and respondent publishers' association, aforesaid undertaking and its said purposes.

(d) Through the means set out in Specification (c) and by other means disseminates arguments and statements in favor of said undertaking and condemning direct advertising by national advertisers at net rates as unfair, unethical and discriminatory against national advertisers placing their national advertising through agencies, and soliciting and demanding the cooperation of agencies, publishers and special representatives in prosecuting said

(Continued on page 10)

HOW RADIO WAS EMPLOYED TO ADVERTISE A SOFT DRINK

PROBABLY half a million listeners-in always will remember a certain brand of ginger ale because of the novel advertising scheme of the company selling the soft drink. The scheme took the form of a treasure hunt, clues for the finding of the treasure being broadcast from a Philadelphia station. The treasure consisted of, first, 100 silver dollars; second, fifteen silver dollars; third, $10 in gold; fourth, $5 in gold; fifth and sixth, $2.50 in gold. In addition, 15 treasure-seekers were given one dollar each, and 79 were each given a bottle of the ginger ale.

The clues as broadcast were as follows:

1—Go to 9th and Chestnut streets, the site of the Philadelphia Morning Record, at 8:45 P. M., and look through the classified advertisements for the correct advertisement then the correct instrument that the advertisement designates.

2—From the right instrument find shop window on Chestnut street which contains several ginger ale bottles, one of which points in the direction of another shop window on the opposite side of the street. Read the card shown in that window.

3—following the directions on the card find a building with a bell on the wall.

4—Turn as Horace Greeley directed, and go to a building six blocks distant, named after a prominent financier.

5—At this point see something like an overgrown stick of peppermint candy, a couple of steps from the corner. Turn either right or left in direction of nearest river.

6—Proceed to a small plot of land containing only a crooked tree between two lamp posts.

7—Go west to a yard with two flag poles.

8—Here see three men with gray hats talking together. Say to them, "Where is Blue Anchor Inn?" They will hand you clue on card, which clue leads to hiding place.

More than 3,000 persons began the hunt which finally terminated on the Parkway, west of 21st street, where the prizes were distributed.

STERLING P. O. RATE BILL TO DIE IN COMMITTEE

Avalanche of Publishers' Arguments Also Destroys Standing of Cost-Finding Report—New Investigation Planned for Next Summer—Senators Befuddled by Many Briefs of Publishers

By J. BART CAMPBELL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Repudiation by Congress of the postal cost ertainment report was virtually as-ed by developments at Washington s week.

shot to pieces by spokesmen for the blishing interests, riddled by members the Senate and House Post Office nmittees, attacked by representatives agricultural organizations, the report nd few defenders except among those st Office Department officials who mitted it to Congress.

t became obvious that the combined tal rate-and-wage increase bill pre-ed by the Post Office Department, and nsored by Senator Sterling, chairman he Senate Post Office Committee, was doomed to discard.

bill amended materially, and with the posed rate increases redistributed, uld be reported instead to both nches of Congress as a substitute for vetoed Edge-Kelly measure, Senator ses indicated to EDITOR & PUBLISHER. enator Moses, who presided over the rings on the report and bill conducted the postal rate sub-committees of the ate and House Post Office Commit-which were terminated Wednesday, ressed considerable dissatisfaction n the manner in which the Post Office partment officials handled the situation. may state frankly I view certain clusions reached in the postal cost as-ainment report with skepticism," Sen-Moses told EDITOR & PUBLISHER. e report is obviously filled with many ngruities and many non-sequiturs. I certainly not in accord with it. As the bill based on the report, I would vote for it, and I think I may state ly it will not get out of committee st stands now."

enator Moses pointed out under the s of the unanimous consent agree-t entered into by the Senate for final ideration of the Edge-Kelly bill on uary 5-6 there is nothing to prevent the bill and the President's veto g referred to committee, and the ssity for the Senate voting to either r-ride or sustain the veto thereby g obviated.

e intimated that, in his judgment, a course of action was within the e of possibility if most Senators, as as House members, could be pre-d upon to accept a revised postal rate-wage increase bill, as, at least, a tem-ry solution of the entire knotty prob-confronting Congress and the Admin-tion.

"I do not regard any bill that may be ly agreed upon as anything but stop-legislation," Senator Moses continued. think the best we can do now is to ide temporary remedies for a difficult complex situation, and then after present Congress ends, avail our-'s of next spring or summer, when ress will probably not be in session, nduct a thorough investigation of ntire postal rate-and-wage situation all angles so we may formulate mmendations and legislation on a anent, constructive basis for pres-tion to the next Congress."

Senator Moses, under the seniority will become chairman of the Sen-ost Office Committee, following the ment of Senator Sterling from the e upon the termination of the pres-ongress.

view of his expected assumption of hairmanship of the committee, it is pated he will probably be called to head a special sub-committee of bers of both the Senate and House s Office Committees to conduct the stive inquiry he suggested should ade.

Authorization for such an inquiry will bly be asked by Senator Moses be-he present Congress ends in March. nion developed among some representatives of the publishing interests attending the hearings this week that instead of Congress continuing to tinker further with postal rates, a rate-making commission should be created with power to pass finally upon such rates in much the same manner the Interstate Commerce Commission passes upon railroad rates.

Representative Clyde Kelly, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the rate sub-committee of the House Post Office Committee, was still planning this week to wage a determined battle to have a parcel post fee of at least one cent incorporated in whatever postal rate-and-wage increase bill is presented to the Senate and House for final enactment. Senator Moses was committed to assist Mr. Kelly. Spokesmen for agricultural organizations, notably those of the American Farm Bureau Federation, issued statements, however, declaring against any increase in parcel post rates as unfair and unjust to the farmer, and condemning the postal cost ascertainment report as strongly from their viewpoint as the publishing interests criticized it from the standpoint of second-class rates.

A blistering attack upon the report by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, contained in a lengthy statement at the hearings presided over by Senator Moses read by Elisha Hanson, Washington representative of that organization of metropolitan dailies, was followed by an admirable presentation of the case of the National Editorial Association, representing hundreds of smaller dailies and thousands of weekly newspapers throughout the country.

The case of the smaller publisher was clearly and forcibly described by Wallace Odell, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Editorial Association, in a letter addressed to Senator Moses, which was read by William L. Daley, Washington representative, and also executive secretary of the American Publishers' Conference.

Members of the Senate and House committees expressed themselves as impressed favorably by Mr. Odell's argument in behalf of the smaller publishers, who, Mr. Daley pointed out, would be the hardest hit if the second-class rate increases proposed by the Post Office Department were to become effective.

Senator Moses and other committee members commented upon what they said appeared to them lack of unity of action by the publishing interests, rather than lack of unity of opinion on their part, in the presentation of their opposition to the postal cost ascertainment report.

Senator Moses said he would have thought all the publishing interests would have been represented by general counsel, instead of by different spokesmen for different groups, the result being a mass of statements "befuddling" to the committee members, none of whom had been able to form a "continuous thread of opinion" after listening to many days of testimony which might readily have been boiled down to a single comprehensive statement by a single representative spokesman.

Senator Moses also expressed considerable interest in the fact the American Newspaper Publishers' Association had its spokesmen, the National Editorial Association had its spokesmen, and the American Publishers' Conference refrained from having any.

Another point Senator Moses indicated would probably have its effect on the final consideration by Congress of the entire situation was the fact the A. N. P. A. represented approximately 500 metropolitan dailies obviously differently situated from the hundreds and thousands of smaller dailies and weeklies making up the membership of the National Editorail Association.

PASSAGE OF STERLING BILL WOULD HARM COUNTRY, HANSON DECLARES

MR. HANSON'S statement before the joint Senate and House Post Office Committee comprehended the attitude of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association toward the whole question of increased postal rates, precipitated by the Postmaster General as an expedient to cover the demand of the postal employes for increased pay.

The speaker first commented upon the remarkable speed of the action, declared that the publishers had not sufficient time to adequately prepare to defend the issue. Passage of the Sterling bill, he said, would work irreparable harm to the business of the country without corresponding benefit to the national government.

"We shall have nothing to say as to the propriety of the salary increases", Mr. Hanson said. "Our member papers in their individual editorial capacities have spoken as they see fit on that question. Some of them approve the increase, but as an association we take no position, either of approval or disapproval.

"These rate increases are based upon a recommendation of the Post Office Department. In turn, this recommendation is based on the cost ascertainment report recently submitted to Congress by that Department. * * * While we have not had time sufficient to go into the facts as set forth in this report, we do not need more time to point out certain inaccuracies or discrepancies which have come to our attention during the last few days. In the first place, as Congressman Kelly disclosed the other day, there is a discrepancy of $17,000,000 between the figures set up in the cost ascertainment report and the figures as set up in the Postmaster General's annual report on the expenditures of the Department for the fiscal year 1923. At the time it was disclosed that discrepancy was explained by the representative of the Post Office Department in a most unusual way. He informed this Committee that the Postmaster General's report was wrong and the cost ascertainment report right. He further informed this Committee that none of the reports as submitted to Congress by any of the Postmaster Generals during the last few years is correct in its statement of certain most important facts. * * *

"It has been pointed out in this Committee that there is a discrepancy between the number of pieces of parcel post matter handled as revealed in the cost ascertainment report and the number of pieces of parcel post matter handled as revealed in those various official reports of the Postmaster General. The same naive explanation has been given you—the cost ascertainment report is right but these Postmaster General reports are wrong. It means simply this: Under the direction of Congress, the Post Office Department, each year since the enactment of the parcel post act, has been compelled to make two counts of parcel post pieces annually, one of fifteen days in the spring and one of fifteen days is the fall. These counts have been made, except for a period of a few months during the war. It was on the basis of these counts that the Postmaster Generals reported the findings to Congress; it was on the basis of these counts that the Department asked for its appropriation for the parcel post service; it was on the basis of these counts that the Department has kept the Interstate Commerce Commission advised as to the extent of the parcel post service, so that that Commission might act advisedly under the authority granted to it by Congress for the regulation of parcel post rates. Now we are informed that because these statistics collected over a period of more than ten years conflict with the statistics appearing in the cost ascertainment report, which is based upon an extension of percentages arrived at from a count of only one week in one year, they are wrong. * * *

"There is another discrepancy to which my association called the public's attention last week. It is the difference between the cost of handling Departmental mail and franked mail as set up in the cost ascertainment report, and the amount which is set up is the Postmaster General's report for 1924. There is a difference of over $6,000,000 between the figures in the Postmaster General's report for the fiscal year ending June 20, 1924, and the figures in the cost ascertainment report which is based upon the operations of the Department during the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1923. * * *

"This matter which is carried free by the government at a cost ranging anywhere from $6,500,000, as set up in the cost ascertainment report, to $13,000,000, as set up in the Postmaster General's report, is a service performed for all departments of the government and properly should be apportioned to them. In no sense is it an expense allocable solely to the Post Office Department. * * *

"We challenge the theories of this report where it allocates to second class mail a greater cost incident to Postmasters' and Assistant Postmasters' salaries than is based upon the proportionate revenues received from second class mail. Postmasters' and Assistant Postmasters' salaries are governed entirely by the receipts of their post offices.

"In allocating these expenses for Postmasters, table 50 shows that $12,942,000 is charged against first class mail, whereas $7,918,000 is charged against second class mail. In other words, while the revenues from second class mail represent only one tenth of those received from first class mail, the charge as against second class mail for the salaries of Postmasters represents seven-twelfths as much as is charged against first class mail, and the salaries of Postmasters are not based on services performed, hours put in, volume of mail handled, but entirely upon receipts. It means that if second class mail was charged with 5½ per cent of these salaries of Postmasters, which are based, mind you, upon revenues received from their offices, it would be charged with $2,437,000, or, in round figures, $5,500,000 less than the Department has charged in the cost ascertainment report.

"Assistant Postmasters are paid on the same basis, but in their bases the Department has been a little more kind towards us, and has charged us with only 12.12 per cent of their cost. * * *

"The American Newspaper Publishers Association stands upon the letter written to Senator Dale to the effect that this Department has overcharged second class mail to the extent of $29,000,000 in the allocation of cost incident to the rural free delivery service.

"Rural free delivery is a service which was created by Congress to unify this country. It has been extended just as fast as road conditions have made it possible, and if I am not incorrect, it has been extended entirely without regard to the possible paying basis on which it might be conducted.

"Talk all you may about putting the Post Office Department on a self-sustaining basis, but you still have that service, ordered by Congress for a great public purpose, which costs in excess of $87,000,000 annually; which represents one-seventh of the entire expenditure of the Post Office Department, yet which carries only one-60th of the entire volume of the mails." * * *

"We contend, that the only fair way to apportion the cost of this service which is based upon a public policy, is to apportion it in proportion to the receipts received from the various classes of the mail service, and not in proportion to the number of pieces delivered, the number of pounds carried, the number of stops made, or any of the various bases which at various times the Department has tried to base it upon. * * *

"The Postmaster General, in his statement to you, stated that 4,333,000,000 pieces of second class mail are handled annually by the Department. Compare this number of pieces with the number of pieces handled in 1912, or 11 years before this report was started. In 1912 there were 4,934,500,000 pieces of second class mail handled. In other words, according to the Department's figures, the value of second class mail decreased by almost 600,000,000 pieces in the course of 11 years.

"Second class mail is the only class of mail upon which postage rates have been increased since 1912. * * *

"It is our contention that if these Sterling rates are put into effect, they will drive from the mails an even greater volume of second class mail without any corresponding benefit to the government. The rural routes, on account of which we are charged $34,000,000 out of a total expenditure of $87,000,000, will still have to be maintained;—the Postmasters, for whose salaries we are charged 17.86 per cent of the expenditures, will still have to be kept; there will be no corresponding decrease in expense incident to the decrease in revenues received; and the only result of the enactment of the Sterling rates will be to drive from the mails publications which now are using them, publications which are paying revenues to this government, and publications which cannot, under any condition, pass the cost incident to those rates on to somebody else. Whereas other classes of the mails have benefited from reductions in postage during the last ten years, second class mail has stood an increase in postage.

"While the second class mail has had one-eighth of its total number of pieces driven from the mails in 11 years, during the same period from 1912, fourth class mail has more than quadrupled in volume. Fourth class mail has had the benefit of two reductions in rates during that period, whereas the government has had the benefit of four increases in rates on second class mail. * * *

"If the Department's statement of operations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, is correct, for 1925 the Post Office Department will earn a surplus, unless this employes' wage increase is voted by Congress. If Congress votes this increase over the President's veto, or by enacting the Sterling Bill with the President's consent, it is our contention that it will not mean a $68,000,000 deficit, but that within a few years, if the Post Office Department continues its present ratio of earnings as to expense, this added increase in expenditure can be wiped out and red ink can be changed to black. If that be correct, you will be called upon two years from today to come back to this Committee room and revise these postal rates downward, for the government has long insisted that it is not its purpose to make the Post Office Department pay a tremendous profit but only to make it pay its way.

"In the meanwhile, the publications of this country which have already had approximately 600,000,000 copies driven from the mails by reason of increases in rates far less than those provided in the Sterling Bill, will suffer irreparable harm, and the government will not raise the revenues which the Department estimates will accrue from the second class rates provided in the bill.

"We contend, that it is not just to overly burden second class mail with additional increases at this time, but that the Post Office Department should be reimbursed either by appropriation from Congress, or by some other method yet to be devised for the $6,000,000 to $13,000,000 a year or even more, which it expends in the performance of services for other governmental departments.

"Furthermore, table No. 80 also shows that from foreign mail and special services, the Department loses approximately $27,000,000 annually. This amount, added to the loss on Departmental mail, means that the Department today, if you eliminate from it the purely public and special services which it performs, is operated at a profit. In other words, it makes money on its purely business transactions with people of this country, and it loses money where Congress has provided that it shall carry out certain public services for the general good of all.

"If it be Congress' intention to give the employes an increase in salary at this time, would it not be far better to do so and charge any deficit to the general funds of the Treasury, than to assess it against the present paying users of the mail? In the light of the facts which we have presented to you, we submit that there is only one answer to this question."

PROPOSED POSTAL RAISES CALLED FATAL TO HARD-PRESSED LOCAL PAPERS

THE statement of the National Editorial Association, in which it went on record, "as opposed to any attempt to increase the postage rates on the basis of the cost ascertainment report," was in part as follows:

"There are approximately 25,000 newspapers and periodicals published in the United States. In recent years the casualties among the weekly newspapers has reached an appalling figure. Approximately 3,000 weekly newspapers have suspended since 1917. The loss is almost entirely among the country weeklies which were hardest hit by the war and the conditions following it. In many instances, the papers located in county seats were consolidated. There are several reasons for closing of these weekly newspapers, but a survey indicates that the growing cost of production and distribution forced them to the wall. These suspensions have a far-reaching effect, especially in rural communities.

"The country newspapers, weekly and daily, are hardest hit by any raise in postal rates because the larger publications, including the metropolitan dailies and periodicals, are sending a large portion of their business by freight. It is the duty of the government to furnish transportation service to all classes at a rate lower than the larger organizations can obtain through private means, as that is the only protection for the small publishers. This is not considering the governmental obligation to assist in the dissemination of information by furnishing a very attractive rate on second-class matter. The Post Office Department should not be made essentially a profit-making branch of the Government. The service rendered by the Government is to foster national and local development. No other branch of the Government is considered from a profit-making point of view. All other departments perform costly functions, but so far as returns are concerned, are a total loss. The Post Office Department is no different from any other branch of the Government in its relation to the American people.

"In an illiterate country a postal system might be a subsidy to a privileged few. In a brisk, active-minded nation of high literacy and high energy, such as this, any step that tends to throttle postal functions by any means is a direct blow at the energy, as well as the minds of its people.

"The bill you have under consideration would increase the rates on newspapers 100 per cent. The fact has been established during these hearings that the larger newspapers and periodicals could leave the mails. They propose to develop a private distribution system which could successfully compete with the postal service.

"It is obvious that a plan of this kind is entirely out of reach of the weekly newspapers. Much has been said about the free-in-county privilege accorded newspapers. Nobody disputes the fact that the retention of this privilege is vital to the country newspapers. There are thousands of local newspapers known generally as the home town paper, which would pass away if Congress hampered their distribution without cost in the county of publication.

"Research shows that the free-in-county privilege had its inception during the early administration of Benjamin Franklin as Postmaster for the Crown in America. It has been developed until it is now an important part of the postal system. It would be unfair to leave the impression that the country weeklies are the chief beneficiaries of this postal privilege. The cost ascertainment report shows that out of a total volume of 64,278,981 pounds sent 'free-in-county,' only 19,049,442 pounds, or less than 30 per cent, is charged against the weeklies. You will find on table 49 of the appendix to the report that weekly newspapers pay a considerable amount for distribution by village carriers, etc. It is not correct or fair to assume that weekly newspapers do not pay any revenue to the government. The weeklies paid $1,915,361.52 on 98,538,201 pounds, producing an average revenue of 1.0438 cents per pound. Of this total the poundage on weekly amounted to 77,424,281, upon which the publishers pay an average of 2.1699 cents per pound at zone rates. This may be explained by the fact that thousands of subscribers to country newspapers moving to other localities want the home town paper. Whenever copies are mailed to those subscribers the local publication is subjected to the zone rates.

"It will be noted that any increase in rates will saddle a burden on the country publisher. Higher rates would, in effect, penalize those living in the rural communities by increasing the cost on newspaper delivery. While the circulation of weekly newspapers is not comparable to the metropolitan dailies, they would be the first to feel the effects of even a slight advance. You must keep in mind the small margin that separates the publisher of a small paper from bankruptcy.

"It is not an easy matter for the country publisher to increase the advertising and subscription rates to meet increased postal costs, no matter how small. The price of a local newspaper is a very important factor in publishing. The owners of small weeklies ponder for months over a proposal for advancing their subscription rates from $1.50 to $2, fearful of the effects upon the subscription lists. If the bill you have under consideration is enacted into law it will bring new complications to the country publisher. For many months publishers have been hesitant about increasing their advertising rates. Herman Roe, of the Northfield (Minn.) News, a member of the executive committee of the National Editorial Association, has long advocated higher rates on advertising in weeklies. In a report to the association, based upon dependable cost data, he stated that there can be no margin of profit left in an advertising rate of 20 or 25 cents an inch, which is the prevailing rate in the large percentage of country weeklies, deduct 10 cents per inch—the average cost of composition—from your 20 or 25 cent rate and how far will the remainder go toward covering the cost of writing news and editorials, editorial and advertising services, soliciting advertising, setting up the news, make-up, press work, news print, mailing, etc.

"Mr. Roe found that the subscription revenue will absorb a portion of that expense, but only a small portion be the receipts from circulation will c tute about 20 per cent of the av country weekly's income. To me creased costs and make money so th publisher may serve the communit fectively he must look to the adver revenue. If this raise is put into on the postal rates the publisher have no alternative. The circulatio small town paper is its most valuab set. Like every other article of mer dise, the price of a newspaper gover sale. The delivery cost is an ess item. The list of subscribers mu satisfactory to local and national a tisers. The local paper must give a tisers a service to allow the local chant to compete with mail order h and other forms of competition. are some of the problems of the av editor and publisher. If the rate s ules proposed in the so-called St bill are accepted by Congress it wil turb the economic fabric upon whic great bulk of American newspap the country weeklies—depend and rectly affect community life.

"We believe that your sense of ness will continue the policy of the in-county privilege for the local we and keep in mind the effect of a increase in villages where local p pay for carrier service. The Postm General in his statement at the begi of these hearings stated that the De ment favored the present policy. Nu ous witnesses representing all class mail users have been practically u mous in their approval of the priv The smaller dailies and weeklies a sential instruments to community The National Editorial Associatio spectfully submits that it would b wise and unjust to enact any legis which would have a tendency to ir their existence."

Capt. Cranston Williams, exe secretary of the Southern News Publishers' Association, representin dailies in fourteen Southern S stretching from Texas to Virginia phasized the thought that while " town papers with circulations ru anywhere from 3,000 to 12,000 are w to meet what is considered a fair ca cost, they face a proposition of driven from the mails by the pro increases in second-class rates."

A similar idea was clearly empha by Frank E. Gannett, publisher o Rochester Times-Union, representin New York State Publishers' Associ comprising 65 dailies, in enterin emphatic protest "against the hasty and snap judgment on the part o Senate in its apparent eagerness to a bill based on the findings of the of service report.

"The newspapers of this State country want to do the fair thing," Gannett added. "We believe we are ing a high price for our postal s at the present time—$2 for every pounds caried in the mail, while w getting the same service through ba arrangements for 30 cents for ever pounds carried.

"If the rates for second-class matter are boosted for every 100 p on advertising, as now contemplat feel sure that the government will its own purpose and fail to increa revenue, for the newspapers will be pelled to withdraw from the mail find some other method of delivering papers."

Daily to Absorb Semi-Weekly

The Beckley (W. Va.) Daily Pos the Raleigh Herald, a semi-weekly be consolidated soon after Jan. 1, ac ing to announcement made by Fran Hunter, editor of the Post. The bined newspaper will be known a Beckley Post-Herald.

Advertisers' Christmas Party

New York Advertising Club h Christmas party for children of bers from 3 to 5 o'clock, Saturday, 27. More than 500 children attend party.

C. S. JACKSON, VETERAN OREGON PUBLISHER, DIES

Owner of Portland, Oregon, Journal Succumbs After Long Illness Following Nervous Breakdown Five Years Ago—Distinguished Career

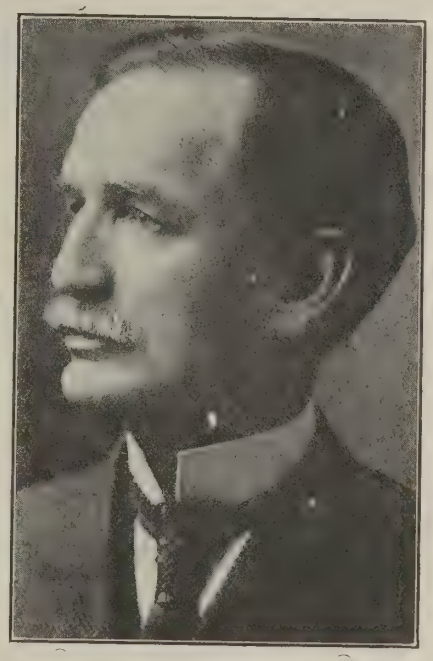
HARLES SAMUEL JACKSON, owner and publisher of the Portland Ore.) Journal, died at the family home Portland on Dec. 27. His death brings a close a career of achievement, made otable especially by the up-building of s newspaper from a small and strug- ling daily to a large and successful etropolitan publication. Death came as release from a long period of suffering ating from a nervous breakdown five ears ago. Since Jan. 1, 1920, Mr. Jack- n had not been active in the publication f his newspaper which had been placed the hands of his son, Capt. Philip . Jackson, assisted by executives who ad been active in the organization with e father over a period of years.

In keeping with Mr. Jackson's own mplicity of life were the details which arked his taking leave of it. He re- ested that his own newspaper and if ey were willing, the other Portland wspapers, omit any discussion of his reer until the simple funeral he desired as over.

That was done. He asked that his neral be devoid of display. Only the mily and the Rev. Dr. A. A. Morri- n, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church re present at the Portland Crematorium the final rites on Monday. At a later te interment will be in the Jackson mily plot in Pendleton, where he had ected a monument to the memory of his der son, Francis Clopton Jackson, owned at sea in December, 1919.

Surviving Mr. Jackson are Mrs. Jack- n; who was Maria Foster Clopton of endleton, their son Philip L. Jackson; aster Charles Samuel Jackson, a grand- n, son of Francis Jackson; one brother, . A. Jackson; and two sisters, Mrs. hn Lumpkin and Mrs. A. R. Moses. r. Jackson's brother and sisters live in eltaville, Va.

At the hour of the funeral the plant the journal was closed, and members the journal family gathered in the itorial rooms to listen to a tribute to e publisher. The speaker was B. F. vine, editor of the journal.



Two tragedies marked, and possibly to great extent caused the breakdown hich resulted in Mr. Jackson's death. he was the loss of his elder son Francis, the wreck of the steamship J. A. anslor off Cape Blanco in December, 19. The vessel was lost with nearly all board, and young Jackson's body was t recovered.

If Mr. Jackson's heart was hurt beyond re by the death of his son, his spirit s likewise wounded by the breakdown his friend and mentor, Woodrow Wil- n. When Mr. Wilson was stricken in course of his campaign for the League Nations, it seemed to those about Mr. ckson that he, too, had suffered a ysical blow. As the president's strength ned the fighting spirit of Mr. Jackson med to wilt. The double blow of the s of his son and his friend seemed more n he could bear.

Only a few days before Mr. Jackson's ith a Christmas gift to the people of egon in the form of an 88 acre tract park land was announced in his name. e tract is on Marquam Hill, adjacent the University of Oregon Medical hool and is to be known as Sam Jack- Park.

t would require columns to list the ic efforts of the Oregon Journal under direction of Charles Samuel Jackson. nas been said of him that no man ever in the directing office of a newspaper held higher concepts of the duty of rnalism to the masses of the people. n his 40 years of newspaper work in Pacific Northwest he continually ssed the ethical side of newspaper blishing.

Mr. Jackson, who was a native of Vir- ia, came to Pendleton, Ore., in 1881, ere he soon acquired a quarter interest he Pendleton East Oregonian, a week- from L. B. Cox, a local attorney.

Charles Samuel Jackson

"He tried his best to persuade me I was a natural born newspaper man," Mr. Jackson once wrote in 1920 referring to his start as a publisher.

"I never believed it then and do not fully believe it at this time. Within the same year he bought the quarter interest back from me, adding $250 to the sum I paid for it, thus presenting a clear profit to me of that amount. This was the first hoarding money, with the exception of $100 additional saved from the $50 a month paid me by the Utah, Idaho and Oregon Stage Company, as stage agent, I ever possessed at one time."

A little later Cox again told young Jackson he believed he had the qualities of a true editor and offered to sell him the East Oregonian for $3,500. With John A. Guyer, a Pendleton attorney Mr. Jackson bought the paper on a 50-50 basis. The uncertainty of the publishing profession at that time was shown in the fact that Mr. Jackson retained his "sure thing" position as stage agent for several months, relinquishing it with the coming of the railroad line through Eastern Oregon in 1882-83.

Within a brief period Mr. Jackson purchased his partner's share in the paper and shortly began publication of a semi-weekly East Oregonian. A steam press was used to print the paper.

For 25 years Mr. Jackson published the East Oregonian against stiff opposition.

"I worked for the public interest throughout those years led on by the examples of such men as Oliver Cromwell and in these later times with a faith made more steadfast by the glorious career of Woodrow Wilson," he said in a letter to "the Journal family" in August, 1920.

It was in Pendleton that Mr. Jackson established the rule that his paper must always stand on a level with the strongest institutions of the community in respect of money contributions toward popular objectives which met with his approval. If the First National Bank, or one of the powerful merchandising houses of the town wrote down its name for $1,000, so must the East Oregonian.

Mr. Jackson took over the Portland Oregon Journal in 1902, from Alfred Bowen, who had established it in March of that year, but whose resources were exhausted before the summer had ended.

The record of the financing of the Journal is, perhaps, unparalleled. About Aug. 1, 1902, the Journal Publishing Company was incorporated, with $100,000 of cash capital stock. Mr. Jackson took $51,000 of it, $49,000 being subscribed by Portland business men who desired competition in the newspaper field, then monopolized by the joint owners of the Morning Oregonian and the Evening Telegram.

He issued $51,000 of gold serial bonds, sold them solely on his reputation for newspaper management as evidenced in Pendleton, obtained par for them, amortized them from the earnings of the paper, bought in additional of the capital stock until he was virtually 100 per cent owner. Within 5 or 6 years, he once stated, he refused $1,000,000 for the property, and in the afternoon of the same day refused an offer of $1,500,000.

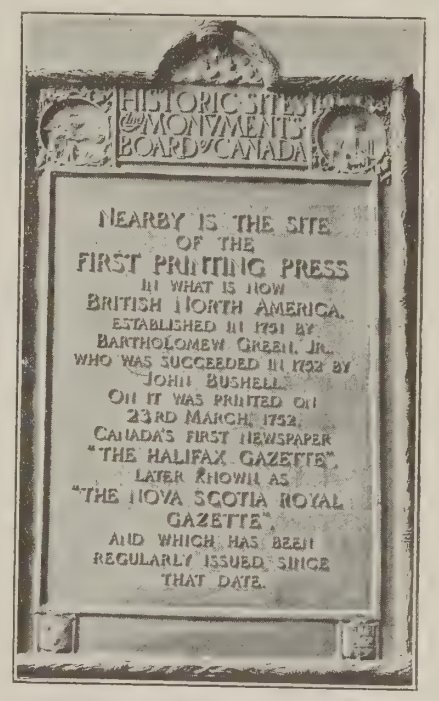
The Journal was then, so Mr. Jackson said, netting annually $165,000. But it was not from monetary considerations that he rejected these offers.

"I said to the gentleman who proffered the money, which was to be in actual gold or in gold bonds," he declared later, "'What in the world would I do with a million and a half dollars?' I wouldn't know how to use it. And what would I then do? Start another paper?"

For 40 years the Portland publisher preached the single tax, yet always he was the boon companion of men high in finance, industry, commerce, civic effort and political life, and in no year and at no moment in any year did one of them long scorn his opinions.

The dean of a Western school of journalism, when asked to comment on the Journal under Mr. Jackson's control, once said:

"It was the human as well as humane type of organization which Sam Jackson developed. The Journal is a club of self-respecting co-workers with the publisher. There is loyalty to the employes. There is fearlessness in upholding unpopular causes—more, probably, than in all but a very few instances anywhere. Never, in my knowledge, has there been hesitancy to sacrifice financial gains to brave advocacy. The paper has a kindly way—a 'heart.'"



A. A. C. W. TAKING NO STAND IN P.O. RATE FIGHT

THAT no one has been authorized to speak for the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at the postal rate hearing in Washington, is the burden of a telegram sent from the headquarters office of the organization in New York to Robert E. Hutchinson, in charge of the Washington office of the Association.

"Failure of press dispatches to state clearly the connections of advertising men appearing at the hearings has resulted in confusion," the telegram to Mr. Hutchinson stated, and it was suggested that it would clarify the situation if the telegram from headquarters could be read into the record.

The Associated Advertising Clubs, explains Carl Hunt, manager of the Association, is made up of many organizations, representing various interests in advertising, striving toward certain ends in connection with the improvement of advertising, but this does not of necessity mean that the various elements must or can have a unanimity of thought on everything that relates to advertising. The Associated Advertising Clubs, therefore, could not possibly express a view on this subject, since it is not in unanimity as to where additional revenues for the post office should come from.

TABLET MARKS SITE OF FIRST PRINTING PRESS

THE tablet reproduced above was unveiled at the Nova Scotia Province Building, Halifax, on Dec. 20, marking the site of the first printing press in what is now British North America.

The ceremony of unveiling was performed by the Hon. MacCallum Grant, lieutenant governor of Nova Scotia before an assemblage of distinguished citizens and visitors.

Another tablet marks the spot where the first copy of the Halifax Gazette was printed—the cradle of newspaper making in British North America.

JOSEPH M. ADAMS

Assistant M.E., St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Dies of Heart Attack

Joseph Madison Adams, 48, assistant managing editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and a member of its editorial organization for 25 years, died at his home in St. Louis, Dec. 28, from a heart attack. Mr. Adams collapsed a short distance away from his home, while on his way to St. Luke's Hospital to call on O. K. Bovard, managing editor of the Post-Dispatch, who is a patient there with typhoid fever.

Mr. Adams was a native of Chariton county, Mo., and was reared and educated in Chariton and Howard counties, attending Central College at Fayette. He went to Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., for a law course, which he completed. He went to the Pacific Coast for a while and then returned to his home working for a time on a paper in salisbury, Mo., before coming to St. Louis.

He joined the staff of the Post-Dispatch in 1899, and it was the only city paper for which he worked. For five years he did reporting. His first desk was as telegraph editor. He became editor of the first Sunday edition, and 12 years ago was made assistant managing editor.

Iowa Paper Company Sold

The Baker Paper Company of Cedar Rapids, Ia., has been sold by Ward Baker, president, and George A. Mills, secretary-treasurer, to Ralph R. Epler, vice-president of the company. The sale, which is effective Jan. 1, involved $88,000.

COMPLETE TEXT OF FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION COMPLAINT

(Continued from page 6)

undertaking and in carrying out its said purposes.

(e) By and through oral and written statements and representations both directed to publishers generally and to individual publishers, brings pressure and coercion to bear upon such publishers to cause them to refuse to publish the advertisements of direct advertisers at net rates, and to charge for said advertisements at gross rates; directly and indirectly threatening said publishers that unless they accede to such demand respondent agencies will refuse to further supply such publishers with national advertising.

(f) In connection with the coercion brought to bear upon publishers, referred to in specification (e) hereof, and to render same the more effective, published a booklet entitled "Client Members of the A.A.A.A.," which contained a list of about five thousand national advertisers who place their national advertising through respondent agencies, and distributed copies of said publication among newspaper publishers throughout the United States.

(g) Sought and secured the cooperation of respondent corporation in compelling the publisher-clients of respondent corporation to cooperate in said combination and to refuse to accept direct advertising at net rates and to charge therefor at gross rates.

(h) Sought and secured the cooperation of respondent publishers' association and its members in carrying out said combination and its said purposes.

(i) By means of information and reports secured from and given by respondent agencies, by respondent corporation, by respondent publishers' association and its members, and by other special representatives and publishers, seeks and secures information relating to direct advertising at net rates, together with the names of the advertisers so advertising and the names of the newspapers whose publishers accept and publish said advertising at net rates.

(j) Sends said information and the names of said advertisers and newspapers to respondent corporation and respondent publishers' association for use by them in carrying out said combination and its said purposes.

(k) From the information and data obtained as set out in Specification (h) hereof, and by other means, compiles list of names of newspapers whose publishers accept and publish direct advertising at net rates, and sends a copy of each said list to each respondent agency to be used by it in carrying out said combination and its said purposes.

(l) Respondent agencies make use of said lists in bringing intimidation and persuasion to bear upon the publishers of the newspapers so listed to compel them to cases accepting direct advertising at net rates, and in future to charge gross rates therefor, and in connection therewith threaten to and do refuse to further supply said publishers with national advertising, or curtail such supply unless and until said publishers comply with said demand.

(m) Procure from publishers and groups of publishers agreements and promises that said publishers will accept and publish direct advertising at gross rates only.

(n) Through bulletins issued from time to time and through other correspondence the association keeps respondent agencies advised of the names of newspapers whose publishers accord said net rates to direct advertisers, and the names of newspapers whose publishers accord said gross rates only, including in said last named class the names of newspapers whose publishers formerly so accorded net rates but who have ceased so to do and who have adopted the practice of accepting national advertising directly from advertisers at gross rates only. Respondent agencies use said information in carrying out said combination and its said purposes.

(o) Use other cooperative means to carry out and effectuate said combination and its said purposes.

Respondent American Press Association:

(a) Publishers in its said trade journal, The American Press, editorials and articles condemnatory of the allowance of net rates by publishers to direct advertisers and condemning specifically and by name newspapers whose publishers accept and publish direct advertising at net rates.

(b) Publishes editorials, articles and open letters in said trade journal in which newspaper publishers are warned that unless said publishers support respondent agencies in carrying out the purposes of said combination, and unless such publishers refuse to accept direct advertising at net rates and accept same only at gross rates, respondent corporation and respondent agency association and its members will refuse to further supply such publishers with national advertising in the future, or will greatly curtail same.

(c) Through articles and requests published in said trade journal and by other means solicits and secures from its publisher-clients the names of newspapers whose publishers accept direct advertising at net rates.

(d) Through editorials, articles and open letters published in said trade journal warns direct advertisers that it will use its influence to prevent its publisher-clients from accepting direct advertising at net rates.

(e) Procures from its publisher-clients written pledges signed by said clients wherein said clients pledge themselves not to accept direct advertising at net rates and that they will charge therefor at gross rates in the future.

(f) Publishers in said trade journal from time to time lists of the names of newspapers whose publishers refuse to accept direct advertising at net rates and who accept same only at gross rates, and the names of newspapers whose publishers have undertaken so to do in the future.

(g) Publishers in said trade journal from time to time lists of the names of newspapers whose publishers accept direct advertising at net rates and who refuse in future to charge gross rates therefor.

(h) Supplies to respondent agency association the information secured by the various means and methods above set out and otherwise, including the names of direct advertisers who are accorded net rates by publishers, the names of newspapers whose publishers so accord net rates, and the names of newspapers whose publishers refuse to accept direct advertising at net rates and who charge therefor at gross rates.

(i) Secures from respondent agency association information similar to that in specification (h) hereof set out, which information it uses in carrying out the aforesaid combination and its said purposes.

(j) Uses other cooperative means to carry out and effectuate said combination and its said purposes.

Respondent publishers' association and its members:

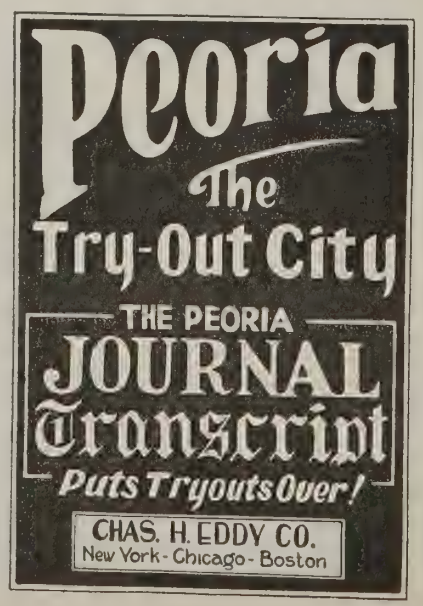
(a) Agreed among themselves to and do carry out and assist respondent agency association and its members in carrying out aforesaid combination and its said purposes.

(b) Adopt at annual conventions of the publishers' association, resolutions commending said combination and its said purposes and declaring the adherence thereto of respondent publishers, and supply copies of said resolutions to respondent agency association.

(c) Secure information regarding direct advertising at net rates, including the names of newspapers whose publishers accord net rates to direct advertisers, the names of newspapers whose publishers refuse to so accord net rates and who accept direct advertising at gross rates only, and the names of direct advertisers placing their advertising at net rates.

(d) Exchange said information among themselves to be used in carrying out said combination and its said purposes and supply said information to respondent agency association for similar use by it and its members.

(e) Agree among themselves to accept direct advertising at gross rates only and through respondent publishers' association and otherwise bring pressure and coercive measures to bear upon those of their members who fail to abide by said agreement and who accept direct advertising at less than gross rates, to compel said members to accept such advertising only at gross rates in the future.



(f) Use other cooperative means to carry out and effectuate said combination and its said purposes.

PARAGRAPH NINE: The result and effect of the aforesaid combination and conspiracy and of the acts and things done by respondents to effectuate the same, all as hereinbefore set out, has been and now is to hamper, hinder and obstruct national advertising throughout the United States; to restrict the dissemination and distribution of such advertising and of the type-parts essential thereto, to channels and upon terms and conditions dictated by respondents; to restrict the publication of national advertising to newspapers throughout the United States selected and approved by respondents; to compel newspaper publishers throughout the United States to charge for the publication of national advertising at aforesaid gross rates and to prevent them from according aforesaid net rates to direct advertisers; to compel national advertisers to employ respondent or other agencies as intermediaries in placing national advertising in newspapers throughout the United States, or in the alternative, to pay for direct advertising at aforesaid gross rates and in addition thereto to prepare and distribute their advertisements at their own expense; to hinder, obstruct and curtail the marketing of goods, wares and merchandise in interstate commerce and the prosecution of interstate business therein and place an undue and unreasonable restraint upon commerce among the several state upon one of the principal and inc sible means and instrumentalitie carrying on such commerce.

PARAGRAPH TEN: The abo leged acts and practices of respo are all to the prejudice of the publ constitute unfair methods of comp in commerce within the intent and ing of Section 5 of an Act of Co entitled, "An Act To create a F Trade Commission, to define its p and duties, and for other purposes proved September 26, 1914.

WHEREFORE, THE PREM CONSIDERED, the Federal Commission, on this 17th day o cember, A. D., 1924, now here issu its complaint against said responde

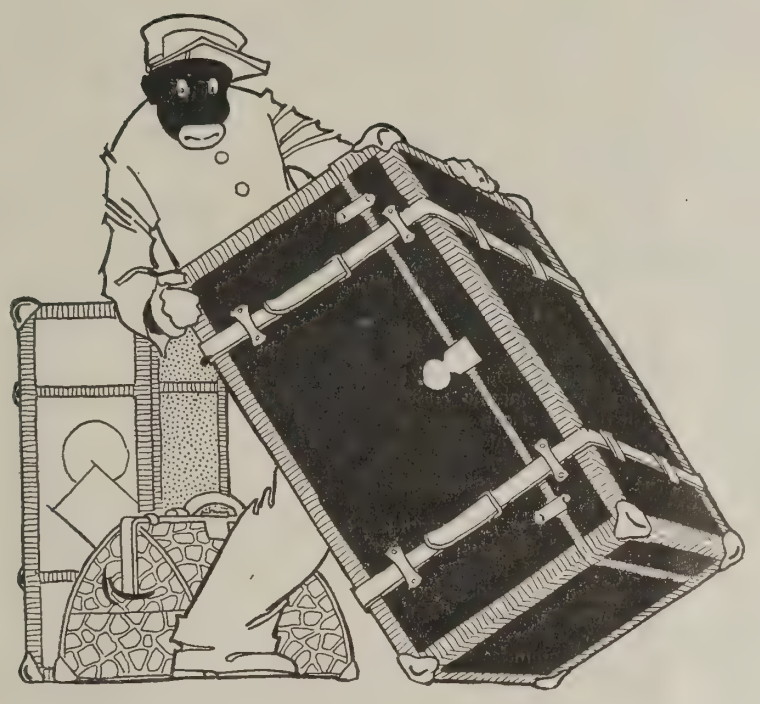
Notice is hereby given you, eac all the respondents named in the c hereof, that the 5th day of Feb 1925, at 10:30 o'clock in the for is hereby fixed as the time, and the of the Federal Trade Commission, City of Washington, D. C., as the when and where a hearing will be h the charges set forth in this com at which time and place you shall the right, under said Act, to appea show cause why an Order should entered by said Commission requirir to Cease and Desist from the vio of the law charged in this complair

First Full Page Ad in 1879

The first full-page department advertisement appeared in a news in 1879, according to Russell H. well in "The Romantic Rise of a American," John Wanamaker's story, published this week by Har Bros. Mr. Wanamaker that year "st all," when he started taking ful space in Philadelphia newspapers, well records. Later he created ar sensation in taking a full-page adve ment in the Paris Herald, now European edition of the New York ald Tribune.

Daily Printing Despite Explosio

The Newton (Ia.) Daily News, aged to the extent of $10,000 De when an explosion in the boiler wrecked a wall and damaged a amount of its mechanical and office e ment, has continued publication wi missing an edition.



St. Paul Dailies Cut Price

The St. Paul Dispatch and Pi Press have reduced the subscription from 90 cents a month to 15 cents a or 65 cents a month, for the thirte sues per week.

Christmas Dinner to Staff

The Billings (Mont.) Gazette host to all members of its staff Christmas dinner, Dec. 25.

San Francisco Chronicle
M. H. de Young
Leading Newspaper of th Pacific Coast
"Blankets" Northern an Central California
A clientele that can and do buy everything
National Advertising Representatives
Williams, Lawrence & Cresmer Co.
225 Fifth Ave. NEW YORK
360 N. Michigan Av CHICAGO

Reach Detroit's Winter Resorters Via The News

DETROIT—a city of more than a million—offers winter resort advertisers a particularly profitable field, for Detroit contains a liberal spending wealthy class, perhaps without equal for any other city of Detroit's size. Detroit's wealthy are still in the process of adding to their fortunes. Wealth is still fluid and not fixed nor conservative in the automotive center of the world.

Most of the big railroads realize the opportunity Detroit offers and among the lines using The News are the Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago & North Western, Florida East Coast, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Rock Island, Santa Fe, Seaboard Air Line, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Union Pacific, Canadian National, Canadian Pacific, etc.

Use The News, the one paper that reaches every Detroiter, to increase your patronage.

The Detroit News

Greatest Circulation Week Day or Sunday in Michigan

PUBLICITY NO MENACE TO THE PUBLIC, MASTER PRESS AGENT ARGUES

Says Public Can Protect Itself by "Finding the Fellow Behind It" in Talk Before Chicago Convention of Journalism Teachers

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

CHICAGO, Dec. 30—Taking issue with the peremptory condemnations of propaganda and publicity men, Ivy L. Lee, New York publicity agent, speaking before members of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism and the Association of American Schools and Departments of Journalism at their annual convention at the Hotel LaSalle, declared that publicity was entirely a matter of service to the public. Propaganda is not a question in itself, he declared, but the issue involved was the sincerity and the honesty of the source promoting the undertaking.

"Twenty years ago," Mr. Lee said, "A campaign was started by a society of American publishers aided by magazines like EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Printers Ink, and others, against the 'press agent.' In those years it has been my observation that instead of losing his place, the press agent has been made more and more welcome in the offices of editors. The campaign has been a failure because it was based on the failure to appreciate the value of the 'press agents.'"

"Publicity viewed in its broader sense is every form of expression—advertising, bill boards, the radio, brass bands. Propaganda is fundamentally an effort to get over an idea, and there is hardly one of us who is not always trying to get his own ideas impressed on the mind of another by propaganda."

"There is no doubt that much injurious publicity is sincere, but the public can protect itself by investigating the source and finding out who the fellow is behind it. The question of free publicity ceases to be a question and becomes a matter of judgment on the part of the editor to use the kind of information that will get circulation. Editors should welcome all free publicity, acquaint themselves with its source and its cause, and then of their intelligence choose and use what they wish, but never refuse all on principle."

Mr. Lee pointed out that this latter course would necessitate the elimination of baseball reports from the papers, with undoubted dire consequences. But, because it is of interest to the people generally, baseball news is accepted, he said.

"News is any information of interest to people today," Mr. Lee said. "It need not have happened today or yesterday to be news. It may even be the translation of an inscription on an Egyptian sarcophagus, thousands of years old. News, in its differentiation from advertising, is what people are willing to pay for to have brought to their attention. Advertising is what the public will not pay for and what the advertiser must pay for to bring to public attention. The question of publicity thereby becomes a mere matter of judgment on the part of the editor. Publicity is a matter of responsibility of statement, a matter of simple honesty and it will thrive in the main because it is honest and effective."

Speaking of the careers open to the journalism student, Mr. Lee said there were two. "The first is 'pure' journalism in its proper sense," he said. "The field of newspapers and magazines definitely representing the public. The other is the constructive side of 'pure' publicity."

"Unfortunately," Mr. Lee told the teachers, "The second line pays better than the first. The first does not pay to hold its men. A correspondent in France is paid $12,000 by his newspaper, considered an excellent wage in the field, to interpret the French people and the French nation to the American populace. Why it is worth more than four times that to the French government to have him color his reports on occasion."

"The publicity field attracts the better brains and leaves only the moderate for the newspapers and magazines. This question of compensation soon must be fixed," he declared.

G. B. Hotchkiss, of New York, president of the National Association of Advertising Teachers, addressed the delegates at a dinner and smoker on Monday evening. He told of the relation of journalism to advertising and the need to guard against propaganda which was neither advertising nor news. Mr. Hotchkiss emphasized the importance of a knowledge of economics as a background for successful journalism.

Several papers were presented by members dealing with the academic problems of journalism. Among these were R. R. Barlow, University of Minnesota; Helen O'Mahin, University of Kansas; N. A. Crawford, Kansas State Agricultural College; Edwin G. Burrows, University of Michigan; J. W. Cunliffe, Columbia University; J. S. Myers, Ohio State University; L. N. Flint, University of Kansas, and L. W. Murphy, University of Illinois.

E. M. Johnson, University of Wisconsin, reading a paper on "Analyzing a rural community as the basis for editing and publishing a newspaper," discussed the trend in country journalism during the past 30 years. Prof. Johnson stated that "editorial research will do as much to give newspapers a higher standing in their rightful field as merchandising service has in their profitable sideline. It is especially necessary that the small town newspapers lead in such studies for they are in the greatest danger. Since 1915, weekly newspapers have decreased by 3,000 and deaths and mergers are still continuing. Many communities are still overpopulated with newspapers so there is reason to believe that there will be a still further decrease of both weekly and daily newspapers. The real problem confronting the community and the Metropolitan press as well, however is that of preserving small town and rural life."

A National Council for Research in Journalism was chosen by the societies to continue the work already accomplished in that field. The committee named comprised: Willard G. Bleyer, University of Wisconsin, Chairman; M. Lyle Spencer, University of Washington; J. W. Cunliffe, Columbia University; Frank W. Scott, University of Illinois; and Walter Williams, University of Missouri.

In the report of the Council on Education for Journalism it was declared that preparation for journalism should also include practice and instruction in journalistic technique, and consideration of the responsibility of the journalist to society. All instruction in journalism should be based on a recognition of the function of the newspaper and other publications in society and government, and should not be concerned merely with developing proficiency in journalistic technique it read, "The aims and methods of instruction, it stated, should not be those of a trade school, but should be the same standards as those of other professional schools and colleges."

The members of the council were permitted to retain their places and continue with their work, with Willard G. Bleyer as Chairman.

At the Tuesday morning session of the Association of American Schools and Departments of Journalism, C. P. Cooper, Columbia University was elected president. A. L. Stone, University of Montana, was made vice-president, and J. S. Myers, Ohio State University, was chosen as secretary-treasurer.

J. W. Piercy of Indiana University, presided at the sessions of the journalism teachers, while M. Lyle Spencer, University of Washington, acted as Chairman during the meetings of the other association.

Advertising as one of the vital factors in the economic and social life of the nation, was considered by members of the American Economic Association meeting with the American Association of Advertising Teachers at their first joint session, in the Auditorium Hotel, Dec. 29, during the annual conventions of the two societies here.

Prof. George B. Hotchkiss, of the department of advertising and marketing of New York University, and president of the National Association of Advertising Teachers, spoke on "An Economic Defense of Advertising."

Prof. Hotchkiss declared that advertising does not create demand, but it does transmit the knowledge showing the economic advantage of the use of a product.

Other speakers at the session were: Frederick E. Clark of Northwestern University; who gave an economic criticism of advertising. Prof. W. D. Moriarty, University of Washington; Prof. Morris A. Copeland, Cornell University, and Paul T. Cherington, Director of Research for J. Walter Thompson Company, New York.

At the separate business sessions of the teachers, Prof. Hugh E. Agnew, New York University, discussed the development of the nomenclature and terminology of advertising and marketing. "With all the new ideas that have been developed in advertising and marketing in the past few years," he declared, "There have been less than a dozen new terms introduced into the language to indicate the nature or scope of those new ideas. Old terms have been crowded and cramped, twisted and stretched to make them cover new and changed concepts," he asserted.

Prof. E. J. Kilduff, New York University, spoke on the value of business English courses in the colleges as a stepping stone to advertising.

At the annual dinner of the association, held Monday evening at the Hamilton Club, representatives of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, the National Advertising Commission, the Association of National Advertisers, the American Association of Advertising Agencies and the Advertising Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce engaged in round table discussion with the teachers regarding co-operation between the advertising teachers and advertising executives.

Officers chosen for 1925, were: Prof. Edward J. Kilduff, president; Prof. Frederick Russell, University of Illinois, and Harry Wellman, of Dartmouth; vice-presidents; and Prof. Nathaniel W. Barnes, University of Chicago, re-elected secretary and treasurer.

35,434

Net paid (1923) Average.
An increase of 47% in 7 Years.

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.

National Representatives

Marbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg. Chicago

IN eleven months of 1924, The Cincinnati Enquirer published 600,439 lines of passenger car display advertising. This is 146,603 lines more than all the other Cincinnati papers combined and 111,755 lines in excess of twice as much as the next leading paper.

The Enquirer for many, many years has carried more automobile advertising than all the other Cincinnati papers combined. What makes this possible? PROVED RESULTS!

The Enquirer alone will serve the Cincinnati territory for any passenger car or accessory advertiser. It carries the real punch in circulation, reader interest and prestige.

1925 AUTO SHOW NUMBER
JANUARY 11

The CINCINNATI
ENQUIRER

One of the World's Greatest Newspapers

Two Letters

"Our Customers Write Our Ads"

Because they refer to presses of outstanding interest, one the Heavy Duty Semi-cylindrical and the other the Heavy Duty Tubular, we publish together these two recent letters. These words of users tell a story you want to read, facts you want to know.

NEW YORK WORLD

Irving K. Stone, Esq.,
President, Duplex Printing Press Company,
Battle Creek, Michigan.

New York City
November 18th, 1924

Dear Mr. Stone:

Our new DOUBLE OCTUPLE DUPLEX press is giving us fine production. The unprecedented fact is, that we ran it on the regular edition of the Evening World the first day of operation.

In pursuance of our agreement, this letter will serve as instruction to go ahead with the next presses for The World, to be installed on conditions agreeable to you and our General Manager; one Double Octuple Press to be delivered at as early a date as possible.

Very truly yours.
Ralph Pulitzer, President

NIAGARA FALLS GAZETTE

Niagara Falls, N. Y.
November 10th, 1924

The Duplex Printing Press Company,
Battle Creek, Michigan.

Gentlemen:

It is a year since we started regularly on our new DUPLEX TUBULAR FORTY-PAGE, four plate wide press, the first five unit, five roll, Tubular press used in the world.

We want you to know that we are very much pleased with this equipment and it is giving us perfect satisfaction. It is an unusually well built, strongly constructed, easy running press. The ink distribution is perfect. It is a very economically operated press, getting the same product per hour as a decuple or eighty-plate semi-cylindrical equipment.

We are sure you will be pleased to know that we have made the largest increase in circulation during the past year since the paper was founded in 1854, due largely to our metropolitan press equipment. It is our belief that no one is publishing a better printed paper in the United States.

Yours very respectfully,
A. C. Deuel, Publisher

THE DUPLEX PRINTING PRESS CO.

Battle Creek, Michigan

World Building
New York City

Chicago Temple Building
Chicago

de Young Building
San Francisco

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

Herald's Rapid Growth—Retirement and Death of Mr. Hudson —More Herald Expeditions

TOWARD the close of 1872, with a verified circulation of 152,000 copies daily, the Herald establishment had expanded so rapidly that Mr. Bennett was forced to consider plans for securing additional space for his presses and mechanical equipment. Within five years the splendid building had apparently become inadequate to meet the paper's growing demands, and in November he seriously contemplated making an offer to buy the immense marble building located at the corner of Chambers street and Broadway, from A. T. Stewart, now the property of Mr. Munsey. Whether Bennett ever actually negotiated for its purchase is uncertain, but that he badly needed additional space was evident.

The problem was eventually solved by transferring his steam plant to the basement of the new Bennett Building, one block away, at the corner of Ann and Nassau streets, and connecting it with the engine by means of a pipe line laid under the surface of Ann street.

The Bennett Building just completed was the finest structure for office purposes in the city. It was designed by Arthur Gillman; was six stories in height and was of fireproof construction throughout.

At this time the employes had two associations. One, the New York Herald Club, celebrated the anniversary of the founding of the paper by a banquet annually held on May 6; while the other, the Pension and Annuity Fund Association had been established in 1869, with a donation of $10,000 from the senior Bennett. Both are now long extinct, but mention of them will recall to the few surviving ex-members, the "good old days" of genuine comradeship and kindly feeling that then permeated the staff of the Herald.

It was in 1873 that Mr. Bennett, 2nd, began to demonstrate to his amazed contemporaries the possibilities of modern journalism backed by vast resources. He hired special trains to deliver his Sunday papers in Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, while in 1874 he ran special trains to Saratoga, then a rival of Newport as the fashionable summer resort, and in 1875 started his "lightning trains" to Niagara and way points, breaking all records for speed and regularity of delivery of the Sunday Herald.

In 1874 he began the cabling of foreign ship news to his paper at heavy expense, and in the same year published elaborate editions commemorating the Lexington-Concord and the Mecklenburg Centennials.

It was his proud and truthful boast that the Herald was the most progressive newspaper in the world, and to carry out his ambitious plans, he had been obliged to drop the editorship of the Telegram, placing its control in the hands of Mr. Douglas Levien, and under whose able management the paper prospered and began to boast of its "enormous circulation."

The advent of Mr. Bennett, Jr., as general manager of the Herald had been preceded by the retirement of Mr. Frederic Hudson, as managing editor, after having been connected with the paper for nearly 30 years. His place was eventually filled by the appointment of Mr. Thomas B. Connery, and he went to reside at Concord, Mass., where in 1872 he published a "History of Journalism in America," the standard work on the subject. We quote his final comments on the Herald's prosperity, usefulness and its prospects for the future, showing how the keenest observer cannot hope to accurately predict the coming course of events:

"The Herald is a 'one-man' power. It is therefore probable that like the London Times, it will outlive all other newspapers in its usefulness and enterprise. It is a remarkable fact that none of the famous journals have survived more than one generation as leading papers. Their enterprise, ability and fame would pass away with their originators; but the Herald seems more vigorous than ever. It has just started on its second generation, full of brains, full of tact, and full of money. Has not its new conductor a splendid opportunity? Let us compare the Herald of today with the Herald of 1835. What a difference!

"Will not the Herald of 1909, compared with the Herald of 1872, show as marked a change? Nous Verrons."

The death of Mr. Hudson occurred at Concord, Mass., on Oct. 21, 1875, thus passing away one of the ablest, most loyal and trusted of the senior Bennett's co-laborers in the journalistic field.

(To be continued next week)

BEST DETECTIVE STORY OF 1924

Serialized in 24 Daily Installments.

For Samples and Terms Wire

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Sixty-two Christmas Days have passed since the Standard Union was established by Brooklyn patriots to uphold the Union.

It occupies a rare position in the hearts of the people it serves to-day, just as it served them in 1862.

(Dec. 25, 1924.)

R. J. R. Shuttleworth
President

LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY BROOKLYN NEWSPAPER

QUALITY Brings QUANTITY

As Demonstrated by Powerful New York Newspaper That Has More Than Fulfilled Promise of Long Ago

By MRS. H. CRAIG DARE

In Newspaperdom

IT is well, sometimes, to turn back the pages of history and think of the water that has passed over the wheel since first the mill began to grind. When I learned that in 1924 The New York Times had printed 26,283,924 agate lines of advertising I turned to an article published in Newspaperdom August 21, 1902, written by the late Harrison Craig Dare.

That article told how The Times, under the management of Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, which began in 1896, had flung its challenge of quality of readers into a newspaper publishing field whose only slogan up to that time had been quantity of circulation. The Times had already outstripped some competitors and it gave every indication of continuing a progress which was even then astonishing advertisers and publishers alike.

Now, I hold no brief for The New York Times individually, but everybody connected directly or indirectly with the newspaper business holds very distinctly a brief for any newspaper which sets up a high standard and maintains it successfully and profitably through the course of more than a quarter of a century. The Times has done that, and so its unchanged and unchanging policy and the results of its operation are worthy of a few moments, at least, of study.

Even in the day when the article to which I refer was written there were not lacking those who doubted strongly the ultimate success of a newspaper which did not lend itself to the sensational headlines and pictorial display which characterized New York newspapers of the latter end of the last century.

Nor did most people believe that any newspaper could advantageously tell its advertisers how they should use its advertising columns. Nevertheless, the circulation had advanced from 21,516 in 1896 to 105,416 in 1902, the year the article was written. It is now, I am advised, 360,000 daily and more than 600,000 Sunday—a daily and Sunday average of nearly 390,000.

The Times gained in strength and robustness until today it has the richest and most productive clientele for advertisers, so advertising agents inform me, of any New York newspaper. Its distribution has spread until it now has readers in every state of the Union and in many foreign countries as well. The numerical gain in the last twelve months has been more than 20,000 copies. This, though The Times has never placed quantity of circulation ahead of quality.

Long years ago The Times, thinking first of its readers and determining that no advertisers should exploit them, prepared an Index Expurgatorius for its advertising columns. Most of my readers are familiar with it, so the limitations it placed upon advertisements it would accept for publication will not be repeated in detail here. It prohibits any false or misleading statement and also debars injurious medicines and any announcement which may offend the good taste of its readers. A Censorship Committee passes upon doubtful cases and gives audience to the personal arguments of advertisers who believe they are being excluded without just cause. The advertising rejected has amounted in the aggregate to many millions of dollars, not a dollar of which The Times counts as an ultimate financial loss. During the twelve months of the year, it is safe to say, The Times has rejected, for one reason or another, $500,000 worth of advertising.

The 1902 article in Newspaperdom compares the advertising volume of The Times for that year with those of the six other New York morning newspapers then in existence. Time and combinations have reduced the number generally used for such comparison to three. Notwithstanding the halving of the number and the theoretical concentration of advertising, The Times maintains the leadership it had then as an advertising medium. The conclusion of 1924 shows that The Times has gained more than 2,000,000 lines of advertising over 1923. It will be interesting and informative to place in juxtaposition the results of 1924, using the statement of the Statistical Department of The New York Evening Post. The total advertising for the year was:

	Agate Lines
The New York Times.....	26,283,924
Second New York morning newspaper	16,858,354
Third New York morning newspaper	14,906,698
Fourth New York morning newspaper	13,306,960

The Times led by 9,425,570 lines

It is gratifying to every person who has the interests of newspapers and the great business of advertising at heart to note that the spirit of directness and decency in news columns and cleanliness and honesty in advertising columns, in which The Times was a pioneer, has spread to hundreds of other newspapers, and that those which have followed it the most closely have reaped the greatest benefit.

I know no better way to close this article than by repeating one of the closing paragraphs of Mr. Dare's article, for it is as true now as it was the day it was written more than twenty years ago:

"The Times has accomplished enough to convince any intelligent and unbiased observer of the trend of public opinion that it is New York City's most remarkable newspaper; that it not only revolutionized the morning field in this city, but that it shattered beyond repair and redemption the circulation air ships that hovered over this city with colors flying; and so handsomely that advertisers were becoming stiff-necked from upward gazing."

U. S. REPORTERS ABROAD SUCCESSFULLY SIFT NEWS FROM PROPAGANDA

Old Timers Have Little Trouble Digging Facts from Foreign Office Handouts—British Notables Expect Pay for Interviews

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Thatcher.

STRONG defence of the American correspondent abroad was forthcoming this week from Sidney Thatcher, London representative of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and the New York Evening Post, who, in an interview with EDITOR & PUBLISHER explained difficulties met at the British capital and told how propaganda was being carefully sifted for facts.

Mr. Thatcher arrived in this country on leave from London last week with Mrs. Thatcher, planning to remain here until February, when he will resume his post in England.

He comes here fresh from covering a big run of British news, which, extending from last August, has included the London Conference, lasting 35 days, the exciting election, the formation of the new Government, and recent Egyptian events.

His attention was called by the writer to a recent statement made by W. G. Shepherd, formerly of the United Press, to the effect that American correspondents abroad were controlled by the foreign offices.

"It is absolutely untrue," Thatcher declared in reply, "that the American newspaper men abroad are dominated by by propaganda.

"It is not difficult for those who know the ropes to sift the propaganda from the facts; and the old-timers abroad are seldom fooled.

"Ethics among American news writers in the foreign capitals are as high as in this country. As in the case here, there are frequently one or two shysters in a group of writers—a chap who is dull and can be consistently fooled by the foreign office.

"The British, it is true, are the greatest people in the world for propaganda. We are babies in this country in comparison.

"The situation today is much different than during the war, when the majority of correspondents were consciously writing propaganda. In the main, the American press representatives abroad are today proving an extraordinary ability in getting back of the screen to the real facts."

Mr. Thatcher explained the propaganda system employed by the British foreign office as follows:

The foreign office on any important question frames up what might be called its publicity policy. This, in outline form, is sent to embassies all over Europe, and when given out in so many different places, appears authoritative. The publicity policy may or may not be the truth. Mr. Thatcher believes it generally is. The foreign office also maintains a clip of all the different correspondents' copy, so that government officials all the time know what is being written.

"Once the correspondent understands this method," Mr. Thatcher explained, "it is easy for him to spot the publicity outline coming from the different European capitals. It is used then mainly as a tip, and is checked up by resorting to private sources of information. In this way a conscientious correspondent often gives the foreign office the go-by."

These "private sources," Mr. Thatcher admitted, were few and far between.

An interesting development in American reporting abroad was described by Mr. Thatcher as "the new business of journalism," in which authorities demand a price on their exclusive statements to the press.

"Certain English men and women have found that their views are wanted by American newspapers," he said. "Consequently, they have set and demand their own price.

"It is quite easy for an American newspaper man in England to obtain an 'exclusive interview' with an 'authority' if he is willing to lay the cash down on the table for it.

"This was true of the labor government and is still in evidence in the present regime. Lloyd George and Winston Churchill practice this new business and make a lot by it continually.

"Not long ago, I obtained a symposium from women members elected to Parliament. Included with one 300-word statement I received was a neatly penned note from the lady requesting me 'please to remit at the regular rates'."

He was asked what the phrase "as Downing Street explains it," means which appears frequently in London dispatches to this country.

Premier Baldwin, he explained, never receives newspaper men in conference. Instead, he has appointed a man to represent him and receive corespondents at 10 Downing Street.

"The only value of this arrangement is that if a question comes up on which the Governmental opinion is desired, you can obtain what is purported to be Premier Baldwin's attitude. Of course this centers all announcements on one man, who is carefully controlled and is himself necessarily cagey. Thus we always label such statements with the Downing Street phrase.

"When Ramsay MacDonald went into office, he in person held separate conferences with British, American, Continetal, South American and Far Eastern correspondents, during which he gave a good outline of his plans. Before dismissing each group, however, he politely informed them that he would not be available to the press from then on.

"Under Lloyd George, Americans had more success in Downing Street. Conferences with him were really valuable.

"Bonar Law clamped the lid down on everything. When Baldwin was in the United States settling the war debt, he went so far as to post an order to the effect that no American newspaper man be admitted to the Downing Street reception room. The butler was told to keep them out by force, if necessary, for three days.

"One bit of propaganda being spread by British newspapers," he declared, "concerns the payment of the war debt. The majority of English plain people believe that the United States demanded payment from Great Britain while giving terms t the French.

"The British newspapers are misleadi their readers on old facts, particula the Rothermere press. The truth, course, is that following the Armisti the United States allowed the Allies th years before consideration of payme was to be made. At the end of th years an identic note was sent to all a ing what they were prepared to pay. T French Commission frankly admitted ability, while the British delegation clared their desire to make complete s tlement."

The writer thought Mr. Thatcher mig have some tip to give editorial writers this country on the English attitude t wards the League of Nations.

"The British use the League of Natio as Lloyd George said he did," Mr. Tha cher said.

"Lloyd George used to say he had t files in his office and a wastebask While a good many things went into t wastebasket, those which demanded imm diate attention went into one file k close at hand, while those of no immedi importance went into the League of N tions file.

"The protocol to the League is hig disliked in England, and to delay the ga the Empire Conference is to be held. T Dominion Governments are cabling th they cannot attend. These cables w be held up by the British Government show that the Dominions are not fav able to the protocol."

Announcement

RAYMOND H. SCHOOLEY

has been appointed
Advertising Manager

and

GEORGE J. AUER

National Advertising Manager

of

The New York
Herald Tribune

Eleven Years
of Advertising Leadership
in the New York Evening Field

1924 marks the eleventh year of advertising leadership held by the New York Evening Journal among New York evening newspapers.

The selling power of the largest evening circulation in America—a daily circulation of 666,886 copies, at 3c each,—meaning a reading public in excess of 2,000,000—has made this continuous advertising supremacy possible for the Evening Journal and profitable for its advertisers.

14,409,150 lines of Advertising

were published in the Evening Journal during 1924. This was the largest volume ever published in one year in the Evening Journal's history. It was also the largest volume ever published by any evening paper in New York.

A Gain of 1,481,130 Lines was made over 1923. That year, in turn, had been the largest previous year in advertising that the Evening Journal had ever experienced.

Agate lines of advertising, however, are only statistics. They are the yardsticks by which the preference of advertisers can be measured. Advertisers, being business men, use most lineage where they find most sales at a profit—because advertising for all of them is merely a form of selling.

Their preference for the Evening Journal among New York evening papers is clearly shown by the dollars invested in agate lines. They used the Evening Journal more than any other evening paper in New York. This is the most practical proof that, in this market of 9,000,000 people, the Evening Journal will sell goods better and a little more quickly than any other evening paper that advertisers can use.

America's greatest evening newspaper

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

Largest evening circulation in America and at 3c a copy

NEW DAILY LAUNCHED

Bristol (Va.-Tenn.) News Began Publication New Year's Day

The Bristol Publishing Corporation, of Bristol, Va., Tenn., of which Munsey Slack, formerly of Johnson City, Tenn., is president and Charles J. Harkrader, of Bristol, vice-president and secretary, on New Year's day launched the Bristol News, a new afternoon newspaper in Bristol. The corporation also publishes the Bristol Herald Courier, morning and Sunday paper.

Benjamin and Kentnor are foreign representatives of both papers.

The papers are housed in a new home costing $100,000. The company has just installed three new Intertype machines besides new metal furniture, including make-up, assembling and correcting tables.

The new afternoon paper carries full Associated Press service besides special wires covering the states of Virginia and Tennessee.

To Arrange Detroit Ad Meet

Clinton F. Berry, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the annual convention of the A. A. C. W. to be held in Detroit, Mich., January 29-30, this week announced names of the men who will assist him in preparations for the meet. They are: Frank L. Pierce, secretary, Direct By Mail Advertising Association; Harry C. MacDonald, vice-president, Walker Sign Company; E. St. Elmo Lewis, vice-president, Campbell-Ewald Company; Frank J. Campbell, advertising manager, First National Bank; Maurice J. Caplan, president, Metropolitan Moving Picture Company; Ward Gavett, manager, R. L. Polk & Co.

Yugoslavia Decorates Louis Wiley

The Commander's Cross of the Order of St. Stava has been conferred upon Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, by the King of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes. The decoration, which will be presented through Minster Pavivhich in Washington, is for Mr. Wiley's services to the Serbian Aid Fund during the war.

Sprague Recovering from Operation

Frank F. Sprague, financial editor of the New York Herald Tribune, is recoveering from a recent operation for appendicitis performed in a New York hospital.

A.N.A. Protests Postal Rate Rise

Advertisers are opposed to any increase in postal rates, Robert K. Leavitt, secretary of the Association of National Advertisers, declared before the postal rate hearing in Washington, this week.

Inland Press Meeting Feb. 17-18

The next meeting of the Inland Daily Press will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 17-18, at the Morrison Hotel in Chicago.

WOMEN HOLD SURPRISE PARTY FOR N. Y. WORLD MEN

FOUR women members of the display advertising department of the New York World surprised the men of the staff by "throwing" a party Christmas Eve for them, with a tree, presents, dancing, an' everything. They were the Misses A. M. Bradley, Constance M. Leahly, Caroline J. Wilhelm and Marion Weaver.

The men who were honored included: (They're all in the picture.) Foster Gilroy, advertising manager, Sam Freedman, S. Hydeman, Ed Pool, Steve Berger, Harry Swanson, Fred Glover, Knight Hunt, Chester Eskey, James A. Francis, Fred Oppenheimer, Charles Hughes, Jeff Roe, MacDougall Pallen, Norman Chrystal, James Roe, R. C. Mc-Michaels, Frank Haverby, Edward born, Joseph Holland, Richard El Carl Penny, Dick Adams, Paul Wal Tim Gorman, and Fred Fletcher.

The girls bought all the pres decorated the tree and then issued in tions to the party to the men. The ents were all clever and humo "slams."

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

Jan. 2, 3, 4—Associated Press Superintendents, second annual conference, New York.

Jan. 4—Eighth and Ninth Georgia District Press Assn., meeting, Covington, Ga.

Jan. 10—Alabama Press Assn., northern section, mid-year meeting, Birmingham, Ala.

Jan. 13-14—Board of Directors, A.A.A.A., quarterly meeting, New York.

Jan. 15—Nevada Press Assn., meeting, Lovelock, Nev.

Jan. 16-17—North Dakota Press Assn., winter meeting, Valley City, N. D.

Jan. 16-17—Virginia Press Assn., mid-year meeting, Charlottesville.

Jan. 17-23—American Society of Newspaper Editors, annual convention, Washington, D. C.

WE take pleasure in announcing the appointment of Mr. Thomas L. Emory as manager of our San Francisco office beginning January 1, 1925.

VERREE & CONKLIN, Inc.
New York Chicago Detroit San Francisco

Ben Franklin THRIFT SALE
TRADE MARK

Two Weeks From Today —January 17th!

There's not much time between now and the start of this newest and strongest of classified advertising campaigns—the progressive newspaper's tie-up with the National Thrift Season.

But enough time for you to put on this great volume-building Ben Franklin Thrift Sale for its profitable, popular three-weeks' run in your Merchandise Classified Columns!

The complete layout of this campaign has already reached your office. Once you've seen it—we know what you'll think of it!

Mail—or better yet—wire your order at once. We will fill your campaign supply requirements by return mail. Right now is the time to make sure of big mid-winter classified volume!

The Basil L. Smith System, Inc.
Packard Bldg., Philadelphia

LINOTYPE SERVICE

East—West—North—South

For the Dominion of Canada and the Wide World Over

Prompt service through conveniently located agencies and depots of supply insures continuity of publication and the fulfillment of printers' contracts.

© TRADE LINOTYPE MARK ©

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE CO.

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Agencies in the Principal Cities of the World

520.25.2-F

Composed entirely on the LINOTYPE in the Caslon Old Face Series except for title line, which is hand set

SECTION TWO GENERAL NEWS SOCIETY, MARKETS,
WANT ADS.

Chicago Daily Tribune.
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

The Tribune's Telephone Number Is Central 0100

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBEP 17, 1924. * * 25

Red Hair and Blue Sea

By Stanley R. Osborn.

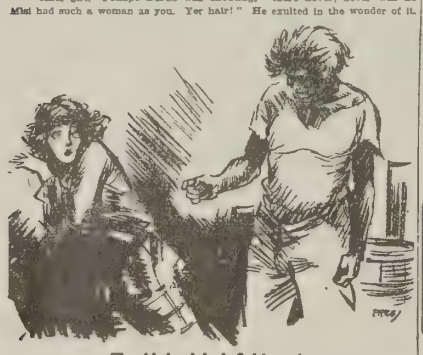
BLUE RIBBON FICTION

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

SYNOPSIS

Palmyra Tree, on board the yacht Rainbow, which is leaving the California coast for the south seas, is startled to see a sinewy brown hand with a black lace mitt on it thrust through her porthole window. Palmyra is loved by two men, John Thurston and Van Buren Rutger. She is not certain which man she loves.

Palmyra determines to unearth the owner of that sinister hand, but tells no one her purpose. She discovers Ponapé Burke, who confesses he is a smuggler of coolies and opium. Burke permits her a glimpse of a savage brown man, Olive, hiding with him. Palmyra does the latter a good turn.



She gradually convinces herself she is in love with Van Buren Rutger. Burke and Olive leave the yacht at Honolulu, and Palmyra's engagement to Van Buren is announced. The yacht Rainbow is wrecked. The party lands on an uninhabited island faced with starvation. Burke appears on the Pigeon of Noah, and promises to rescue them. Palmyra goes on board alone to investigate, and finds herself a prisoner. Burke sails away with Palmyra, telling her it was he who wrecked the yacht Rainbow. Thurston and Van Buren start at dawn in vain pursuit. Burke outlines his plan to Palmyra of making her queen of Tanna island.

INSTALLMENT XXI.

WHITE SAVAGE OR BROWN?

Palmyra was increasingly understanding how irrevocably, on the Rainbow, Burke had been misled by her caprice. Listening at first in a pleased surprise, he had been eagerly self-deceived. Sure that the lawless strain, persisting through environment, had at last roused, he was now convinced she was already in love with the life he typified—though she herself did not as yet perceive the fact—and that, in the glamour of life cast upon himself, she would in time willingly come to be his own.

"And, girl," Ponapé Burke was shouting, "there never, never was no Mini had such a woman as you. Yer hair!" He exulted in the wonder of it.

The girl shrank back, fled in panic.

"That's how y'least 'em all. For didn't I tell y the Tasnamen saw red? Grabbed at red calico, smeared their faces bright and gay, rouged up the dead warrior gaudy t'meet his maker, wound their own heads all over with red vine t'cover the wool?

"Don't y'understand? That's what I was waiting on. The queen o' my devil's own mission had t'have red hair. And, Palm, them Tasnamen'll go pitiful crazy with pious pagan joy when they see yer locks alighting up, as the sun hits 'em, like a stove full o' coals busting into flame. Hair, I tell you, same as that o' some o' the big buck gods o' Melanesia themselves. Yes, I say it, girl—heathen hair!

"Why, Palm, I wish t'the Lord y'could see yerself. I wish y'could understant yerself. T'was plain born for the life. When I've waked y'up, you'll be eager for Tanna; for Tanna, where a man can be a man; where there's never a law but the law o' the cookpot and the sun and the wind—and the will o' you and me."

Ponapé Burke did a jig step or two across the deck.

"Say, Palm, girl," he exclaimed; "say—you and yer heathen hair! Did I, or did I not, mention as how I was going t'make y'a real sure enough queen?"

It was Burke's continuing delight in her every show of angry spirit, his self-restraining sense of competence to bring the comedy to an end any moment he chose, that most intimidated Palmyra.

If at first he had been chagrined, common sense quickly intervened. Evan he, in his enthusiasm, could scarcely expect a girl, torn from parents, lover, the whole world she had known; even he could scarcely expect her, within the twenty-fourth hour, to dance and sing.

Hence it was that, soon, at such new outburst, he was tittering jubilantly. "There's a spirit for you," he would cry. "There's a temper. Born, I'll say, for the life. A lass fit for any man."

It was useless to explain her misconception on the Rainbow, her revulsion now.

"Wait 'till I've—ed you," he would laugh. "Then we'll get along fine. And you'll sure like Tanna when y'get the taste o' power in yer pretty mouth."

Only once had he laid a hand upon her. That was when, in a fury, she had flown at him, clawing his face. He had held her away, loudly hilarious. "I'd steal a kiss," he cried, "if 'twasn't for my sore arm. But, no, I can wait 'till y'come free, poking out yer lips and begging me t'take a smack. 'Twon't be long."

It was the absolute belief of this primitive man in her early capitulation that daunted the girl. Almost, the fierce upflare of passion might have seemed less terrible.

Nor was her situation made easier by Burke's evil sense of humor. Possibly to hasten her surrender, more probably in a mere cruel amusement, it played upon her fears.

There was, for instance, the occasion when Olive, for the first time aboard the Pigeon of Noah, spoke to her.

Had it not been for those brown shot eyes, always so stealthily upon her, she would sometimes have thought of this savage as a machine. There was a sort of unhuman precision about him. He would be here, silent, merciless, and then he would be there, something accomplished. He had not hurried, yet the thing was done.

And now, in this wise, the moment Burke had gone below, the brown man fraternized himself at her side. She was never prepared for the exceeding change from his statuesque silences into the gesticular animation of his speech. He had opened his mouth, apparently forgetting as on the Rainbow that they knew no word in common. Then, realizing, he stopped at a loss.

The girl shrank back; fled, in panic at the nearness of him, toward the companionway. But there she recollected that Burke was at the foot of the ladder, and stood helpless.

Then the white man came climbing up. "Y'little vixen," he warned in a malicious enjoyment of the situation, "push me overboard"—he interrupted himself with a burst of laughter. "Gad," he cried, "but I'd hate t'give y'the chance! Push me overboard, and I'm gone. But—Olive left. Remember that. I'm what stands between you. I ain't saying as how he'd love a red headed goddess all his own. O, no! But I do see he'd love his eye on y'like a wolf following a nice fat little lamb off into the timber."

The girl shuddered. Burke or Olive? White savage or brown? A cry of despair rose to her lips but she fought it back. Her hand stole up toward the opening of her dress, lingered, fell again to her side.

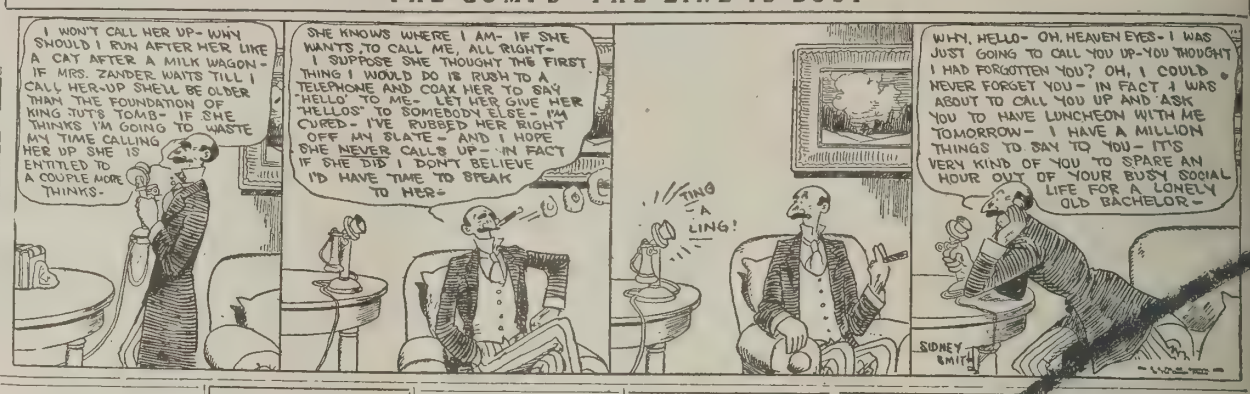
Since that event—it was now her third day aboard the Lupé-a-Noe—she had been wondering whether Ponapé Burke really did stand between her and his man. She had not forgot Burke's saying that Olive, if he knew his powe., could snap his master's back across one of those big brown knees like a piece of kindling. And she suspected at times that Olive might know this quite well.

There were, of course, the revolvers, always ready to the white man's hand—and deadly. Olive must be brave indeed to risk those. But she felt sure he had already risked them her first night aboard.

The day, with the disconcerting suddenness of the equator, had faded and darkness would soon have been upon them. Burke had waved a hand toward the cabin with kingly gesture. "The royal chamber awaits, Queenie," he had said. "Hot as hell down there and you'll soon be squawking for a hammock on deck. But tonight there's a lock."

The girl had sprung, trembling, panting, for the companion, had slammed it shut and shot home the bolts. Then she had tumbled down the steps and thrown herself, sobbing, upon the bunk. She had borne up bravely so long as the sun remained, but on the closing in of night, with all its sinister implications, she had given way.

A swinging lamp smokily illumined the enclosure. With the planking overhead still sizzling from the day's sun, the stifling air was heavy with the rancid sweet of copra. Obliquely along the wall a roach hurried, with erratic stops and turnings. Others of these two inch infesters of copra craft lurked in corners, made forays into the open, their backs high lighting like browned metal. Under happier circumstances the girl might have loathed, recollecting Burke's stories of a matter awaking to find a roach perched on each of his great toes, gnawing away at the toenails; of another man, roused by a thump and bump to find one dragging his shoe across the deck.



But that first night, as they watched her from dark angles, exploding their antennae in some sort of insectile curiosity over this new creature who had taken Burke's place, they made her cringe with the feeling that here she was not safe from furtive observations.

As the schooner rose and fell, a blot of shadow cast by the bobbing of the lamp moved along the cabin floor and then across the end, back and forth, back and forth. In that prisoned place it made her think of a caged animal wearing out its life—back and forth, back and forth.

[Copyright 1924: By Stanley R. Osborn.]

[Continued tomorrow.]

THE GUMPS—THE LINE IS BUSY

The 'Snob' Is Good and It Has an Idea

Norma Shearer Charming in Leading Role.

"THE SNOB"
Produced by Metro-Goldwyn.
Directed by Monta Bell.
Presented at the Chicago theater.
THE CAST

Nancy Clarion	Norma Shearer
Eugene Curry	John Gilbert
Herrick Appleton	Conrad Nagel
Dorothy Rosshelmer	Phyllis Haver
Mrs. Letter	Hedda Hopper
Mrs. Curry	Margaret Seddon

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

Behold something new under the sun! A snob who hails from poor and humble people and rich people who are shown to possess character, heart and good breeding. Nobility, in the pictures, is usually portioned out to the masses. Our plutocrats are rarely served to us nicely seasoned.

The picture has been adapted from Helen R. Martin's novel of life among the Pennsylvania Dutch. The author takes for her principal characters a beautiful heiress, who, to escape a stigma of disgrace that has fallen on her through an event over which she had no control, becomes a teacher in a Dutch settlement school; the young man she meets there and later marries; a wealthy young artist who has always loved her and a shallow and superficial "other" woman who figures largely in her life.

The man from the settlement goes out in the world. His good looks make him the sheik of the college town where he wins a professorship. Flattered to death by the adulation of the daughter of the richest man in town he forgets the girl back home, whom he has no reason to believe other than a poor little school teacher. Word comes to him that she is dying and he goes back home and marries her, intending, after her death to make other marital arrangements.

The young wife, however, recovers. Nothing for him to do but take her to the college town. Her charm and grace bring to her the real people of the town, but for this be, blind bat gives her no credit. Himself he sees as the lodestone—and continues his affair with his silly and unscrupulous Miss Rosshelmer who spends the time not occupied in reading "Little Men" in planning how she can separate the young Currys.

Through all Nancy Curry's difficulties, Herrick Appleton, who has always loved her, and the wealthy and exquisite Mrs. Letter, social leader of the town, are her staunch friends and the story leaves the heroine back among her own kind, while the snob, realizing his foolishness at last but not able to do anything about it, finds himself quite at liberty to enjoy as best he may his foolish Dorothy.

Norma Shearer is one of the loveliest, if not THE loveliest of the younger stars. She has beauty, graciousness, warmth, and a wonderful sense of fitness. Her Nancy Clarion Curry is a character finely drawn.

John Gilbert's snob will not be admired and for just that reason his portrayal of the rôle proves excellent. Mr. Nagel as the man you're supposed to like is—the man you like. Other players are all satisfactory, especially Hazel Kennedy, who plays a homely, harshly disciplined, awkward, painfully shy little Dutch girl who is always being made to "speak pieces for the company" by the terrible person, who is her mother.

The direction and the photography are excellent. I think you will approve of "The Snob."

See you tomorrow!

CLOSEUPS

No, Owen Moore has not left the screen, as many think. He's working for F. B. O. in "The Parasite," in which he plays two rôles—that of impetuous lover and fond father.

One of the featured players in Priscilla Dean's next picture, "Viennese Madness," will be an Austrian count. Maxime de Saint-Hilaire is the name. AND, saith the p. a.: "Many of the settings in 'Viennese Madness' will be largely in duplication of rooms in the count's own home in Vienna."

Little Black Sam's Hoping for Old Santa

Sam has the biggest eyes and the blackest face in Chicago. He's 9 years old. He's one of a family of six children and he's positive that Santa Claus is going to pay a visit to his little shack on Dearborn street [rear] one week from tonight. The other kids in Sam's family expect the same.

There's only one trouble with Sam's expectations. His father is dead and his mother hasn't any money. So unless the Good Fellows who each year go forth into the byways on Christmas eve and spread joy and Christmas things among the city's poor, agree to take care of Sam's family there will be no happiness in the little rear shack on Christmas morning.

But Sam's family is only one of fifty colored families that are on record at the Good Fellow headquarters, 11 South Dearborn street [telephone CENtral 0100]. There is no reason why the Good Fellows shouldn't take care of the little colored kids of the city. They are just as poor, just as deserving as any others. And if you will take the word of the Good Fellow editor, who has been a Good Fellow for many years, you'll find a great kick out of giving presents to colored children.

So fifty Good Fellows are asked to respond to this call.

There are about 2,000 other poor families on the Good Fellow lists who need help this Christmas. Clip the coupon today. Good Fellows. Or telephone the headquarters. Better than that go there in person and take your pick. But do it now. Time is slipping away.

The accounting department of the C., R. I. & P. railroad will care for twenty families this year. The girls of the handkerchief department of Marshall Field & Co., wholesale, will spend $70 on poor kids. The little girls of the Happy Peacock club, of which little Claire Powell of Kenmore avenue is president and Miss Mae Collins is happy.

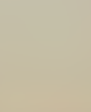
D. M. Bell and a group of men who have luncheon at the Hotel Sherman every day will make several families happy with a Christmas party and many toys and presents.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted by the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Mrs. D. E. Prugh, 7016 Greenview avenue, was awarded $5.

The Question.



If you were Santa Claus what would you give to the city of Chicago?

Where Asked.

Adams at Michigan avenue.

The Answers.

Joseph Lance, 4637 Wells avenue, machinist — I would bring them better police protection, so that homes would be safer, and so that I could appear on the streets with greater safety, day or night. With more policemen there would be less crime, less danger, and less worry.

Miss Lauretta Stader, 221 East Superior street, dramatic student—I would enable the Art Institute to complete its building projects, and furnish an adquate endowment fund. Then I would give better transportation so that we could get down town and home again with less waste of time.

A. B. Crummy, 5833 Kenmore avenue, clerk—I suppose that what the city needs most is an adequate subway system an outer drive between Park Row and the North side, and more through streets leading out of the loop. Michigan avenue is being worked to death.

Miss Bernice Thornbery, 221 East Superior street, student—White snow for Christmas. A regiment of fine looking blue-coated policemen and station them all around the city. Make a thing of beauty out of our front yard, Grant Park. And everybody wants subways, so I'd give everybody subways.

R. Hawkins, 2916 Wilcox street, clerk—Well, I suppose that I ought to be something that would apply to everybody in general, so I'd give them general prosperity. That would mean a more equal distribution of wealth, more competition, better business, with the unfortunate well cared for.

Anniversary of Quakers' Founder to Be Observed

The three hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Fox, founder of the Society of Friends, commonly known as Quakers, will be celebrated with a pageant next Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Hull house, 800 South Halsted street. An address will be given at 7:30 by Prof. Rufus M. Jones of Haverford college, Pennsylvania, on "George Fox, Man and Prophet."

OCEAN STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

Arrived	At	From
Albert Ballin	New York	Hamburg
Doric	New York	Liverpool
M Washington	Madeira	New York
Aurania	New York	Liverpool
Pres. Monroe	Shanghai	New York
Andania	London	New York
Conte Verde	Naples	New York
Paris	Plymouth	New York
Regina	Liverpool	Portland
Canada	Alexandria	New York
Sailed	From	To
Maisonia	San Francisco	Honolulu
France	New York	Havre
Esmeralda	Chisiobal	New York
Columbia	Christobal	San Francisco
Duilio	Naples	New York

THEATER

The shifting calendar of plays and dates for the holiday season in Chicago keeps right on a-shifting. . . . "The Fake" is not to be brought hither; at least, it is not to be used for the reopening. Christmas-night, of the Great Northern, Powell Sherman is to do that with "High Stakes," which is a play by Willard Mack in which the former is acting in New-York. Wilton Lackaye is with him in it; and so also is Miss Phoebe Foster, here last season in "Silence," and Robert Vivian, who has been ever so often in ever so many things, and has always been good in them. . . . Which is that.

As to the Adelphi, where Mr. Sherman has been half-expected to show up the 28th, it will be used then and through an indeterminate period there after for performances of "The Cat Came Back." This, I believe, is a farce from the French, taken therefrom after a violent struggle by the salubrious Avery Hopwood, who loves modesty as Mayor Dever loves a subway. . . . Miss May Vokes and Frank Lalor will be in the new piece. She has been with Miss Billie Burke in "Annie Dear," acting the rôle she had here when the piece was "Good Gracious, Annabelle!"; and Mr. Lalor was here last season in "The Whole Town's Talking!"

Mr. George A. Florida, whose business is to tell the world all about "Plain Jane," telegraphs from St. Louis to say that the entertainment will provide Yuletide cheer in that city, and will be returned the 28th to Chicago and installed in the Woods Theater.

* *

By Smith and Tschaikowsky.

F. C. Whitney, who is come to town with a view of finding out why attendance on "Saint Joan" isn't larger, tells that he is soon to stage "a new Tschaikowsky opera," with a libretto by Harry B. Smith. . . . Mr. Whitney is as casual about it as if it were something he had fixed up with Tschaikowsky while visiting him last Summer in Leningrad, where, there is reason to suspect, Tschaikowsky was not to be found last Summer. Anyway, he says he has hired a conductor, Karl Hajos, that Karl is to be the baltonier over not fewer than fifty players; and that Miss Mae Collins Greek Evans, and Miss Claire Grenville are engaged to sing. . . .

Two of Tschaikowsky's operas are known in Chicago through recent performances—"Pique Dame" and "Eugene Onegin"; and the répertoire of the Chicago Orchestra contains selections from two others—"Maseppa" and "Joanne d'Arc": the last-named is represented by "Farewell, ye mountains!" an aria for mezzo-soprano, that creates no desire in my bosom to hear more of the work. . . . I know no other operas of his; and, doubtless, there are others: most composers have a weakness for writing in a form for which they lack specific talent. . . . Anyway, I like the concurrence of Smith and Tschaikowsky: as a team-name, it possesses what Raymond Hitchcock calls the "psycho." Besides, Mr. Whitney is more than likely to know what he's about: he has been an ambitious impresario of operetta in past decades, and put on such well-remembered pieces as "Rob Roy," "Brian Boru," "Love's Lottery" (in which Schumann-Heink made a mistake), "Johnny Comes Marching Home," and "The Chocolate Soldier."

As to why "Saint Joan" isn't drawing larger audiences, Mr. Whitney, my guess is that (a) it is here at the wrong time, and (b) its Theater Guild career in New York, with the accompanying propaganda, sickled it o'er with the pale cast of high browsism, and, so, obscured the fact that it is a corking play, one of Shaw's best, and, although a bit long, as diverting and as thrilling a show as can fairly be asked for. . . . A director has been brought on to "speed it up," I'm told; and I trust that what he is regarded here for is to give pace to the performance, and to instruct the actors not to worry as to how the Guild had it acted. Most of the acting in Guild productions is a joke.

F. D.

'Three Kings' About Year's Best Opera

Garden, Baklanoff, and Ansseau in Fine Form.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Montemezzi's "L'Amore dei Tre Re," in the light of its first performance at the Auditorium last night, may be safely classified as one of the major achievements of the operatic season. With Mary Garden, with Fernand Anseau, Virgilio Lazzari, and Georges Baklanoff, the last named making his first appearance of the season, this poetic melodrama was translated into terms of romance, and with Giorgio Polacco at the baton the music became one of the finest imaginings of any composer of this generation.

All of which is as it should be. The materials are there in the work, but it takes a bit of imagination to lay them out and project them. This is one of the operas which does not need translation into English. Properly performed, its action in all details is as obvious as a movie, with the music constantly making the comments of subcaptions and incidentally building itself up to heroic size.

Miss Garden's Fiora is not quite ideal Fiora, but it is first class Garden. Wistfulness, the unconquered fate that sweeps herself and the rest to destruction, is the one quality that she chooses not to employ. Her Fiora is a little hard, and more than a little sophisticated. At the same time, the flaming red figure waving a scarf on the battlements as the sound of the horsemen die away in the distance was something to touch the imagination.

Mr. Anseau's Avito was the most romantic impersonation he has ventured upon yet, and a splendid performance he made of it. The full throated splendor of his singing in the second act was nothing but gorgeous, an impassioned love scene culminating in an embrace whose footage in the movies would probably cause the censors some concern. Its sheer exultancy ought to clear this particular opera of the charge commonly brought against operas—dullness.

Mr. Baklanoff, as Manfredo, had, I imagine, one of the most difficult parts in all opera, difficult, that is, to make it stand out against the other parts. That he accomplished it with considerable vividness shows the kind of operatic artist that he is. It had its definite place in the picture, it was at all times distinct, and he was in the best of voice.

As for Mr. Lazzari, he never surpassed the performance of Archibaldo that he gave last night. From the mountainous solo of the first act to the altogether athletic throttling of Fiora in the second, he was invincible, doing a big thing in a big way.

Allen Spencer in Recital.

Allen Spencer, in his annual piano recital at Kimball hall last night, was heard in a performance of one of the early Beethoven sonatas, the one labeled opus 10, No. 3. It was admirable playing, in which brains and emotion took logical and, therefore, important places. Mr. Spencer interpreted with the style of a classicist and the warm feeling of a modern. This was the way to make Beethoven's music seem alive, and it is the whole duty of every pianist.

Willy Burmester, veteran violinist, appeared at the Studebaker in the afternoon. The place of honor on his program was given to the Mendelssohn Concerto, which he played with a masterly knowledge of its contents, rather astonishingly effective in the slow movement, a bit less so in the swifter section following.

What's Doing Today

CONVENTIONS.

Clay Products association ..... Drake
Surgical association of the Chicago and N. W. Railway ..... Sherman

MEETINGS.

Illinois State council, Veterans of Foreign Wars ..... Morrison
Midwest Toy Dog association ..... Sherman
National Hairdressers' association ..... Sherman
Women's Progressive Club of Illinois ..... Morrison

LUNCHEONS.

Beta Theta Pi fraternity, Beta Theta Pi club
Box Board association ..... Congress
Chicago Association of Commerce ..... La Salle Presbyterian home ..... Great Northern Purdue alumni ..... Chicago Engineers' club
Sunbeam league ..... La Salle
University of Chicago ..... La Salle
Women of the Rotary club ..... Sherman

EVENING EVENTS.

American Association of Engineers, Chicago chapter [buffet dinner] ..... Auditorium
Bankers' Club of Chicago [banquet] ..... Congress
Chicago Corset club [banquet] ..... Congress
Chicago Stamp club [dinner] ..... La Salle
Theta Gamma Sigma [dinner] ..... Auditorium

GOOD FELLOWS!

Here's a Form to Fill Out. It Will Aid You in Stating Your Plans for Helping Poor Kids.

If you will be a Good Fellow on Christmas day to ——— family (or families) of poor children in Chicago, please fill out the attached blank and send it to The Tribune Good Fellow Department.

I live ..... street

I would like Santa Claus to ..... children (as many as you wish)

Please give me the names of children in ..... (state section of the city you prefer to have assigned to you).

Sign your name .....

WOTTA LIFE! WOTTA LIFE!

Gaar Williams

replaces Briggs in The Chicago Tribune

R WILLIAMS was rn in Richmond, Ind.,
d educated in the Cin-nati Academy of Fine
ts and the Art Institute
Chicago. He started wspaper work as an iltrator under the late ther Bradley of The icago Daily News. For number of years he s political cartoonist for
Indianapolis News. came to The Chicago
ibune in 1921 and deoped his incomparable ies of human-interest
toons.

THE POSITION of honor which for years has been reserved in The Chicago Tribune for Briggs, has been given to Gaar Williams. His fascinating human interest cartoons of family life are now appearing on page one of the second section of The Tribune.

Except for the first page of the paper (and John T. McCutcheon has the cartoon space there), it is the best possible position for reaching the greatest number of readers. Among the associates of Gaar Williams on the page are The Gumps, the Blue Ribbon daily serial, Sentence Sermons, Mae Tinee's sparkling movie reviews; news of the theater and music; articles and features of wide interest.

Gaar Williams' cartoons have been appearing on the editorial page of The Tribune in two-column space. They are consistently good—365 days of the year without one disappointing cartoon. The singular titles, suggestive of the humor and the universal appeal are:

Our Secret Ambition
A Strain on the Family Tie
Wotta Life! Wotta Life!
Things That Never Come True
How to Keep From Growing Old
When Words Fail Yuh!
Among the Folks in History

Chicago Tribune circulation has taken its big jump since The Tribune began to give special attention to its features. The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate was developed as a means or prorating some of the cost of these features which no newspaper alone could afford to carry.

When The News, New York's Illustrated Newspaper, was started, Tribune features were well established, and The News soon had the largest daily circulation of any newspaper in America. Except for The News, The Tribune has the largest daily morning circulation in America.

The News of New York has built up a circulation of 786,398 daily and 807,270 Sunday (six months' average); and The Chicago Tribune 617,735 daily and 979,295 Sunday (November average). These two newspapers have but one thing in common —Chicago Tribune features. We believe that the unprecedented steady and continuous growth of The Chicago Tribune and The News of New York is proof that when you buy Chicago Tribune features you are buying the best available.

Don't miss Gaar Williams in his best creative years. Ask us for rates and proofs.

The CHICAGO TRIBUNE Newspapers SYNDICATE

RIBUNE SQUARE CHICAGO

EDITORIAL

OFFICIAL BACK-TRACKING

THERE will be "diplomatic blow-outs" at Washington, no matter who is President, so long as the "lamp-post interview" abomination is continued. The iniquity has not often been better illustrated than in the Jusserand-Coolidge incident, revealed by the Brooklyn Eagle's correspondent.

We agree that it is a legitimate use of newspapers to give out from the White House anonymous statements that specified public questions are being studied, thus to ascertain public opinion on moot questions, but it is something else to "reverse action" and make a correspondent and his newspaper bear the burden of an official blunder.

Mr. Suydam is by no means the first Washington correspondent to feel the sting of this totally wrong, and we must say very undignified, system of official back-tracking. He will not be misunderstood by experienced Washington newspaper men, but his position in the public view is difficult. The stalwart stand of the Eagle in support of its man "at the front" merits commendation. Some Washington correspondents will tell you that they often take a colorless attitude toward public affairs because they do not feel that they would have the support of their home offices in case of reversed action. There is an element of intimidation here. It may sometimes be preyed upon.

In the present instance, however, it is plain that the matter was decided on the ground of expediency, the view being that the sacrifice of a correspondent was more to be desired than an international complication. Our own view is that a public official is responsible before the public for his acts. Diplomacy which is more concerned over appearances than the substance of truth never has succeeded in the larger sense or in final results. The expediency motive not only works a great injustice to an individual, but we believe tends to defeat the objects of true democracy obtainable only through an informed public opinion.

If any high public official has taken a stand on a public measure, has expressed it to newspaper men, the people are entitled to know it. If the public official has made a mistake, the people are entitled to know that. Else the official might, in public esteem, be "batting a thousand," in the parlance of the ball park, whereas his true rating might be much lower.

For many years it has seemed to us that, in its relationship to the Correspondents' Corps, the White House was sacrificing, through a false system of anonymous interviewing, major objects of public service and true dignity, for trifling advantages, mainly concerned with diplomacy of inferior quality.

Shoes wore out the marble steps leading to the office of the Winnipeg Free Press and some smart employe wrote a page of advertising based on the "busiest stairway," attractively illustrated. Classy.

FAULKNER MEMORIAL

THE fitting memorial that is being established for the late Jim Faulkner, of Cincinnati Enquirer, is a fund of $10,000, the income from which is to be used to assist young men and women of promise to complete college training.

So far as is known, this is the first memorial ever established to a working newspaper man, with rising reporters as the direct beneficiaries. It is a pleasing idea, creditable to the committee charged with the responsibility, headed by former Governor James M. Cox.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER learns that $8,000 of the $10,000 fund has already been raised, and that the committee is earnestly seeking to complete it from small individual donations in the first weeks of the new year. It has been made up of trifling amounts from hundreds of people of the United States and as far away as Australia.

Nothing has been spent, or will be spent, we are told, to collect the fund and it will be administered by a trust company, under direction of leading Ohio bankers and newspapermen.

Everyone who knew Jim Faulkner will testify that nothing gave him greater joy than to help a deserving boy or girl up the hill, and this unusual memorial is true to that spirit.

Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.—Hebrews, XI; 3.

TIMELY WARNING

ROBERT F. PAINE, writing of the appalling year record of 22,000 killed and 678,000 seriously injured by the motor-driven vehicle in the United States says: "Thus is written down as an utter failure one of the greatest inventions of modern times. No benefits derived from this excellent utility can, by any possible means, offset a record so terrible. No claim of service can neutralize facts so abominable. Either the automobile must be completely outlawed, or those who have abused and prostituted its employment must be penalized to an extent that will make them feel the weight of their guilt."

Something radical is on the card for the automobile business. The casualty list grows annually, somewhat by reason of increased number of cars in use and unquestionably because the soft pedal is everywhere being used in reference to the ghastly death and injury records. Automobile publicists are doing their job too well.

Nearly everywhere outrageous road and street speeding is being blinked at. Why any car is made to run at 70 or even 40 miles an hour, is a mystery to an average mortal who manages to get where he wants to go "in time for dinner." The manner in which people, particularly women and minors, wholly inexperienced, are permitted to buy this naturally dangerous machinery today and operate it tomorrow, is scandalous, outraging common sense.

Twenty-two thousand dead and 678,000 injured will not be repeated for many years in this country without violent public reaction.

Obey that hunch—if it is good for the people of the town, it is good for you.

CHARLES SAMUEL JACKSON

IT was once said of the late Charles Samuel Jackson, publisher Portland Oregon Journal, that "no man ever sat in the directing office of a daily newspaper and held higher concepts of the duties of journalism to the masses of the people."

This is true, and no more splendid memorial could be laid at the tomb of an editor.

January 3, 1925 Volume 57, No. 32

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Bldg.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout, 10 Radcliffe Road, Winchmore Hill, N. 21.
Paris: G. Iangelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

HOW TO FADE FLOWERS

DO you remember that little cabled story, perhaps a year ago, concerning the Fre scientist who had found that a few grains aspirin dropped into a vessel of water would prese cut flowers for many days beyond the usual time withering?

It was a cute item, of particular interest to wom and telegraph editors jumped to it and played it boxed display in perhaps hundreds of newspapers.

The fault lies in the fact that it is not true. Marion Shull, after scientific tests with many flowers, exposes the fake in The Flower Gro He found that aspirin actually causes cut blooms stems to collapse, in instances three days earlier when held in plain water.

We dare say that aspirin has been tried by th sands, perhaps hundreds of thousands of reader that nifty boxed item. How much aspirin did it to the credulous public? How many disappoi women have said: "Well, I saw it in the Eve Truth."

The incident is small, but its import is as b as journalism. A veteran editor picked up, at ran a morning newspaper in this office recently and a blue pencil spotted items which he said he beli were inspired by press agents and which, if inv gated, would be found to be deliberate frauds the public. "And no one seems to care even t vestigate," said he. The latter is stretching it a Many editors do care and painstakingly trace fak their source and do what they can to prevent impositions. The past ten years, we believe, witnessed a remarkable new birth of responsi among newspaper men and advertisers. At there is no longer a cynical disregard of the rig readers to be protected from flagrant falsehood. fake of today is slyly planted by a cunning interested in profit through deceit. It is not asto ing that they "get by" even the shrewdest desk

---

We are asked what we think of a pate medicine advertisement which promises to "d stroy the germs that lead to consumption. Played up as a preventive, it might be all rig but played up as a cure, to catch the dollars miserable tuberculosis sufferers, it is a helli imposition and should be thrown out of a

---

TELEPHONE USE AND ABUSE

JUST as the Watertown (N. Y.) Times was to go to press the other day its telephone s was completely cut off by a break in a The editor told his readers next day of the exper of the staff in trying to operate a newspaper w telephone service. "We sympathize," he wrote, the old-time editors who labored before the da the telephone. It takes an accident of this ki make us appreciate modern invention."

The telephone is, of course, an indispensable paper fixture. But that is not the whole story. used it also may be a curse. There are some the telephone cannot do. It cannot look you eye. It cannot give you a warm handshake. A tising salesmen often make the mistake of depe too much on telephone conversations with pro There are exceptions, of course, but we thin average business man would rather be talked than "to" about affairs so intimately related success as is his newspaper advertising. Tele conversations are too often of the "to" variety not neglect your advertising clients by giving "a ring" now and then.

Editorial men abuse the telephone greatly. T of writing has been practically lost by reporter to the telephone system. In hundreds of ins time elements are such that stories may be writ reporters in the field and sent to the office, thus the time of inside rewrite men and, incidentally serving excellence of first-hand observation. U telephone, but do not lean so heavily upon valuable personal considerations are sacrificed.

Grove Patterson, executive editor of Toledo Blade, told you an important secret newspaper success in this paper last week. personally investigates "stops." Such an ed knows his public—doesn't try to guess it.

PERSONALS

FREDERICK ROY MARTIN, general manager of the Associated Press, was a member of the committee which this week awarded the Adolph Zukor prize of $10,000 to Rafael Sabatini, whose story "Scaramouche" was voted the best picture during the fiscal year ended Sept. 1.

H. B. Hallock, recently elected treasurer of Wright County, Iowa, is editor of the Eagle Grove Eagle.

Frank P. MacLennan, publisher of the Topeka (Kan.) State Journal, with his daughter, Miss Mary MacLennan, will take a cruise of the Mediterranean sailing from New York Feb. 4, on the Rotterdam.

Victor F. Lawson, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, was made an honorary member of Sigma Delta Chi, honorary professional journalistic fraternity, at an initiation ceremony in Chicago, Dec. 29.

Herbert Pulitzer plans to leave New York next week for Miami, Fla.

M. E. Foster, president of the Houston (Tex.) Chronicle with Mrs. Foster and Miss Medora Foster spent the holidays in Havana, Cuba.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

J. U. ELDREDGE, general manager of the Ogden (Utah) Standard-Examiner, was presented with a desk last week on the occasion of his 50th birthday by employes of the paper.

Fred B. Stewart is now general manager of the Middletown (N. Y.) Times-Press.

Daniel J. Mahoney, general manager of Former-Governor James Cox's four News League papers, has transferred his headquarters from the Dayton (O.) News to the Miami (Fla.) News-Metropolis for the winter.

William Beaton, of the circulation department, Cleveland Times, last week was promoted to manager of the classified advertising department.

William Wundram, of the advertising staff of the Davenport (Ia.) Democrat, and Mrs. Wundram, are parents of a son.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

HANS J. ADAMSON, Albany correspondent for the New York Evening Post who has been attached to the New York office since last spring, has returned to Albany to cover the sessions of the state legislature.

Reginald A. Wilson, formerly on general assignment, has been appointed Albany staff correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune.

Earl Deland is the new city editor of the New York American, replacing Martin Dunn, who becomes night city editor.

Bert A. Teeters, managing editor of the Springfield (O.) Daily News, was recently elected an honorary member of the Clark County (O.) Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America.

Robert A. Woodworth, police reporter of the Providence Evening Bulletin, has resumed his duties after a week's illness.

Miss Ebba Carlson is now representative of the Tacoma News Tribune at South Tacoma, succeeding Harry Smith who is now on the city advertising staff.

Edward A. Ewing has joined the reportorial staff of the Cleveland Times.

William Robsam will act as Sunday editor of the Dayton (O) Daily News during the time Howard Burba, Sunday editor of the the News League papers, is in Miami, Fla. Burba is in charge of the Sunday edition of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News-Metropolis which will make its appearance soon.

Frank D. Hunt, reporter for the Toledo Blade has been assigned to Columbus to cover the legislature.

W. Gordon-Kuster, formerly of the Lancester (Pa.) New Era and Akron Beacon-Journal, has joined the copy desk of the Toledo Blade.

P. G. Hubbell, 81, of the Tacoma News Tribune staff, probably the oldest active newspaper man in the West, is confined to his home with a broken arm.

Dan S. McQuarrie, of the reportorial staff, Salt Lake City Deseret News, and Mrs. McQuarrie are parents of a baby boy.

Harold Goff, managing editor, Salt Lake City Deseret News has been elected president of the Timpanogos Club.

George Dodge has joined the staff of the sporting department of the Providence Evening Bulletin.

George D. Laswell, staff artist of the Providence Journal and Evening Bulletin, has published a book of sketches, "Corners and Characters in Rhode Island."

Miss Allene Sumner, former woman's editor of the Cleveland Press, has been transferred to her old post of special feature writer. In addition, she will write a daily editorial for women.

Eugene J. O'Connor, formerly news editor on the Boston Globe, and previous to that telegraph operator on that paper, and Mrs. O'Connor, celebrated their 53d wedding anniversary Christmas day at their home in Roxbury, Mass.

Herbert Caryl, formerly night city editor on the Boston American, has been appointed editor of the Cambridge edition. Robert Gillis, temporary editor of the Cambridge edition since it was launched two months ago, has resumed his duties as city editor of the American.

MARRIED

S. ROY HILTON, city editor, Canton Daily News, to Miss Merrie Lou Crawford, feature writer for the News. The couple will spend the winter in Florida. Dennis R. Smith, courthouse reporter, has succeeded Hilton as city editor.

Dave H. Harris, desk man for the Tacoma News Tribune, to Elizabeth Thoendel, in Chicago recently.

Ernest M. Margulies, reporter for the Cleveland Times, to Miss Mary M. Eckstein, Cleveland kindergarten teacher and writer of popular books for children.

Robert C. Ellis, reporter on the Providence Journal, to Miss Florence E. Solomon, of Pittsburg, in Providence recently.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

LOS ANGELES Herald, which recently installed a Ludlow equipment composed of three machines, has ordered an additional machine and matrices for the Head Alley.

Birmingham (Ala.) Post has completed installation of a second Ludlow Typograph machine.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

LEO RASCHE from copy desk, New York Graphic, copy desk, New York American.

Walter W. Schramm, from Butler (Pa.) Eagle, to copy desk, Cleveland Times.

WITH THE SPECIALS

BRYANT, GRIFFITH & BRUNSON, INC., have been appointed national advertising representatives of the Spartanburg (S. C.) Herald and Journal.

Ralph C. Ruggles has joined the New York office of Ingraham-Powers, Inc., newspaper representatives, as advertising solicitor. Mr. Ruggles was formerly associated with the Hulscher-Rothenburg Agency as space buyer, and prior to that was connected with the advertising department of the Postum Cereal Company.

WITH THE ADVERTISERS

W. BARRON LOUIS, formerly city editor of the Philadelphia Press and later with the New York Evening World, has been promoted to head of the advertising and publicity departments of Vitagraph, Inc.

E. F. Goldbach has been appointed advertising manager of the Swartzbaugh Manufacturing Company, Toledo, O., manufacturers of food conveyors, fireless cookers, etc.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

E. C. Young, secretary-treasurer and business manager of the Chatham (Ont.) Daily News, has a wide acquaintance in Canadian newspaper circles, and is also well known on this side of the international line.

E. C. YOUNG

He commenced his newspaper career many years ago with the Montreal Star rising to one of the highest executive positions in charge of many departments. He also organized the Dominion News Bureau, of which he was vice-president. In May, 1916, Mr. Yonng was offered, and accepted, the management of the Halifax Morning Chronicle, Evening Echo and Weekly Nova Scotian, which papers showed large growths in circulation and advertising patronage during his seven-year management.

To join the Chatham News, Mr. Young severed his connections as treasurer of the Toronto (Ont.) Globe.

SCHOOLS

CLINTON N. HOWARD, of Portland, Ore., a senior in the University of Oregon school of journalism, and in 1922 a reporter on the San Francisco Chronicle, is the winner of the 1925 Rhodes scholarship to Oxford University for the state of Oregon. He is a member of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity. He will enter Oxford next October.

The Harvey Ingham Journalism Club of Drake University was installed Dec. 15, by D. H. Clark of St. Louis, Mo., national secretary of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity, as a chapter of the national organization. Mr. Ingham for whom the club was named is editor of the Des Moines Register.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

KARL B. PAULY, former Sunday editor of the Middletown (O.) Journal, is now with the International News Service, Columbus bureau.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

OWEN SOUND (Ont.) Daily Sun-Times, 22-page souvenir edition Dec. 3.

York (S. C.) Yorkville Enquirer, 24-page Christmas edition, Dec. 19.

Chatham (Ont.) Daily News, Christmas Shopping edition.

Brownsville (Tex.) Sunday Herald, 80-page Valley Industrial and Mid-Winter edition, Dec. 21.

Huntsville (Ala.) Daily Times, 62-page edition Sunday, Dec. 21.

Salt Lake City Deseret News, 175-page Christmas edition.

ASSOCIATIONS

BUFFALO BETTER BUSINESS COMMISSION has elected these directors to serve three year terms: Frank B. Baird, president Buffalo Union Furnace Company; C. Pascal Franchot, attorney; Lewis G. Harriman, president Fidelity Trust Company; Fred C. Jahraus, president, Jahraus-Braun Company; Roland L. O'Brian, O'Brian, Potter & Co.

Oregon Newspaper Conference, held annually on the campus of the University of Oregon under the auspices of the school of journalism, will meet this year March 13 and 14.

Advertising Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce was addressed by J. Murray Gibbon, Canadian novelist, at the Hotel La Salle, recently, on "Art and Propaganda."

FLASHES

Probably it is going to be difficult for the cross-word puzzle addict not to wish you a Happy Gnu Year.—F. P. A. in the Conning Tower, New York World.

We can't picture a stronger business combination that being a bootlegger and owning a large block of stock in an undertaking parlor.—Columbia Record.

To make the hands soft and beautifully white: Soak the hands three times a day in dishwater while mother rests. The treatment will not hurt mother.—Lafayette Journal and Courier.

About all you can say for grade crossings is that they eliminate slow thinkers. —Memphis News-Scimitar.

Spend it for a home. A used home doesn't lose half its value the first month you own it.—Pittsburgh Sun.

Native Americans are superior in some ways, but they can't polish an apple until it sells for a dime.—Lexington Leader.

A wise Western wit declares that a flapper is like a house, because she is both shingled and painted. He might have added that, like most houses, she has a wooden attic.—Fort Wayne News Sentinel.

A. B. See, of Brooklyn, has written a book against the education of women. ABC will find the country pretty DEF to his views, we suspect.—Houston Post-Dispatch.

Long engagements are dangerous. After marriage he can keep both hands on the steering wheel.—New York Telegram and Evening Mail.

Monster anti-Christian demonstrations sweep over China. How unaccountable this is, in view of the splendid example the Christian world has been setting China for the last ten years.—Washington Post.

Slowly, but surely our culture is broadening, as one can observe from the wide publication of the pictures of Jack Dempsey's new nose and Rudolph's new whiskers.—Columbia Record.

A French court has decided just what is a fresh egg. Multitudes have heretofore been under the impression that no judicial determination of the question was needed.—Boston Transcript.

There was evidence of bad taste in old-time restaurants, but it wasn't called atmosphere.—New York Telegram and Evening Mail.

Egypt should have known better than to attempt government by assassination. That can be done successfully only in highly civilized lands like Italy.—Columbia Record.

Secretary Hoover says the radio cannot live on jazz. In that respect it is quite different from some humans.—Buffalo Evening Post.

The outstanding events of the year were, of course, the Loeb-Leopold trial and the cross word puzzle craze.—H. I. Phillips in the New York Sun.

The sort of support the government gets from the people, generally, is as enthusiastic as the support a fellow gives by order of the court to his abandoned wife and family.—Columbia Record.

Gives Insurance for Christmas

Members of the Amsterdam (N. Y.) Evening Recorder staff with six months service, a total of 52, received on Dec. 24 a Christmas gift of a $1,000 insurance policy issued in favor of their families. Premiums will be paid by the newspaper as long as the recipients are employed.

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

FRANK H. SIMONDS, of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, plans to leave this country Jan. 17, to make a survey of the economic and political conditions of Europe. Special arrangements are being made through the various embassies, the syndicate, announces, to give Mr. Simonds access to the highest official sources of information. He will write one Sunday article of 2,500 words and one or two shorter ones during the week. Forty newspapers in the United States and Canada will carry these reports.

The Sloan Fiction Service, at Irvington-on-the-Hudson, New York, has inaugurated a two-day novelette feature for newspapers.

The Red Magic and Cross Word Section, edited by Harry Houdini for the New York World Syndicate, has been enlarged from four to eight pages.

Allen Raymond, for the past two years representative of the North American Newspaper Alliance in Paris, has returned to the United States. A novel by Mr. Raymond, "The Heart of Salome" is to be published in London by Duckworth & Co., in the Spring.

Clark Kinnaird, associate editor of the Central Press Association, is back at his desk in Cleveland, after three weeks vacation spent in Southern California.

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate is printing colored Sunday supplements for the American News printed in Hamburg, Germany.

Mrs. Thit Jensen, Scandanavian feminist, who writes women's features for the Copenhagen Politiken is visiting this country. She told New York newspaper reporters this week that she keeps a scrap book of all articles by Dorothy Dix, who writes advice to daughters and mothers for the Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia.

Irving S. Cobb, author, who keeps in newspaper work through articles distributed by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc., New York was reported dead from Chicago this week. Mr. Cobb heard the rumor while he was visiting his home town in Paducah, Ky., and sent the following telegram to the New York World:

"I hate to disappoint any one, but the Chicago report that I am dead is, so far as I can learn, entirely unfounded."

The World gave the telegram page one position with a picture of the humorist.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

AUSTIN F. BEMENT, INC., is the name of a new general advertising agency recently organized in Detroit. Offices of the new agency, which opened Jan. 2, are located at 3-143 General Motors Building.

Austin F. Bement, for 11 years vice-president, executive secretary and a member of the board of directors of the Lincoln Highway Association is the organizer and president of the new agency. Edward S. Evans, president of E. S. Evans, Inc., automobile loading experts, and the Evans Corporation, investment bankers, both of Detroit, is vice-president and treasurer.

Mr. Evans, who will act as merchandising counsel for Bement, Inc., was at different times advertising manager and editor of the Lynchburg (Va.) Daily Advance,.

Associated with Messrs. Bement and Evans in an executive capacity are Gordon C. Eldredge and L. Grant Hamilton, both of Detroit. Mr. Eldredge who has been 10 years in the advertising agency business, was at one time with the J. Walter Thompson Company, of New York, later manager of the Green, Fulton, Cunningham Company's Detroit office, and for the past year with Campbell, Trump & Company of Detroit.

Mr. Hamilton who has also been 10 years in advertising work, was at different times with the Studebaker Corporation, Regal Motor Car Company, Federal Motor Truck Company. Later he spent two years in the Detroit office of the Green, Fulton, Cunningham Company, and 18 months with Campbell, Trump & Company of Detroit.

J. C. Faust, at one time art director of the Packard Motor Car Company, now one of the owners of Advertisers' Bureau, will act as consulting art director to the new agency.

Beginning Jan. 2, Bement, Inc., will serve as advertising agents for the Packard Motor Car Company of Detroit, the Commerce Truck Company of Ypsilanti, Mich.; the Lockwood-Ash Motor Company of Jackson, Mich., and C. S. Dent & Co., manufacturers of Dents Toothache Gum, and the Bernard Schwartz Cigar Corporation, manufacturers of the R. G. Dun Cigars, both of Detroit. It is the purpose of Bement, Inc. to operate as a general advertising agency, and not to confine itself to the serving of any one particular class of accounts.

Formation of the Advertising Agencies Council of Cincinnati, was effected following a banquet at the Sinton Hotel, Cincinnati, Dec. 18. About 20 representatives of the leading agencies of Cincinnati, as well as representatives of foreign advertising agencies having Cincinnati branches, were present.

Officers were elected as follows: president, Jesse M. Joseph of the Jesse M. Joseph Advertising Agency, vice-president, Miss Helen G. Keelor of the Keelor & Stites Company and secretary-treasurer, Douglas Allen of the Prather-Allen Advertising Company.

One hundred and sixty guests, including workers from the New York, Chicago, Toronto and Dayton branches of the company, attended the annual holiday party given by the Campbell-Ewald Company in a private banquet room of the General Motors Building, Detroit. H. T. Ewald, president of the company, spoke. W. R. Ewald had charge of arrangements, and Loren Robinson was director of the program.

Donaldson Douglas has been elected treasurer of the World Wide Advertising Corporation, 303 Fifth avenue, New York. Mr. Douglas joined the World Wide organization early in 1924 and has been active in its expansion this year.

The Philadelphia office of Barrows & Richardson, advertising agency, has been consolidated with their New York office at 19 W. 44th street.

The Harry Porter Company will move to their new offices at 270 Madison Avenue on Jan. 3.

Wm. R. Robinson & Co., Inc., general advertising agency, will move about the middle of January to new and larger quarters on the 30th floor of the Metropolitan Tower, 1 Madison ave., New York.

Kohorn Advertising Agency, Cleveland, is installed in new quarters in the Fidelity Mortgage Building, East Sixth street.

NEW PITTSBURGH DAILY LAUNCHED JAN. 1

Daily Dispatch Organized by George P. Grise Begins Publication—Claim 180,000 Circulation

The new Pittsburgh Daily Dispatch was scheduled to begin publication on Jan. 1, with a paid up circulation and orders from newsdealers amounting to more than 180,000, according to George P. Grise, president of the Daily Dispatch Publishing Company.

Mr. Grise, who was connected with the old Pitsburgh Dispatch until it was sold, will have complete charge of the new publication.

Due to delay in getting presses the Dispatch will be published for a time at a private plant, but will start publication in its own building at 118 Sixth street as soon as mechanical facilities permit, Mr. Grise said.

"The Dispatch is to be published in response to a demand for a politically independent newspaper in Pittsburgh, and will not be affiliated with any political party," Mr. Grise declared in a statement to EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

Monitor Goes to 8 Columns

The Christian Science Monitor recently changed from a 7-column 13 em paper to an 8-column 12½ em paper. In making this change the old presses were replaced by three new Goss straight line super-imposed octuple presses, each with a capacity of 36,000 32-page papers per hour.

The
Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

National Advertisers

The department stores of Manhattan—alert judges of the newspaper reading habits and buying habits of the people of New York—use more space in The New York Sun than in any other New York newspaper—morning, evening, Sundays—including the seven-day-a-week papers.

THE SUN
280 Broadway New York

You Can Produce a Better Newspaper
Without Increasing Your Costs

IF working conditions in your ad alleys have forced you to make expensive single-type replacements recently, —Investigate the Ludlow!

If you have been forced to use old, worn, battered or broken type along side of new type and thus lower the typographic quality of your paper, —Investigate the Ludlow!

If you would be rid of all single-type worries such as hunting sorts, picking from live ads and standing forms, —Investigate the Ludlow!

If you would save the time now used for distributing dead forms, —Investigate the Ludlow!

If you wish to print every issue of your paper from new, sharp display faces, and all without increasing printing costs, —Investigate the Ludlow!

With the Ludlow in your plant, you will banish these time-worn handicaps, and in their place have an all-slug composing room system that will supply you at will with an abundance of new, clear-cut printing faces in slug lines always instantly available as needed in any size up to 60 point, including bold and extended, and without machine changes of any kind.

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Avenue
CHICAGO
San Francisco Hearst Bldg.
New York World Bldg.

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

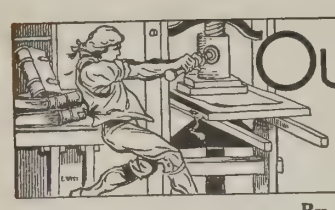
Net Paid Circulation

of the

BUFFALO SUNDAY TIMES

During the Month of December 1924

December	7th - - - - - - -	101,487
"	14th - - - - - - -	102,515
"	21st - - - - - - -	102,811
"	28th - - - - - - -	103,486



December Average 102,574

THE BUFFALO SUNDAY TIMES

Norman E. Mack, Editor and Publisher

Foreign Representatives: Verree and Conklin

New York Chicago Detroit San Francisco

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

MOST of the space in this department during 1924 was devoted to chats about books relating to the practical side of newspaper editing and making. In the year just ended one book of considerable historical value was published. I refer to "The Fugger News-Letters"—a selection of unpublished letters from the correspondence of the House of Fugger during the years 1568-1605.

This volume is edited by Victor von Klarwill, translated from the German by Pauline de Chary, and published in America by G. P. Putnam's Sons. An introduction of 34 pages corrects many false impressions which have appeared in print about these News-Letters. This introduction even implies that professors in German universities have been yellow journalists in writing about these News-Letters, as they allowed their imagination to flourish unchecked.

The Fuggers were international bankers. To them news had a commercial value and so they bought "intelligence" from the journalists of their day. In Augsburg, Germany there was a news agency which, quite correctly, may be regarded as the Associated Press or the United Press of the times. The head of this news agency was Jeremias Crasser, and a little later, Jeremias Schiffle. Calling themselves "Nouvellanten" they supplied Fugger and other clients with their "Ordinary" and their "Extraordinary" News-Letters.

All the News-Letters given in the book are taken from the collection in the Vienna National Library, but there are other collections of letters from this news agency—notably one in the library of the University of Leipzig. An examination of these News-Letters proves, from water-marks and from handwriting, that they came originally from Crasser's news agency at Augsburg. The introduction sheds considerable light on the genesis of journalism in Europe.

The best way to read this volume is to imagine one's self back in Augsburg, or in Nuremberg at the beginning of the seventeenth century, and then read the News-Letters as one would read newspapers. One will be surprised how much alike are the contents of these News-Letters and the columns of the newspapers of today. For example, here is a News-Letter from Moscow, 1572 about atrocities in Russia:

> The only fresh news I have to report at this time is that the Muscovite himself ravages and despoils his own land and nation. The folk are pitilessly and cruelly killed in their thousands in all towns and many villages. They freeze to death and perish by violent means. Corn, cattle, and all else which is needed for man's sustenance is burnt, corn is scattered in the street and the fields, and altogether much wanton damage is wrought.

Mail pouches were rifled in 1581, as the following dispatch from Cologne dated July 20 will show:

> The Nuremberg courier arrived here from Antwerp on the 15th day of this month and again left on his way to Nuremberg. But an eighth of a mile from the town all the letters which he had received here were taken from him, partly opened and torn up, or thrown into the fields. What has become of the courier himself it is impossible to ascertain.

Crime had the same news value in 1585. A good illustration is the following dispatch from Augsburg, December 2:

> The week just passed has been an unhappy one, for on Monday a carman hanged himself, kneeling. On Tuesday a goldsmith of the name of Ostwald, sprang into the Lech in the Sachsengässlein, wishing to drown himself on account of debts. But his neighbors saved him. On the night of Thursday, a cloth-shearer of the name of Huber who was drunk, fell into the Lech and was drowned. His body was found on the next day. On the same day a peasant woman of Pfersen killed a young male child—her own flesh and blood. On Friday a fisherman, who is also a gardener in Pfersen, persuaded his betrothed to accompany him to another village, because there would be holiday there two days running. When she had agreed to this and they were a little way from the town, he stabbed her seven times with a crooked blade and sorely wounded her. As several persons saw this murder from afar and raised a great clamour, the malefactor took flight towards the city. The keeper of the gate caught the miscreant and by order of the authorities he has been thrown into prison. The wounded girl was carried to the Pilgrim's House, where she yet lies in a hopeless state. Last night a weaver of the town was stabbed to death, on account of which the small gates have remained closed this day. In the past night also, a miller in the upper town threw his wife into the river and tried to drown her. But people came to her assistance.

The source of the news is frequently given. A News-Letter from Madrid, May 15, 1588 opens as follows:

> The last courier from Lisbon brings news of there having arrived a letter from London.

A dispatch from Venice, July 22, 1588, begins:

> The latest letters from Constantinople report that the Janissaries there manifested great rebellion on account of a complaint against their Aga.

A story of scandal taken from a dispatch at Strasburg opens thus:

> John Casimir is said to be in sore trouble concerning his consort, for she has committed adultery with a Pole. The latter has had intercourse with her seven or eight times, and upon each occasion she presented him with a hundred crowns.

Details follow in the News-Letter, but obviously need not be reprinted here.

On page 152 will be found an interesting News-Letter from Japan dated July 25, 1590. It tells what the Christian missionaries have accomplished in that country.

Here is an account of a panic at a bull fight, according to a News-Letter sent from Madrid the 6th day of July 1596:

> A few days ago, the inhabitants of Toledo, according to their custom, have held a bull fight before His Majesty. A great multitude having collected, some evil young rogues suddenly set up the cry: "The houses are falling!" Thereupon such panic arose among the people that they rushed out of them and betook themselves to the tablados or tribunes. This caused one of these to collapse, and several persons were hurt. The others fled without caps, hats or coats—the women without capes or slippers, only in scanty attire. In the meantime, some graceless ruffians arrived and carried off all they could lay hands on, especially plate and golden trinkets. This turmoil lasted for over an hour.

For American readers the most interesting letters are those from South American countries. Information about the evolution of journalism in South America is most jejune, but the Letters in these volumes supply valuable material to substantiate what, heretofore, has only been rumor or tradition.

With both the original German edition and the English translation before me as I write, I have no hesitation in saying that the latter is a much finer piece of bookmaking than the former in such matters as binding, composition, and press work. Those who want to know about cradle days of journalism in Europe should add this volume to their library.

History from Newspaper Files

Old Boston Traveler files will form the basis of a new book on the history of the famous Cowley missionary fathers to be written by Fr. Duncan Convers.

MARSHALL HALL DIES

A. P. Newport Correspondent Told Nation of German U-Boat Appearance

Marshall W. Hall, 60, for 20 years day correspondent of the Associated Press at Newport, R. I., died at Newport Dec. 27, following a long illness. He was a member of the staff of the Newport News.

With the late Frank M. Wheeler, Hall gave the country in October, 1916, the details of the unheralded appearance in Newport of the German war submarine U-53, which preceded her raid on allied shipping off Nantucket and in Vineyard Sound.

Leo Wilson Joins Omaha Bee

Leo. R. Wilson, advertising manager of the Omaha World-Herald for the past seven years, has resigned to take a similar position with the Omaha Bee. O. E. Knisley has been made director of advertising of the Herald and Walter E. Lamb has been placed in charge of local display. Mr. Lamb has been with the World-Herald more than 15 years.

French in Press Freedom Fight

Prosecution by Premier Herriot of L'Eclair, Paris, for publication of secret documents concerning the national defense and the external safety of the State has started a fight for freedom of the press in France. Strong protest has been made by Count Etienne de Naleche, president of the Syndicate of the Parisian Press, newspapers construing the prosecution as an effort to muzzle the press.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Comic Cartoons

WALT MUNSON'S "TIME TO CRAB"
Appearing in Brooklyn Eagle
Tri Feature Syndicate, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y.

Editorials

TIMELY TOPICS, DAILY SERVICE
Exclusive Territory
Three Days' Service and Rates
Gladly Sent
Reid Editorial Service
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

LET US BUILD YOUR CIRCULATION
Famous stories by famous authors.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., New York.

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
2048 East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Radio

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

FOR SMALLER PAPERS
A new and snappy weekly radio review
By CAPT. H. BUTMAN
Washington Radio News Service
1422 F St. Washington, D. C.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Sport Cartoon

"BUDDIE SHEEL'S" DAILY COMMENT ON the Sport World. Featured by Brooklyn Times Tri Feature Syndicate, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y.

Leading to Easter Sunday

Easter does not come until April, but it is not too early to plan an advertising campaign on behalf of the churches in town, leading up to this important church day.

A little special solicitation will sell to a group of business and professional men interested in the church their share of space to be used on behalf of all the churches in your town.

A number of series of copy are available from different sources. Plan to use your paper for the upbuilding of the local churches.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A. A. C. W.

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World
383 Madison Ave. New York City

Old Uncle Tom Dies "At Just About 70"

Colored Hack Driver and National Press Club Porter Known to Hundreds of American Newspaper Men

Every newspaper man who, in recent years, has been a visitor at the National Press Club at Washington, knew "Uncle Tom." He is dead and Theodore Tiller wrote a remarkable story of the old man's life and service for the Washington Times. It follows:

By THEODORE TILLER

"UNCLE TOM" CARTER died early today. There are places in town where that line of type may not mean anything, but over at the National Press Club and along what used to be Newspaper Row it will bring sighs and memories of the old Washington in which "Uncle Tom" had his part.

Tom Carter was an aged colored man. He claimed to be "just about seventy," but when he hobbled into the Press Club on his last visit a day or so ago, he looked eighty-five. He was so weak then that his white friends sent him home in a taxicab, giving him a little purse as they left. That's how they felt toward him.

"Uncle Tom" came here from Fredericksburg in 1865, just after the war and was lifted. For a little while he was a porter in a hardware store. Then he acquired a horse and what the fellows called Newspaper Row called a night hack or "sea-going hack."

For almost a half century he sat on the box of his old hack and waited for fares that came at midnight, or maybe later dawn. He made his stand around newspaper offices and the old Press Club because the fellows there seemed to pay up later. Sometimes they were generous with their tips, sometimes they didn't pay at all. "Uncle Tom" never kept books against them. As age crept upon him he began to call them "my boys" and "my white gentl'man frens." They called him "Uncle Tom" and probably one out of ten knew his last name. Characters like this weather-beaten old hawk are institutions; last names don't matter so much.

In more recent years the automobiles and taxicabs began to close in upon the ranks of night liners. "Uncle Tom" was at the same old stand, but the "fares" were fewer and many of the midnight ones passed by his shaky hack and hailed a faster vehicle."

Somewhere wistfully "Uncle Tom" watched the march of progress. His dilapidated hack wasn't worth a mortgage, and the horse itself was getting feeble, like his master, but anyway a loan was arranged. "Uncle Tom" could have gone back through the years and collected all that was due him from the "good fellows" who had taken home from the saloons and the clubs around town he wouldn't have asked a loan.

The mortgage became due, as all mortgages will, and "Uncle Tom" couldn't pay. A group of his former patrons heard about it and paid it off. But the horse was getting older and more decrepit. It seemed some nights he couldn't make the grade at all, and going home with Tom Carter and his nag was a nerve-racking ride.

One day the horse just stopped and Tom couldn't buy another. It was no use, anyway, with taxicabs and motor cars darting about him and getting all the "fares." He sold the horse for $8, and two long-time friends, dumb animal and man, sorrowfully parted and gave way to the newer day. Most of the night liners of a few years ago are now off the Washington streets forever.

"Uncle Tom" turned naturally to his newspaper friends. Newspaper Row had about passed, but the National Press Club was a bigger institution.

"Mister Nick," said Tom. "I was wonderin' if there ain't somethin' I could git to do aroun' the club. I'm gettin' old, but I might do a little cleanin' up or somethin'."

"Sure, Uncle Tom," said Mister Nick.

"Git me a night job, Mister Nick," urged Tom. "You see, I've been up nights for fifty years and I can't seem to wuk in the daytime. Got to have 'lectric lights."

And so they put him to work at the Press Club.

All night long for several years past he'd polished the brass knobs on the doors, swept up the cigarette stubs, and puttered around the place at this little job and that. Indulgent members spurred him on with praise as he grew feebler. The door knobs were never polished so brightly before, they said, and the floors were never cleaner. Now and then he'd stop and, with shortened breath, talk about the old days and that now vanished row of night liners along Pennsylvania avenue and F street.

About three months ago "Uncle Tom" began rapidly to fail. The club pensioned him, and back in the room where they play dominoes and bridge and hearts the fellows passed the hat twice a week "for Uncle Tom."

FORTY YEARS YOUNG

1885 1925

TO HAVE been first in any sphere of activity, it is said, proves antiquity. To have become first proves merit. ¶ Perhaps the fact that this organization is unfettered by age-old precedents accounts for its rapid rise. Perhaps we have achieved the foremost place we occupy in the industry we serve because our backs are ever to the past and our faces always to the future. ¶ Whatever the answer, 1925 finds us forty years young—matured, to be sure, by ample experience yet with the zeal of youth to progress, to improve, and never to be satisfied with our accomplishments of yesterday great though they may seem by contrast. ¶ We look to this New Year to overflow our cup of happiness in our work. May it hold a similar abundance of joy in store for you.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

The Goss Printing Press Company of England, Ltd. · London

GOSS

STRAIGHT GOSS HIGH SPEED LINE

OST NEWS

largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

e Pittsburgh Post

ORNING AND SUNDAY

tober circulation (net paid)

ily Circulation.....137,824

nday Circulation.....197,347

Member A. B. C.

WHAT ADVERTISERS ARE DOING "OVER OHIO WAY"

By CHALMERS L. PANCOAST

ON the train from Cleveland to Columbus, I bought a Columbus Dispatch to find a cross-word puzzle. I found it on the first page of the classified advertising section. To make people read the ads and at the same time make the puzzle more interesting a dozen of the mysterious words were scattered in various places in the classified columns. For instance in an 8 line space would appear these words:—"Answer to No. 32 horizontal Tuesday's cross-word puzzle is "Pecan."

Another clever advertising idea promoted by the Columbus Dispatch was the "Amateur Ad-Writing Contest." The prizes consisted of $4,000 in cash distributed as follows:—140 prizes awarded weekly; five prizes for the best ideas on each separate advertiser whose name was listed each week; $50 cash for the best idea of the week on any one advertiser; $300—$200—$100 and $50 in cash awarded as grand prizes for the best advertising idea of the entire contest.

Additional awards of cash and merchandise were offered by the various business houses that entered the scheme.

Contestants were required to write an advertising idea on each or any of the contest advertisers; and could submit as many separate ideas as desired. No entry fees were required; no subscriptions or obligations of any kind were necessary.

The Columbus Packing Company was using considerable newspaper space crowing about "A prize 930 pound Baby Beef" which cost 80 cents per pound on hoof."

The ads were illustrated with a picture of the champion of the Louisville Stock Show which had been purchased by the Columbus Packing Company and brought to Columbus for holiday trade. A price of $750 or 80c a pound was paid for the prize. The grand champion baby beef was placed on exhibition before being butchered.

"And now," read the advertisement, "the prize baby beef is on sale at your grocers and butchers."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer featured the Prize Christmas Short Story Contest for 1924. Each day the stories winning prizes were published with the name of the author.

I thought Greenwich Village had a corner on all the queer names for eating places, until I read an announcement in the Cincinnati Enquirer of the opening of "The Yellow Hen Restaurant." It is to be operated in connection with the Bird Cage Restaurant. The Yellow Hen advertises "Chicken Luncheons and Dinners Only."

The Columbus Dispatch boosted its holiday circulation by offering a doll named "Miss Columbus", for four new subscribers. It aroused a lot of interest among young girls in Ohio. The picture of every girl who won a doll was published with a short story of who she was and where she lived.

Some of the oldest free schemes seem to be the best. In the Newark (O.) Advocate, Rattenberg's a local store advertised—"Free-Turkey-Free every day until Christmas. These turkeys are free—will not cost you a penny. You don't need to buy anything in order to get the turkey free. Come in and see." Needless to day people went into the store to get a chance on the turkeys.

The cross-word puzzle craze has been taken advantage of by advertisers in various clever ways. In the Newark (O.) American-Tribune appeared a large advertisement with this heading:—"Solved-at Carroll's—The Great Christmas Gift Puzzle—Three Across—a Christmas gift thrill for sister! Five across a Christmas gift for Dad, or brother or somebody else."

The gift offerings below were arranged in squares representing the lay-out of a cross-word puzzle.

The old idea of a work-shop window with a real live Santa Claus fussing with toys has never ceased to be a big attraction. The W. H. Mazey store in Newark O., gave up its largest display window for a Santa workshop and used newspaper space to call attention to Santa Claus busily arranging, demonstrating and mending toys for the wee tots.

It was advertised that every day from 12:30 to 5 o'clock Santa would appear in the big display window and meet little folks. This is one of the attractions that never has lost its advertising value for a story. It is just as big a crowd-getter today as it was 30 years ago.

Higham Coming Here in March

Sir Charles Higham is planning a trip to the United States in March to launch an India Tea advertising drive in Chicago. He will sail March 10, on the Leviathan.

AD TIPS

George Batten Company, 383 Madison avenue, New York. Now handling account of the H. L. Judd Company, Inc., New York, manufacturers of drapery hardware, including "Bluebird" curtain rods.

Sterling Beeson, Inc., Second National Bank Building, Toledo. Placing account of the Oval Wood Dish Corporation, Tupper Lake, N. Y., manufacturers of wooden dishes and plates.

Caples Company, 225 East Erie street, Chicago. Renewal contracts are being sent out on the N. C. & St. L. Ry.

Nelson Chesman & Company, 500 North Dearborn street, Chicago. Copy on the Whole Grain Wheat Company, Chicago, is being distributed to papers on North Carolina. Iowa papers are receiving contracts on the Alpen Company. The Cleveland office is handling the account of the Cummer Products Company (Energine), Cleveland, planning a more extensive advertising in daily newspapers for 1925.

Danielson & Son, Industrial Trust Building, Providence. Has secured the accounts of the Colonial Brass Company, Middleboro, Mass., makers of Silver-Tone Radio Antenna and the Walker Webbing Company, Providence, makers of Cameo Notions.

H. W. Kastor & Sons Advertising Company, 14 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Extensions are being made in the list of the Williamson Candy Company.

Lakeport Advertising Agency, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing account of the Stillman Cream Company, Aurora, Ill., manufacturers of toilet goods.

Patterson-Andress Company, Inc., 1 Madison avenue, New York. Handling account of the Franklin Automobile Company, Syracuse.

Potts Turnbull Company, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Contracts on the John G. Woodward & Company, Council Bluffs, Ia., are being sent out to papers in Colorado.

Frank Presbrey Company, 247 Park avenue, New York. Has secured the account of the Standard Action Company, Cambridge, Mass., manufacturers of Standard Piano Actions.

George M. Savage Advertising Agency, 58 West Adams avenue, Detroit. Has secured the account of the Berry Brothers, Detroit, manufacturers of varnishes, enamels and stains.

Stack Advertising Agency, 29 East Madison street, Chicago. A general list of newspapers is being prepared on Libby's Milk, Libby, McNeil & Libby, Chicago.

United States Advertising Corporation, 30 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Copy is being sent out generally on the Willys-Overland Company, Toledo, O.

Wildman Advertising Agency, 450 4th avenue, New York. Will handle the 1925 advertising of Charles Hoffman, New York, "Marlboro Dresses."

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD

Los Angeles, Calif.

Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.

Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:

H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

Experience The Best Teacher

Has taught American exporters that the best advertising medium in Japan is

THE JIJI SHIMPO

時事新報

The explanation is readily apparent to all who have examined carefully the comparative status of newspapers in Japan. There are journals which cater to one political party, to the literati, to gay circles and even to the rikisha men and coolies. But The Jiji Shimpo is known throughout Japan as the Empire's foremost NEWSpaper and the favorite in business circles. The Jiji's circulation is greatest among prosperous Japanese. Its typical readers are found among those progressive Japanese who lead the way in the introduction of foreign goods in our country. To interest them is the foreign salesman's first requirement.

J. P. Barry, an authority on Far Eastern advertising, represents the Jiji in the American field. Mr. Barry is thoroughly equipped to assist you in planning your advertising campaign in Japan, and will take pleasure in serving you in every possible way. Communicate with him at

JAPAN ADVERTISER SUITE

342 Madison Avenue New York City

THE JIJI SHIMPO

Tokyo

"In Japan, the Buyers Read The Jiji"

Make 1925 Your Biggest Year By Advertising in

New York State

New York State is the vanguard of the nation. Advertising in this territory reaches not only the 10,385,277 people that constitute its population, but indirectly influences those residing in the other forty-seven United States.

Surely, Mr. National Advertiser, you consider this adequate return for any financial expenditure for advertising you are contemplating for the coming year. You must also bear in mind that this territory is not only the most receptive for advertising but is possessing of that even more important asset—MONEY.

New York State filed by far the largest number of personal income tax returns, paying a total tax of $210,768,000 or thirty per cent of the total tax of the country.

The newspapers of New York State have an influence that is felt throughout the length and breadth of the country.

The manufacturers and merchants who do not employ these newspapers are not alive to the great aid they can employ to build their business successfully.

These daily New York State Newspapers form a powerful combination for successful business building.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
*Albany Evening News .....(E)	21,982	.08	.08
*Albany Knickerbocker Press .....(M)	33,239	.10	.10
*Albany Knickerbocker Press .....(S)	53,649	.14	.14
*Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat .....(E)	7,502	.04	.04
Auburn Citizen .....(E)	6,429	.04	.035
*Batavia Daily News .....(E)	8,737	.04	.04
*Binghamton Press .....(E)	32,006	.09	.09
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle .....(E)	67,646	.22	.22
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle .....(S)	77,839	.22	.22
*Buffalo Courier and Enquirer.....(M&E)	78,058	.18	.18
*Buffalo Courier .....(S)	118,603	.25	.22
†Buffalo Evening News .....(E)	125,618	.25	.25
*Buffalo Evening Times .....(E)	93,202	.21	.21
*Buffalo Sunday Times .....(S)	89,844	.21	.21
*Buffalo Express .....(M)	51,288	.14	.12
*Buffalo Express .....(S)	53,362	.18	.14
*Corning Evening Leader .....(E)	8,613	.04	.04
*Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser.....(E&M)	33,102	.11	.11
*Geneva Daily Times .....(E)	5,052	.04	.04
*Gloversville Leader Republican.....(E)	6,852	.035	.035
*Ithaca Journal-News .....(E)	7,411	.04	.04
*Jamestown Morning Post.....(M)	11,112	.04	.035
*Middletown Times-Press .....(E)	6,714	.03	.03
*Mount Vernon Daily Argus.....(E)	9,293	.05	.05
*Newburgh Daily News .....(E)	11,591	.05	.05
*New Rochelle Standard-Star .....(E)	7,741	.04	.04
*The Sun, New York .....(E)	253,763	.60	.56
†New York Times .....(M)	352,100	.75	.735
†New York Times .....(S)	569,623	.90	.882
*New York Herald-Tribune .....(M)	270,159	.594	.576
*New York Herald-Tribune .....(S)	316,585	.6435	.624
†New York World .....(M)	378,807	.595	.58
†New York World .....(S)	558,779	.595	.58
†New York Evening World .....(E)	314,489	.595	.58
*Niagara Falls Gazette .....(E)	18,103	.055	.055
*Port Chester Item .....(E)	4,359	.03	.03
*Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise.....(E)	12,110	.05	.05
*Rochester Times-Union .....(E)	64,727	.20	.18
*Syracuse Journal .....(E)	42,103	.14	.14
*Troy Record .....(M&E)	22,621	.06	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

NEWSPAPERS BRING CHRISTMAS TO THOUSANDS

Tons of Food, Clothing and Gifts Distributed by Dailies of the Country Survey Shows — $600,00 Raised in 11 Typical Cities.

NEWSPAPERS know how to show the Christmas spirit.

Each year unnumbered thousands of families are aided Dec. 25, through the pages of the daily press.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are raised and distributed in the form of toys to children, and food and clothing to the poor.

While it would be impossible to gather reports on what each of the 1,200 daily newspapers of the nation did this year, EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week presents telegraphic information from 11 cities of the United States as typical, showing that the newspapers in these cities raised nearly $600,000 for gifts to the needy Christmas Day.

The cities picked for geographical reasons were: New York, Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans and San Francisco.

In New York, where nearly half of the total was raised, the New York Times established a record in its 12-year old drive featuring the city's "Hundred Neediest Cases," with a total reached Dec. 30, of $228,999.88, as compared with the total of 1912 when the campaign was inaugurated of $3,630.88. This year enough was raised to support 300 families for a year.

The New York American Christmas and Relief Fund went over the $140,000 mark this week, and with contributions continuing to pour in, it was indicated the $156,000 mark set last year would be surpassed. More than 18,000 dinners were distributed by the American Christmas Eve. In addition Mrs. William Randolph Hearst played hostess to 3,500 crippled and orphaned children, giving them toys and other gifts.

The New York Evening Post, having already raised $9,204 to provide for 28 carefully selected old couples throughout the coming year, has decided to continue the drive longer.

The New York Herald Tribune by Christmas had raised more than $35,000 in its drive to provide radio sets for the blind. Following its distribution of gifts at Ellis Island, the New York World and Paul Whiteman, the jazz king, were joint hosts to more than 6,500 children at the Hippodrome.

The New York Evening Graphic chartered an airplane, in which a man dressed as Santa flew to Central Park to distribute gifts to children.

In Brooklyn by Dec. 27, the Eagle had raised a total of $11,050.26 to provide for the "Thirty Neediest Families."

BOSTON

The Boston American raised a total of $14,092.05 and supplied 5,350 families with Christmas dinners.

The Boston Post reported a total of $26,852.12 collected and thousands of little children made happy with generous gifts of toys. In addition the Post sent gifts for 500 children of the unemployed mill workers of Fall River.

The Boston Telegram raised $879.60 for Christmas dinners and nearly 1,500 families were supplied. Gifts of warm clothing and toys for the children were also included.

The Herald-Traveler furnished the music for the big night before Christmas celebration on Boston Common and the Traveler issued attractive books of carols with its evening edition. Other Boston papers made generous contributions to deserving charities.

BALTIMORE

The Baltimre Evening Sun began about 10 days before Christmas to publish the stories of girls and boys, wards of a charitable organization, who had no parents to provide Christmas for them. The result was a shower of gifts. Presents to a total money value of $2,000 were provided and $500 in cash.

The Baltimore News ran a list of opportunities to do Christmas good. All the contributions in this case were money. There were ten opportunities. All were taken by the public.

PHILADELPHIA

Both the North American and the Record enrolled as aids to good old St. Nick. The former started the North American Outing Fund, off with $1,000 and the public contributed around $700 with the result that the tree on the 17th floor of the North American building was equipped with between 15,000 and 20,000 gifts, which were given needy children who visited Polly, and that 300 families were given boxes of canned goods and dry groceries. The North American also solicited $250 for the partial support of each child at the outing fund's sanatarium at Atlantic City.

CLEVELAND

The Cleveland News and Sunday News Leader conducted a gift department, in which toys were requested for distribution among needy children. Toys by the truck load poured in with the result that 7,000 children in more than 1,500 different families were remembered.

The Cleveland Press daily printed the names and addresses of children who would have no Santa without outside assistance. The Press used a large fleet of trucks, with Santa Claus drivers and helpers, to distribute good cheer.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer followed its custom of years and gave away prizes ranging from $50 down for Christmas stories submitted by high school and grammar students. All winners had their checks in time for Christmas.

The Cleveland Times made it a "radio" Christmas and awarded to a large number of shut-ins, new, expensive, high power radio sets. The Times has been doing this regularly for more than a year, but concentrated on a special drive Christmas.

DETROIT

The handling of all Christmas charity funds raised by the Detroit newspapers is entrusted to the Old Newsboys, an organization of former newsboys of the city, founded several years ago by James J. Brady and David A. Brown. Aside from the funds turned over by the newspapers the Old Newsboys spend one day each year, about a week before Christmas, selling papers at their old stands on the city streets, each paper bringing from ten cents to possibly as high as fifty or one hundred dollars. Whatever is offered for a paper is accepted: there is no change given. The organization includes Governor Alex J. Groesbeck and Mayor John W. Smith, of Detroit.

On Dec. 18, this year, the Old Newsboys raised $31,463 through their annual sale.

An appeal to its readers brought $4,194.50 to the Free Press, this sum being immediately turned over to the Old Newsboys, as was $315.35 received by voluntary subscriptions from readers of Nancy Brown's "Experience" department in the Detroit News. The sale of special Goodfellow editions of the papers at banquets, and additional contributions from other sources brought the fund well above $40,000.

CHICAGO

The Herald and Examiner distributed more than 8,000 baskets to needy families, bought from funds donated by readers. In addition the newspaper erected a giant Christmas tree on the lake front. The Tribune's sixteenth annual Goodfellow campaign was the most successful in history and no family was overlooked by the volunteer Santas. The Tribune also held a Christmas party for more than 1,000 crippled children. The Journal conducted its annual Shoe Fund campaign and nearly $10,000 was raised to buy shoes for poor children.

ST. LOUIS

Ten thousand children were made happy at the silver jubilee of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival, held Christmas in the Coliseum. Fifty-five thousand gifts were distributed. The Post-Dispatch also distributed 3,800 baskets, containing chicken dinners. The cost of these represents a large part of the annual expense of the Festival, the estimated cost of which this year was $15,000.

Hundreds of St. Louis poor were assisted through the Times Good Fellows.

MEMPHIS

Memphis newspapers provided the publicity that gave Christmas dinners to 4,000 poor families. The News-Scimitar worked with the Good Fellows, the Commercial-Appeal raised a special fund for veterans in the U. S. Hospital. The Memphis Press helped all charitable agencies. All three papers gave generously of space to all organizations spreading Christmas cheer.

NEW ORLEANS

Two New Orleans newspapers rai funds for toys for 11,000 white and 5,(negro children and for food, clothing a toys for 450 families through the Tim Picayune Doll and Toy Fund, the Tim Picayune Christmas Gift Fund and Item Good Fellow Movement.

Public contributions to the Doll a Toy Fund totaled $10,000 and to Christmas Gift Fund, $3,000. The Ite Good Fellow Movement brought Chri mas cheer to 250 families.

SAN FRANCISCO

The "Sam Goodheart" Fund raised the San Francisco Examiner brou cheer to 100 needy homes. Twenty au mobiles laden with food, clothing and t left the office early Christmas morn and the families were made happy noon. The fund reached $7,200.

The San Francisco Chronicle distr uted $8,500 contributed by citizens to "Shower of Gold." The money is gi in $20 pieces to wounded war veterans the San Francisco and adjacent hospit The "Shower of Gold" idea was star by M. H. DeYoung, publisher of t Chronicle, in 1921 at the time of the A mistice Day celebration and has beco an annual institution.

The Bulletin got up an outdoor conc with Mischa Elman, the violinist, headliner.

The Call and Post received ab $3,300 for its Good Fellow Fund, wh was distributed in food and toys to families.

The Business Men

of your community will value the authentic statements of

ROGER W. BABSON

on the business and financial situation, above any other single piece of news that you can print.

Supplied weekly through the Babson News Service, Publisher's Financial Bureau, Babson Park, Mass.

SPECIMEN RELEASES AND RATES ON REQUEST

DAILY PAPERS FROM OTHER CITIES

HOTALING'S NEWS STAND

BROADWAY AND 43RD ST.
NORTH END THE TIMES BUILDING

"Perhaps the most cosmopolitan spot in New York City is Forty-third Street and Broadway . . . Here is a mammoth news stand which sells newspapers from every city in the world. . . Every town has similar stands, but none as huge as this, and none as varied and as picturesque in its patronage."

—Boston Transcript, Oct. 29, 1921.

HOTALING'S NEWS AGENCY, 308 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

By Henry Edward Warner

THE PROOF READER

I am the Man Who Reads the Proofs
Of other people's junk;
Who follows editorial thought
That only thinks it thunk!
~~Etaoin oinat atoone teoin ionatection~~
I am the victim of the Cub
Who swells important, when
He does his daily murder with Affairs of other men.

I come behind the copy desk,
That erudite affair
That earns its living saying words
To indigo the air;
I follow up the dirty work
Of Number Six machine,
And it would take a vacuum
To keep his galley clean!

I am the Guy who has to know
The Split-in-fin-i-tive . . .
O why did Lincoln have to die
And let that writer live?
I have to check the careless facts
That office Star indites;
And they expect me to correct
The Rot our Owner writes!

All day I struggle with the Junk,
Until my senses reel!
There is enough crime in the stuff
To make my blood congeal!
But I must toil, a Martyr to
The Cause, so long as Men
Set dirty galleys of the Mush
That speaks a polish Pen!

Some day . . . some happy day, I'll wing
My way to distant stars;
I'll get a job on Venus, or
On Mercury or Mars!
And all I ask the gods is that,
Seeing what they have seen,
They let my Heaven be some place
Where every galley's clean!

COOLIDGE'S PARTY FOR EDITORS FILMED

J. C. Brown of International News Reel Snaps Start of Mayflower Trip and Shows Completed Films When It Returns

When President and Mrs. Coolidge entertained a group of newspaper men and their wives aboard the Mayflower over a recent week-end the Presidential party in turn was given some added entertainment through the enterprise of the International News Reel Corporation and J. C. Brown, photographer.

As the President and his guests—Colonel George Harvey, editor of the Washington Post, and Mrs. Harvey; G. Logan Payne, publisher of the Washington Times, and Mrs. Payne; David Lawrence, of the Consolidated Press, and Mrs. Lawrence; William Allen White, publisher of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette; Secretary of Agriculture Gore, and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Jr.—were boarding the Presidential yacht Saturday afternoon, the movie camera of J. C. Brown, Washington representative of International News Reel, was clicking.

A complete "lay-out" of the trip was made. The party was filmed going aboard, greeting the President and Mrs. Coolidge, chatting in groups on the deck, and in various other poses. Then the Mayflower weighed anchor, and "Brownie" rushed back to the dark room.

At seven o'clock Saturday night, the film had been developed, cut, titled, and placed in the hands of Dick Jervis, chief of the White House Secret Service. When the Mayflower swung back to Washington early Sunday morning to pick up the President's son, John, just back from college for the holidays, the reel was placed aboard, and Sunday afternoon the party gathered in the ward room and witnessed the movie depiction of the start of their trip.

Hutson of N. Y. Ad Club Promoted

William Kidwell Hutson, of the executive staff of the Advertising Club of New York, was appointed assistant club secretary at a recent directors meeting. Mr. Hutson has been editor and business manager of the Advertising Club News for more than a year.

In New Orleans its
THE MORNING TRIBUNE
(Published week-day mornings)
THE NEW ORLEANS ITEM
(Published week-day afternoons)
THE ITEM TRIBUNE
(Published Sunday mornings)
Sold to National Advertisers at a combination rate 15c a line week-days and 18c a line Sundays.

The Plain Dealer
has the Largest Circulation of Any Cleveland
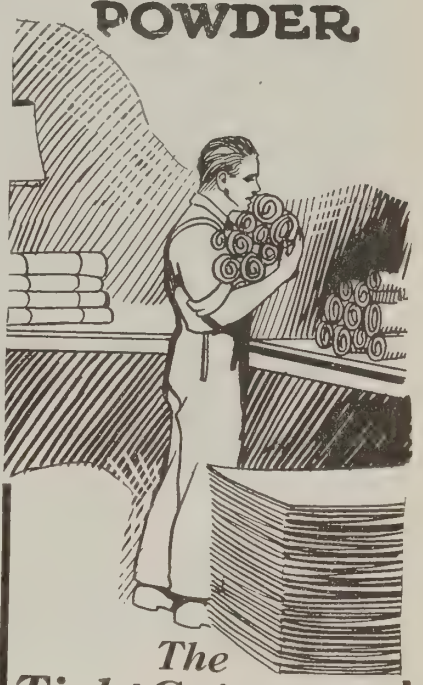
Daily
Newspaper
205,569
J. B. Woodward 110 E. 42d St. New York
Woodward & Kelly Security Bldg. Chicago

The Cathedral Towns of England
BEVERLEY

Between York and the Sea, on the flat little strip of land called Holderness, is quaint little Beverley. It is a sleepy half forgotten little town glowing cheerily with dark red brick.

Beverley is the seat of a Suffragan Bishop and is remarkable in possessing two Churches of the highest order. In size and splendour Beverley Minster is more than the equal of some English Cathedrals.



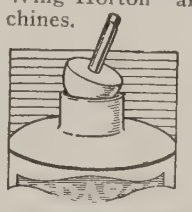
The Parish Church of St. Mary is little inferior in interest to the Minster and is superior in possessing a central tower.

The town has a charming old market place, a picturesque cross and red brick gateway and has plenty of interest to offer the visitor.

On the London & North Eastern Railway

Apply for free booklets to
H. J. KETCHAM
General Agent
LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY,
311 Fifth Avenue (at Thirty-Second St.), New York

QUICK STICK PASTE POWDER



The Tight Grip Paste

Quickstick is easily mixed—with either hot or cold water and when once applied it will not let go. It is the tightest gripping—quickest acting—strongest and most satisfactory bundle wrapping paste made. Use it in your mail room and reduce your wrapping worries to a minimum. We will gladly send you a small quantity for trial.

No. 705 Mailing Machine PASTE Makes Rapid Labeling Possible

This white, smooth, easy flowing mailing machine paste is ready mixed—entirely free from lumps—making rapid labeling assured. Will not gum up or corrode the machine—always ready. Compounded especially for Wing-Horton and Dick Machines.

COPASCO Semi-Liquid Paste for DESK USE

This self closing stopper on the convenient desk jar is in great demand by the men at the desks—refills can easily be made and paste economy is brought down to the finest point.

The Commercial Paste Co.
Makers of the Largest and Most Complete Line of Adhesives
DEPT. 51, COLUMBUS, OHIO

The Commercial Paste Co.,
Dept. 51, Columbus, Ohio.
Gentlemen:—
Please send us for trial your minimum quantity of ☐ Quick Stick, ☐ No. 705, ☐ Copasco.
Name .....
Address .....
Town..... State.....
Newspaper .....

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

T. E. NILES—"Get good men!"

"THE winners in this newspaper business are the ones whom the fool managing editors can't make into 'yes-men.'"

Theophilus E. Niles, now general manager of the Providence (R. I.) News and former managing editor of the New York Evening Mail, once made this remark to the writer.

To Mr. Niles has often gone credit of "making" Franklin P. Adams, Grantland Rice, Rollin Kirby, Rube Goldberg, and Zoe Beckley, among other journalistic stars. He gave them work and kept them on the Evening Mail, when other New York managing editors turned them down.

"I get a lot more credit than I deserve, however," he has explained. "I just didn't prevent their coming through—that was all.

"My idea of a managing editor's job," he answered a question, "is that he get good men, encourage them, treat them white, and give them appreciation.

"A managing editor must have a sense of humor. He must realize that he makes mistakes as well as anyone else. He sits no throne, and should not give that impression. He is not so all-thundering important, and should not think so.

"To get a real battery of brilliant newspaper writers about him, he should rather make everyone on his paper consider that he or she is a managing editor.

"Then he, as the managing editor, if he is the right sort, should be willing and able to handle any other job.

"When you have for your staff a flock of managing editors you are going to put out a whale of a fine newspaper.

"The key to managing a spirited force on a paper, I often think, is very much the same as for bringing up a family of youngsters—treat your children with respect, instead of demanding that they treat you with respect."

Mr. Niles was complimented for his Chestertonian paradox.

"Paradox!" he ejaculated. "It's just plain horse sense."

And another paradox he offered as "plain horse sense" during the conversation was that to "write well for a newspaper, one should not write too well."

"News writers too frequently pay too much attention to what other newspapers are doing," he explained. "They try to write for smart editors and become stereotyped.

"Of course they should read all the newspapers. Obviously a newspaper man must know what is going on, although many of them don't. But instead of trying to please the editor, it seems to me much better should they try to please the janitor.

"My advice would be: 'Don't write long windy stuff. Don't try to be smart. Say it and stop. Say it to readers and not to editors.'

"Time and again a managing editor becomes cooped up in his little office, where he thinks of himself as a thundering smart chap. Once there, he fails to connect. He is surrounded by a crowd of 'highfalutin'' news editors and clever reporters, while to discover what the public wants, he had better be talking to delivery boys."

This last expression of opinion is rather Brisbanese, and one easily recalls that Mr. Niles began his newspaper career under the snappy sentenced Arthur, when the latter directed the New York Sun.

Mr. Niles came to the Sun from a school teaching position on Long Island which he had accepted following graduation from Wesleyan College, Connecticut, in 1888. On his first assignment he won Mr. Brisbane's approval.

An awed, inexperienced up-country youngster, he was assigned to write a story on the birth of triplets in Jersey City. After much questioning, he found his way across the Hudson to the stork-honored house. The proud mother to tell her baby trio apart, had tied pink, blue and red ribbons on their wrists. The family lived in lurid squalor. The father was drunk, celebrating.

"I came back to the office," Mr. Niles recalls "and wrote a couple of sticks on what I saw. There was no writing—I didn't know how to write. The facts made the drama."

Mr. Brisbane, however, thought differently. He surprised the sublimated office boy by praising his story highly.

Mr. Niles later joined the staff of the old New York Mail and Express under Col. Shepherd, which later became the Evening Mail and remained on that newspaper until it was sold to Frank Munsey nearly a year ago, with the exception of various short, excursions he made to other fields. Some of these excursions included the managing editorship of the New York Tribune and the same position on the old Newark Daily Advertiser until it was purchased by Col. George Harvey.

It was on the Mail that he employed and held F. P. A., Grantland Rice, Rollin Kirby, and other stars, although he was frequently ordered to discharge them.

These men, working on other newspapers today, still stick by Mr. Niles.

"He's a winner!" F. P. A. told the writer in his off-stage manner. "He's a damn fine guy."

Arthur Brisbane wanted Goldburg to come from the Evening Mail to the New York Journal, but the cartoonist remained loyal to Mr. Niles. The same was true in regard to F. P. A., to whom Lord Northcliffe made a brilliant offer.

Mr. Niles this month became general manager of the Providence News, which is owned by United States Senator Peter G. Gerry, the first Democratic Senator from Rhode Island since shortly after the Civil War. All sorts of possibilities, he believes, are open for the News, and Mr. Niles has entered his new work with enthusiasm.

THE PASSAIC
DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities
TRADING POPULATION
167,395
NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

A Stable Market

THE Milwaukee-Wisconsin market offers your most dependable sales opportunity in 1924! The first city of diversified industries located in the world's richest dairying center—an unbeatable combination — thoroughly covered by one advertising medium—
The Milwaukee JOURNAL
FIRST - by Merit

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"
The World.
MORNING EDITION
The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.
The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

THE same standards of quality are maintained by The News today that caused this paper to be recognized as one of America's best dailies long years ago.
The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?
Because
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.
Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

All Louisiana and MISSISSIPPI Listens In For RADIO NEWS in the NEW ORLEANS STATES
The state's representatives in the National Field—
THE JOHN M. BRANHAM CO.
New York — Chicago — St. Louis
Atlanta — Detroit — Kansas City
San Francisco—Los Angeles
New Orleans States

first!
—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results
The Indianapolis NEWS

Reserve Advertising Space
in the
Editor & Publisher International Year Book Number

AT ONCE By Wire

The greatest reference book in the newspaper and advertising fields.

On the desk of leading publishers for 12 full months.

Used by national advertisers when selecting media.

Referred to throughout the entire year by space buyers.

Answers Thousands of Questions—Reveals Vital Facts Concerning Advertising and the Newspapers of a dozen different languages

---

An Unrivalled Advertising Medium

For newspapers
For advertising agencies
For equipment manufacturers
For ink and supply houses
For syndicates and news services

A single advertising investment in this edition will produce results throughout 1925.

To Be Published January 31st—Reserve Space NOW

ALL THE REGULAR FEATURES AND MANY NEW ONES

EMORY JOINS SPECIAL

Former Ad Bureau Coast Man With Verree & Conklin

Verree & Conklin, Inc., special representatives with offices in New York, Chicago, Detroit, and San Francisco, this week announced appointment of Thomas L. Emory as manager of the latter office, effective January 1. Mr. Emory was formerly manager of the Pacific Coast office of the A. N. P. A. Bureau of Advertising. Harry J. Wittschen, formerly in charge at San Francisco for Verree & Conklin, Inc., is now with the New York office, another recent addition to which is William Bliss, formerly with the Frank Presbrey Company.

THOMAS L. EMORY

Publishers Aid Cathedral Building

Ralph Pulitzer, president and editor of the New York World, is chairman of the newspapers' section of the New York Civic Committee, assisting the campaign for $12,000,000 necessary to complete the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York. Herbert F. Gunnison, president of the Brooklyn Eagle, and Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, are serving as associate chairmen.

Chicago Tribune Entertains Staff

The Chicago Tribune gave its annual reception and open house Sunday afternoon, Dec. 28, to employes and their families. Visitors were received by Col. Robert McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Thomason, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Beck, Capt J. M. Patterson, E. W. Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. Carey Orr, Mr. and Mrs. Parke Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. McFarlane, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cleary, and Mr. and Mrs. Dan McMahon.

Enwright Host to Staff

Seventy-five employes of the Lynn (Mass.) Telegram-News were the guests of Frederick W. Enwright, the publisher, at a buffet luncheon served in the Telegram building in celebration of the 12th anniversary of the paper, the oldest of his chain of three, the other two being the Boston Telegram and the New York Bulletin. Mr. Enwright was presented a gold fountain pen by the staff.

"Our Esteem Is Boundless"

CHICAGO, DECEMBER 24, 1924.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHERS We have always had a very high opinion of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, but when they present such a service as they do in the SPACE BUYERS' GUIDE, our esteem is boundless.

Such information as you list is invaluable. Many times have we felt the need of a close survey of markets with information from impartial sources. The data presented in the Guide is so complete, pertinent, and well balanced that there is only the highest praise for it.

That you may know how well we think of it we would like to obtain two additional copies as soon as possible to place in the hands of sales managers so that they will have a better view of the market and a closer understanding of the conditions the salesmen confront. Of course we can do nothing else but enclose our yearly subscription to your publication and all it will bring to us.

W. J. BYRNES,
Acting Advertising Manager,
Lyon & Healy, Chicago.

"OLD TIMERS" FETED

News Stars of Other Days Entertained at Newspaper Club

"Old Timers" of Park Row became "cubs again just for a night at a party held Dec. 30, at the Newspaper Club of New York.

Robert Livingston of the old New York Herald, Frank Parker Stockbridge, former managing editor of the old New York Mail and Express, former Governor Benjamin J. O'Dell, old-time newspaper man, and others rubbed shoulders with the luminaries of today in New York's newspaper firmament, such as Heywood Broun, New York World; H. I. Phillips, New York Sun; Francis Tietsort, New York American; W. P. Beazell, New York World; Louis Seibold of the New York Evening Post, and Gene Fowler, managing editor, New York American and club president.

Sylvester Sullivan of the old New York Sun, acted as master of ceremonies, introducing prominent Broadway entertainers.

Universal Service to Move Feb. 1

Universal Service plans to move from the tenth to the ninth floor of the World Building, New York, Feb. 1, Chester Hope, editor and manager announced this week. The new offices will be used jointly with International News Service, which will not move from its present quarters on Spruce street, New York, until March or April.

Kirchhofer Wins Election

Alfred H. Kirchhofer, Washington correspondent of the Buffalo Evening News, was elected a member of the Board of Governors of the National Press Club at a special "run-off" election with Captain John H. Craige, U. S. M. C., former war correspondent and Philadelphia newspaper man. The two men tied at a recent annual election of officers of the club.

Viscount Burnham Feted in London

Viscount Burnham, of the London Telegraph, was guest of honor at an Aldwych Club luncheon, recently, when members of the executive committee of the A. A. C. W. international convention in London last July, praised him for the part in making the great conclave a success.

Obituary

CHARLES C. FRITSCHE, at one time telegraph editor of the Los Angeles Times, died at his Los Angeles home recently.

WELLINGTON PARKHURST, 89, veteran editor, died at his home in Clinton, Mass., last week. His first newspaper work was as Clinton correspondent for the Worcester Spy and later became city editor of that paper. In 1865 he established the Clinton Courant and later the Clinton Daily Item, serving as editor of both until ill health in 1911 forced him to retire.

ALLEN MCKEAN, 59, for more than 30 years associated with Erie, Pa., newspapers, died in his home in that city. He was one time city editor of the Erie News.

CHARLES EDWARDS HOLDEN, 96, former editor, died at his home in Canton, Ohio, last week. Mr. Holden owned the first daguerreotype studio in New York. His first newspaper experience was as a typesetter on the old New York Sun.

GEORGE BUCKLE, 65, for half a century on the mechanical staff of the Salt Lake City Deseret News, died last week. He retired recently on a pension.

EDWIN W. INGALLS, 66, publisher of the Lynn (Mass.) Review, a weekly, and for 16 years Lynn correspondent of the Boston Herald, died at his home in Lynn, December 28.

HARLAN K. SAUNDERS, head of the claim department of the Chicago Evening American and the Chicago Herald and Examiner, died at his home in Chicago recently after an illness of three months.

FRANK M. SAPP, 86, for 64 years a newspaper editor and publisher, died on Dec. 26 at his home in Ottawa, Ill. In 1860, he became editor and owner of the Peru (Ill.) Herald, and six years later, took over the Woodstock (Ill.) Sentinel. In 1870 he became editor and part owner of the Ottawa (Ill.) Republican-Times, serving continuously until his death.

GEORGE W. DICUS, 62, editor of the Co-Operative Manager and Farmer and for 16 years publisher of the Rochelle (Ill.) Register, died last week in Minneapolis. He was past vice-president of the Illinois Press Association.

FORD A. ALLEN, a member of the Typographical Union more than 50 years, died at his home in Kansas City, Dec. 30. Since 1901 he had been a proof reader for the Kansas City Star. Mr. Allen was a personal friend of the late Samuel Gompers.

W. C. Reick Estate $5,000

The will of William C. Reick, former publisher of the New York Sun, and later president of the New York Journal of Commerce directs that his estate, estimated at under $5,000, be held in trust during the life of his widow, Carrie Ridgway Reick, and the income paid to her. Charles A. Stoneham, owner of the New York Giants, is named as executor, but renounced the appointment.

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

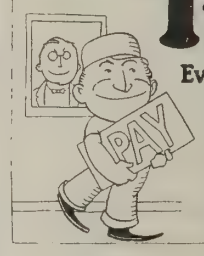
A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.



Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 128,763

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y. — Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

Detroit Times

Evening 220,000
Sunday 250,000

New Haven Register

is New Haven's Dominant Paper

Circulation over 42,171 Average

Bought every day by more New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.

New Haven Register

The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD

Always Reliable

The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia and GROWING!

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE

TACOMA

Population, 112,000 People

Local flour mills export over 1,500,000 barrels of flour each year; Tacoma Smelter largest in the West; 2 High Schools, 6 Intermediate Schools, 39 Grade Schools, College of Puget Sound, Annie Wright Seminary and 145 churches.

You can blanket the rich and prosperous territory of Tacoma and Southwest Washington through the columns of the News Tribune; A. B. C. Audited Circulation, 32,643.

Frank S. Baker, President. — Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave., New York City. — Ford, Parsons Co., 360 No. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

R. J. Bidwell & Co., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

NEW YORK STATE

Westchester County's

Fastest Growing Cities

Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns

Are Covered Completely By

THE DAILY ARGUS of Mount Vernon

THE STANDARD STAR of New Rochelle

(Both Members of ABC)

Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

NEWSPAPER CONDITIONS CHANGING

"THERE is no ideal newspaper. The truth of the matter is that the newspaper press, like democracy itself, is in a state of evolution. There are different pes of newspapers, as there are different bodies of opinion in politics. These are adually changing, and while there are still a few papers that approximate the l type of personal journalism, and some that correspond relatively to the most lical elements in politics, between these two there is a great body of newspapers ose publishers, imbued by a high sense of public responsibility, are striving with nesty and sincerity to uphold the best traditions of the press and at the same ie meet changing conditions."—John M. Imbrie, Managing Director, Edmonton urnal.

* * *

PROTECTING SOCIETY

"THE circulation of any great newspaper is so general—its sphere of influence is so unknowable—that there rests a tremendous social responsibility upon publisher to so conduct his publication that even those things which are only entially harmful, may be avoided. There must be some censorship, call it what t will, by those who have the public interest at heart to protect society from the esses of the lewd and the obscene and from many other agencies of a harmful ure. The advertising solicitor and the copy-writer and all those who have to do h advertising matter prior to publication are in a position to exert a beneficial uence."—John S. Sumner, Secretary of the New York Society for the Suppression Vice Before the Advertising Staff of the New York Times.

* * *

ADVERTISING NOT A "FIFTH WHEEL"

"THERE is no magic in advertising. A lot of concerns seem to think so, and this has kept back the success of advertising as much as anything I know So many officers of concerns, even the president, the sales manager, and, I am y to say, the advertising manager, seem to think that advertising is some sort magic power; that it is something outside of the business itself. It is looked n as a sort of fifth wheel; that while the machinery could run without it, per- s it might make the machinery run a little better if it were attached. Adver- ng is a part and parcel of the business. We can do without some of these rts, but they are a part of the machine, and the machine does not run so well out them, and sometimes does not run at all."—O. C. Harn, advertising manager inoal Lead Company, and president, Audit Bureau of Circulation, before the es Managers Bureau of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

* * *

WHAT ADVERTISING DOES

"AMERICAN advertising is the leaven which is persistently enforcing the idea of prosperity, enlightened selfishness, liberty, democracy, confidence, and r ideas in our program of destiny. These ideas are expanding our industries lifting our people to a higher standard of living.

Advertising keeps me reminded that I ought to dress well; that I ought to shave y day; that I am not making the most of my opportunities; that I lack the ntial graces of a gentleman, being ignorant of just the proper thing to say when ill a cup of tea in a lady's lap; that I ought to have a bank account and insure life for the protection of my family; that I am missing one of the keenest joys ife unless I familiarize myself with the best of music through the ownership of ionograph; that my home needs repainting and redecorating; and that I ought at more oranges and raisins.

Advertising, through its standardizing influences, is making us look and act e. To achieve distinction in the future, a man will have to think better than fellows."—William Feather.

ANCHESTER DAILIES MERGE

nion Leader Purchases Suspends Daily Mirror

ie Union Leader Publishing Com- , publisher of the Manchester H.) Leader and the Manchester n, announced Dec. 27, the purchase ie Manchester (N. H.) Mirror, one he oldest afternoon dailies in New and. The consolidation with the noon Leader took place Dec. 28. two papers are being published un- he name of the Leader.

ie Mirror, since its purchase some ago from Rosecrans W. Pillsbury, een published by a company headed hn H. Fahey, publisher of the Wor- r (Mass.) Post. Frank Knox and P. Muehling are the publishers of Jnion and Leader.

e Manchester Publishing Company, shers of the Mirror, will continue in eneral printing, binding and engrav- usiness. The plant and equipment fore used in the publication of the r will be added to that of the John arke Company.

NEW YORK WAGES UP

crease for All Members of Typographical Union No. 6

accordance with the contract be- the Publishers' Association of New City and Typographical Union ber 6, all wages were increased week, effective Jan. 1.

Printers wages in New York therefore, now stand for day work $60 a week; night work $63; third shift $66.

The Brooklyn scale provides that all union members working Saturday and Saturday night shall receive $2.65 extra, with an overtime rate for Saturday night of $2.42. It is stipulated that the rate for Sunday shall not be less than $13.15.

Machinists wages are now $57.75 a week with from 1 to 12 machines, while the scale for 13 or more machines is $60.25 a week.

There is no change in the percentages of apprentice wages, but they will be computed on the wages of $60 a week for day work and $63 a week for night work instead of $59 and $62.

Mailers' wages are increased 50 cents a week.

Mining is the Backbone of

West Virginia's WEALTH

The mining industry is comprised of the following principal products:

Bituminous coal
Petroleum
Natural Gas
Limestone
Sandstone
Clay

Although West Virginia is outranked by one other state in bituminous coal output, she produces more coal than any like area in the United States.

West Virginia ranks first in the output of natural gas, and eighth in the output of petroleum.

All mine workers in West Virginia, regardless of the particular branch of the industry in which they are engaged, are well paid and, for the most part, have steady work.

West Virginia is an ideal field for advertisers in that a little money will go a long way and bring large and fruitful returns.

The cities listed here are the principal marketing and distribution centers of the state and the dailies are representative of the highest type of American Journalism.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Bluefield
*Telegraph	(M)	11,085	.05
*Telegraph	(S)	15,752	.06
Charleston
*Gazette	(M)	19,619	.07
*Gazette	(S)	23,493	.08
Clarksburg
Telegram	(E)	9,479	.04
Telegram	(S)	11,797	.045
Huntington
Advertiser	(E)	11,176	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(M)	14,803	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(S)	14,482	.04
Martinsburg
*Journal	(E)	4,836	.03
Morgantown
†Post	(E)	5,065	.025
Parkersburg
*News	(M)	7,261	.025
*News	(S)	8,840	.025
*Sentinel	(E)	7,751	.03

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

TEXAS DAILIES MAY OMIT MAIL

Circulators to Experiment Through Drug Store, Rather Than Post Office—Harris Elected President at Convention

FORT WORTH, Tex., Dec. 31.—The Texas Circulation Managers' Association in eleventh annual convention at Dallas Monday decided to adopt experimental measures looking to cooperative movement by Texas newspapers of withdrawing their publications from the mails extensively.

Harold Hough, Fort Worth Star-Telegram, submitted a plan to the association whereby it was agreed that four representative Texas cities of populations of two to five thousand, be selected, by four different papers, and all papers agree for a certain length of time to send their mail subscribers copies to a central distributing center, probably a drug store. Shipments to be made by express and readers to call at the store for their papers instead of going to the postoffice.

The plan will not affect rural route copies, nor will it interfere with news dealers or stand sales. Each newspaper is to continue its individual dealer representation, but each agrees to have its mail subscribers served at one place. The service depot is not to sell any papers nor accept any subscriptions but is to act solely as distributor. Already several drug stores have asked for the privilege, being interested on account of the great number of people it would daily bring into the store.

The difference between the present second class postage rate and the express shipping rate will enable Texas newspapers to pay the local stores a fair price per month for handing the papers out and still have a remarkable saving.

President E. C. White appointed the following committee to proceed with the cooperative plan and submit a report to Texas publishers at the end of three months. M. W. Florer, Dallas News; W. D. Wolfe, Waco News Tribune; E. C. White, Houston Chronicle, and Harold Hough, Star-Telegram, Fort Worth.

A. B. Harris, Dallas Times-Herald was elected president; W. D. Wolfe, Waco News Tribune, vice-president, and H. R. Murphree, Houston Chronicle, secretary.

Galveston was selected as the meeting place for September next year. It was also voted to hold an informal meeting the day before the I. C. M. A. meets in June at Colorado Springs.

FAMOUS DRAMATIC CRITIC DEAD

William Archer, London Journalist, Wrote "The Green Goddess"

William Archer, 64, London dramatic critic, and author died in London Dec. 27.

Born at Perth, Scotland, in 1856 he was called to the Bar in 1883. Later he deserted the profession of law to become dramatic critic for the London Nation. He served in the same capacity at various times for the London Tribune and the Pall Mall Gazette. In 1920 he wrote a series of articles on the American theater for the New York Evening Post. He was author of the successful play "The Green Goddess," first produced in 1921.

WIRE NEWS
For Evening and Sunday Newspapers
International News Service
11 Spruce St., New York

TESTIMONIAL TO WALKER

Employes of N. Y. Telegram and Mail Present Gift to Former Publisher

Employes of the New York Telegram and Evening Mail, represented by department heads, last week presented a memorial gift to Fred A. Walker, editor and publisher, who was transferred to another branch of the Frank Munsey organization in an executive capacity, effective Jan. 1. Walker was succeeded on the Telegram and Evening Mail by Stuart Olivier, formerly publisher of the Baltimore News.

F. A. WALKER

Andrew W. Ford, city editor, in presenting the gift, which he described as an "utterly useless but ornamental set of cocktail glasses," paid tribute to Mr. Walker's "squareness." Mr. Walker, in reply, complimented his staff for their loyalty.

Memorial Tablet for Printers

Names of union printers of the United States and Canada, numbering 7,343 who served in the World War, will be inscribed on a memorial tablet to be placed in the Union Printers' Home, Colorado Springs, Colo. Two hundred and fifty-one printers gave their lives in service, a recent check revealed.

Sunday Edition Dropped

The Anaheim (Cal.) Bulletin has discontinued the publication of its Sunday issue.

NEW YORK VETERAN DIES

John N. Brockway, of Standard-Union, Once Worked for Elder Bennett

John N. Brockway, 78, dramatic and music editor of the Brooklyn Standard-Union since 1892, and head of the New York Herald's Brooklyn news bureau in the days of the elder Bennett, died Dec. 28 at Utica, N. Y.

Mr. Brockway learned to set type and served a five-year apprenticeship on the La Crosse (Wis.) Democrat and came to Brooklyn his birthplace, where he worked first as compositor for six years. He then went into partnership with his brother the late Frank Brockway and for many years furnished Brooklyn news to New York newspapers and the Associated Press. The Herald later obtained this service exclusively and kept it for 10 years. Mr. Brockway was assistant city editor and telegraph editor of the Standard-Union before becoming its dramatic critic.

1925 will be a
Prosperous Year

AN immediate gain of thousands of NEW prepaid subscribers is the best possible way to start the New Year. Our campaigns offer the one SURE way to obtain this circulation increase, as is proven by over twenty years of unquestioned supremacy and the number of leading metropolitan dailies who use and endorse our services.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

BID LATIN AMERICANS TO A. A. C. W. MEETING

Invitations Will Be Extended to 21 Governments for Pan-American Conference at Houston

Arrangements have been made for extending invitations to the governments of 21 Central and South American countries to send representatives to the Pan-American conference, which is to be a feature of the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs at Houston, Texas, May 10-14.

Invitations will be transmitted to the officials of the 21 governments by our Ambassadors in those countries. These letters are to be addressed to the Secretary of State and will be forwarded through the Latin-American Division of the State Deyartment.

"The Pan-American Union will publish material about the convention in its monthly publication, The Pan-American Union. The Board of Directors of the Union plans to meet in Washington early in January to consider a complete program of co-operation with the Associated Advertising Clubs.

Music Critic's Wife Writes Play

Mary Kennedy, actress, in private life the wife of Deems Taylor, music critic of the New York World, is author of "Mrs. Partridge Presents," a play which opened in Washington, D. C., recently.

Ad Men Invited to St. Louis

Advertising men en route to the Houston Convention, A. A. C. W., May 9-14, are invited to stop off and visit St. Louis by R. Fullerton Place, president of the Advertising Club of St. Louis.

Our Features:

Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune
and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service
Woodward Bldg., Washington, D.C.

Hendersonville Daily Discontinued

The Hendersonville (N. C.) Dai Times, launched last fall with Leroy Sa gent as owner and Col. John Temp Graves as editor, on Dec. 24 reverted a semi-weekly under the direction of former owners, E. W. and John Ewban as mortgagees. They will publish t paper until legal title to the plant h been determined by the foreclosure liens held by them. Before Mr. Sarge bought the paper it was the Weste North Carolina Times, weekly.

Classified Men to Join A. A. C. W.

The board of directors of the Associ tion of Newspaper Classified Advertisi Managers, meeting in Chicago recent voted to apply for affiliation with t Associated Advertising Clubs of t World. At the same meeting it was d cided to hold the association's 1925 co vention at Houston with the A. A. C. W May 9 to 14.

Roosevelt-Lodge Letters

Boston Globe
Chicago News
New York American
Philadelphia Bulletin
Baltimore American
Washington Herald
St. Louis Globe Democrat
Kansas City Journal
Detroit Times
St. Paul Pioneer Press
San Francisco Examiner
Los Angeles Examiner
Seattle Post Intelligencer
Buffalo News
Atlanta Georgian
Omaha Bee
Dayton News
Albany Times Union
Canton News
Spokane Spokesman Review
Springfield News
Fort Worth Record
Miami News Metropolis
Syracuse Telegram
Rochester Journal
San Antonio Light
Youngstown Vindicator
Helena Independent
Boise Daily Statesman
Colorado Springs Gazette

Released by

D. P. Syndicate
GARDEN CITY, N. Y.

know your country's history!

A good citizen should know his country's story. Here's an easy way of learning important facts. Daily questions and answers by

C. E. BROWN

Easy, Entertaining, Educational.

Write for samples.

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New York City

Mr. Publisher
or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.

Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

ZONE DISTRIBUTION IS DECLARED LEGAL

udge Rules It is Not Monopolistic in Dismissal of News Dealers' Case Against New York Dailies

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 30.—The one system for the sale and distribution f newspapers is neither unreasonable or monopolistic and is legal in New ork State. Supreme Court Justice rank L. Young so ruled here today in enying the application of David Cam-ion and John T. Dillon, Jr., news deal-rs, for a permanent injunction which ould have restrained the Publishers' ssociation of New York from establish-g the zone system in New Rochelle. amed as defendants with the associa-on were the New York Herald Tribune, ew York Times, New York World and orris Ginsberg, a wholesale distributor. Campion and Dillon, who are partners id have their place of business at Cen-r avenue and Main street, New Ro-elle, claimed that they would be re-ricted to certain territory by the zones id would thus lose half of their cus-mers. Further, they charged that the stem is violative of Section 340 of the eneral Business Laws of New York, hich prohibits any arrangement or com-nation restraining or preventing com-tition in the supply or price of any ar-le or commodity of common use or hich tends to create a monopoly.

During the six-day trial of the appli-tion, Ginsberg, who was the chief wit-ss for the defendants, testified that the ne system had been contemplated be-use many New Rochelle subscribers id complained of poor service. With e present methods of distribution, he id, the papers had been unable to hold e dealers responsible for any particular stricts, but by the zone system they had lped to organize the dealers, regulate stribution and insure satisfactory serv-e.

Counsel for the defendants, who at one aring were represented by 14 attorneys, nied that the newspapers had entered th Ginsberg into any agreement for ning New Rochelle. They likewise ntradicted statements by the plaintiffs t the circulation managers of the pa-rs were present at conferences which nsberg had invited Campion and Dil-n to attend in his office and in the as-iation's headquarters in the Pulitzer ilding, New York.

Justice Young, in dismissing the ap-lication without costs to either side, ted in his opinion:

'There were two important questions me to determine. First, was there a arrangement between Ginsberg and l New York publishers for the zoning New Rochelle? Secondly, providing re was such an arrangement, would it illegal and unreasonable?

'It is necessary to dismiss the com-int without costs to either side. I find re was no such arrangement between nsberg and the publishers. If there s, it would not be unreasonable and uld be within the provisions of the w."

Walter H. Young, New Rochelle at-ney, filed the plaintiffs' complaint on g. 22, last. Justice Young at that time nted an ex parte temporary stay and le to show cause on Aug. 29. why it uld not be made permanent. This was ntinued in a subsequent opinion until inning of the trial on Oct. 23. The l ended on Oct. 29.

PULP EXPORTS INCREASE

Newsprint Drops Slightly, Canada's November Report Shows

xports of newsprint paper from Can-l during November, as reported by the adian Pulp and Paper Association unted to 96,981 tons valued at $7,-018, as compared with 99,812 tons ued at $7,307,539 in October. How-, there was increase from 76,406 to 89 tons in exports of pulp, values g $3,696,406 and $4,061,084 respec-tively. Exports of pulpwood were down from 105,951 cords valued at $1,112,333 to 64,401 cords valued at $633,021.

For 11 months ended November, exports of newsprint showed increase from 1,043,139 to 1,103,540 tons and in value from $78,467,716 to $82,424,597. Exports of pulp were down from 803,685 tons valued at $43,157,380 to 709,143 tons valued at $36,537,427 and exports of pulpwood from 1,330,814 cords valued at $12,910,079 to 1,160,777 cords valued at $12,886,192.

SUN CLUB CHRISTMAS PARTY

Luncheon and Dancing Features N. Y. Sun Celebration—Munsey Attends

The New York Sun had its own Christmas Party Dec. 24, with members of the Sun Club, which includes practically every worker on the paper. The party began at 11 A. M. and lasted until 5 P. M.

Half of the second floor of the Stewart Building was set apart for the affair. A Christmas tree was decorated by the young women of the club and the floor waxed for dancing. A buffet turkey luncheon was an item of the program. Frank Munsey, publisher of the Sun, William T. Dewart, treasurer, Edwin S. Friendly, business manager and Keats Speed, managing editor and the heads of the different departments were on hand for a large part of the afternoon.

The officers of the Sun Club are: E. O. Peterson, president; H. Muller, vice-president; S. K. Meringer, treasurer; A. K. Suplee, recording secretary and Joseph Friedman, corresponding secretary.

NEWSPRINT REVIEW

THE News Print Service Bureau, New York, R. S. Kellogg, secretary, on Dec. 23 issued the newsprint statistical review for the first eleven months of 1924. The statistics follow:

News Print Production, U. S. & Canada for first eleven months of 1924 was 2 per cent more than for the first eleven months of 1923 and 11 per cent more than for same period of 1922.

Imports of News Print into the U. S. for the first ten months of 1924 were 3 per cent more than for the first ten months of 1923 and 34 per cent more than for same period of 1922.

Exports of News Print from the U. S. amounted to 14,355 tons for the first ten months of 1924, 13,166 tons for the first ten months of 1923, and 22,496 tons for same period of 1922.

Mill Stocks of New Print at U. S. and Canadian points amounted to 4.5 days' average production on November 30, 1924, 4.7 days on November 30, 1923 and 3.6 days' on November 30, 1922.

Publishers' Stocks, on hand and in transit amounted to 45 days' supply on October 31, 1924, 49 days' on October 31, 1923 and 36 days' on October 31, 1922. Newspaper Advertising, 27 leading cities for first eleven months of 1924 was 1 per cent less than for first eleven months of 1923, 7 per cent more than for same period of 1922, and practically the same as in the corresponding period of 1920.

Periodical Advertising, National Publications for the first twelve months of 1924 was 3 per cent more than for the first twelve months of 1923, 21 per cent more than for same period in 1922 but 21 per cent less than for same period in 1920.

Newspapers of over 100,000 circulation:

	Average for November
	Dailies	Sundays
1924	30	111
1923	29	108

Ohio Daily Changes Hands

G. Paul Huntley, Fremont business man, has purchased the interests of Mrs. Cleo McDonald and Miss Vonda G. Worst in the Fremont (O.) Messenger. The staff remains unchanged, but mechanical improvements are contemplated by the new management. The newspaper was established in 1840.

Merchandise Distribution Station of the Middle West

Illinois is the distributing center for more merchandise than any other state with the possible exception of New York. Merchandise of every possible kind passes through the routine of wholesalers, jobbers and mail order houses on its way to the west and middle west.

There are excellent reasons why Illinois is so attractive as a distribution center. It is naturally blessed with all those requisites of such a territory. Perhaps the most important of these is the matter of transportation in which Illinois excels.

It is well here to remember that Illinois is the third largest state in point of population, in the United States.

Here is a throbbing, pulsating state, populated by nearly six and a half million people—a prospective market that should be coveted by all National Advertisers.

Every successful advertising campaign in Illinois depends upon these newspapers.

	Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
*Aurora Beacon-News .....(E)	17,408	.06	.06
*Chicago Herald & Examiner .....(M)	348,005	.55	.55
*Chicago Herald & Examiner .....(S)	1,018,917	1.10	1.10
Chicago Daily Journal .....(E)	120,449	.26	.24
*La Salle Tribune .....(E)	3,230	.025	.025
*Moline Dispatch .....(E)	10,680	.045	.045
*Monmouth Daily Review Atlas.....(E)	5,314	.035	.035
*Peoria Star.....(E) 29,197..(S)	22,236	.075	.06
*Rock Island Argus .....(E)	10,605	.045	.045
*Sterling Gazette .....(E)	5,734	.04	.04

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

RANDOLPH MARSHALL DEAD

Former New York and Philadelphia M.E. Dies on Christmas Day

Randolph Marshall, 51, former managing editor of the New York Herald and later managing editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, died from pneumonia in New York Dec. 25. He was engaged in publicity work at the time of his death.

He began his newspaper career in Philadelphia, first on the Philadelphia Times under Col. A. K. McClure, and later on the Philadelphia Press. Coming to New York about 35 years ago, he joined the staff of the New York Herald. Later he became night city editor of the New York Times, serving in that capacity for approximately two years and then taking charge of the telegraph desk.

After leaving this position he became city editor of the New York Herald, then news editor and finally became managing editor of that newspaper. For a time he served as an editorial writer and head of the Herald's Washington bureau.

In 1918 he left the Herald to become managing editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Still later he served in the same capacity on the Portland (Me.) Herald and finally became managing editor of the Edmonton (Alberta) Journal.

Glynn Estate Estimated at $750,000

The late Martin H. Glynn, editor of the Albany Times-Union, and former Governor of New York, left an estate estimated to be worth between $750,000 and $1,000,000. The bulk is bequeathed to the widow, Mrs. Mary Magrane Glynn. A trust fund of $50,000 for the benefit of a brother, James T. Glynn, long associated with him in publication of the Times-Union, is created.

Former Tennessee Editor Dies

James G. Rice, 69, former editor of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) News, died at Alexandria, La., Dec. 26. He began his journalistic career at Pensacola, Fla.

Union Probes Printer Brains

The Toronto (Ont.) Typographical Union has made a mental test compulsory for admission.

Editor & Publisher Service Station

Q. What syndicates supply rotogravure sections to newspapers? P. C., San Francisco.

A. Our list shows the following:
Art Gravure Corporation, 31st and 9th avenue, New York.
National News Service, 1328 West Lycoming street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Standard Gravure Corporation, Louisville, Ky.

Q. Who writes the "Helen and Warren," married life serial and by wha syndicate is this feature handled? M. I

A. This feature is written by Mrs. C. Lathrop Harper of 1 Gramercy Par New York, and is now being handled by the Bell Syndicate, Inc., 154 Nassau stree New York.

Texas Newspaper in Libel Suit

The Southern Publishing Company, publishers of the Waco (Tex.) News-Tribune was sued for $100,000 damages in district court at Cleburne, Tex., Dec. 24, by Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Lawson, who allege the newspaper published defamatory references to Miss Louise Lawson, their daughter, who was found slain in her New York apartment last winter. Actual damages of $50,000 and exemplary damages of $50,000 are sought.

Editors to Discuss Propaganda

"Dodging propaganda" is one of t subjects listed for discussion at the a annual convention of the American S ciety of Newspaper Editors to be held Washington, D. C., Jan. 17-23. Julian Mason, managing editor of the New Yo Herald Tribune, has been selected to le in consideration of this question. C. Morrison, managing editor of the Phil delphia Public Ledger is chairman the program committee.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

Bargains in Web Presses
"Used but Good."

Our No. 598—
8-page Campbell Multipress, printing 4, 6 or 8 pages, 7 col. 13 ems or 8 col. 12 ems, page 22 in. long, printing from flat forms, no stereotyping. (Located in Pennsylvania.)

Our No. 623—
8-page Cottrell web newspaper press with stereotyping equipment. (Located in New England.)

Our No. 533—
12-page Hoe web press, page 22¾ in. long, printing 7 or 8 col. papers, with complete stereotype outfit. (Located in central south.)

Our No. 602—
16-page Hoe web newspaper press, 7 col. 13 ems, or 8 col. 12 ems. Page 21½ in. long, with stereotype equipment. (Running in the South.)

Our No. 589—
16-page Potter web press, 7 col. 13 ems, 8 col. 12 ems, with stereotype equipment complete. (In Pennsylvania.)

Our No. 517—
20-page Hoe web press, 7 col. Paper page 22¾ in. long, with stereotype equipment. (In Pennsylvania.)

Our No. 570—
24-page Hoe web press, three deck, extra color on top deck, 7 or 8 col. page, 21½ in. long. Fitted to produce tabloids also. (In New York.)

Our No. 450—
32-page Hoe right-angle quad, 8 col. 13 ems, page 23⅝ in. long, with stereotype equipment, type column 300 agate lines. (In New York.)

Our No. 427—
Goss half-tone and color web press, four colors one side and two on the other, cut off 22¾ in., with stereotype equipment. Will produce colored supplements or comics in either full page or tabloid size. (In New York.)

Our No. 599—
Complete rotary gravure printing plant for newspaper supplements or commercial work. (In central west.)

Wire or write for details and prices.
Many other machines for sale, of all sorts and descriptions. Let us know what you can use. Send for our latest list of surplus printing equipment. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Wanted to Buy.
Used stereotype saw with motor, suitable for sawing type-high casts. Must be in good condition and guaranteed to do work specified. Motor can be either 110 or 220 volts, single phase, 60 cycle. Will pay cash after installation if work is satisfactory. Quote price and full information in first letter. New Mexico State Tribune, Albuquerque, New Mexico.

For Sale.
Goss curved stereo, casting box, for press cylinders 15 in. diameter, length of page 23⅛ in. Good condition. Our No. 622. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth avenue, New York. (Many other machines for sale, "used, but good." Let us know your wants.)

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

MODERNIZE
your COMPOSING ROOM
with
HAMILTON EQUIPMENT
Made in both wood and steel.
Manufactured by
The Hamilton Mfg. Co.
Two Rivers, Wis.
For sale by all prominent Type Founders and Dealers everywhere.

Used Newspaper Presses

Scott Quadruple Press Four Deck Two Pages Wide prints 4 to 34 pages.

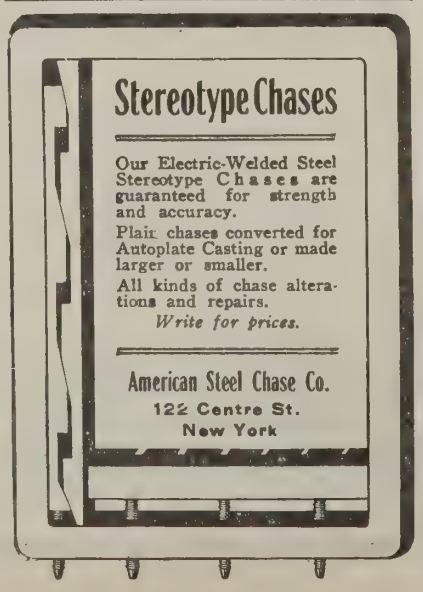
Hoe Right Angle Quadruple Press, prints 4 to 32 pages.

Hoe Sextuple Press, prints 4 to 24 pages.

These three presses cut off pages 22¾ inches long, print 7 or 8 columns to the page.

PRESSES AVAILABLE FOR EARLY DELIVERY

Walter Scott & Co.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY
441 Monadnock Block, CHICAGO
1457 Broadway, NEW YORK



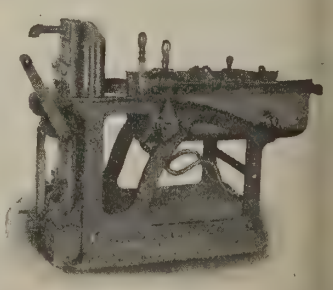
N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.
USED BY THE
New Britain Herald
New Britain, Conn.
We refer you to them for their opinion

CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO. CHICAGO — QUALITY, NAME, SERVICE, FAME — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

MAIN OFFICE, Fisher Bldg., 343 S. Dearborn St., CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE, Marbridge Bldg., Broadway at 34th St., NEW YORK

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.
MONOMELT
SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis Minn.



Stereotype Chases
Our Electric-Welded Steel Stereotype Chases are guaranteed for strength and accuracy.
Plain chases converted for Autoplate Casting or made larger or smaller.
All kinds of chase alterations and repairs.
Write for prices.
American Steel Chase Co.
122 Centre St.
New York

Hoe Patented Duo-Cooled Equipoise Curved Casting Mould

"It is essential to Success to be the first out with the News—and Minutes count."

This Hoe Curved Casting Mould is a time-saver, designed especially for Speed and Efficiency. Cold Water, circulating through the stationary Lid and the concave Side, gives quick cooling for rapid Casting.

IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST
R. HOE & CO., INC.
504-520 Grand St., New York City
7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.
7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

8c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

5c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.

56c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

dvertising Executive.
Widely experienced, young, now with ational advertising agency as account executive and solicitor, desires connection as adversing manager of daily newspaper in city of 0,000 population or under. He is primarily nterested in a real opportunity, where ability nd success will be rewarded, and where an inerest in the "plant" will eventually be available. He is experienced in copy, layout, merhandising, selling, and in editorial and circuation work. He knows how to create and build dvertising revenue and volume; how to build dvertising leadership; how to "merchandise" nd "sell" the newspaper to local as well as ational advertisers. He is fully capable to ender "service" to local advertisers and to rocure and present merchandising data to naonal advertisers, agencies, etc. He will conact, preferably on salary and bonus basis. est references as to character, energy and bility. If you have a real opportunity for a ghter, give full details. C-583 Editor & Pubsher.

dvertising Manager.
ive years' selling display advertising, and five ears as Classified Manager, on morning and vening paper 37,000 circulation, now employed, eek larger field with greater opportunity. Marred, 30 years old and good habits. Can furish proof of my ability as executive; also gures on increase in business. Not afraid of ork. Will consider either department. C-581, ditor and Publisher.

usiness Manager, oroughly acquainted with producing circuion, advertising and holding down costs, sires connection. Might invest some capi-1. Box C-578, Editor & Publisher.

rculation Manager or Assistant.
ge 29, single, twelve years' experience on one Middle West's largest afternoon dailies. I ish to make change after January 1, 1925. st of references. Box C-587 Editor & Pubsher.

rculation Manager.
ith fifteen years' successful experience on ading dailies, desires permanent connection as rculation or business executive. A man with sion and full knowledge of his responsibilies, prefer evening paper. For full particurs write C-580 Editor & Publisher.

rculation Manager.
vening paper in town under 200,000 have been ined under best circulation system in coun-. Now employed on large paper; reference m present and past employers; good reason r changing. If you are in need of a hard rker, with good sound judgment, answer this . Box C-551, Editor & Publisher.

assified Manager.
ung married man, four years' successful exrience as Assistant Classified Manager on ge mid-western daily. Available, with reanable notice, after January first. Satisfacy references. Address Box C-591, Editor & blisher.

"CZARINA" JUST ADORES N. Y. NEWSPAPER MEN

WHEN Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia stopped over in Paris Dec. 24, on her return from America, she received Raymond Carroll, the Paris correspondent of the New York Evening Post.

"Wearing her huge pearl earrings, pearl necklace, several small rings and a green bracelet, and dressed in black with a small black hat trimmed in purple, the Grand Duchess was regal yet gracious and willing to be interviewed," the correspondent cabled, "explaining that such matters had been conducted so courteously in the United States that she no longer feared reporters."

"In fact," the "Czarina" declared to Mr. Carroll, "I adore boys who look you straight in the eyes and ask questions, then record exactly what you say."

Situations Wanted

Classified Advertising Manager
available immediately. This applicant is thoroughly versed in the fundamentals of classified advertising, and can teach them to street salesmen, telephone salesladies and counter assistants. Has held present position as classified manager of The Dayton, Ohio, News for 4 years. Prior to that time was connected with his Dayton opposition, for 2 years, in a like situation. The 4-year accomplishment of publishing more individual ads and lines of classified than all his local contemporaries combined is his greatest guarantee to some publisher wishing aggressive selling tactics in his classified organization. Can give additional references to his work as indications of his ability to produce results. Address replies to Joseph H. Kelly, 1303 Riverside Drive, Dayton, Ohio.

Classified Advertising Manager.
Twelve years' experience, with an excellent record. Since 1920 with one of New York's most successful classified mediums. Previous experience in smaller cities. Believes in building classified business conservatively but soundly only after careful analysis. Thoroughly familiar with Basil L. Smith Systems; 30 years of age. Wishes for personal and family reasons to locate permanently in some metropolitan city of over 100,000 population. Will go anywhere for any good, permanent proposition. Available after January 15. Address Box C-589, Editor & Publisher.

Desk Man.
on daily. Sports, telegraph or general, or manager-editor weekly. G. E. Firstbrook, 540 Gregory street, Bridgeport, Conn.

Editor.
Young lady with college training and experience, at present employed editing and making-up 35-page publication, desires similar position with chance for advancement. Must be in Chicago. C-584 Editor & Publisher.

Editor-Manager or Assistant.
Editor-Manager-Reporter of proven ability is now available. Knows the newspaper game and the printing business and is a good linotype machinist-operator. This man is 27 years of age, but is experienced in all phases of the business. He is not as fully trained as he will be, but he is at the present time a potential high type of editor-executive. He seeks an opportunity, and salary is of secondary importance if an opportunity is offered him to earn a permanent and responsible editorial position. C-586 Editor & Publisher.

Editorial.
Telegraph or news editor, copyreader, ten years' experience, including largest dailies, university graduate, desires position. C-556. Editor & Publisher.

Manager
Seeks situation on paper needing man able to materially reduce expenses and build business. Actual experience in all departments qualifies me to take full charge of advertising and circulation departments, supervise all mechanical departments and to direct in general, the making of the paper from a news standpoint and able to handle all details of the business and accounting departments economically and systematically. Hard worker, giving from 10 to 16 hours daily to business. Secures utmost results from others in addition to personally producing business. In present situation in large city; changed a loss of over $40,000 in 1923 to a profit of $14,000 in 1924. Able to take full responsibility, and with proper moral co-operation, will undertake the rehabilitation of any daily paper or other paper needing a man able to make from 25 per cent to 50 per cent annually on investment. Able to supply good credentials from present and all other papers upon which advertiser has been employed. Address Box C-532 Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent.
Executive of exceptional ability and personality would consider change from present position; 45 years old; experience gained with largest newspapers in the East; $150 weekly to start. For personal interview, address C-590, care Editor & Publisher.

News and Make-up Editor.
Seven years' experience in weekly and daily fields. Available for afternoon daily or large weekly. Would consider trade journal. Married. Box C-594 Editor & Publisher.

Successful Circulation Manager.
desires connection with publisher needing Scientific Circulation "go-getter," who builds circulation from the bottom up and believes in: First, Printing Good Newspaper; Second, Service (Distribution) to sales organization; Third, Service to Readers through Sales (Carrier) organization; Fourth, Promotion Work. Now with Morning, Evening, and Sunday newspaper. Available on short notice if necessary. Box C-585 Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

Business Manager
for evening newspapers. Must have had experience on papers of from 15,000 to 25,000 circulation and know how to develop business as well as keep down expenses. Give full details in first letter. C-596 Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Man.
A young man who wants to grow with the livest suburban weekly newspaper in the metropolitan district. Should be able to drive a light truck, know how to organize boys and have some constructive ideas. Salary to start $30; more if he's the right man. This is a splendid opportunity for a young man—one who isn't afraid of hard work, because for the time being he will be practically the circulation department. Address Box C-574, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Managers.
Two ambitious circulation managers, must be over 30 years of age, with experience in hiring and training canvassers. Further expansion of large circulation organization opens two desirable positions with earning possibilities ranging from $2,600 to $5,000 per year. Answer with full particulars regarding last ten years' experience and references as to personal habits and character. Ernest A. Scholz, Circulation Director, Butterick Publishing Company, Butterick Building, New York.

City Editor-Reporter.
All around newspaper experience, able to get local news and write it attractively and intelligently; direct and train young reporters; handle telephone news reports and make-up on morning paper. In fact, take full charge news end. Box C-582 Editor & Publisher.

National Advertising Manager.
The leading evening newspaper in a metropolitan Midwest city of nearly a million population wants an active live wire to take charge of its national advertising department. He must have had newspaper or agency experience. Pleasing personality and sales ability of paramount importance. This is a big opportunity for the right man. In replying, send your photograph and full information regarding your previous connections, age, experience, education and references. All communications will be treated in confidence. Address Box C-588 Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Young man with experience in classified advertising desirous of trying his hand at developing difficult field. The right young fellow can do it. He must be energetic and careful of details. He will start on middle west paper in town of 20,000 at $25.00 a week. Applicants will please address "Effort," C-593, care Editor & Publisher.

Young Man's Chance.
We want a young circulation man who is now possibly an assistant in some department, to take a job as department manager promoting carrier and mail circulation in 20 small towns surrounding point of publication. He can get out into his territory and be back into the home office every night. He will have much door to door canvassing to do. He must be a worker with an ambition to make the territory grow for the paper. His salary grows with the circulation and will be about $30.00 and expenses to start. If you are that man communicate at once to "H," C-592, care Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Advertising Men!
Here is a new business getter. One of the best special features offered in many a day. Good for any time of the year and any place. Easy to sell, because it has a genuine value for the advertiser. Send $5 for complete outfit and information. P. O. Gorder, care Palm Beach Times, West Palm Beach, Florida.

Interest in Newspaper Available, for man qualified to take management of Associated Press daily California city of thirty thousand doing business hundred fifty thousand dollars this year. Answer C-595 Editor Publisher.

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

FOR $12,500 CASH, balance deferred, you can buy a small city afternoon newspaper, now breaking even, inventory $28,000, annual business $35,000. Sale price is $25,000. Owner is engaged in other business which demands his entire time. Mention our No. 319.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L. BLD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Business Opportunities

Wanted.
Party would like to buy interest in New England daily, could take position as assistant business manager or mechanical superintendent, has had the experience and can handle help; also can travel and solicit ads; paper must be making expenses. C-553, Editor & Publisher.

CIRCULATION BUILDERS

1,065 New Subscribers for the Southern Reporter, Sardis, Miss. Our Co-operative Plan will increase your circulation and give you a bank balance too. Two campaign managers available Jan. 1. Write at once, Indiana Circulation and Advertising Co., Toney E. Flack, Shelbyville, Ind.

FEATURE ARTICLES

Publishers—Attention!
We furnish MSS on all subjects by competent authors. Will take advertising in exchange for all or part of our service. Reasonable rates. Write up your wants. Literary Bureau Pub. Dept. MOJ4, Hannibal, Mo.

LEGAL NOTICE

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER COMPANY

The annual meeting of the stockholders of THE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER COMPANY will be held Wednesday morning, January 15, 1925, at eleven o'clock at the general offices of the Company, Pulitzer Building, suite 1115, 63 Park Row, New York, for the purpose of election of directors and two inspectors of election and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

THE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER COMPANY,
JAMES W. BROWN, President.
FENTON DOWLING, Secretary.
New York, Dec. 26, 1924.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY.
New York, December 31, 1924.

The Board of Directors have declared a regular quarterly dividend of one and one-half per cent (1½%) on the preferred capital stock of this company, payable January 15th, 1925, to preferred stockholders of record at the close of business January 8th, 1925. Checks will be mailed. Transfer books will not close.

OWEN SHEPHERD, Treasurer.

Publishers

who place Help Wanted ads in the Classified Section of Editor & Publisher, always get competent men for their staffs. If you have a position open, send your ad in NOW and fill the vacancy quickly and economically.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

THIS month put a man of figures onto circulation in reference to advertising rates.

Are you selling too low, or too high, not only as regards your own previous performances, but the performances of newspapers of the same class in cities of proportional size and market desirability.

Hundreds of newsppaers are selling space blindly. This is true of no other commodity in trade.

* * *

A FLORIDA newspaper recently published the traffic rules and regulations of its city in the fourth and fifth columns of a page. The three columns on each side were divided into smaller spaces and sold to advertisers. In each advertisement was inserted a small cut of a traffic sign bearing the inscription "Don't Park Here." Many newcomers in the southland welcomed this published information on parking and driving laws, Most of the ads were sold to auto and accessory dealers, but space on such a page should be beneficial to all.—ROBERT B. MILLER, West Palm Beach, Fla.

Under a standing head, "Industrial Bureau, Patronize these firms," etc., could be secured a half year or yearly contract of small spaces say an inch, to be run every Monday or other day chosen. These advertisements would appear sometime like cards. Contracts covering a certain number of weeks could be made and firms not doing very much advertising should be solicited for this classification.—GEORGE SMEDAL, JR., Minneapolis, Minn.

Start a "Handyman's Corner" somewhere in your paper. Under that heading, set as wide as seen fit, run advertisements of stores selling small tools generally used about the house, window lights, and other items of interest to the man about the house. One newspaper built up such a department to three columns daily.—B. A. T.

The Santa Ana (Cal.) Register delivers all its papers to homes neatly wrapped and tied with light wire. This makes it easier for the delivery boy to handle the papers and gets the papers to the subscribers in better shape.—FRANK H. WILLIAMS.

Articles written each week on various types of antiques under the heading of "The Antique's Appeal Today" with special advertisements by dealers in the type of antiques on which that certain article might be written is sure to catch the public eye and increase the interest in antiques. Many private collectors and parties with antiques to sell might be induced to insert special ads. Stories on private collections with their histories could be used to advantage in this way.—C. E. PELLISSIER, Boston, Mass.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

A TIMELY story can be had at this time by interviewing your health commissioner or officers on the danger of automobile fumes in garages. It is a fact that in a closed garage, if the car is being warmed, the gasoline fumes are deadly and may result fatally. There are cases of this on record. Your health commissioner can give you a story on how the garage should be ventilated and other means to be taken to prevent fatalities.—G. SMEDAL, JR., Minneapolis.

Courtesy can be shown in a newspaper. The Marion (Ind.) Chronicle runs a line at the bottom of all stories continued on another page as follows: "Turn to page —, Please." Several subscribers and advertisers have complimented the management on this printed courtesy.—ROBERT B. MILLER, Marion, Ind.

Terms generally used in market reports, the understanding of which presupposes a familiarity with them and a knowledge of what they mean as explained by an expert will make an interesting feature.—L. J. JELLISON.

We are constantly hearing that many small communities are suffering from poor medical attention, in fact, many have no doctors at all. A good feature story might be written up on the subject in your section giving the true conditions of affairs with a description of the many difficult conditions both financial and physical a country doctor must meet. L. E. PELLISSIER, Boston, Mass.

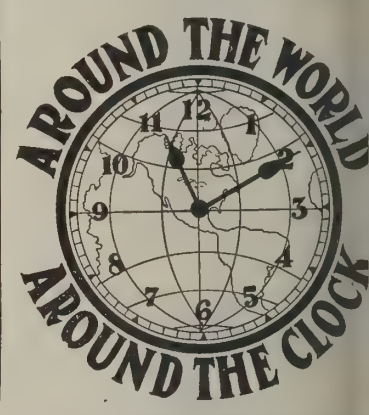
Louisville (Ky.) Times received 6,473 answers in a "Match the Twins Contest," details of which may interest editors. Sixty-four individual pictures of children, all twins, were "scrambled," individually numbered and published, four at a time, daily for 16 days. Readers were asked to clip out the pictures daily, match and put together correctly as tastefully as possible. The prizes totaled $150.—J. A. HUMPHREYS, JR.

Bridegrooms may tremble at the wedding ceremony but not the brides, stated a British pastor in an interview sent to this country which got a paragraph in New York newspapers. Interview a well known local pastor who has had plenty of experience in tying matrimonial knots on this subject. Is the man really more nervous than the woman when he signs the register? Are there any "blushing brides" any more? Or is the whole thing a humorist's myth.—W. L. B.

A careful perusal of the classified section of a daily paper will furnish a feature almost any day. Want ads tell a human story. The ad: "Wanted: A baby buggy" announces the entrance of a baby into a home. Another ad tells when a child is old enough to walk for the bug is offered for sale. Then the child gro up and wants a job. The short ads foll the story thru from its start to its clo They make a good story.—G. P. Cleveland, O.

In Cleveland a few days ago Clare Darrow said that he wondered if it more of a crime to kill a man than wish him dead, adding: "The Six Commandment says: 'Thou Shalt N Kill.' All right, but what of wa Don't ministers ask God to help us the enemy? A man may kill in s defense, a state may kill its murde and it's all right. 'Thou shalt not k really means 'Thou shalt not kill if is wrong to kill.' In other words, means nothing at all." Now, get leading lawyers and jurists in your c to tell you whether they think Darr is right or wrong, and why. It will ma a series of good stories.—M. R. H.

NOVEL CHRISTMAS NUMBER



Missouri High School Students Edit "The Jerusalem Star"

As a novel supplement The Jerusalem Star, was included in an 8-page Christmas edition of the Moberly (Mo.) High School Mirror.

The star is a two-page newspaper purporting to have been published the day following the birth of Christ. It carries stories of the Birth, of the coming of the Wise Men and of the disturbance caused in the city by registration. Other stories include interviews with Herod and the fact that a caravan has been robbed.

The paper had the flavor of Bible times.

BY UNITED PRESS

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

4 page ready-print color comics.
Magazine Feature Pages.
Write for samples and rates

NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD. STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

Leacock Laughs Linger

Once a week
Illustrated by Kessler

Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.
150 Nassau Street, New York City

Frank H. Simonds
is Sailing for Europe
on
January 17
To Make a Survey of Political and Economic Conditions
One Sunday Article of 2,500 Words and One or Two Shorter Ones During the Week
Some Territory is Still Open
WIRE
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Get the very best
DAILY CROSS-WORD PUZZLE
Not just a feature—
Not just a problem—
But the best seller on the market
TODAY!
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
241 West 58th Street
New York City

Thomas W. Briggs Company
Memphis, Tenn.
Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page
Look us up in Dun or Bradstreet's

The Resourceful SOUTH

The buying power of the South rests firmly upon the foundation of wealth which cannot be rocked by the faults or failures of any one line of trade.

The South contains nearly one-third of the total area of the United States and has nearly one-third of the population. Sixty per cent of the coast line of the country extends along the Southern States.

The South produces 60% of all cotton grown in the world.

The South produces about three-fourths of all the world's sulphur supply.

The South has an estimated oil reserve of about 55% of the country's supply.

Seven-tenths of the country's forested area is in the South and is cutting over 15,000,000,000 feet of lumber a year.

The South has one-third of the country's iron ore deposits.

The South has a development of water power of over two and a quarter million horsepower compared with a maximum undeveloped horsepower of over eight million.

One-third of the railroad mileage of the country or over 90,000 miles is in the South.

The South's buying power rests upon a solid foundation of diversified resources and accomplishments, and from this must come an increasing demand for all kinds of equipment and supplies.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA
Birmingham Age-Herald (M)	33,184	.08	.08
Birmingham Age-Herald (S)	41,448	.10	.10
Birmingham News (E)	76,312	.18	.18
Birmingham News (S)	86,185	.18	.18
Mobile News-Item (E)	11,722	.05	.05
Mobile Register (M)	20,824	.07	.07
Mobile Register (S)	33,130	.085	.086
FLORIDA
Daytona Daily News (ES)	2,648	.03	.03
Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville (M&S)	37,564	.10(S.12)	.10(S.12)
Miami Herald (M)	18,300	.06	.06
Miami Herald (S)	21,681	.07	.07
Orlando Sentinel (M&S)	4,473	.035	.035
†St. Petersburg Independent (E)	6,007	.04	.04
Tampa Times (E)	15,176	.05	.05
Tampa Tribune (M&S)	24,783	.07(.08S)	.06(.07S)
GEORGIA
Augusta Herald (E)	15,095	.05	.05
Augusta Herald (S)	15,554	.05	.05
Macon Telegraph (M)	26,822	.07	.07
Macon Telegraph (S)	27,376	.07	.07
Savannah Morning News (M), 21,372 (S)	22,671	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
Lexington Leader (E)	19,395	.06	.06
Lexington Leader (S)	19,368	.05	.05
Paducah Sun (E)	8,616	.04	.04
NORTH CAROLINA
†Asheville Citizen (M)	14,066	.055	.055
†Asheville Citizen (S)	14,540	.055	.055
Greensboro Daily News (M)	24,423	.07	.06
Greensboro Daily News (S)	31,592	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (M)	29,921	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (S)	33,403	.07	.07
Winston-Salem Sentinel (E)	14,855	.06	.06
SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia Record (E)	16,107	.05	.05
Columbia Record (S)	15,907	.05	.05
Columbia State (M)	24,246	.07	.07
Columbia State (S)	24,442	.07	.07
Greenville News (M)	20,190	.065	.06
Spartanburg Journal (E)	3,940	.05	.05
Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,726 (S)	9,357
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga Times (M)	24,189	.08	.08
Chattanooga Times (S)	24,726	.08	.08
†Nashville Banner (E)	54,189	.11	.11
†Nashville Banner (S)	53,069	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
Danville Register and Bee (M&E)	12,128	.05	.05
Danville Register (Sunday)	7,184	.05	.05
Newport News Times-Herald (E)	7,326	.05	.05
Newport News Daily Press (S&M)	5,622
Roanoke Times & World-News (M&E)	24,993	.07	.07
Roanoke Times (S)	16,894	.06	.06
Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader (E)	6,424	.035	.035

 A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

RIGHT AGAIN!

YOU probably noticed an announcement the other day that William M. Ritter had decided to give away between two and three million dollars, worth of stock to the employees of his big lumber company. Mr. Ritter's success as a business man is conceded. This was the same Mr. Ritter who dropped in at the Washington Star to congratulate the management on the splendid business news being printed in that paper.

"Tell that to the Consolidated Press on the floor below," said Fleming Newbold, Business Manager. "They will be glad to hear it."

And Mr. Ritter did. He said he had asked his executives and agents to check up on various items in the Business News Service of The Star and had found them accurate.

This is only one of several checks on the business news furnished by the Consolidated Press to many leading newspapers throughout the United States, for all of the C. P. A. men have been trained in the school of reliability. The Editor-in-Chief of the Business News Service of the Consolidated Press is J. C. Royle, a trained newspaper man with years of experience in business research.

Business news of the right kind wins the support of the people in your vicinity whose good words mean much to a newspaper.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York	Chicago	San Francisco	Paris
Eighth Floor	Fourth Floor	Third Floor	Fourth Floor
World Building	Daily News Building	Spreckels Building	19 Rue d'Antin

THIS ISSUE:—RISING SUBSCRIPTION PRICES PRESAGE NEW ECONOMIC ERA

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1925

SUITE 1117 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

LIBRARY

Not to be taken from this room

be taken from this room

Original entered at second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909. Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.
Issued Every Saturday.

ol. 57. No. 33 NEW YORK, JANUARY 10, 1925 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

The Best Judge of Newspaper Advertising Values

IT HAS been truly said that the best judge of the value of advertising in any medium is the local advertiser, because he bases his decision on the direct results produced. Consequently the volume of local advertising carried by any newspaper is conclusive evidence of the productiveness of that newspaper.

In Chicago the decision is clear and decisive. According to the authoritative figures supplied by the Advertising Record Company, for the first eleven months of 1924, The Daily News published 11,235,081 agate lines of local display advertising, as against 7,551,018 agate lines published by its nearest competitor—a morning newspaper.

THE DAILY NEWS

First in Chicago

The Boston Post

"The Great Breakfast-table Paper of New England"

Week-day Circulation Latest A. B .C. 371,124 Sunday Circulation Latest A. B .C. 351,527

16th Consecutive year of Leadership in Boston In Display Advertising

—won through merit only—through producing profitable results that give greater value for dollars spent. Sixteen years brings many tests—throughout them all The Boston Post predominates—solidly—consistently—consecutively—carrying every year hundreds of thousands more lines of display advertising than any other Boston newspaper.

Many National advertisers who used the Boston Post exclusively for a New England campaign stated that the sales here were greater than in any other section of the country.

The BOSTON POST covers New England

Every morning a Boston Post is sold for approximately —THREE out of FOUR dwellings in a 30-mile radius of Boston.
—Every SECOND dwelling in the State of Massachusetts.
—Every SECOND dwelling in the State of New Hampshire.
—Every THIRD dwelling in the State of Maine.
—Every FOURTH dwelling in the State of Vermont.
A distribution that shows the masterful strength of The Boston Post in an exceedingly responsive market.

Total Display Advertising

(Excluding Classified) YEAR 1924

		Agate Lines
Boston POST	Week-day and Sunday	10,710,757
Boston Globe	Week-day and Sunday	9,920,007
Herald-Traveler	Week-day and Sunday	9,884,175
Boston Transcript	Week-day Only	4,513,102
Boston American	Week-day Only	4,158,295
Boston Advertiser	Week-Day and Sunday Including American Weekly	3,649,733

National Advertising (Excluding Financial)

	Agate Lines
POST	3,783,689
Herald-Traveler	3,380,538
Globe	2,599,199
Transcript	1,507,823
American	1,161,777

Grocery and Food Products Advertising

	Agate Lines
POST	950,864
Herald-Traveler	823,465
Globe	694,374
American	441,402
Transcript	230,390

Automoblie Advertising (Excluding Classified)

	Agate Lines
POST	725,190
Globe	685,328
Herald-Traveler	664,983
Transcript	354,028
American	83,431

Radio Advertising

	Agate Lines
POST	319,646
Herald-Traveler	222,430
American	157,001
Globe	121,656
Transcript	53,121

The Boston Post

"The Great Breakfast-table Paper of New England"

Week-day Circulation Latest A. B .C. 371,124 Sunday Circulation Latest A. B .C. 351,527

How big National advertisers value The Boston Post expressed by lineage used during 1924

Grocery and Food Products

Lever Bros. Products	59,631
Lux	14,223
Rinso	26,996
Lifebuoy Soap	18,412
Ward's Bread & Cake	44,625
Postum Cereal Co.	36,349
Grapenuts	11,491
Post Toasties	8,384
Post Bran Flakes	8,248
Malted Grape Nuts	4,110
Postum	4,116
Procter & Gamble	26,730
Chipso	11,385
Ivory Soap	15,345
Chelmsford Ginger Ale	24,694
Cliquot Club Ginger Ale	19,746
Canada Dry Ginger Ale	12,144
Chase & Sanborn Tea, Coffee	7,762
Dairylea Evap. Milk	10,008
Berwick Cake	5,348
Fab—Colgate's	20,360
Fleischmann Yeast	11,181
Gorton's Fish Cakes	10,558
Harvard Brewing Co.	10,068
Heinz 57 Varieties	10,350
Hood's Milk Co.	17,027
India Tea	10,579
Kellogg's Products	18,394
Kellogg's Corn Flakes	10,780
Kellogg's Bran	7,614
Kirkman's Soap	8,326
Kraft Cheese	5,096
La Touraine Coffee	23,263
Lifesavers	9,762
Moxie	6,695
Mueller's Spaghetti	4,949
Nestle's Chocolate	5,656
Pet Milk	5,012
Phoenix Cheese	15,341
Picnic Syrups	7,452
Quaker Oats	6,040
Ralston Cereal	9,054
Salada Tea	8,496
Slade's Spices	4,714
Snider's Catsup	12,104
Sunkist Lemons & Oranges	8,532
Sunmaid Raisins	21,741
Sunsweet Prunes	9,934
Underwood Fish Cakes	6,646
White House Coffee	4,560

Furniture and Household

Boston Con. Gas Co.	20,711
Derry Made Mattresses	8,344
Edison Elec. Ill. Co.	18,650
Congoleum Rugs	4,736
Glenwood Ranges	6,820
Hartman Furniture Co.	18,648
Hotpoint Appliances	6,503
Maytag Washer	13,652
Simmons Mattresses	15,771
Simplex Elec. Appl.	8,470
Socony Arrow Burner	5,380
Spear & Co. (furniture)	5,064
Wetmore-Savage (electric)	55,766
Wondermist	9,721

Automobile

Buick Motor Cars	35,838
Cadillac	5,603
Chandler Motor Car	12,191
Chevrolet	20,062
Chrysler	15,039
Cleveland	16,469
Dodge	9,506
Dort	8,092
Durant	5,228
Ford	17,850
Franklin	12,368
Gardner	7,286
Hudson & Essex	42,232
Hupmobile	13,229
Maxwell	14,863
Nash	28,486
Oakland	15,549
Oldsmobile	19,715
Overland & Willys-Knight	17,035
Packard	5,843
Paige & Jewett	31,810
Peerless	6,778
Pierce-Arrow	12,729
Reo	10,347
Rickenbacker	21,526
Rollin	4,083
Star	8,212
Studebaker	33,464
Velie	10,790
White Trucks	6,368
Converse Tires	5,448
Firestone Tires	23,139
Goodrich Tires	8,354
Goodyear Tires	13,388
Miller Tires	5,216
U. S. Tires	11,754
Wetmore-Savage (Access.)	40,082
Atlantic Gasolene	30,743
Boyce-ite	8,219
Socony Gas & Motor Oils	9,912
Tydol	4,704

Building Materials

Barrett Roofing	18,421
Bay State Paint	5,488
Bird's Roofing	12,714
Certain-Teed Products	4,736
Devoe Paints	8,257
Dupont Paints	4,857
Johns-Manville Roofing	13,912
Kyanize (varnish)	5,013
Lehigh Cement	4,736
Penn. Portland Cement	12,196
Sherwin-Williams Paint	5,629
Stormtight Roofing	6,836
New England Coke Co.	5,927
Walworth Mfg. Co.	4,712

Radio

Brunswick Radiolas and Phon	8,944
De Forest Radiophone	6,750
Acme Radio Products	5,280
Erla Radio Products	5,921
Eveready Batteries	6,510
Magnavox Radio Products	4,736
Radio Corp. of America	13,633
Thompson Neutrodyne	8,646
Wetmore-Savage (Radio)	17,909

National Magazines

Curtis Publishing Co.	33,152
Saturday Evening Post	23,680
Ladies'Home Journal	4,736
Country Gentleman	4,736
Literary Digest	20,928
True Story Magazine	16,285
Liberty Magazine	13,997
American Weekly	5,116
Woman's Home Companion	4,000

Drug Store Products

Bayer's Aspirin	30,584
Caldwell's Pepsin Syrup	16,238
Castoria	16,001
California Fig Syrup	5,652
Chex Soap	7,328
Coty's Perfumes	5,200
Cuticura	12,948
Danderine	5,509
Flit	6,872
Forhan's Tooth Powder	14,400
Grove's Bromo Quinine	7,890
Hennafoam	9,596
Kolorbak	5,120
Marmola	6,058
Noonan's Hair Petrole	5,724
Pepsodent	13,580
Pluto Water	7,054
Pond's Toilet Preparations	13,784
Tanlac	13,656
Wine Gentin	7,483
Kotex	9,560
El Producto Cigars	18,502
Harvard Cigars	5,964
La Palina Cigars	9,345
7-20-4 Cigars	5,416
Tareyton Cigarettes	5,076
Tuxedo Tobacco	7,002
Velvet Tobacco	18,448
White Owl Cigars	15,060

Other Classifications

Victor Talking Machine	51,784
Elgin Watches	13,800
Duofold Pens	10,834
Signet Ink	5,008
Pacific Mills	4,713
Ipswich Hosiery	7,378
Arrow Collar Co.	8,640
Durham Duplex Razor	5,292
E. & W. Collars	7,350
Fashion Park Clothes	6,885
Gem Razors	9,028
Gillette Razors	4,713
Ucan Hair Cutter	7,378
Kuppenheimer Clothes	7,260
Mallory Hats	6,948
Merode Underwear	4,786
N. E. Telephone & Tel. Co.	12,664
Wrigley's Gum	13,608
John Hancock Life Ins. Co.	4,766
Liberty Mutual Ins. Co.	6,180
Great Northern R. R.	5.060
American Leather Assn	18,104
Amortred Rubber Heels	8,400
Keds	6,740
U. S. Shoe Mach. Co.	5,254

Special Representatives Kelly-Smith Company Marbridge Bldg., New York Lytton Bldg., Chicago

75 Million Dollars in His Change Pocket

The City Hall, Philadelphia. Area 4½ acres. Height of tower 547 feet.

Every business man buys many items not big enough for separate classification. He lumps them undet the "Miscellaneous" account. Philadelphia's Big Fellow and Family also buy a lot of Miscellaneous items—too small to be classified in the family budget—and they cost the Big Fellow 75 million dollars per annum.

The Bulletin goes into practically all of the 412,000 separate homes of the city and 100,000 more outside the city limits.

Philadelphia is a huge market of nearly three million people—third largest in America—instantly available through one newspaper, at one cost.

With over half a million copies daily, The Bulletin naturally dominates Philadelphia—there can be no substitute for circulation. The circulation of the Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in America.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

518,357

Average Daily Net Circulation for Year Ending Dec. 31, 1924

Copyright, 1925, Bulletin Company.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by
The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

ol. 57 NEW YORK, JANUARY 10, 1925 No. 33

New Economic Era For Newspapers Seen In Rising Subscription Prices

lovement Now Under Way Shifts From Advertiser to Reader a Larger Share of Production Costs—New York World and Kansas City Star Lead Advance Among Large Dailies—Situation Surveyed

By ARTHUR ROBB

IRST signs that newspapers are entering a new phase of the economic vement which began with the war came h the New Year announcement that the nsas City Star and the New York rld would seek revenues necessary to et mounting costs from increased subiption and local sale prices.

The World, in announcing an increase m two to three cents in the price of morning issue, declared that "it is unnd for any independent, aggressive, controlled newspaper to have to rely so great an extent on support other tn that which comes from its own ders." During 1924, the announcent states, the white paper and ink alone st half a cent a copy more than the orld received from sales per copy—truth of which is confirmed by 30 onds' elementary arithmetic.

The Star does not put its reasons so sely, but they are none the less cogent: "Everything that goes into the making a newspaper has remained at a high el.

"White paper, the heaviest single item newspaper cost, was $40 a ton before e war. It costs now $77 a ton. Uncle m demands more, vastly more, for nsporting newspapers in the mails and s under way a still further increase. ages of printers, of pressmen, of all bor, have gone up steadily.

"Further, no good newspaper stands ll. Within the year the Star has given readers more than ever before. It s added the beautifully illustrated nday Magazine and the eight-page sec of comics in four colors. In addition, friends have been informed and ertained for two years by its radio staon, from which, of course, there can be remuneration other than gratitude. All this was in fulfillment of what the ar conceived to be its obligation to its aders to give them the best. It has llowed this policy during its life of 44 ars and it will continue to follow it. lt the increasing cost permeating every urce of newspaper expense has made visable a slight advance—five cents—r placing at your door seven mornings d six evenings a week a newspaper hich covers the field in news, instructn, and in entertainment."

Both of these papers have resisted for ars the sweep of the current toward gher subscription prices.

The New York World stood adamant ree years ago against a proposed increase to three cents daily by all local rning papers. The evening papers had eviously attained and have since held e three-cent price. One, Curtis's ening Post, a year ago raised its price five cents and now has more regular yers than at any time in its recent tory. The American, which set its ice at three cents daily and 10 cents nday while the other papers were dething the move, has found its public lling to pay.

The Kansas City Star, likewise, has refused to be influenced to higher prices until the present. It charged 10 cents a week when it was only the six-day evening Star. Thirty one years ago the Sunday Star was added with no change in the 10-cent price. Eight years later the Morning Times brought the number of issues a week to 13, but the price remained at a dime until the war, when some increase was imperative. The old price was restored after the war in anticipation of the return to "normalcy," but as everyone knows there has been no return. The Star's opposition has sold at the 15-cent rate for thirteen issues for the past three years.

Glance at the Star's statement again for a hint as to what has been going on in newspaper publication since the Armistice.

You read of a beautifully illustrated Sunday magazine—service to reader and advertiser, of a plus character—far beyond the call of duty or necessity.

You read of a four-color, eight-page comic section, filled with the best pictorial humor that the country possesses—another "plus" treat for a million people in the Midle West to whom the newspaper comic was a joy unknown. They appear to like it.

You read of two years' broadcasting from one of the most powerful radio stations on the continent of nightly entertainment not only for Kansans and Missourians, but for thousands of people in New York, Florida, Texas, the far Canadian north and across the oceans. There is no reward but gratitude, the Star says, for this service, but can it be said that gratitude of readers is a negligible element to a newspaper?

It is not in the Star's statement, for the Star doesn't buy syndicated features so liberally as do other papers, but it is a fact that the 2,000 daily newspapers of this country—or the great majority of them—have helped to swell the great fund which has been spent since the war for features of general interest and entertainment value to readers. Many of them have added special wire services to supplement their spot news reports—all to make the paper of greater value to readers and through that process to increase their worth as advertising media.

This concern of editors that their readers be supplied the best available has also been manifested in a steadily rising standard of personnel requirements and pay for editorial staffs. The picturesque star reporter of 20 years ago with his respectively weekly space string is a rare bird today, but in his stead in metropolitan offices are ten or twenty competent men each of whose earnings on regular salaries, approximate his uncertain maximum income. Editorial salaries, the last of the newspaper pay standards to respond to the higher wage trends, are now definitely rising. That is true in both large and small cities.

All of these elements are more or less novel in newspaper costs. Only a year or so ago, the bulk of price and advertising rate increases were attributed to the outgo for paper and machine-room forces. Paper prices are not going up immediately; neither are they going down appreciably, if at all.

Wages to labor in the printing and distributing departments turned sharply upward in 1919 and were not checked by the 1921-1922 business depression. They have continued to increase, year by year, in most cities and all that the strongest efforts of newspaper publishers have been able to accomplish is to prevent sudden and disorganizing jumps in pay scales. Contracts now in force the country over guarantee the upward trend for the next three years at least.

All of these elements, new and old, have demanded that newspapers increase

TWO DAYS IN WASHINGTON FOR A. S. N. E.

E. C. HOPWOOD of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, secretary of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, this week announces the program for the third annual convention of the society to be held at the New Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C., Jan. 16-17. President Coolidge has accepted an invitation to attend the annual banquet to be held Jan 17, Benjamin Franklin's birthday.

The Society's board of directors has extended an invitation to the heads of Washington Bureaus to attend the meetings and take part in discussions.

The program follows:

FRIDAY MORNING, JAN. 16.

10 A. M.—Address of the President, Casper S. Yost, St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Committee Reports, Etc.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 16.

"Crime, the Law and the Press," James M. Beck, Solicitor General of the United States.

Discussion: Herbert Bayard Swope, New York World; Willis J. Abbott, Christian Science Monitor.

"The Doctor Looks at the Newspapers," Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor, Journal of the American Medical Association.

Discussion: Grove Patterson, Toledo Blade; Arthur M. Howe, Brooklyn Eagle; Paul Bellamy, Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SATURDAY MORNING, JAN. 17.

"Dodging Propaganda," Karl A. Bickel, United Press.

Discussion: Julian S. Mason, New York Herald Tribune; E. S. Beck, Chicago Tribune; Morris Lee, Philadelphia Public Ledger; James Kerney, Trenton Times.

"In what Degree Are Syndicates and Press Services, Rather than Editors, Editing the Newspapers?" A "symposium" of opinions and experience by Frank P. Glass, St. Louis Star; Charles W. Danziger, Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph; Marvin Creager, Milwaukee Journal; C. H. Dennis, Chicago News; Harvey Ingham, Des Moines Register and Tribune-News; T. J. Dillon, Minneapolis Tribune; Arthur R. Treanor, Saginaw News-Courier; Thomas A. Robertson, Cleveland News; John S. Cohen, Atlanta Journal; Loring F. Pickering, North American Newspaper Alliance; E. V. Harris, Washington Herald; George A. Hough, New Bedford Standard.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 17

"Are the Schools of Journalism Getting Anywhere?" Walter Williams, Dean College of Journalism, University of Missouri.

Discussion: Walter M. Harrison, Oklahoma City Oklahoman; J. T. Williams, Jr., Boston Transcript; George W. Dodds, Spokane Spokesman Review.

Business Session, Election of Directors, etc.

their income. Some of the increase has come from added volume of advertising, but this source has been almost negligible during 1924. The new revenue in the past year, what there has been of it, has been in the form of increased advertising rates.

On the basis of available information, no one can say how much additional income came to the newspapers last year through the channel of higher rates on advertising. The best guide is the compilation of circulations and rates which will appear in EDITOR & PUBLISHER INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK NUMBER, out Jan. 31.

According to this tabulation, newspaper circulations, morning and evening, as of Oct. 1, 1924, show an increase of 4.9 per cent over the previous Oct. 1 totals. Advertising rates increased only 4.7 per cent.

Splitting the daily group into its components, it appears that morning paper circulations increased 7.7 per cent, while rates increased 9 per cent. Evening papers' circulations increased 3.2 per cent, with a rate increase of only 2.9 per cent.

One can follow several lines of reasoning from these premises.

One is that newspaper advertising rates on a nation-wide scale are as high as they can go without disturbing the general business fabric. That is not altogether true, although it cannot be denied that a repetition of the rate-raising panic of a few years ago would probably have results dangerous both to buyers and sellers of space. The present prevailing idea among both classes is that rates should rise only as warranted by increases in circulation.

Another possible angle is that the apparent stagnation in rates is due to the numerous consolidations and suspensions that have marked 1924. Many of these changes took place among the smaller and weaker newspapers whose rates were altogether disproportionate to their circulations, measured by big and medium city standards. This factor exists, but in all probability its effect on the rate total is negligible.

A third line, and this is the most plausible, is that the thought expressed by the New York World is finding acceptance among newspaper owners. There has been little change in the basic rate per line per thousand or million circulation during the past two years, which is further support for the theory that publishers do not care to lean more heavily on advertisers for the funds necessary to conduct their papers.

Give the reader more, give him better news, better entertainment, a better printed paper, a larger measure of service, in and out of its columns—these have been the controlling ideas of the past three years in the business.

The logical corollary seems now about to become effective—let the reader pay for it.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

By Henry Edward Warner

MEMORIES*

I

When I was a cub reporter,
Skinny and brash and gay,
The job was never too long for me
And never too rough the way.
I hustled and dug and braced the world
As none but a young Cub could—
And the pay I drew was a little thing
To the joy of making good.

II

There were Payne and Carter and Hussey—
Three of a kind, these three;
Like gods they moved in the city room—
Like gods, to a Cub like me!
George Payne was the Czar of the City Desk,
And Carter and Hussey, they
Were the grown-up dreams of my dearest hope
When the Cub should have his day.

III

There were Payne and Carter and Hussey
And towering above the three
Were Grasty and Fabian Franklin; ay,
And Harwood, a Prince was he!
And Grasty and Fabian Franklin ruled
In a kingdom all their own,
When a hopeful Cub with his golden dream
Was happy to sweep the throne!

IV

O visions that seek me waking,
Memories haunting my bed!
That day was red with glory when I
Wrote up to a back-page head!
And many a scoop has thrilled me since,
But none as the Big One did
When Payne looked up with a smile, and said,
"That's a pretty good story, Kid!"

V

When I was a Cub reporter! . . .
I'd not go back to Then,
For I've traveled far on the rocky road
That leads to the hopes of men!
But with much of the journey still ahead,
There's joy in the backward glance
To The-Things-That-Were when Men were gods
And Life was a Cub's romance!

Dedicated with sincere affection to the memory of the late Charles H. Grasty.*

DEATH TAKES TWO EXECUTIVES

Ottumwa Courier Editorial and Business Chiefs Die Within 24 Hours

W. H. Powell, managing editor, and E. P. Canny, advertising manager of the Ottumwa (Ia.) Courier, died within a 24-hour period last week. The loss to the paper has been a severe one. Mr. Powell's death followed a two weeks' illness of pneumonia and Mr. Canny succumbed to an attack of apoplexy.

William Hall Powell was a native of Exeter, Ill., born Aug. 18, 1881 and had resided in Ottumwa 40 years.

Edward P. Canny was born May 4, 1878 in Shenandoah, Pa., and came to Ottumwa in 1887. He joined the Courier forces 15 years ago as a reporter, rose to city editor and held that post until 1919 when he went into the business office and in a few months became advertising manager. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary A. Canny, three sons and three daughters, two brothers and two sisters.

Newspaper men from southeastern Iowa were gathered for the Powell obsequies and co-workers and associates in the Lee Syndicate, which controlled the Courier, attended. Among those present were: E. P. Adler, publisher of the Davenport Times and head of the Syndicate; Frank H. Burgess, of the LaCrosse Tribune; Frank D. Throop, Davenport Democrat; L. P. Loomis, Muscatine Journal; E. L. Sparks, Hannibal Courier-Post and A. M. Brayton, Madison Wisconsin State Journal.

VICKSBURG HERALD SOLD

Now Property of Dr. G. S. Harmon, Owner of Hattiesburg American

With the issue of Jan. 1, the control of the Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald, passed into the hands of Dr. G. S. Harmon, editor and publisher of the Hattiesburg (Miss.) American.

The staff of the Vicksburg paper, as announced Jan. 1, consists of G. S. Harmon, editor, Keeton Arnett, managing editor, Donald McDonald, news editor, and R. C. Jones, business and advertising manager. Arnett was formerly manager of the Mississippi Bureau of the New Orleans Times-Picayune. R. C. Jones came to Vicksburg from Meridian, Miss., where he was advertising manager of the Meridian Star for several years.

VAN ANDA PLANS VACATION

N. Y. Times M. E. Leaving for Long Rest in California

Carr V. Van Anda, managing editor of the New York Times will start some time this month on a long recuperative vacation. He will go to Southern California for the remainder of the winter. During his absence his duties will be assumed by Frederick T. Birchall, assistant managing editor.

Mr. Van Anda has been constantly at the managing editor's desk of the New York Times for 21 years and has been engaged in newspaper work for 43 years, for 36 years in an executive capacity.

New Trial of Pew vs. I. N. S.

Retrial of the suit of Marlen E. Pew against the International News Service began in Queens County Supreme Court at Long Island City, N. Y., Jan. 7. Mr. Pew's suit is based on an alleged breach of contract by the I. N. S., of which he was editor and manager from July, 1919, to January, 1923. A verdict returned by a jury in November, 1923, for the plaintiff, awarding damages of $49,500, was reversed last month on a point of law by the Appellate Division in Brooklyn. Mr. Pew was the only witness heard up to press time of EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

NEW TABLOID ENTER FIELD IN BUFFALO

W. J. Conners' Enquirer Reduced Size and Merged with Daily Star —Sold As Two Cent Evening Daily

The Buffalo Enquirer on Jan. changed its name to the Buffalo Dai Star and Enquirer, and its size fro standard to picture-tabloid dimensions.

The new evening daily resulting sel for two cents and runs to 32 pages. Bot United Press and International New Service are used. It is highly picturize

William J. Conners, Jr., remains a editor and publisher; John H. Trante as managing editor; William S. Bennet business manager; and William E. O Brien, advertising manager.

Advertising rates, it was announced will remain the same as those maintaine by the Enquirer for the first three month when there will be a readjustment base on the circulation over that period. Spac will be sold in combination with the Dail and Sunday Courier, also owned by Mr Conners, where the space of any one ad vertisement does not exceed tabloid size five columns of twelve and a half em pica, by 200 line deep.

"The first appearance of the tabloid met with whole-hearted reception on the part of not only Buffalo, but this whole section," Mr. Conners declared in a telegraphed statement to EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

"Notwithstanding the fact that more than three times the average run of the Enquirer was printed there were scores of instances where the paper was sold out long before the regular editions of the standard size newspapers.

"Another encouraging evidence of the newspaper's popularity is the way it has been received by the advertisers of the city. The popularity of page dominating copy with the use of small space and its general appeal to all classes assures to the paper a steady consistent use of space by the advertisers.

"All in all it exceeded even our most ardent hopes as a metropolitan tabloid newspaper."

The name, Buffalo Star, has belonged to the Conners family for many years. The original Star flourished from 1831 to 1842, first under the leadership of Charles Faxon. It was sold in 1838 to Quartus Graves, who six years later passed it on to Henry Burwell, who changed its name to the Mercantile Courier and Democratic Economist. This name was later shortened to Courier.

The Enquirer was established in 1891 and bought by William J. Conners in 1895. For a short time there was a morning edition of the paper, but that was dropped when Mr. Conners acquired the Courier.

ALTON (ILL.) DAILIES MERGED

Evening Telegraph Buys and Discontinues Daily Times

The rising cost of newspaper production and the limited local field were given as reasons for the sale of the Alton (Ill.) Daily Times last week to the Alton Evening Telegraph, which is reported to have paid $125,000 for the Times plant. The Times suspended with its edition of Dec. 31 and E. P. Campbell, the founder, associated with William H. Murphy in the Times since its first publication in 1909, retired from newspaper work.

The Telegraph was established in 1836. The purchase of the Times will mean no change in its personnel.

Mr. Murphy and other members of the Times staff have joined the Telegraph staff. Under the terms of the sale Mr. Campbell receives a stipulated sum during the next three years, conditional upon his remaining out of the newspaper field.

MORAN URGES NEWSPAPER CO-OPERATION

New Part-Owner of Cleveland News Declares Criticism of Contemporaries Acts as Boomerang—Believes Inside Harmony Should Be Assured by Well Paid Staff

By MARSHALL R. HALL

EFFECTIVE Jan. 1, George F. Moran, president of the Cleveland ompany, publisher of the Cleveland ews and Sunday News-Leader, became art owner of these publications and as elevated to the chairmanship of the oard of directors, being succeeded in the esident's office by Dan R. Hanna, Jr., ho also becomes general manager. In s new capacity Mr. Moran now be- mes associated with Mark A. Hanna, arl H. Hanna and D. R. Hanna, Jr.

Mr. Moran was elected president of ie Cleveland Company following the eath of D. R. Hanna, Sr., and has filled ie post since that time. Since coming to ie Cleveland News and the Sunday lews-Leader in 1914, Mr. Moran held uccessively the posts of assistant gener- l manager, general manager, vice-presi- ent, then president, and now steps into ie highest honor the company can ac- ord him.

At a meeting of the board of directors, ie following resolution was adopted:

"Move that a vote of deep appreciation be accorded President George F. Moran, by the directors of the Cleveland Company, representing the late D. R. Hanna, for his many years of faithful guidance of the affairs of the Cleveland Company. He has served the interests of the company first at all times, as is evidenced by the remarkable record of this Company, and the board of directors wishes him many more years of success, good health and prosperity with the Cleveland Company."

When Mr. Moran left his former post s business manager of the Cleveland lain Dealer to become assistant general anager of the Cleveland Company, the leveland News, according to the state- ent of October, 1913, had a circulation f 101,000 copies daily and the Sunday eader's circulation was 75,993. The udit Bureau statement of October, 1924, hows the circulation of the Cleveland News to be 164,488 copies, net paid daily, nd that of the Sunday News-Leader to e 179,156, net paid Sunday.

These remarkable growths came as a esult of Mr. Moran's keen perception f what both papers needed to lift them o a higher plane with the reading public, nd they are eloquent testimony as to the oundness of his ideas and his methods of arrying them out.

Mr. Moran attributes a portion of his uccess to the fact that he has always re- ied on the merit of his papers to sell hem, rather to criticism of the methods f competitors. In an interview with EDITOR & PUBLISHER Mr. Moran asserted hat in his opinion one of the great roubles with newspaper publishers is the act that they spend too much time criti- izing their contemporaries in the field in- tead of putting forth an effort to sell the ews or advertising columns of their own aper, and he pointed out that partly be- ause of this unfortunate condition the agazines of the country today are carry- ng large volumes of advertising that hould be going to the newspapers.

By the time a prospective advertiser as listened to a salesman hammer the erits of a competitive newspaper, Mr. oran thinks that that potential adver- iser is either weary of the hearing or lse his time has been consumed, and the alesman fails to land the business.

The Cleveland publisher believes there hould be some sort of a co-operative ampaign by newspapers to convince ational advertisers that they could better erve their interests through placing their opy in the newspapers. He also favors n association of some sort in each city ade up of publishers of newspapers in he locality, having as an object the owering of costs, prevention of waste, limination of fraudulent advertising and general betterment of conditions among the publishers themselves.

GEORGE F. MORAN

Work Hard and Don't Knock, Advises the Chairman of the Board of the Cleveland Company.

He has issued instructions to each employe on the Cleveland News and the Sunday News-Leader that he is not under any circumstances to speak in a derogatory manner about a competitive paper, for it is Mr. Moran's theory that each paper has its own field, fills a separate want and meets a distinct purpose. Therefore, the action of criticizing a contemporary or belittling its endeavors is more apt to prove a boomerang than it is to do good, he adds.

Neither the Cleveland News nor the Sunday News-Leader have any entangling alliances, Mr. Moran asserts. The Cleveland Company owns no stocks or bonds in any public service corporation or other concern, and is, therefore, free from any outside influences that otherwise might be felt.

He believes that all newspapers come in three classes—the nationally subsidized papers, of which there is none in the United States; the privately subsidized newspapers, and commercial newspapers operated for profit.

It is of the last class that Mr. Moran speaks when he says that a newspaper, to be profitable, must please its readers; that it will succeed only in the degree to which it meets with the approval of its readers, and in the degree that it serves the public and carries out the trust the public reposes in it. Let this trust be violated and it loses its readers' confidence, and thereafter cannot be operated profitably.

Turning to the news end of the publishing business, Mr. Moran firmly believes in well-paid and satisfied workers. The Cleveland Company, he says, does not only pay a man what the company thinks that man is worth, but it pays him what the man himself thinks he is worth, thereby creating harmony in the ranks and keeping every man satisfied. In case an employee feels he is worth more than the company does, his services are dispensed with, for an unsatisfied worker is a handicap to himself, his co-workers and his paper.

Mr. Moran also thinks that when the right men are found for given posts, they should be held within the organization. Both the News and Sunday News-Leader have employes who have been on the respective staffs for many years.

A publisher has an enormous power in his community, Mr. Moran believes, and his paper will have power just so long as it does not misuse it. The readers are a vast jury that daily try a paper and pass judgment on it, and this reader-jury is quick to discern when a paper is false to its reader-trust and it is quick to drop the paper and seek elsewhere for guidance and news.

The majority of the people think rightly, Mr. Moran believes, and any decision rendered by a majority of the people is the best that could be made, therefore, so long as the great majority of a reading public approves a newspaper it is a pretty good sign that the paper is proceeding along the right lines, to carry the theory along further.

A Biblical verse: "My man, find thy work," is used by the Cleveland publisher in illustrating what he thinks is a big factor in a successful newspaper. It is his theory that every man and every woman has some line of thought, aim or ambition that eclipses all others. If it brings them into the newspaper profession they will be good workers. On the other hand, those who are not fitted in any respect for the work will soon be found out.

He doesn't believe that genius is everything, for, as he quotes Michael Angelo: "Hard work is a good substitute for genius." He thinks that earnest endeavor, and a real try at getting somewhere will compensate in large measure for other shortcomings.

That is why he believes most reprimands given a reporter by his superior are uncalled for.

"If a rival paper gets a news or advertising scoop, I think it is wrong to blame the reporter or solicitor," Mr. Moran asserts. "The blame really lies on the shoulders of the superiors, for if a newspaper is good enough, gets well enough known and entrenched deeply enough in the readers' thoughts, that paper will be remembered when the news story breaks, or the advertising copy is ready. Therefore, I think it is wrong to place the blame on the reporter or the advertising salesman. Let their superiors look to themselves for the fault, and then the evil will be remedied."

Mr. Moran is averse to giving broad, general advice on how to manage or operate a newspaper for, he says, there are too many men going about the country, who are doing this very thing and seemingly don't know what they are talking about. Ask almost any of them to give you his advertising rates, tell you the cost of sufficient ink to run a thousand 8-column, 8-page papers; to tell the cost of a square inch of engraving and things of that sort, pertaining to his publication, and he can't do it.

Use of newspapers for personal exploitation was severely criticized by Mr. Moran. He said that in his opinion no newspaper could be successful with its readers if the owner or publishers used it to seek individual honors, to further social ambitions or for political self-aggrandizement. That, he believes, not only retards progress of the paper, but handicaps the entire organization behind it, because those who get it out do not feel free to write or present news except as it favors "the boss."

Another and forward step in the progress of the Cleveland Company comes soon in the construction of a handsome new building. Contracts have been let and work will start at an early date on what is to be one of the finest publishing plants in the United States.

The building will have a cafeteria for employes; an auditorium which will be for the use of the city's civic organizations; a gymnasium for men and women, rest rooms, first aid room, etc. It will be erected at Superior avenue and East 18th street and when completed will house all the activities of the Cleveland Company.

Urges Franklin Birthday Observance

James M. Lynch, president of the International Typographical Union, asked printers to observe Benjamin Franklin's birthday, Jan. 17, in a statement issued this week from Indianapolis, the union's headquarters. President Lynch will address a banquet of the Old Time Printers' Association in Chicago on that date and he urges associations in other cities to plan suitable observances.

Auto-Caster Inventor Dies

John McNaughton, 54, cartoonist, and inventor of the Auto-Caster died Jan. 5 in New York, from injuries sustained in an accident Jan. 3. Born in London, Ont., he had served as cartoonist on several American and Canadian newspapers in the west.

WIRE PICTURE SERVICE NOW AN ACTUALITY

Telepix, Device Perfected By P. & A. Photos Successful in Daily Trans-continental Tests, H. B. Baker Manager, Announces—Marvin Ferree and Joseph Wissmar Inventors

A LEASED wire picture service, which will transmit pictures cross-country with the same speed now realized by news dispatch transmission, is nearing actuality.

This became evident this week following the successful test of the Telepix, a new machine for picture transmission invented by a newspaper man, the American and foreign patent rights of which are owned by the Pacific & Atlantic Photos, Inc., subsidiary of the Chicago Tribune and New York Daily News.

In the test, formally announced on New Year's Day photographs of the Notre Dame-Leland Stanford football game were sent from Los Angeles to New York and Chicago simultaneously in 20 minutes over Western Union wires. The distance is 3,444 miles.

The inventors of this amazing development of picture telegraphy, long experimented with in secret, are Marvin Ferree, former city editor of the Minneapolis News, and Joseph Wissmar, formerly of the Western Union Telegraph Company at Cleveland.

H. B. Baker, general manager of P. & A. Photos, Inc., told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week that plans were under way by the Chicago Tribune and the corporation he manages, which, in the near future, will see "a score or more of the biggest newspapers in the country's largest cities linked by Telepix service over Western Union wires."

"The important pictures of the day and night", he said, "will be collected and distributed in all parts of the country in a manner similar to that by which news is handled by the big news associations.

"Already a picture editor has been placed in charge of a transcontinental picture wire at Chicago where photos from east and west are scheduled like news stories, and from where it is possible to send pictures east and west at the same time or send them from coast to coast with intermediate points all getting copies.

"Compared with other apparatus for sending pictures by wire and radio which came out during the past year, the Telepix, the machine with which the feat of coast to coast photo transmission was accomplished, is indeed a simple device. Small, portable, easy to operate, the Telepix was designed especially for newspaper work in which it has proved successful in more than two months' daily operation between the offices of the New York News and the Chicago Tribune and for a month past has been utilized in sending New York and Chicago pictures to and from the office of the Los Angeles Times.

"It was only after this period of successful operation in actual daily service that the New York News and Chicago Tribune decided to announce formally their device upon which the inventors had worked for a year in New York and Chicago.

A photograph of Torchia, central figure in a Los Angeles bomb episode, appeared on the receiving end of the Telepix line in New York as shown on the right. This copy has not been retouched.

"Even before the American Telephone and Telegraph Company announced its picture machine last June, Ferree and Wissmar had successfully operated their apparatus over 1,000 mile lines of the Western Union Telegraph company wires.

"Throughout the summer and fall, Telepix tests continued and for two months past after the machine was put into daily use, the only identifying mark the public saw to distinguish the telegraphed pictures from others published in the News or Tribune was the by-line 'Telepix photo' which meant little to the average reader but caused somewhat of a sensation in the newspaper publishing field.

"The News and Tribune, equipped with Telepix machines, were getting news pictures, not only hours but in cases of coast to coast transmission, days ahead of the mails carried by the fastest express trains and fleetest airplanes.

"We wanted to be sure Telepix would stand up in actual use by sending and receiving every conceivable kind of a picture under every possible condition before we did any broadcasting. Now we have something"

Mounted on a light aluminum base, 23 by 12½ inches, the Telepix machine is not as heavy as a typewriter and is as easy to operate as a phonograph. In fact, the machine itself somewhat resembles a phonograph.

The picture to be transmitted is printed photographically on a metal plate which is placed on the cylinder of the machine. The Telepix is driven by a small electric motor which derives its power from any ordinary electric light socket.

Electrically governed and synchronized with the machines at the distant stations, the cylinder is made to revolve as a needle traces over the plate in much the same manner as a needle of the old cylinder phonograph moved over the surface of a record. Instead of recording musical vibrations, the Telepix needle records all of the tones and details of the picture and transmits them to an ordinary telegraph relay which in turn, sends them over the telegraph line in telegraphic dots and dashes. Unlike the uniform dot and dash of telegraph code, the Telepix dots and dashes are of hundreds of different sizes, representing all the various tones and shades of the photograph. At the distant stations, similar Telepix machines receive the picture by a needle tracing, which records instantly all the minute dots and dashes, bringing out the received picture in all of its true tones and values.

Unlike other systems of wire picture transmission, the whole Telepix operation is done in broad daylight or under ordinary electric lights at night, no dark rooms being necessary. Also, the picture is visible as it is transmitted and received and it is not necessary to wait for a film to be developed after a picture is received, to see the result. In case of error, due to wire troubles in bad weather, it can be seen instantly and corrected at once. When the picture is finished it is ready for reproduction or can be photographed with an ordinary copying camera for enlargement or reduction to any desired size. Telepix pictures can be sent in virtually any size, although the standard dimensions are six by twelve inches which give a good size for newspaper retouching if desired.

By simply throwing a small switch, the Telepix machine will either transmit or receive pictures. A small picture can be sent in from fifteen to twenty minutes and a large one in about one hour and twenty minutes.

Faulty synchronization produced the Harry Lauder effect in the boss-gravedigger's shovel in the right-hand cut. This is made from an unretouched negative produced in New York from a Chicago photograph transmitted by Telepix process.

RADIO-PRINTER NEWS BY 1926 FORECAST

M. Koenigsberg, I.N.S. President Says Number of American Newspapers Will Then Receive Dispatches by Radio Typewriters

M. Koenigsberg, president of the International News Service, this week predicted "a considerable number" of American newspapers by next year will be receiving news on automatic typewriters operated by radio.

The prediction was made in a statement to EDITOR & PUBLISHER. The statement follows:

"American newspapers have been receiving news by radio regularly for some time. However, I do not think radio will ever supplant the telegraph wire in the manual transmission of news. Eventually radio is sure to replace the wire in the operation of circuits of automatic typewriters.

"Transmission of news to typewriters by radio impulse is no longer in the experimental stage. International News Service operated typewriters by wireless for a period of many months before beginning its public demonstrations nearly two years ago.

"Since 1921, we have devoted ourselves to the simplification of the process—to the elimination of manual effort and to the reduction of interference.

"We have reached the point where I believe I am warranted in predicting that a considerable number of American newspapers will be receiving news on automatic typewriters operated by radio during the year 1926.

"Moreover, I am convinced that this operation will be more dependable, more regular and less subject to interruption by the elements than any news service transmitted by overhead wires.

"We are under the impression that our patent rights are exclusive."

"NEWS TWIST" FORESEEN FOR AUTO ADVERTISING

Manufacturers Sense Public Distrust Due to Recent Price-Cuts and Consider Educating Prospects on Fundamentals of Industry—New Distribution Plans Will Require More Newspaper Advertising

By JAMES SULLIVAN
Automobile Editor, Boston Globe

ON the same night that the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce cials were awarding honors to the tor industry pioneers at the annual banet in New York, Nurmi the Finnish mpion, was being decorated with udit honors for his record breaking ning.

Two systems of transportation—the ginal and the modern—were in mpition for places in the news columns, l the former won out. Nurmi created ws. In the motor industry, with its alth of material, it might be well to e this some consideration.

Nurmi, according to modern methods, uld have been enveloped in an atmosre of training grandeur instead of be down on earth amid the simple living ks. Today the executives of the autobile plants, and to a lesser degree the lers, as a group are like the runners o competed Tuesday night. They have rted on the 1925 race. The finish deds upon the preparations made, and condition of the competitors.

One year ago the statement was made t in 1924 there would be less cars sold l more advertising used to sell them n in 1923. That seems to be the rest. One also must get the other angles ough going back to 1923. It started with a rush. Throughout the country a number of places there were more es of new vehicles in the first seven nths than for the entire 12 months of 22. Registrations showed consistent ns for each 1923 month over the previous year.

Happiness reigned among the makers. w production records piled up. There s talk then about what 1924 would ng. With a Presidential campaign in w, and history telling what happens, k ran to even a production of more n 4,000,000 cars. They were not proced. And all the 1924 cars were not d before the 1925 season began. Registions showed that sales jumped in the st three months, then it was up and wn for the rest of the year. When the al figures are made known it will be nd that toward the end the brakes lly were holding production in the last ple of months.

This is not pessimism; just plain facts. the 1925 show season opened with the chiefs smiling, waving adieu to the year ready to bestow a blessing on the w. There was a certain tension seekto fathom the public mind, and what s in the back of the other fellow's nd. Then the opening gun was fired h a juicy price reduction whose echoes, e the shot heard round the world, is l reverberating through the entire tor industry. Along came others. And l end is not yet.

n the public mind a reduction raises o ideas. One that the line is not being ll received, and the other that the cars er were worth the prices asked. To ne individuals the motor people were cked upon as profiteers. If one could d the financial statements of makers l dealers it would show that there is, l there was, more value in motor cars pared to other things than ever before. Those who know the situation realize t with a line, backed up by advertis, telling the right story, and placed perly bringing increased sales, it is sible to cut down overhead. Then sing the reduction to the buyers there l be enough more to keep going at a fit. Also that if the foundations are t and things are balanced, not topvy, and the organization can harmonize duction and sales, then tempests may weathered.

The general public does not know as ch about these things as it should and ne of the men in the industry today wondering if it is not about time to the ideas of manufacturing fundatals a bit more and appearance of product less. In other words make the advertising have a greater news value.

It would take more than a prophet to tell today what the advertising figures for 1925 will total. Talk with some of the men at the show and they will tell you frankly that until the Chicago show is over they will not make up their minds. Others have schedules all laid out. Still others have started a campaign to cover a lengthy period. But there is nothing in any contract for a newspaper advertising schedule on motor copy insisting that it must be run.

This year is going to see keen competition all over the country. Go into some of the older conservative cities and you will see the same line sold by two or three firms. It took some time to spread that plan out to any extent. But where there are two or three today there will be as many more later within a short radius. Congestion in cities has meant keeping the prospective buyer running his old car longer, because he would not inconvenience himself trying to visit the motor salesrooms. Therefore, the motor salesrooms must go to the buyer. With department stores selling to the mass using the trains and trolleys it is different.

Boston may be cited as an example. One company now has showrooms two minutes walk from the stock exchange, the chamber of commerce, the insurance centre, the markets and the waterfront. Others have realized that in the communities as near to the Boston City hall as Central Park is to Madison Square Garden in New York, each of which has a population averaging about 100,000, or larger than scores of so-called large western or Southern cities, there are a lot of motor buyers waiting to see what they want near at hand. Particularly is this true of women prospects.

Executives tell the dealers how to get the business as it is analyzed at the factories. But they do not do it so much by mail now. Like the officers in warfare they are getting the closer contact even though it means sleeping on trains. Briefly there is more co-operation today among all the classes in the industry than ever.

Piling up of accidents and headlight glare are being recognized now as two potent things adding to sales resistance. So the motor people are giving some attention to movements to remedy these conditions. Reading of accidents every day, and riding with friends at night with glare making it difficult to travel have been putting many prospects in a frame of mind to consider whether it is worth while to buy just for daylight use, and be targets for reckless drivers.

That is why they will be able to fight the battle out this year in such a way that it will bring about a healthy reaction. Like Eliza on the ice cakes, they are not going to shiver and be eaten up, but will jump from cake to cake, get wet, perhaps, have a chill here and there, with an occasional fatality, but reach the other shore and safety.

With the fight over four-wheel brakes and balloon tires out of the way there is less incentive to start this year off with pages throughout the country. That is a handicap for an early start in the papers to roll up big lineage. But it is a much better thing for the makers, from a sales viewpoint.

On the other hand there seems to be a feeling that more copy in the big papers of the larger cities where outside territory is covered is worth considering as against trying to spread the appropriations out thinly to take in the small papers in the little sections. It is not a general movement.

In the next year or two there will be a big development in busses for transportation by railroads and electric lines. That was why at Boston the N.A.C.C. staged a conference to try to get the truck and bus men working in harmony with the railroad people. With so many companies now in the bus field they either must advertise or face strong sales resistance when they seek to see railway executives.

They are going to sell a lot of motor vehicles in 1925. The percentage should be better than 1924 because production is not going to soar beyond safety limits. And as the year shapes up the advertising will show signs of increasing. New York and Chicago shows bring out each year new accounts that never go into other cities. But this year with the intensive competition to get sales going early the copy will continue fairly steady for the first six months.

In the low price field Henry Ford is reported to have planned a $4,000,000 newspaper campaign.

John Willys, with his new line of Overlands and his new prices, says he has not set limits on his final outlay. He will advertise the six cylinder Willys Knight in the field above on a bigger scale.

Chevrolet will keep pace with the others.

Duran is back on the advertising map with the Star being featured.

Go up a step, and Essex has a plan for a bigger outlay.

Oldsmobile and Oakland will not be overlooked by General Motors officials.

Dodge is going to continue the even tenor of its way.

Flint will break into the limelight about February after a lapse.

Maxwell will be very much in the procession.

Rollin will take care its merits are not overlooked.

Buick, Studebaker and Nash will be just as familiar, if not more than ever. Jewett, Hudson, Chandler, Cleveland and Gardner copy will be big enough to dominate pages when placed.

Jordan is going to continue putting his money into papers more and less into government taxes.

Rickenbacker is adopting a newer style that stands out in half pages to go more often.

Reo has a good bit of profits ready to continue telling its story.

Franklin is just laying out a good 1925 schedule, too that will be worth while.

Chrysler showed what advertising could do for a new car and there will be no let-up this year.

Kissel has something in sight for an early start.

Hupmobile, with a new "eight," is under way now in good shape telling the world about it.

Cadillac did comparatively little last year, mostly leaving it up to the dealers. The factory people have decided more money should be spent this year.

Peerless is getting wider distribution and there is to be more newspaper and less national copy.

Pierce Arrow found its new Six met with approval, and aided the sales of the big car, so it is going to do some more

(Continued on page 38)

NATIONAL AUTOMOBILE SHOW WELL REPORTED BY NEWSPAPERS

AUTOMOBILE editors of many newspapers in various sections of the country attended the twenty-fifth annual Automobile Show which opened this week at the 258th Field Artillery Armory, New York.

New York newspapers were represented by the following: L. T. Hardy, Morning World; Eddie Toole, Evening World; Frank Crane, Times; John Holme, Morning Telegraph; Gene Graf, Sun; Elmer Thompson, Jr., Evening Post; Davison Brown, Evening Journal; Bert Pierce, Herald-Tribune; C. E. T. Short, Telegram and Mail; Duncan Curry, American; John Gren, Evening Graphic; Fred McAllister, Journal of Commerce; H. L. Humphries, Wall Street Journal; Vincent Sawyer, Bulletin; Lou Taine, Commercial.

From Brooklyn newspapers were: C. H. Karseboom, Eagle; M. Devlin, Times; D. C. Adams, Standard-Union; William Schepp, Citizen.

Out-of-town newspapers were represented by the following:

Baltimore:—Elmer D. Free, American; Jerome J. Reese, News; Avery McBee, automobile editor, and Herbert L. Carpenter and Harry Willis, advertising department, Sun.

Boston:—Frank C. Brown, Advertiser; John Dempsey, Herald; A. H. Marchant, advertising manager, and John Kerrison, automobile editor, Post; Charles F. Marden and Ralph Sadler, Transcript.

Chicago:—M. C. Meigs and Allen Rankin, Evening American; John G. Galbraith, Herald and Examiner; C. T. Lemon and E. Walcott, Journal; Rockwell R. Stephens, Daily News; Walter A. Bermingham, Evening Post.

New Orleans: — Raymond Ellison, States.

Philadelphia:—James Graham, John McMurtie and Paul Hawke, Bulletin; William G. Fontaine, North American; C. H. Fehling, Record.

St. Louis:—George Whitmarsh, Star; Payne, Burns & Smith, Times; Wilson Condict, Globe-Democrat.

NAVAL RADIO FOR PRESS AGAIN BEFORE HOUSE

By J. Bart Campbell
Washington Correspondent of EDITOR & PUBLISHER

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 8—(By Telephone)—Transmission of press matter by naval radio is authorized up to January 1, 1927, by the Free bill, reported today by the House Committee on Merchant Marine. The present law's authorization of such privileges for newspapers and press associations expires June 1, 1925.

The chief intent of the laws, present and proposed, is to provide additional facilities for transmission across the Pacific Ocean and extension of the present time limit has been favored by the news organizations most interested in such traffic. Representative Free, after canvassing both Houses of Congress expressed confidence that the bill will be passed at this session.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

More Herald Expeditions

Much pleased with the remarkable success of his representatives, Stanley and MacGahan, in heading expeditions into various parts of the world, and with money pouring into the coffers of the Herald, practically without a rival, the junior Bennett kept both of these intrepid correspondents busy. MacGahan was sent to join the Russian invaders of Khiva, in 1873, and played a leading part in his famous "Ride to Khiva," the narrative appearing in book form in 1874. The Czar of Russia conferred upon him the Order of St. Stanislaus, with the additional decoration of knighthood for the distinguished part taken by him in the campaign, and the Herald editorially praised its brave and clever correspondent. He also toured Austria, Poland and the Crimea; and accompanied General Sherman's party to the Caucasus, whence he wrote a series of brilliant letters.

In December, 1874, MacGahan for the Herald, and Buckland for the New York Times, were sent to Spain, to report the progress of the campaign of Don Carlos, in his effort to seize the throne. They were objects of suspicion by the Government from the start and were finally arrested.

"I had been arrested," said MacGahan, "too many times during my career as correspondent to take the matter so much to heart as did poor Buckland, who lost his appetite for dinner, and threw himself on his bed instead." After many adventures they managed to escape from Spain.

Stanley in 1874 had been sent by Mr. Bennett to accompany Sir Garnet Wolseley's expedition to Ashanti, and on returning, first heard of Dr. Livingstone's death and was in time to attend his funeral in Westminster Abbey, London. Standing by the open grave he formed a resolution to take up the work which Livingstone had been unable to accomplish, and on Aug. 16, 1874, he left England for Zanzibar to head an expedition to explore the interior of Central Africa, jointly financed by Mr. Edward L. Lawson of the London Telegraph, and Mr. Bennett. He had 355 persons in his company, and reached Lake Victoria Nyanza on February 27, 1875, after repeated attacks by hostile natives; met King M'Tesa of Uganda; discovered the principal sources of the Nile River; mapped Lakes Victoria Nyanza and Tanganyika; found that the Lualaba flowed into the Congo River, and proved the existence of a magnificent equatorial waterway through the very heart of Africa.

Bennett Clashes With Bergh Over Pigeon Shooting

Young Bennett was a good pigeon shot, and he and his friends continued the alleged "cruel sport," after Henry Bergh, of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals had secured the passage of an ordinance prohibiting it within the city limits. On Jan. 12, 1872, Mr. Bennett and his friend, W. P. Douglas, engaged in a great pigeon shooting match on Jerome Park grounds, and in spite of the threats of Henry Bergh, "this insane interrupter of legitimate sport," according to the Herald. His agent was refused admittance through the locked gates, and a crowd of interested spectators saw Douglas win the match.

The Herald's defence of the sport and the persistent violation of the law continued for a long time thereafter. Mr. Bennett donated a valuable silver cup for the championship, and as late as December, 1874, the cup was shot for by a large number of entrants, the match being held outside the city limits, "as a precautionary measure."

In the 'sixties the Four-in-Hand Club was organized and its first quarters were located in a building specially constructed for it on the Bennett estate, part of the ramparts of old Fort Washington being demolished to secure a suitable site.

Coaching was a rich man's pastime and its membership was limited to a few wealthy young society men, among whom was Mr. James Gordon Bennett, Jr. The Club's zenith of prosperity was reached in the fall of 1875, when the members drove their coaches filled with their fashionable friends from Madison Square to the Jerome Park races.

As an active participant in all manly sports Mr. Bennett in 1876 introduced polo into the United States, after having seen the game played by military officers in England. With cash capital at command he brought up a lot of ponies from Texas, organized the Westchester Polo Club, and the members first began practice in Dickel's Riding Academy, then located at Fifth Avenue and 39th street.

The Herald's Famous Hoax

On Monday, Nov. 9, 1874, the Herald published what was undoubtedly the most daring hoax ever perpetrated.

It created a great sensation, and for a time caused a great scare throughout the community. Based on the supposed escape of the wi beasts from the Central Park Menagerie, the fictitious story filled a entire page, with such lurid headlines as these:

"AWFUL CALAMITY.
"THE WILD ANIMALS BROKEN LOOSE FROM CENTRA PARK.
"TERRIBLE SCENES OF MUTILATION.
"A SHOCKING SABBATH CARNIVAL OF DEATH.
"AWFUL COMBATS BETWEEN THE BEASTS AND TH CITIZENS.
"GOVERNOR DIX SHOOTS THE BENGAL TIGER.
"ETC."

The introductory paragraphs were cleverly worded in a way to im press the reader with the actuality of the succeeding highly sensationa and harrowing details of the terrible things that were supposed to hav happened.

"Another Sunday of horror has been added to those already memorable in ou city annals. The sad and appalling calamity of yesterday is another illustration o the unforeseen perils to which large communities are exposed.

"Writing at a late hour, without full details of the horrors of the evening an night, and with a necessarily incomplete list of the killed and wounded, we ma pause for a moment in the widespread sorrow of the hour to cast a hasty glance ove what will be felt as a great calamity."

The supposed outbreak of the animals was due to Chis. Anderson one of the most popular keepers, having poked the rhinoceros in the eye which enraged it so, that in its desperate attempt to get at him, it brok down the walls of its cage, sprang out, killed him, and finally let loos all the other animals, which killed several more keepers, and then ra through the Park and streets, attacking people, with the result that ther "is a list of 49 killed, of which only 27 bodies have been identified, besid nearly 200 others who were mutilated, trampled and injured in variou ways."

The narrative is one of a high order of merit, and as a work o fiction very interesting, and in part, extremely amusing, for the write had the audacity to bring in the names of the Governor of the State, th Mayor and other prominent citizens as having been involved in the tragi happenings.

Recorder Hackett must have laughed heartily when he learned fron the Herald, that he had "shot the polar bear after it had killed tw keepers!" While the aged Governor of the State, John A. Dix, mus have been agreeably surprised to learn that he "bravely shot the Benga tiger. This was an extremely fortunate occurrence," the writer wen on to say, "for the Governor is a splendid shot, and was in town in th nick of time. This gallant act will be remembreed by the citizens o New York, although it is now too late to mark that esteem at the ballo box. It may be mentioned as a fortunate occurrence, that a minute afte the death of the tiger, Archbishop McCloskey's carriage drove up. A fright or injury to the horses by the ferocious beast might have ende the career of the aged prelate. Hearty congratulations were exchange between the Governor and the Archbishop."

Hon. Richard Schell, (a very prominent and dignified citizen) i a supposed interview, was made to tell a most sensational story of his escape from the enraged tiger by hiding in the bushes in Central Park and in attempting to escape to a place of safety, was later chased by a bear down Fifth avenue. Mr. Schell saved his life by jumping into an area way, while the bear ran on, finally entering St. Thomas' Church causing a terrible panic, and where it seized an aged lady. The screams of the women worshippers were fortunately heard by a guest in the Windsor Hotel, who ran over with a loaded rifle and shot Bruin in the aisle!

A supposed Proclamation of warning to the citizens from the Mayor was inserted, but the editor of the Herald wisely refrained from appending His Honor's name to it.

At the end of the long story was a short paragraph stating that it was "a fabrication," and had been written as a warning that such a catastrophe might occur any day.

The Herald followed up the hoax with editorials warning of the "manifest danger" in maintaining the Menagerie where it was and urging the creation of "a true Zoological Garden," with all necessary safeguards. This, the original advocacy of such an institution, led up to the organization of the New York Zoological Society, with its great collection of animals as now located in Bronx Park.

(To Be Continued Next Week)

EQUAL IN CIRCULATION TO FIVE STANDARD MONTHLY MAGAZINES

The Magazine Section of the Sunday edition of The New York Times, with a net paid sale of more than 600,000 copies, has a circulation as large as the combined circulation of five of the standard monthly magazines.

THE NEW YORK TIMES MAGAZINE SECTION		FIVE STANDARD MONTHLY MAGAZINES
Single Issue	600,000	Single Issue *total of five	599,935
		1st Magazine	195,556
		2nd Magazine	121,987
		3rd Magazine	116,523
		4th Magazine	94,455
		5th Magazine	71,414
			599,935

The Magazine Section of The Times is close to the news. It does not publish fiction; its articles are related to important current events, political, economic and business, and it is printed so nearly to the date of issue that the last word on any subject can be discussed. Like a monthly magazine, the Magazine Section of The New York Times is preserved for leisurely reading, giving advertisements permanency of value and a long life.

The rate for advertising in the Magazine Section of The New York Times is $1.00 per line, equal to one cent per line for each 6,000 of circulation. The cost of a full page is $1030. The Magazine Section is printed by the rotogravure process and a well designed advertisement utilizing photographs or illustrations can be made a strikingly beautiful announcement and a profitable investment.

The New York Times

1924 RECORDS

Circulation—net Sales	140,640,653	Paper Consumed	143,012,090 pounds
Circulation—net Average daily and Sunday	384,264	Ink Consumed	2,652,382 pounds
		Advertising Space	*26,283,924 lines

 The sum received for advertising space in The New York Times is much greater than that received by any other New York newspaper—probably more than any other newspaper in the world.*

TEACHERS DRAW UP EDUCATIONAL STANDARDS FOR PRESS STUDENTS

Declare Adequate Preparation Necessary for Journalism in Outlining College Course of Study—Affirm Power of Press

DECLARING "adequate preparation" is as necessary for all persons desiring to engage in journalism as it is for those intending to practice law or medicine, the Association of Schools and departments of Journalism and the American Association of Teachers of Journalism unanimously adopted a set of general principles and standards of education for newspaper men at their joint annual convention in Chicago last week.

The principles and standards were passed upon recommendation of the Council of Education for Journalism, consisting of Willard G. Bleyer, University of Wisconsin, chairman; Eric W. Allen, University of Oregon; John W. Cunliffe, Columbia University; Nelson A. Crawford, Kansas State Agricultural College; and Joseph S. Myers, Ohio State University. They follow:

I. General Principles

Because of the importance of newspapers and periodicals to society and government, adequate preparation is as necessary for all persons who desire to engage in journalism as it is for those who intend to practice law or medicine. No other profession has a more vital relation to the welfare of society and to the success of democratic government than has journalism. No other profession requires a wider range of knowledge or greater ability to apply such knowledge to current events and problems than does journalism. Adequate preparation for journalism, therefore, must be sufficiently broad in scope to familiarize the future journalist with the important fields of knowledge, and sufficiently practical to show the application of the knowledge to the practice of journalism.

Under present conditions the best means of acquiring this essential knowledge and of learning its application is a four-year course of study in a college or university, including such subjects as history, economics, government and politics, sociology, literature, natural science, and psychology or philosophy. Not merely acquisition of knowledge but encouragement to independent thinking and fearless search for truth should be the purpose of all courses in preparation for the profession of journalism. Instruction in all subjects in the curriculum should be vitalized by research and contact with current developments, on the part of instructors.

Preparation for journalism should also include instruction and practice in journalistic technique, and consideration of the responsibility of the journalist to society. All instruction in journalism should be based on a recognition of the function of the newspaper and other publications in society and government, and should not be concerned merely with developing proficiency in journalistic technique. The aims and methods of instruction should not be those of a trade school but should be of the same standard as those of other professional schools and colleges.

Since a liberal education is recognized as essential for the journalist, the amount of instruction in journalistic technique should not constitute so large a part of the four-year course as to exclude courses in other essential subjects. Although courses in the technique of journalism will naturally be concentrated in the last two years of the four-year course, students in these years should also have the opportunity to pursue advanced work in such subjects as economics, government and politics, history, and literature.

In all courses in journalism, as in courses in other subjects, instruction should be given by teachers with adequate preparation. The requirements for instructors in journalism should include at least a bachelor's degree as well as practical journalistic experience. Moreover, instruction in journalism should be vitalized by contact with current journalistic conditions, on the part of instructors.

II. Standards of Education for Journalism

On the basis of these general principles which should determine standards of education for journalism, the following specific requirements are considered essential.

1. That instruction in preparation for journalism shall be organized as a separate academic unit; e. g.: a department, course, or school of journalism; with a dean, director, or professor at its head.

2. That the successful completion of four years' work in a college or university, consisting of not less than 120 semester units, be required for a bachelor's degree in the department, course, or school of journalism.

3. That the form of the bachelor's degree granted shall indicate that the students upon whom it is conferred have successfully completed the requirements for a degree in journalism; e. g., bachelor of arts in journalism; bachelor of science, course in journalism; bachelor of journalism.

4. That the four-year course required for the bachelor's degree in journalism shall normally include history, economics, government and politics, sociology, literature, natural science, and psychology or philosophy. A reading knowledge of at least one modern foreign language is desirable.

5. That the courses offered in journalism shall afford instruction and practice in reporting, copy reading, editorial writing, and the writing of special articles; and instruction in the history of journalism, and the principles, or ethics, of journalism (with particular reference to the duties and responsibilities of the journalist to society), and the law of the press.

6. That in courses in journalism requiring writing and copy reading, the students shall have the advantage of constant individual criticism of the work by competent instructors, not by students or other assistants; and that as far as possible students shall be given the benefit to be derived from seeing their work in print.

7. That in courses in newspaper reporting students shall be required to cover regular news assignments, and that they shall have the benefit of constant criticism by competent instructors, not students or assistants, on the manner in which they handle such assignments.

8. That students shall not receive academic credit for practical journalistic work unless such work is done under the immediate supervision of an instructor in journalism as a part of a regular college course in journalism.

9. That the number of instructors in journalism shall be sufficient to insure careful attention to the individual needs of the students in the instructor's courses, and that the amount of class and laboratory work required of each instructor shall not exceed that of instructors in similar departments, such as that of English composition.

10. That instructors in journalism shall be encouraged to carry on research work and to contribute to the literature of the subject.

11. That a collection of the standard books on various phases of journalism shall be available for the use of students, and that students be required to familiarize themselves with these books. Sufficient laboratory equipment shall also be available for use in connection with instruction in the technique of journalism.

12. That the standards of admission to and graduation from the department, course, or school of journalism shall be sufficiently high to prevent students lacking in knowledge, ability, and proficiency from obtaining a degree in journalism.

SUNDAY EDITION LAUNCHED

Miami News Print 180-Page Initial Edition from New Plant

The first issue of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News new Sunday edition appeared Jan. 3, coincident with occupancy by the News of its new 14-story home on Bayshore Drive, overlooking Biscayne Bay and Miami Beach. The issue consisted of 180 pages, including the Florida East Coast Development Section of 96 pages. James M. Cox, former governor of Ohio and publisher of newspapers in Ohio, is proprietor of the News.

Entirely new equipment was installed in the plant, including a battery of typesetting machines and a Hoe press.

Howard Burba, Sunday editor of the Dayton (O.) News, another Cox newspaper, went to Florida to assist in launching the new Sunday edition. He expects to return to the central office of the Cox publications early in February.

Trade Mark FLEXIDEAL Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

THE IMPORTED DRY MAT OF SUPERIOR QUALITY

Write for Free Samples

FLEXIDEAL COMPANY, Inc.

15 WILLIAM STREET NEW YORK CITY

Let the Times-Star help you make 1925 a Prosperous Year

In making up your advertising schedule for 1925 do not overlook the Cincinnati market with its three-quarters of a million population and the Times-Star that offers you the key to this market. It is doubtful whether there is, in the United States, a city of comparable size in which the entire worth-while purchasing public can be reached and influenced by one newspaper with as great efficiency and at as little cost as Cincinnati is reached and influenced by the Times-Star.

There are four daily newspapers in Cincinnati, each having a recognized sphere of influence. Yet the influence of the Times-Star extends to every native, literate, white family in the metropolitan area of the city. The local circulation of the Times-Star exceeds that of the second evening newspaper by more than 33,000 copies daily and leads that of the principal morning newspaper by more than 70,000 copies. In advertising parlance, Times-Star coverage of the Cincinnati market is "blanket" coverage, and its out-of-town circulation is "velvet."

Year by year the value of Times-Star display advertising has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of local merchants and of national advertisers. For the past seventeen years this great home newspaper has carried more display advertising, both local and national, than any other medium in this market. One hundred and sixty national advertisers use the Times-Star exclusively in this field.

Analytical market information applicable to your proposition will be furnished on request.

CINCINNATI TIMES STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

—nobody can replace BRIGGS in Chicago

Ask anybody in Chicago!

Briggs appears daily and Sunday in
The Chicago Herald Examiner

The New York
Herald Tribune
Syndicate

AMENDED MOSES POSTAL BILL NOT LIKELY TO PASS CONGRESS

Expected to Be Lost in Legislative Jam—Upholding of President's Salary Bill Veto Put Battle in Future

By J. BART. CAMPBELL
(Washington Correspondent, Editor & Publisher)

THE make-shift, stop-gap legislation embodied in the so-called postal wage-and-rate increase bill reported to the Senate by Senator Moses, is expected to be lost in the legislative jam in which Congress is already caught.

With a little more than seven weeks of the present "short session" left, the belief is general in both branches of Congress that the upholding of the President's veto of the Edge-Kelly postal wage-increase bill Tuesday in the Senate threw the whole complicated question involved into a rather indefinite future.

Spokesmen for the publishing interests voiced warnings, however, to opponents of the postal rate increases, as proposed by the Moses substitute for the Sterling bill, should not relax vigilance if only because representatives of organized labor are known to be now engaged in demanding its passage of Senators to whom it furnished an excuse for voting to sustain the President's veto.

The fact the President approved the postal rate increases carried by the Moses substitute is regarded as foreshadowing the battle the publishing interests still have before them, not only in the present, but in the next Congress.

Senator Moses told Editor & Publisher this week he intended to press his bill at the earliest opportunity, but he conceded a week or two at least might elapse before the Senate amid the rush of appropriations bills would get down to it.

Representative Clyde Kelly, of Pennsylvania, father of the postal wage increase movement, said he was equally determined something final and definite should be done with the bill at this session, and he intended to fight until the close of the session to prevent it being submerged by other legislation.

Admitted by Senator Moses to be only a "temporary expedient," the measure is generally regarded by political observers here as having served its purposes in stiffening certain Senators into voting to sustain the President's veto. Interest in the situation is therefore likely to wane rapidly unless the representatives of the postal employes' organizations are able to keep it alive, and even some of them are apparently willing to grant that the issue involved will probably be the heritage of the next Congress, instead of being disposed of by the present one.

In discussing the bill in the Senate, Senator Moses had this to say in part about the manner in which it would affect second class rates:

"Beginning with section 203, second-class matter, which comprises the newspapers and the periodicals of the country—the committee found itself immediately in an ocean of statistics and in a gale of assertion and counter-assertion from which it was most difficult to extract the complete truth. The question of second-class rates is probably the most complex of all the postal problems. Second-class mail matter is privileged mail matter, and has been so regarded from the establishment of the Post Office Department, when a policy was set up of preferential treatment, based upon the theory that the dissemination of information in a democracy is a proper function of government and one to which government assistance could be properly given. Accordingly newspapers, periodicals, and printed matter generally have received preferential treatment as to rates in the whole Postal Service from its inception down to the present day. As this system of preferential treatment has gone on, however, there has grown up about it and within it a series of what might be termed excesses, possibly—certainly they may be properly termed extensions—and I have chosen occasionally in the meetings of the committee to refer to them as embroideries upon the main fabric of the preferential system of printed matter.

"In other words, although the simple basis of second-class rates is that the dissemination of information is a proper activity for the Government to engage in, we find in the postal rates as they exist today certain subdivisions of information to be disseminated which receive special, preferential treatment, and the subcommittee concluded, and I think properly, that it was not within the proper function of a committee of Congress, or of Congress itself, to say that the reading matter contained in one newspaper or periodical was superior in its informative value to the reading matter contained in some other newspaper or periodical.

"Accordingly, the committee proposes to return to the simple practice of the Post Office Department at the beginning, and to set a flat rate of 1¼ cents per pound for the circulation of the reading portion of all newspapers and periodicals. This is the rate now enjoyed by the special, preferential class, which includes the religious and scientific publications, and also those periodicals which are published by organizations which exist without intent of individual profit. Of these periodicals there are many in the coutnry. Most of them are making money. Most of them pay liberal salaries to those who conduct them, and while it is true that they do not exist for profit in the sense that dividends are paid to individual stockholders, nevertheless it cannot be successfully asserted that they do not exist for the individual profit of a large number of persons.

"The scientific, religious, and educational publications, which have the special preference, stand exactly where they were. The rate on reading matter in all other periodicals is reduced to the rate carried by the special, preferred class, because the committee did not think it was a proper function for Congress to undertake to differentiate between the educational value of reading matter in one class of publications and the reading matter in another class."

In the opinion of one influential administration Senator, who usually knows what he is talking about, the much-amended postal wage-and-rate increase bill reported by Senator Moses, "hasn't a Chinaman's chance" of passage.

This Senator, who is no other than David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, voted to override the President's veto of the Edge-Kelly postal wage increase bill for which

(Continued on page 28)

FOR the calendar year 1924, the Baltimore Sun (morning, evening and Sunday issues) carried

32,786,478

agate lines of paid advertising, a gain of 694,180 agate lines over the year 1923.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

NEW YORK WORLD GIVES BONUS TO STAFF

For the first time in several years, the New York World presented employes with a full week's salary as a Christmas bonus, it was announced this week by J. F. Bresnahan, business manager.

The amount distributed to members of the business and editorial staffs totaled more than $60,000, Mr. Bresnahan said.

CONFER ON A. B. C. LAWS IN NEW YORK

Committee of Publishers Will Discuss Disputed Points With Directors at Next Board Meeting in New York

A conference was held Wednesday and Thursday this week in New York between representatives of the Audit Bureau of Circulations and New York City and Brooklyn members, at which certain interpretations of the by-laws, rules and regulations of the A. B. C. were discussed.

O. C. Harn, A. B. C. president; Stanley Clague, the managing director; E. W. Chandler, chief auditor, and W. F. Hoffman, of the New York office, were present for the bureau.

Every New York and Brooklyn member was represented.

It was not officially disclosed just what the points at issue were, but Editor & Publisher learned from responsible sources that the right of access for bureau auditors to certain company books, which in the opinion of some of the publishers had no bearing upon circulation auditing, was in dispute.

At the close of the second day's session a statement was issued to Editor & Publisher signed by Mr. Harn, Mr. Clague and Fred A. Walker, of the Munsey publications, which simply declared that "certain interpretations of rules and regulations" were under discussion and that a committee of five newspaper publishers had been appointed to further confer with the management and the directors of the bureau at a future meeting to be held in New York.

The members of this committee are: F. Bresnahan, business manager of the New York World, chairman; How Davis, business manager of the New York Herald Tribune; Fred A. Walker of the Munsey publications; J. C. Dayton, publisher of the New York Journal, and Edwin G. Martin, business manager of the Brooklyn Eagle.

SHAPIRO NOW SOLE OWNER

Buys Remainng Stock in New York Day, Yiddish Daily

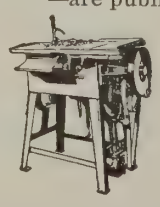
The New York Day, national Yiddish daily, is now the sole property of Da Shapiro, one of the founders of the pap following his recent purchase of the ou standing half interest in the daily.

The price was $306,000, according to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, whi announced the sale.

William Edlin remains editor-in-chi Irving Altman is the new business ma ager.

MOST of the far-sighted publishers who were quick to recognize the economies of the Associated Press in its infancy have again shown their alertness by obtaining the exclusive rights in their respective cities to the Consolidated Press—the first service designed to avoid duplication and to furnish instead a distinct supplement to "spot" news reports.

The Consolidated Press Assn.



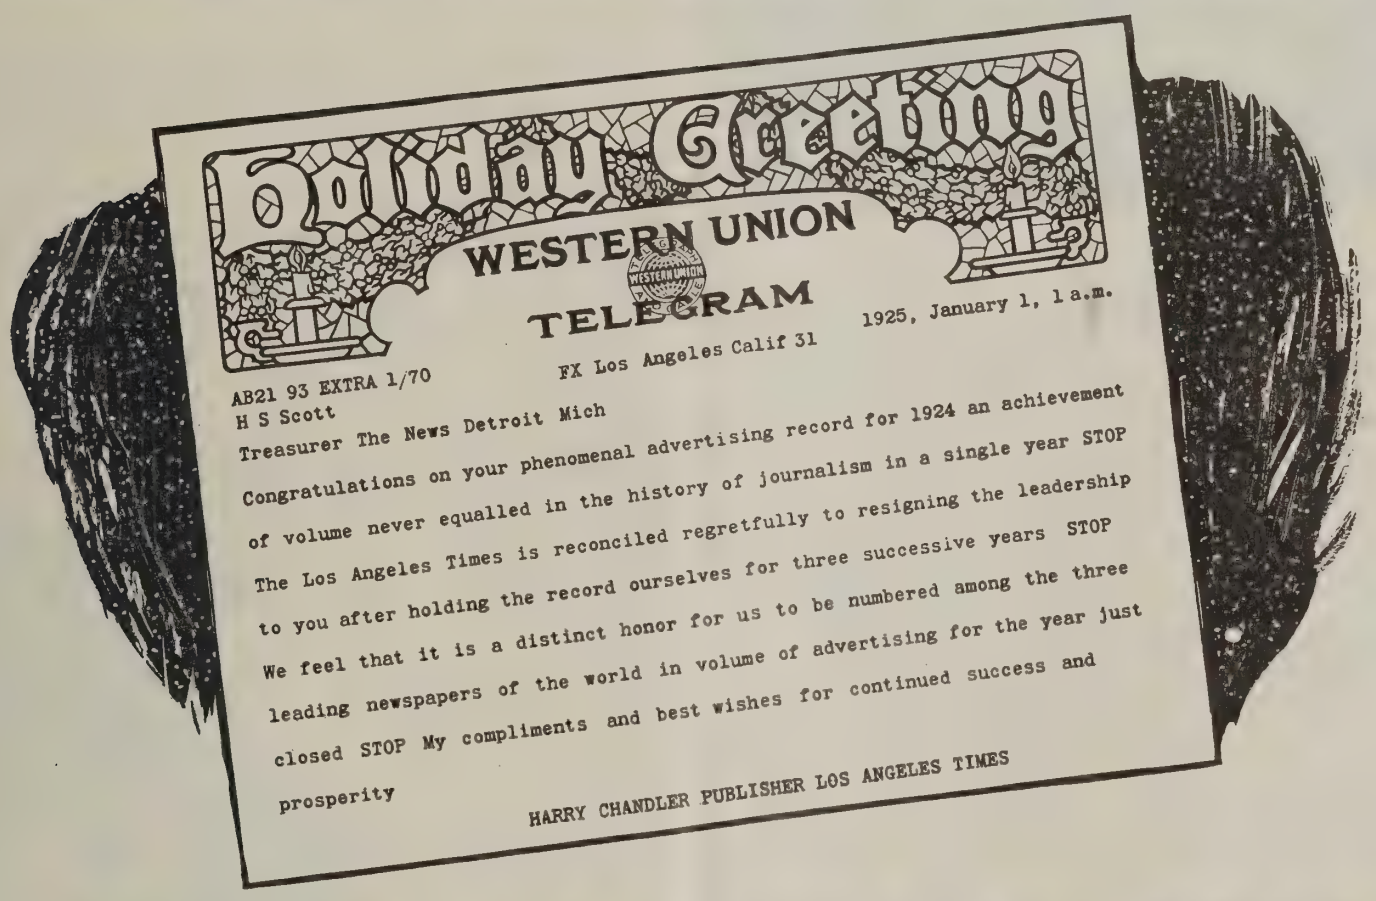
Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

From South Africa
Comes this Enthusiastic Letter

"YOU will be interested to know that we have given the Ludlow a thorough test extending over a period of twelve months, and we wish to express our sincere appreciation of the excellent qualities of the system. Its flexibility and simplicity have appealed to us most. We appreciated the economy of operation; the quality of its product and the completeness with which it meets all requirements in every day use. We have practically scrapped our type equipment of 1,000 lbs. since your all-slug equipment has been installed."

J. Rosslee—Works Manager
The Friend Newspapers Ltd.,
Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, South Africa.

NOTE: 7,800 miles away from the Ludlow factory and repair parts this simple, fast, versatile Ludlow can be relied upon to handle a rush of work without fear of a breakdown. Three South African Magazines—The Farmer's Weekly, The Homestead, Motor Weekly, and also The Friend, a weekly newspaper—are published by The Friend Newspapers, Ltd.



Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Avenue
CHICAGO
San Francisco Hearst Bldg.
New York World Bldg.

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

Leadership!

Detroit News Again First In America
Los Angeles Times Sends Congratulations

Holiday Greeting

WESTERN UNION

TELEGRAM

1925, January 1, 1 a.m.

AB21 93 EXTRA 1/70 FX Los Angeles Calif 31

H S Scott

Treasurer The News Detroit Mich

Congratulations on your phenomenal advertising record for 1924 an achievement of volume never equalled in the history of journalism in a single year STOP The Los Angeles Times is reconciled regretfully to resigning the leadership to you after holding the record ourselves for three successive years STOP We feel that it is a distinct honor for us to be numbered among the three leading newspapers of the world in volume of advertising for the year just closed STOP My compliments and best wishes for continued success and prosperity

HARRY CHANDLER PUBLISHER LOS ANGELES TIMES

30,604,518 Lines In 1924
Greatest Total In History of Journalism

The telegram above has been received from the Los Angeles Times after printing the advertising lineage figures carried by the leading newspapers of America on the first page of its New Year's Day Edition—an annual feature of this paper.

The Detroit News is shown to be the largest carrier of advertising in America, its lineage for the year being 30,604,518. The Chicago Tribune is second with 28,181,121. Los Angeles Times, third, with 27,893,726 lines. New York Times, fourth, with 26,283,924 lines. Washington Star, fifth, with 25,313,753 lines. Baltimore Sun, sixth, with 24,480,-275 lines, and Pittsburgh Press, seventh, with 23,-469,516.

Thoroughness of coverage among all classes of Detroit's population, plus the remarkable prosperity which this field has enjoyed for years has made The Detroit News the favored medium of national, local and classified advertisers. And this is in turn responsible for its leadership of all America in total advertising again during 1924, and for its remarkable volume which for the first time in advertising history has reached over 30,000,000 lines.

The Detroit News

"Always In the Lead"

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

"Have a system!"—RAYMOND H. SCHOOLEY

"SYSTEM" is the word, the idea and the action behind the rise of Raymond H. Schooley, who was recently promoted to the position of advertising manager of the New York Herald Tribune, of which newspaper, Mrs. Ogden Reid, wife of the publisher, is advertising director.

"To do any effective work on the advertising staff of a newspaper," Mr. Schooley said in an interview, "you must have a system. Otherwise, you will be conducting a stern chase all the time. You will be always running to catch the car instead of waiting at the corner for it to come to you.

"The reason why the smaller newspapers balk at planning an advertising system is that it requires from one to two years to obtain comparative records of all newspapers, the basis of any plan or system.

"They want business in their papers right away.

"But sure success comes only from planning ahead into the future, making sure that every piece of advertising is followed up, that there are no loose ends."

Mr. Schooley doesn't like to talk about himself. He explains his rise as due to "a lot of luck, and getting the breaks," but from his chief and associates on the Herald Tribune one learns that it was the systematic way he always did his work, when financial advertising manager that led to his recent promotion.

Fifteen years ago at 25, he left the United States Navy, in which he had served from 1905 to 1909, and started newspaper work. In the navy he had sailed with the fleet sent around the world by President Roosevelt, traveling 47,000 miles and visiting 30 different countries.

The change from this life was abrupt. Getting work on the New York American at $10 a week, Mr. Schooley found his daily routine consisted of soliciting "furnished room" want ads. Many doors were slammed in his face, when some sweet-tempered landlady, thinking the man at her door a prospective boarder, discovered he was trying to get money from her.

But Mr. Schooley developed diplomacy and persistence. For 10 years he stayed on the American, his $10 pay check growing gradually larger.

When war broke out, he re-joined the navy, serving from 1917 until the Armistice as an ensign. He returned to the American where he was given a position in the financial advertising department.

Five years ago he joined the staff of what was then the New York Tribune as a solicitor for financial advertising. He proved successful in this field and was made manager of two classifications, heading real estate, as well as financial. His next step was to be made manager of the local advertising staff in 1923. Later he was made assistant to U. S. G. Welsh, advertising manager, his specific duties being to take charge of the local and national staffs. The resignation of Mr. Welsh, effective Jan. 1, left the position of advertising manager to be filled, and Mr. Schooley was chosen for the job.

Adds Radio Page

The Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune, has added a radio page to its Saturday editions. C. R. Maybin is radio editor.

Address National Commission

G. Lynn Sumner, advertising director of the International Correspondence Schools, and president of the Association of National Advertisers, will address the meeting of the National Advertising Commission to be held in Detroit, Jan. 29-30. E. T. Meredith, Des Moines, Ia., publisher of Successful Farming and other publications, will also speak. The National Commission plans to meet jointly with the Financial Advertisers Association and the Fifth District of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Large Church Lineage

What T. F. Mulhern, classified advertising manager of the Brooklyn Eagle believes is a new record in church advertising was achieved in the Eagle's Christmas Church Section, Dec. 20, containing 15,000 lines. This section was sold by Edwin F. Skillman, religious advertising manager, under Mr. Mulhern's direction.

Daily Dines Staff

The Buffalo Evening News held a gridiron dinner Jan. 3, for present and former members of the staff, in the Hotel Buffalo.

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED

SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS. MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK.

Standard Gravure Corporation

LOUISVILLE, KY.

1893 SERVICE 1924

as visualized by

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

SERVICE TO PUBLISHERS, as we see it, means much more than merely getting business. That, of course, is important, but the caring for it, keeping it giving satisfaction, preventing mistakes that work harm, all enter into the service we render.

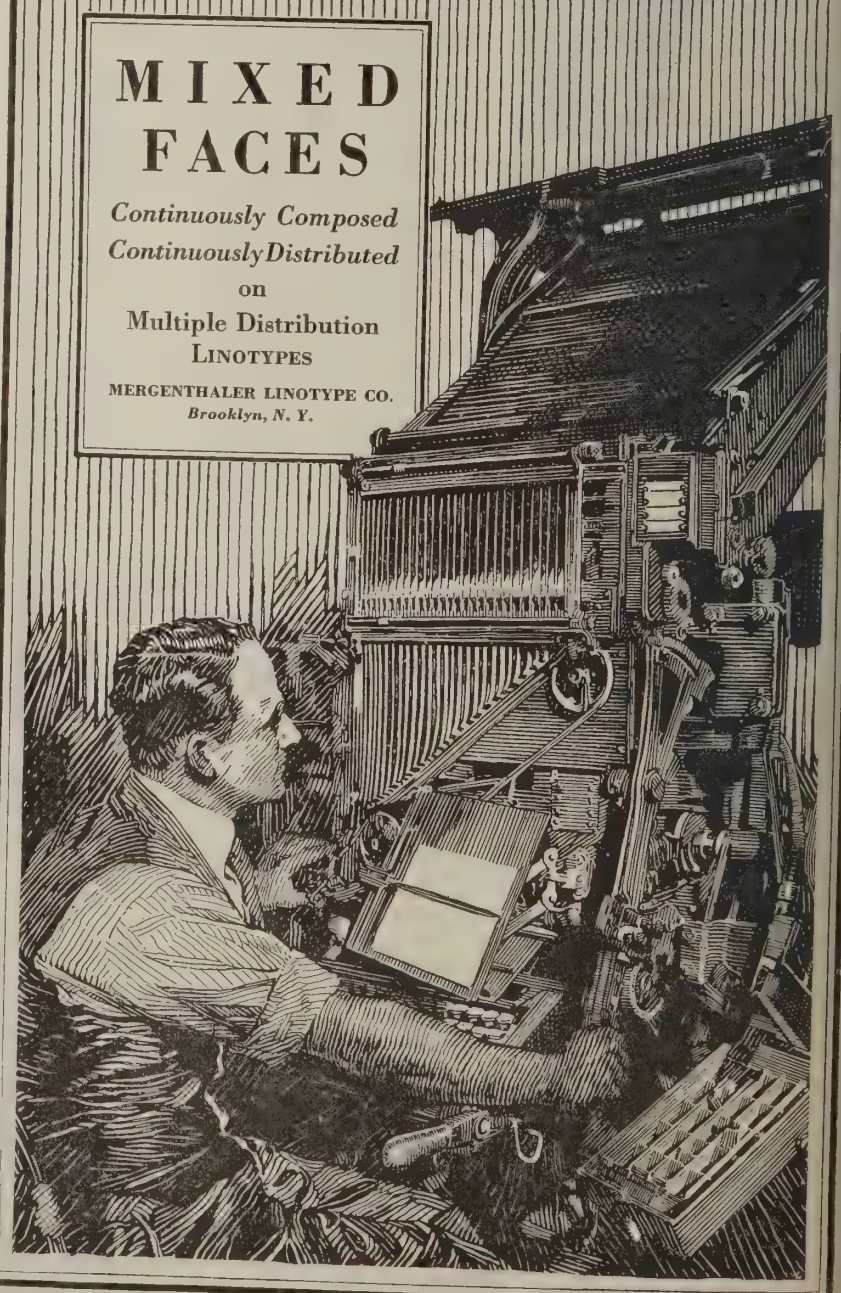
There are hundreds of ways, some of them seemingly unimportant, others of supreme importance, where we find chances to do things for publishers which increase revenue and make standing with advertisers — standing that counts.

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

Advertising Representatives of Newspapers

2 West 45th St. New York — 900 Mallers Bldg. Chicago

401 Van Nuys Bldg. Los Angeles



Holbrook Bldg., 58 Sutter St. San Francisco, Calif.

© TRADE LINOTYPE MARK ©

MIXED FACES

Continuously Composed Continuously Distributed
on Multiple Distribution
LINOTYPES

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE CO.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

This advertisement composed entirely on the LINOTYPE in the Bodoni Series

Globe the Premier Newspaper in Boston

For More Than 30 Years the Leader in Boston Advertising Field

During 1924 the Boston Globe Printed 14,328,068 Lines of Advertising Leading the Second Boston Paper by 1,768,714 Lines of Advertising

1924 was another Boston Globe year. The Boston Globe, during the 12 months ending December 31, printed 14,328,068 lines of advertising, leading all other Boston papers, making the 31st consecutive year in which the Globe has been in first place in the advertising field.

The total number of lines of advertising printed in the Boston papers, having Daily and Sunday editions, during 1924, was:

Boston Globe, 14,328,068

Second Paper, 12,559,354 Third Paper, 11,599,426

Please note that the Boston Globe does not publish special pages or special editions

Boston Globe First in Department Store Advertising, in Automobile and Accessory Advertising, in Want and Classified Advertising, and in Real Estate Advertising.

The figures printed below are of great interest to advertisers. During 1924 the total advertising printed in papers having Daily and Sunday editions under the various classifications was:

Department Store Advertising	Automoblie and Accessory Advertising
Boston Globe . . 3,944,338 Lines	Boston Globe . . 1,670,979 Lines
Second Paper . . 2,879,620 Lines	Second Paper . . 1,099,316 Lines
Third Paper . . 2,164,953 Lines	Third Paper . . . . 761,673 Lines

Want and Classified Advertising	Real Estate Advertising
Boston Globe . . . 534,145 Advts	Boston Globe . . . 115,631 Advts
Second Paper . . . 160,954 Advts	Second Paper . . . . 32,565 Advts
Third Paper . . . . . 65,460 Advts	Third Paper . . . . . 7,366 Advts

The acid test of the advertising value of a newspaper is the number of individual advertisers who use its columns. In Boston, the Globe carries many thousands more individual advertisements each week than any other Boston paper.

Boston Globe's Remarkable Showing In Department Store Advertising

The growth of the Boston Globe's business in the past few years has been remarkable. In some fields it has been more noticeable than in others. In the Department Store field the Globe has taken the lead in total Department Store advertising printed, both in the Daily and Sunday editions. The figures for 1924:

Boston Daily Globe . . 2,508,047 Lines
Second Paper . . . . . 2,234,747 Lines
Globe's Lead . . . . . 273,300 Lines

Boston Sunday Globe 1,436,291 Lines
Second Paper . . . . . 644,873 Lines
Globe's Lead . . . . . 791,418 Lines

Daily and Sunday Globe . . 3,944,338 Lines
Second Paper . . . . . 2,879,620 Lines
Globe's Lead . . . . . 1,064,718 Lines

For information about the Boston Globe, ask the local advertiser, the man on the ground, who knows where he gets the best results. The Department Store advertisers—the Want and Classified advertisers—in Boston use the Daily and Sunday Globe.

Boston Globe First in Total Number of Lines of Advertising Printed—First in Results to Advertisers!

Make the Globe First on your Boston List

BRITAIN PUSHING "ON TO TEXAS" PLANS

Thomas McDougall, British Advertising Man Here On Special Mission Brings Report of Overseas A.A.C.W. Activities

News from British advertising circles was brought to this country this week by Thomas McDougall, governing director of Thomas McDougall Limited, London advertising firm, and a director of Advertising World, English magazine, who arrived on the Aquitania on a special mission for Lord Burnham of the London Telegraph. He plans to remain here until Feb. 21. In addition to New York, he will visit Chicago, Philadelphia, and Houston, Tex.

Creation of a big delegation from Britain to Houston for the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World's annual convention next May was discussed at a recent meeting of District 14, the English branch of the A. A. C. W., he said. It was resolved then to circularize all English clubs, with a view to learning names of prospective delegates to the meeting. Formation of an On-to-Houston committee is now under way.

"With the New Year," Mr. McDougall said," District 14 began operation of a Vigilance Committee, Propaganda Committee, and a Speaker's Bureau. We are planning to hold a convention in England, probably in Harrowgate next July."

Mr. McDougall told of presentation Dec. 22, to W. M. Teasdale, advertising manager of the London and Northeastern Railway, of a large engraved memorial of the sight-seeing trip taken by American delegates to Edinburgh last year. The memorial contains the signatures of all the American delegates who made the journey.

The presentation was made J. Akerman of the London Times on behalf of the Americans. Those present were T. B. Lawrence, chairman of T. B. Lawrence Limited, advertising contractors; George Scott, London manager of the Glasgow Herald; Ivor Frazer, general manager of the London Morning Post; Capt. R. Crewdson, advertising director of Advertising World; and Mr. McDougall.

Mr. McDougall was guest of honor at a luncheon held Jan. 8, at the Advertising Club of New York attended by many of the 135 New York advertising men who crossed the Atlantic for the London convention.

W. M. Teasdale, advertising manager of the London and Northeastern Railway, on Dec. 22, was presented with a memorial bearing the names of all American advertising men who made the sight-seeing trip from London to Edinburgh last July, following the A. A. C. W. London convention. Reading from left to right in the picture are: T. B. Lawrence, J. Akerman, Ivor Frazer, George Scott, W. M. Teasdale, Captain R. Crewdson and Thomas McDougall.

TEACHING JOURNALISM IN CHINA

American Newspaper Men Head Course in Peking University

Roswell S. Britton, formerly of the New York Times and the London Daily Express, and Vernon Nash, former Missouri newspaper man are conducting a Department of Journalism at Peking University.

Two post-graduates and seven juniors and seniors are enrolled for three courses which were started last fall. For the first year, the two instructors must give the greater part of their time to studying the Pekinese language, in order to adapt their work to the native press. Mr. Britton was born in Shanghai, and speaks the dialect there like a Chinaman but it is no good at Peking.

From the start the Department began compiling a morgue and a detailed directory of the newspapers in China. There are now about 800 native daily papers, mostly outright propagandist sheets. The number of self-controlled paying newspapers can be counted on one set of fingers. There are 24 English-language dailies in China, according to Britton.

Get In Line With the New Year—Something New

Flashlights of Famous People

Face to Face With Colonel Wm. A. Gaston

Banker and Farmer

By Joe Mitchell Chapple

COLONEL GASTON says:
"Farming will be a popular vocation with the coming generation. The prices on farm land in New England are the lowest real estate values in the country comparatively."

"The average yield of corn to the acre in old Massachusetts is more than in Iowa." This was the statement of Colonel William A. Gaston, the farmer, while on his farm nestling in the hills at Barre, Massachusetts. Other distinctions have come to him, but Colonel Gaston has earned his classification as a real dirt farmer in New England.

When automobiles put horses off the road, Colonel Gaston took many horses out to his farm to live a restful old age on his broad and spacious acres. Over four thousand chickens were hatched on his farm, and he has an assortment of ducks, geese, pigs, and Jersey cows that have long been prize winners. Like Colonel John Coolidge in Vermont, he did not have electricity put in the house, and loves the glow of the oil lamps.

As President of the Barre Agricultural Society, which has been in continuous existence for over one hundred years, Neighbor Gaston is a progressive farm leader following the best traditions of the vocation.

William A. Gaston is a typical representative of New England folks. He was born in Boston on May 1st, 1857. His father before him was the first Democrat ever elected Governor of Massachusetts. His son has been a consistent and persistent Democrat following in the traditions of his father, and has been honored with the nomination for Governor and Senator. A delegate to nearly every state convention since he became a voter, he has occupied a high place in the national councils of his party.

A classmate of Theodore Roosevelt at Harvard, he won fame as a boxer, and President Roosevelt delighted in relating stories of the bout he had with "Billy" Gaston at Harvard. Soon after leaving Harvard, William Gaston began the practice of law. The first year he made $400 in fees and lived upon it—that is why he is successful as a farmer. He maintains the traditions of New England thrift and energy, for his mother was a cousin of Henry Ward Beecher and Harriet Beecher Stowe. In all his activities—political, business or professional—there is a New England thoroughness in whatever he has undertaken.

Later he was president of the National Shawmut Bank, keeping in close touch with the industrial development of New England. During the war he was appointed government representative on the labor arbitration board by President Wilson, with a jurisdiction extending to all shipyards from Bath, Maine, to the south. Cases submitted to him met with prompt decision, and his war record constitutes and reflects the spirit of practical patriotism.

"The tide of farm development will return to New England. Ebb and flow of tides is one of the immutable laws of Nature, and the same soil and the same climate that provided good living and saving for thrifty farmers of New England the farmers who fought the battles of Lexington and Concord are still producing crops. New England is coming into her own again as a profitable agricultural productive area. This fact will come to the attentive young men who are taking up farming as a desirable career, as it was in the days of George Washington. The average price of farm land in Massachusetts is far below its intrinsic worth, and the most attractive and real values in farm lands in the country is in New England. The large population in manufacturing cities provides a market close at hand, eliminating the high cost of transportation and handling, which are a vital factor in net profits for farmers in these times. The next generation will see a marked impetus returning to the vocation of farming that has meant so much in the making of our nation."

Editor's Note—Send ten names of your favorite famous folk now living to Joe Mitchell Chapple, The Attic, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City. The readers of this paper are to nominate for this Hall of Fame.

Flashlights of Famous People

Face to face interviews with famous folks—Up-to-the-minute sketches.

By Joe Mitchell Chapple

A year's test in many leading newspapers proved Flashlights to be a business builder.

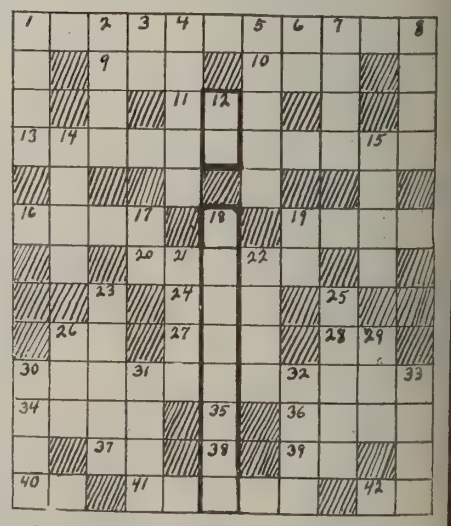
Flashlights are written by Joe Mitchell Chapple, the world-wide traveler and well-known editor, who, according to the London Mail, has met more famous people face to face than any other man.

Your readers select the subjects every day

FLASHLIGHTS

A live, active part of your newspaper. You put Joe Chapple on your staff to serve your readers by mail or wire with a sketch of any celebrity desired. He is on the go from the watch-tower at the Waldorf-Astoria for his thousands of flashlight patrons.

A feature full of human interest appeal that ties up perfectly with the novelty in cross word puzzles.



Wire for exclusive rights in your territory.

JOE MITCHELL CHAPPLE ASSOCIATES

"The Attic" Boston, Mass.

"The Attic" Waldorf-Astoria Hotel New York City

6 Biographic Cross Word Puzzles and Answers

Something new in improved cross word puzzles that bring your readers closer to the contents of your paper.

Fascinating—Instructive For ALL the Family

To be released
JANUARY 19th

New Circulation Records for The Kansas City Star

All through 1924 The Kansas City Star enjoyed a steadily increasing circulation—and during December of this year attained the greatest circulation in its history, passing all previous high marks with a total, combined morning and evening, average of—

500,008 Daily

And still another record! During December the city circulation broke all previous records, the combined morning and evening average increasing 10,456 copies daily over December, 1923.

Average Circulation

	Morning	Evening	Sunday
December, 1924	247,613	252,395	265,808
December, 1923	238,963	243,647	242,551
Gain	8,650	8,748	23,257

During 1924 The Kansas City Star printed over 11,910 pages of advertising, representing—

25,345,388
Lines of Advertising

THE KANSAS CITY STAR

NEW YORK PAPERS HAD RECORD DECEMBER IN TOTAL ADVERTISING LINEAGE

THE old year ended with New York and Brooklyn newspapers enjoying the largest December volume of business in their history. The total was 14,373,546 agate lines, with four Sunday issues, against 14,103,492 lines in December, 1923, a five-Sunday month. Only three papers, all of which issue Sunday editions, fell behind their December, 1923, records, and the total of their losses was only 90,000 agate lines. The net gain for all papers was 274,054 lines, or about 1.4 per cent.

Eight of the 15 papers listed made new lineage record for the month.

Comparative detailed tables for the month in 1923 and 1924 and summaries for the month, 1924-1918, follows:

Pages 1924	Pages 1923		Percentage of total space	1924	1923	Gain	Loss
1,400	1,348	American	8.5	1,228,364	1,270,436	.....	42,072
....	1,046	Herald	...	.....	§941,346	.....	.....
1,288	1,074	Herald Tribune	9.3	1,336,242	909,548	426,694	.....
832	....	*Mirror (Tabloid)	2.3	327,936	‖.....	.....	.....
1,172	1,084	News (Tabloid)	3.9	562,014	442,538	119,476	.....
1,710	1,620	Times	15.4	2,219,292	2,106,652	112,640	.....
1,160	1,152	World	9.3	1,330,840	1,288,528	42,312	.....
418	....	Evening Bulletin	1.3	188,426	**	.....	.....
1,216	1,156	*Evening Journal	10.0	1,432,132	1,205,464	226,668	.....
....	618	*Evening Mail	...	.....	¶678,414	.....	.....
804	594	*Evening Post	3.3	471,720	410,514	61,206	.....
810	688	*Evening World	5.9	847,344	703,664	143,680	.....
992	808	*Sun	9.4	1,348,196	1,115,314	232,882	.....
644	596	*Telegram-Mail	4.8	692,848	††621,618	71,230	.....
1,154	1,168	Brooklyn Eagle	9.5	1,363,148	1,345,450	17,698	.....
570	606	Brooklyn Times	2.8	407,752	430,448	.....	22,696
614	602	Standard Union	4.3	617,292	633,558	.....	16,266
14,784	14,160	Totals		14,373,546	14,103,492	270,054 Net Gain	.....

* No Sunday edition.
¶ Telegram and Mail combined January 28, 1924. Sunday issue discontinued March 16, 1924.
††Evening Telegram carried 110,394 lines in the 5 Sunday issues of December, 1923; this lineage is included.
§ Herald and Tribune combined March 19, 1924.
Evening Bulletin first issue June 19, 1924; first Sunday issue, December 7, 1924.
‖ Mirror (Tabloid) first issue June 24, 1924.

	1924	1923	1922	1921	1920	1919	1918
American	1,228,364	1,270,436	974,750	845,940	837,856	972,416	750,514
Herald	.....	941,346	1,062,096	1,005,230	1,047,030	703,748	571,862
Herald Tribune	1,336,242	909,548	891,426	881,068	906,200	893,114	434,446
Mirror (Tab.)	327,936	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
News (Tab.)	562,014	442,538	329,784	345,448	210,408	.....	.....
Times	2,219,292	2,106,652	2,058,834	1,853,932	1,777,524	1,887,110	1,285,516
World	1,330,840	1,288,528	1,413,964	1,204,964	1,153,542	1,476,001	1,186,265
Evening Bulletin	188,426	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Evening Journal	1,432,132	1,205,464	1,187,612	1,099,744	1,043,290	956,528	785,960
Evening Mail	.....	678,414	571,170	575,916	586,434	559,788	334,635
Evening Post	471,720	410,514	369,668	460,792	659,726	460,554	369,602
Evening World	847,344	703,664	848,998	833,038	981,688	879,558	509,347
Globe	‡.....	‡.....	713,038	679,988	728,834	775,034	535,203
Sun	1,348,196	1,115,314	892,912	755,706	817,382	890,070	566,193
Telegram & Mail	692,848	621,618	566,228	548,868	500,922	791,602	687,392
Brooklyn Eagle	1,363,148	1,345,450	1,335,418	1,160,280	1,018,576	969,024	743,529
Brooklyn Times	407,752	430,448	326,856	301,120	308,904	†.....	†.....
Standard Union	617,292	633,558	729,390	626,752	734,444	687,852	489,623
Totals	14,373,546	14,103,492	14,272,144	13,178,060	13,312,760	12,902,399	9,250,086

† Figures not recorded.
‡ Sun and Globe combined June 4, 1923, name changed to Sun March 10, 1924.

SEATTLE UNION RECORD LABOR DAILY SOLD

Passes from Union Control to Company Headed by E. B. Ault and Saul Haas, Staff Executives—To Widen Scope

(By Telegraph, to Editor & Publisher)

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 5.—Ownership of the Seattle Union Record, the only remaining U. S. daily owned by organized labor passed into private hands last Saturday when the American Free Press, a Seattle company, took control. The paper was published as a labor paper in Seattle for 25 years, first as a weekly, for seven years as a daily.

E. B. Ault, present editor and manager, and Saul Haas managing editor under the old ownership are understood to be the principal stockholders in the new company. Ault, the new publisher had been contributing editor.

No statement of the price paid was issued, but it is understood the total consideration was in the neighborhood of $200,000.

"I feel that the Union Record as an independent, privately owned paper, free from the unavoidable classes within the labor movement, will be better able to serve the legitimate ends of labor and interpret labor to the general community. than it could when owned by labor itself." Ault told a representative of Editor & Publisher.

"The Union Record's first effort from a business standpoint will be to interest national advertisers.

"As nearly as possible I intend to adopt editorial policy to conform with that announced by Joseph Pulitzer for the New York World.

"Through the development of a labor page covering the labor movement as thoroughly as the average paper covers sports we intend to keep closely in touch with the labor movement and retain the good-will of labor in this vicinity generally.

"A broader public policy however, will now be followed."

Mr. Haas, managing editor has been with the paper nearly six years, Ault 13 years.

A. J. Copeland, formerly with the Pacific Coast Scripps papers, will be business manager for the new owners. The paper is unique in that it is the only daily started in the United States with the entire capital stock held by trade unions and not an outgrowth or a spokesman of a political movement.

The Union Record owns a modern fireproof 4 story building with a modern plant including two 24 page presses.

Pennsylvania Daily Reorganized

James V. McAndrew is the new president and treasurer of the Mt. Carmel (Pa.) News, following a recent reorganization. D. R. G. Farrow is business manager and editor, and William J. Kehoe, associate editor. The News recently occupied its new home. A new Goss press and other new equipment was installed. Thomas F. Clarke Company, Inc., continues as representatives.

Arkansas Daily Sold

The Blytheville (Ark.) Daily Courier has been sold to James H. Skewes, owner of the Meridian (Miss.) Star.

We have 59 new reasons for a busy 1925!

During the past twelve months we have added fifty-nine new names to the list of our newspaper clients.

It becomes our pleasant duty to give them—as well as our many old clients in this country and Canada—a classified advertising promotion service throughout 1925 that shall be even better than we have been able to give before.

We shall also hold ourselves in readiness to extend this same service to other progressive newspapers whose publishers are anxious to make 1925 the greatest classified year they have yet known.

List of New Service Newspapers—1924

CONNECTICUT
South Norwalk.....Sentinel

GEORGIA
Atlanta .....Constitution
Columbus .....Ledger

ILLINOIS
Ottawa.....Republican Times
Rockford .....Republic
Sterling .....Gazette
Streator .....Independent-Times
Waukegan .....Sun

INDIANA
Gary .....Post Tribune
Huntington .....Press
Indianapolis .....News

KANSAS
Kansas City.....Kansan
Wichita .....Eagle

KENTUCKY
Ashland .....Independent

MAINE
Lewiston .....Journal

MASSACHUSETTS
Marlboro .....Enterprise
North Adams.....Transcript
Southbridge .....News
Westfield .....Journal

MICHIGAN
Battle Creek.....Moon Journal
Hillsdale .....News
Monroe .....News
St. Joseph.....Herald Press

MISSOURI
Columbia .....Tribune
Jefferson City.....Capital News

NEBRASKA
Fremont .....Tribune
Lincoln .....Star
Norfolk ..... News

NEW JERSEY
Bayonne .....Review

NEW YORK
Amsterdam....Recorder Democrat
Glens Falls.....Post Star
Ithaca .....Journal-News
Jamestown .....Post
Olean .....Times
Rockville Center.....Review

NORTH CAROLINA
Asheville .....Times
Salisbury .....Post

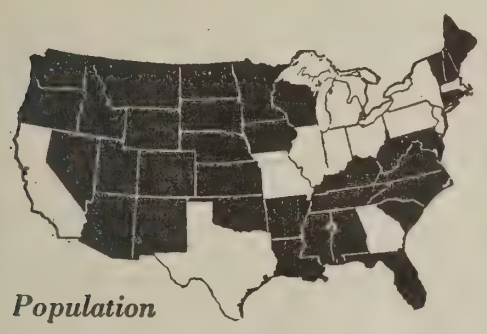
OHIO
Alliance .....Review
Ashland .....Times-Gazette
Dover .....Reporter
Marietta .....Times
New Philadelphia.....Times
Portsmouth .....Times

OKLAHOMA
Bartlesville .....Enterprise

PENNSYLVANIA
Du Bois .....Courier
Harrisburg .....Telegraph
Jeannette .....News
Pottsville .....Journal
Sharon .....Herald
Tamaqua .....Courier
Warren ....Times Mirror

VERMONT
Burlington .....Free Press

VIRGINIA
Charlottesville ....Progress



WISCONSIN
Appleton .....Post Cresent
Beloit .....News
Green Bay .....Press Gazette
Janesville .....Gazette
Sheboygan .....Press Telegram

CANADA
Montreal .....La Patrie

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, INC.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
PACKARD BUILDING PHILADELPHIA

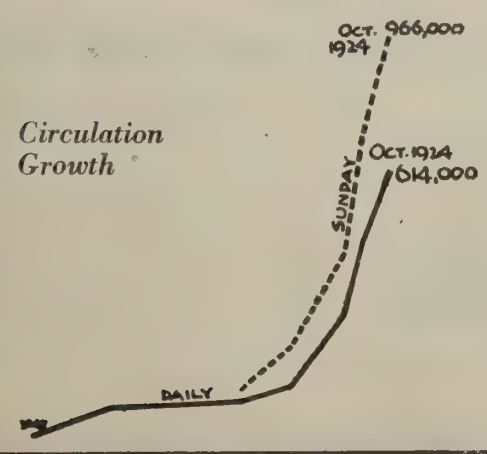
What a space buyer ought to know —about The Chicago Tribune and its market



Population

Circulation

Dealer Influence

Circulation Growth

1. The City

(a) In Chicago and its immediate suburbs there are more people than in any one of the thirty-six states shown in black on the map opposite.

(b) In this tremendous market The Chicago Tribune (with one-third more local circulation than the next paper) reaches practically 100% of the English reading families.

2. The Territory

(a) The Chicago Territory (Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin) with one-eleventh of the area of the United States, has one-sixth of the population, who possess one-fifth of the national wealth.

(b) In each of 1063 towns and cities of these five states (outside of Chicago) The Chicago Tribune reaches from one-fifth to four-fifths of the families. Of these towns 471 are shown by dots on the map opposite.

3. Dealer Influence

(a) In Chicago 80% to 85% of the retailers read The Tribune. Outside the city, in a zone 400 miles in diameter, from 60% to 85% of the retailers read The Tribune.

(b) Not only do they read it but from 63% to 87% of them state that Chicago Tribune advertising is a selling influence and moves goods from their shelves.

4. Cost

(a) Chicago Tribune advertising space is economical because circulation increases make each contract a great bargain before it expires. The chart at the left shows the rate at which the paper has grown.

(b) Compared with other media Chicago Tribune space is positively cheap. Based on circulation and rates of October, 1924, National advertisers can buy space in The Tribune on week days for $1.46 per milline and on Sundays for $1.30 per milline. How much space are you buying at rates as low as these, Mr. Space Buyer?

The Tribune's BOOK OF FACTS on markets and merchandising will be mailed free if requested on business stationery.

The Chicago Tribune

The World's Greatest Newspaper

Through

Hundreds of National Advertise

Editor & Publisher Inte

To Be Publ

A FEW OF THE MANY ADVERTISING AGENCIES THAT WILL BE REACHED BY THE YEAR BOOK

Adamant Advertising Agency
Adamars Company
Alexander Advertising Agency
Buckley-Dement & Company
J. Walter Thompson Company
N. W. Ayer & Son Adv. Agency
De Biasi Advertising Agency
Campbell Trump & Company
Campbell Ewald Company
Eastman Advertising Company
The Byron G. Moon Company, Inc.
Simpson Advertising Company
Ruthrauff & Ryan, Inc.
Praigg, Kiser & Company, Inc.
Federal Advertising Agency, Inc.
The Eugene McGuckin Company
Barrows & Richardson
Lyddon & Hanford Company
George Batten Company
J. D. Bates Advertising Agency
Franklin P. Shumway Adv. Agency
H. H. Charles Agency
Snowden Advertising Agency
Wm. H. Rankin Company
DeForrest Porter Adv. Service, Inc.
The Davis Smith Company
Dorland Agency, Inc.
Peck Advertising Agency, Inc.
Gundlach Adv. Company
Fox & McKenzie
John C. VanHaagen Adv. Agency
The Thompson Koch Company
F. W. Nichols Company
Charles C. Green Adv. Agency
Albert Frank & Company
The Miller Agency Company
World Wide Adv. Corporation
Thos. F. Logan, Inc.
Andrew Cone General Adv. Agency
Hoovs Advertising Company
Anfenger Advertising Agency
Danielson & Son
Walter B. Snow and Staff, Inc.
The Fred St. Germain Adv. Agency
The Philip Ritter Company
Hawes Advertising Agency
Fred H. Sypher Advertising Agency
Amsterdam Adv. Agency, Inc.
H. B. Humphrey Company
Brewer Smith Adv. Company
Davis Smith Company
Gardner Advertising Company
W. B. Jones Adv. Agency
Adams Adv. Agency
Hanff-Metzger, Inc.
A. W. Erickson Adv. Agency
Dauchy & Company
H. K. McCann Company, Inc.
Lyon Advertising Agency
Robert M. McMullen Company
Poster Advertising Company
The Corman Company
Wm. G. Bryan Organization
Sterling Advertising Service
Friend-Wiener Adv. Agency, Inc.
Peck Adv. Agency, Inc.
Dougherty Adv. Company
Thresher Adv. Service
Dunlap-Ward Adv. Agency
R. A. Foley Adv. Agency
Livermore & Knight Company
Southwestern Adv. Company
Holden Advertising Agency
J. O'Connor Adv. Agency
Hoops Adv. Agency
H. E. Lesan Adv. Agency
Fred Mills Advertising Agency
Potts-Turnbull Adv. Co., Inc.
McJunkin Adv. Company
United Advertising Agency
Ferry-Hanly Adv. Company

The Most Valuable Reference Book for Publishers, Advertisers and Agents.

PART

Executive personnel of daily newspapers of United States and Canada (more than 20,000 names)

Personnel of daily newspapers of Great Britain

Circulation and advertising rates of daily newspapers throughout the United States and Canada

Circulation and advertising rates of daily newspapers of Great Britain

Advertising agencies of United States

Advertising agencies of Great Britain, France and Canada

Advertising associations and clubs of Great Britain

Advertising associations and clubs of Canada

Advertising associations and clubs of the United States

Analysis of A.B.C. daily newspaper circulations

Space buyers of all advertising agencies

Special representatives of newspapers of Canada

Special rep
United St

Court deci newspape

Correspond
the Unite

Correspond with resid
City

Lists of boo

Lists of boo

Detailed fac tion and c

Ready reck ures) for Comparison culation a

List of merc

News distrib

Lists of book

Directory of States

ALL THE REGULAR F

Scores of Letters Like these Explain Why Last Year's Advertise

An advertising ageny writes:—

"If you could see the thumb worn condition of your last Year Book, you would appreciate how much we use it during the year."

One new advertiser, who res

"I have seen your out the year that tising medium. I competitors has e shared by us. Pl

Advertising Forms Close January 24th

the Year

id Advertising Agents will use the ional Year Book for 1925

anuary 31st

T OF CONTENTS

wspapers of the — Directory of schools of journalism in Great Britain

ertisers and — Complete directory foreign language newspapers printed in United States

wspapers in — Overseas Journalists associations

List of papers carrying rotogravure sections

w newspapers
sn New York — Senate press gallery

News services of United States

Analysis of magazine circulations by territorial market groups

Analysis of circulations of leading monthly magazines by groups

rint produc-

Newspaper lineage in 23 largest cities since 1914

culation fig-
r

Wage scales for newspapers in leading American cities

wspaper cir-

Announcements from the leading newspapers of the United States

f reat Britain

Announcements from the leading ink and supply houses

lm in United

Announcements from the most progressive syndicates, news services and equipment houses

AND MANY NEW ONES

JUST A FEW OF THE NATIONAL ADVERTISERS WHO WILL RECEIVE COPIES OF THE YEAR BOOK

A. B. Leach & Company, Inc.
Marquette Cement Mfg. Company
Detroit Steel Products Company
The Palmolive Company
Williamson Candy Company
The Continental Piano Company
Falk Corporation
The Federal Clay Product Company
Haywood Tag Company
Bristol-Myers Company
United American Metals Corporation
American Express Company
The Holtzer-Cabot Electric Company
California Packing Corporation
Frederick Stearns & Company
Corona Typewriter Company, Inc.
The Aluminum Cooking Utensil Company
General Motors Truck Company
The American Thread Company
Seaboard Rice Milling Company
New England Confectionery Company
Pine Brothers
The J. B. Williams Company
Jewett Radio & Phonograph Company
Wm. Demuth & Company
Continental Life Insurance Company
E. I. DuPont De Nemours & Company, Inc.
Universal Pictures Corporation
Carnegie Steel Company
W. L. Douglas Shoe Company
Scotch Woolen Mills
Yawman & Erbe Mfg. Company
Humphreys' Homeopathic Medicine Co.
Dodge Mfg. Corporation
Todd Protectograph Company
Inspiration Pictures, Inc.
Butterfield & Company
Lever Brothers Company
L. J. & C. D. Jaffee, Inc.
Valentine & Company
The Pepsodent Company
Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company
Salt's Textile Company
The Long-Bell Lumber Company
Consolidated Cigar Corporation
The Duz Company, Inc.
McCaskey Register Company
Goodyear Mfg. Co.
United States Music Company
Cudahy Packing Company
W. W. Kimball Company
The Peerless Motor Car Company
Beech-Nut Packing Company
Winchester Repeating Arms Co.
Bell Paint Company
Eastman, Scott & Company
Phoenix Hosiery Company
Murphy Varnish Company
Ansco Photoproducts, Inc.
American Radio Mfg. Company
General Fireproofing Company
National Surety Company
Miller Lock Company
Diamond Crystal Salt Co.
Moon Motor Car Co.
Halley Carburetor Company
Kelvinator Electric Refrigerators
Oliver Oil-Gas Burner Corp.
J. P. Smith Shoe Co. (Dr. Reed Cushion Shoes)
Coffield Washer Co.
National Cloak & Suit Co.
Alabastine Company
De Long Hook & Eye Company
Kerr Chemical Company
Westinghouse Union Battery Co.
Moore Pen Company
Kum-A-Part Products
Resinol Chemical Co.
Walter M. Lowney Co. (Confectionery)

Unrivalled advertising medium for Newspapers
Advertising Agencies
Equipment Manufacturers
Ink and Supply Houses
Syndicates and News Services

Renewing Their Space and New Advertisers Are Making Reservations.

a week, frankly admitted:—

frquently in so many offices throughte value of the edition as an adverf the past twelve months one of our il publicity that might have been ouble page spread for the....."

A national advertiser says:—

"The International Year Book is a handy source of information for our sales and advertising departments."

Wire Space Reservation at Once

EDITORIAL

STRANGELY MISTAKEN VIEWS

A SPOKESMAN for magazine interests held up before the official committee investigating the question of increased postal rates a copy of a metropolitan newspaper and read the head-lines on the first page.

There was a good deal of smirking around the circle when the speaker reeled off the list of titles of news accounts concerning crime, boot-legging, divorce, sudden death and scandal in high places.

We do not quite understand this attitude among men of intelligence, although it is easily comprehended when voiced by the unthinking. These head-lines are something to groan over, not snicker, for they represent life and the age in which we live. They are the mighty unsolved problems of this hour in civilization, so much more vital to the well being of this nation than the little subject of postal rates or postal pay that the latter sink into microscopic insignificance.

Banditry, mob violence, boot-legging, divorce, automobile casualties, attempted jury bribery, Mr. Zero's mob of homeless men, murder, suicide are not subjects which merit amusement among the members of the national legislature. They call for action, for each is but a symptom of a faulty social or economic system. Each has a background of cause, demanding investigation and correction.

The average newspaper editor does not publish such news for mere sensation, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding. He has no choice in the matter. News is news, and only the incompetent editor, or one serving a class, may suppress fact, no matter how ugly, or mask the truths of life.

Hundreds of newspaper editors deplore first pages that reek with unpleasant, terrifying, scandalous news, for it is generally conceded among them that while such news may create temporary circulation the reputation of a newspaper as a "scandal sheet" is a serious liability.

A newspaper which does not serve, however, the cause of realism fails in a major degree. Magazines may pick and choose the material they publish. There is no obligation upon them to print anything in particular. But newspapers are obligated to print news as it falls, and we do not perceive any true analogy in the argument suggested at Washington by the spokesman for the magazines. Still less do we comprehend a state of mind of public men which lightly regards such monstrous problems as those revealed by the headlines of that newspaper.

There is the added fact that publicity of income tax returns might lead to the detection of a cheater. All other forms of privileged publicity take into consideration the general public service involved, although it is sometimes at the expense of the feelings of individuals.

HE ANSWERED AN AD

A ROMANCE of advertising is recounted in the house organ of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Thirty-five years ago a youth in search of a job answered a "want ad" in the Journal of Commerce. Thanks to that contact Henry W. George became identified with the insurance company and is today its treasurer, the custodian of a billion and a half of securities which belong to more than 21,000,000 people scattered throughout the United States and Canada.

There is a homely old axiom, "The Things We Most Desire Lie Close About Our Feet," which applies with force to the half-used advertising columns of newspapers, and we believe that one of the most important features of every newspaper's promotion should be directed toward educating the public to find opportunities through advertising.

"Here Lies Opportunity," might be the appropriate slogan for every advertising page, applying not only to want pages, but every department of trade. The things we most desire we have in our grasp, perhaps dozens of times a year, and pass by because we have failed to read newspapers thoroughly or comprehendingly. Here lies a great field of service for imaginative promotion experts.

He also that is slothful in his work is brother to him that is a great waster.—Proverbs; XVIII, 9.

RETAIL PRICE FREEDOM

IN a retail price that covers the physical cost of newspaper manufacture and distribution lies editorial freedom. There is not the slightest doubt that this is a prime economic fact for every newspaper publisher to keep well in mind.

In the whole realm of commerce nothing but newspapers is now traded in with the copper cent as the unit of measure. Nothing is so cheap, so accessible to every man in the street. This is as it should be. The newspaper must be available to the whole citizenship, to remain true to its responsibilities.

It is not expected that newspapers shall sell at copy prices which make them absolutely dependent upon advertising. Whatever may have gone before, the present tendency is surely away from that principle. Insofar as this can be accomplished, without the sacrifice of circulation (and through such distribution the functioning of the original ideas of a constitutionally guaranteed "free press") is most certainly desirable, from every point of view.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER commends the course of New York World and Kansas City Star. Their price advances were well justified. No hardship is worked upon readers. And the economic position of both of these great newspapers better fortifies editorial independence.

Do not depend upon decisions that others make for you.

FEVER SYMPTOMS

SWARMS of black-shirted Fascisti descend on the offices of opposition newspapers, with torch and club. The Dictator orders the press to tell the people what he wishes the people to know. The first edition of one newspaper is sequestrated because it contains a summary of the year's events in Italy, but a later edition is permitted to be sold when the offending summary is supplanted by a learned article on China.

Italy is a sick nation. Such measures inevitably mean that fever is scorching the vitals of government. The world's judgment must be withheld, as news censored by a dictator has small meaning.

January 10, 1925 Volume 57, No. 33

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Bldg.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout, 10 Radcliffe Road, Winchmore Hill, N. 21.
Paris: G. Iangelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.

10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

JOE BANNON

TWO thousand attended Joe Bannon's testimonial dinner at the Hotel Astor on Sunday evening. Many notable men attended, or sent messages intended to honor the guest. The band played "The Sidewalks of New York," very appropriately, for the guest of the evening is a product of New York's teeming East Side. Mr. Hearst sent to his famous circulator a message of congratulation and praise which must have made his blood tingle. Gov. Al. Smith regretted he could not be present, and Arthur Brisbane told the assembled members of the Newspaper and Mail Deliverer's Union, which Bannon founded, and their guests, just why Joe Bannon is a great circulator.

There is a legend across the country that Bannon is a "tough guy," but his graceful speech did not betray it; rather it repudiated this notion. In his business Bannon keeps himself true to character. He deals with street merchants of the metropolis and it is not amiss that some of them should regard him as wholly sophisticated in the affairs which interest them most. He also wears diamonds that dazzle, but he is no dude. He holds the watch at prize fights and is interested in horse racing, and thousands of newsboys regard him as a sort of god. But every day of his life Bannon is mainly interested in selling newspapers. He is the powerful leader of the circulation field in the most difficult newspaper territory in the world. Hundreds of times he has conquered seemingly impossible situations. He has sometimes been rough, but the average newsdealer in this city regards him as just. He is contemptuous of some of the silly conventions of the business, some of which seem less silly to us than to him, but he sells papers and he creates systems of distribution which operate in fair weather and foul. Therefore we call him great, for such he is.

There are not a half dozen newspaper men in America who have been marked by such signal honor, by associates and by rival publishers, as was Joe Bannon at this Astor party. And the best part of the show was that the feeling was a genuine tribute to success without patronizing of the stalwart men who do the hard and usually unhonored work of putting the daily press product into the hands of the people.

It is about time, in this day and age, that the salesmen of the newspaper office came in for greater shares of glory. Everywhere else the salesman is on a pedestal. And this is just, because, goodness knows, he often succeeds in floating distressingly faulty wares. Bannon has always had something to sell, for Hearst has never stinted his products, but he has sold it in hot competition. Honor to him and his craft was overdue. But Joe Bannon will say of this, "Banana oil, I work to make money."

"You are certainly getting out a marvelously fine trade paper. It is simply invaluable," writes George D. Lindsay, president, Inland Daily Press Association and editor the Marion, Ind., Chronicle, much to our pleasure.

NEWSPAPERS YOU LIKE

AN imperfect world offers ample opportunity for complaint. It appears to be a human trait to find greater interest in imperfection than in perfection. The latter cloys. Flaws beg assistance. Uncommon philosophical balance is required of the professional observer and reporter, lest the seamy side be exaggerated, or at least that brighter phases be neglected. It is equally important that there be no artificial mask for the face of the news. Find the true interest in all human activities and play them across your board. The newspaper you like is comparable to the man you like—well-informed, penetrating, well-mannered, good-natured, true to ideals, a fighter when pushed too far, but happy most of the time and headed somewhere in particular.

The enterprising merchant buys advertising for the same reason that a farmer buys fertilizer, to make two blades grow where one grew before.

PERSONALS

ROY HOWARD of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, left New York his week on a trip to the Pacific Coast, lanning to return about Feb. 1.

Frank P. MacLennan, editor and pub-sher of the Topeka (Kan.) State Jour-al, was elected president of the Kansas eserve State Bank by unanimous vote at recent board of directors meeting. His ection became effective Jan. 1.

Charles F. Ward, editor of the Platts-urg (Mo.) Leader, has been appointed member of the Board of Curators of e University of Missouri.

Harry E. Rice, owner and publisher of e Xenia (O.) Herald, retired Jan. 1, postmaster of Xenia. He was ap-inted by President Wilson.

L. C. Earnist, vice-president of the nited Press Associations in charge of siness, returned to his desk this week ter a three weeks' illness.

Vance McCormick, publisher of the arrisburg (Pa.) Patriot and the Har-sburg News, and Mrs. McCormick iled from New York this week on the driatic on a Mediterranean cruise.

C. S. Wilke, former publisher of the rey Eagle (Minn.) Gazette and ex-esident of the National Editorial Asso-ation, has been appointed secretary to Lieut. Gov. W. I. Nolan of Minnesota.

C. E. Nevin, editor and publisher of e Laurel (Neb.) Advocate rounded out years service as publisher Jan. 1.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

W. H. BLINN has been appointed bus-iness manager of the Chattanooga Tenn.) News, and Frank J. Hitz, ad-rtising manager.

V. G. Sadler, circulation manager of e San Antonio Express and Evening ews, has been made classified advertis-g manager in addition to his circulation ties, succeeding Miss Mabel Wilkin, signed.

Thomas Milburn, advertising solicitor f the Portland Oregonian, recently mpleted 30 years' continuous service th that paper.

H. K. Seymour, advertising manager the Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette, is w in charge of the automotive depart-nt of the New Orleans Item and orning Tribune.

Harry C. Simons, formerly advertising nager of the Springfield (O.) Morning n, is now in charge advertising for the sley Shoe Company of Springfield.

Elmer C. Bleau has been appointed siness manager of the Champaign (Ill.) ws-Gazette, following six years' serv-e with that newspaper.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

ALFRED W. PIERCE, for many years on the general staff of the New rk Sun, has resigned and is now con-ted with the Interborough Rapid ansit Company of New York.

oseph Edgar Chamberlin, dean of the ston Transcript editorial staff, was en a banquet before he sailed for Cali-nia recently.

Arthur Weil, assistant city editor of Buffalo Evening News, has gone to shington to become assistant to A. H. chhofer, the News' staff correspondent the capital.

imothy Walsh, with the financial bu-u of the New York World, has been ted president of the Political Forum Long Beach, N. Y.

apt. A. E. Watson, F. J. I., has suc-eded the late Frederick Miller as man-ig editor of the London Daily Tele-aph. Capt. Watson was formerly surer of the British Institute of Jour-sts.

ntoinette Donnelly, beauty expert for New York Daily News and the Chi-o Tribune, returned this week from a to the Continent.

llis Emmons Reed, afternoon head of New York Evening Graphic copy , and Mrs. Reed are parents of a son, Jan. 5.

Lawrence "Larry" Toole, for years with the Chicago Tribune, afterward with the San Francisco Examiner, and latterly in publicity work in San Francisco, was seriously injured in an automobile accident recently.

Frank Dolan, radio editor of the New York Daily News, is recovering from an operation.

Eleanor Kellogg has been transferred from the Sunday to the daily staff of the New York Daily News.

Leslie C. Morehouse, city editor of the South Bend Tribune, is ill in a local hospital.

Stuart C. Maguire, formerly of the sport department, Buffalo Evening News, has started a new Buffalo weekly, the Sport Tribune.

A. H. Longbotham has resigned as editor of Statler Salesmanship, a monthly publication of the Hotels Statler Company, Inc., to give time to his position as general manager of the Buffalo Evening Post. Malcolm H. Ross, formerly of the New York World, is Mr. Longbotham's successor.

C. Starr Matthews, one time sports editor of the Baltimore Sun, has joined the sports staff of the Baltimore American, succeeding Ernest A. Bowersox, who has entered publicity work.

G. R. Finney, San Antonio News reporter, has resigned to go to Nashville, Tenn.

A. B. Waugh, of the Sacramento (Cal.) Bee staff, has been appointed Sacramento correspondent for the San Francisco Bulletin. He is succeeded by E. G. Desimone, formerly of the San Francisco Chronicle.

W. C. Hartough, formerly of the Louisville Herald and other papers, has joined the Toledo Blade staff.

Johnston Copelin has resigned from the sports staff of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press.

Edward F. Adams, 85, editorial writer on the San Francisco Chronicle, was the guest of honor at a luncheon of the Commonwealth Club Dec. 30. Adams is one of the five surviving charter members of the club.

Miss Gladys Bowen has succeeded Mrs. Nancy Zan Scott as society editor of the Portland Oregonian.

John Madden has joined the editorial staff of the Cleveland Times.

Charles B. Coppen, sporting editor, Providence (R. I.) Journal, has just been admitted to the Rhode Island bar.

Louis Cella, of the South Bend Tribune staff, has resigned and returned to his home in Chicago.

A. H. Gill, sporting editor of the Scranton (Pa.) Times, has returned to his desk after several months' illness.

Miss Marion Sutton has succeeded Miss Pearl Rees on the local staff of the Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening.

George Varnell, sporting editor of the Spokane Chronicle, has resigned to join the Seattle Times. He is succeeded by Robert Phillips.

Jesse L. C. Sunday has returned to the Frederick (Md.) Post staff, after an illness of several months.

W. S. Farquar, sporting editor of the Pottsville (Pa.) Journal, has been named president of the Anthracite Basketball League.

Ellery J. Lyndes, Clinton correspondent for the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, has resigned to become editor of a weekly in Springfield, Vt. He is succeeded by Joseph Kearns, of Woonsocket, R. I.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

EDWARD Doherty, reporter, from New York Daily News to New York American.

Harry W. Saunders, from managing editor, Brunswick (Me.) Record to business manager, Quincy (Mass.) Journal.

Joseph Murphy, from advertising solicitor, Scranton Sunday Dispatch to business staff, Scranton Sunday Telegram.

Clyde Hester, from city circulation manager, Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer to classified department, Charlotte (N. C.) News.

Robert Ellis, from reporter, Providence Journal, to staff, Newark Evening News.

Otway B. Shearer, from Marysville (O.) Tribune to staff, Springfield (O.) Morning Sun.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

HON. P. R. DU TREMBLAY, K.C., director of Montreal La Presse, who last month was appointed a member of the Quebec Legislative Council, has for a number of years played a large part in the upbuilding of Montreal.

P. R. Du Tremblay

Until 1921, his interests were largely legal and political. In that year the French newspaper was in need of additional executive aid and he decided to leave the active political field and become one of the three trustees of the estate of his late father-in-law, Hon. Treffle Berthiaume, owner of La Presse. He became thus one of the newspaper's directors, becoming associated with Arthur Berthiaume, president.

Born at Sainte Anne de la Peraed in 1879, Mr. Du Tremblay was educated at the Three Rivers College and at the Normal School in Quebec. He studied law at the University of Montreal and McGill University. While practicing his profession he gained the distinction of K.C. in 1917. He is a director of the Yorkshire Insurance Company, Limited.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

ALFRED TYRNAUR, since 1923 American representative of the Ullstein Press Service of Germany, is returning to Berlin this month and is to be replaced by William Schulze of the Berlin Vossische Zeitung. The Ullstein Press Service furnishes news to 30 German newspapers.

James P. Howe has been transferred from Berlin to the London office of the Associated Press.

Eric W. Rodgers, night filing editor, has been named acting correspondent of the Associated Press bureau at Raleigh, N. C., succeeding R. O. King, who resigned to become managing editor of the Raleigh Carolina Jeffersonian, a weekly. Horace Renegar, mail editor at Montgomery, Ala., has been transferred to Raleigh as night filing editor. Blackburn Johnson and Johnson Hall have joined the bureau staff to assist in reporting the legislature.

Hagerstown (Md.) Morning Herald will install a leased Associated Press wire this month, replacing the pony service.

Prof. W. S. Nicholson has resigned as principal of the Henderson, N. C., high school to join the Associated Press, Atlanta, Ga., bureau.

Kenneth W. Simons, formerly telegraph editor of the Springfield (O.) Daily News, is now with the Lincoln, Neb. bureau of the Associated Press.

Henry C. Thiele, of the New York World News Service, and Mrs. Thiele are parents of a baby boy, Karl Revere Thiele, born Jan. 6.

MARRIED

MURRAY POWERS, dramatic editor of the Dayton (O.) Herald, to Miss Ruth Hill, of Indianapolis, at Urbana, O., Dec. 31.

Peter M. Weyrens, city editor of the St. Cloud (Minn.) Daily Journal-Press, to Miss Julia J. Frank of Collegeville, Minn., recently.

Nathan Wasserman, of the circulation department, Boston Traveler, to Miss Irene Belinsky, of Dorchester, Mass.

Philip S. Johnson, of the advertising staff, Gardner (Mass.) News, to Miss Dorothy Cushing, of Lowell, Jan. 1.

WITH THE SPECIALS

CHARLES H. EDDY Company has been appointed to represent the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard Mercury.

Robert S. Farley, New York, has been appointed financial advertising representative in the United States for the London Times.

Marshfield (Wis.) Daily News has appointed C. J. Anderson, 360 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago and R. R. Mulligan, 30 East 42d street, New York, as foreign representatives.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Daily Tribune has resumed publication in a modern plant erected and equipped since the destruction by fire several months ago of the old building.

Leavenworth (Kan.) Times has installed a new Intertype.

Springfield (O.) News has added a new Intertype to its equipment.

San Pedro (Cal.) Daily Pilot has installed a Monotype slug, lead and rule caster and adopted the non-distribution system, using Ludlow for ad composition.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

GARDNER BOYD, publisher of the Barre (Vt.) Gazette since 1920, sold that paper Jan. 1 to Irving F. Carpenter, of West Newton, Mass.

W. B. Ranney, publisher of the Penacook (N. H.) News-Letter has sold his paper to Omar A. Towne of Franklin, who plans to consolidate it with the Franklin (N. H.) Journal Transcript. The paper will be printed in Franklin.

Palmyra (Mo.) Marion County Herald has been sold to J. L. O'Bryen and Harry McCubbin.

Northfield (Mass.) Press, controlled by Charles E. Bittinger, has been sold to Elmer F. Howard.

Fletcher M. Elliott, formerly of Oneida, N. Y., has purchased the Fairport (N. Y.) Herald.

George Burris, for many years with the Hutchinson (Kan.) Gazette and Herald-News, has purchased the Blue Rapids (Kan.) Times from Harlow Tibbetts.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

NEW YORK JOURNAL OF COMMERCE, 72-page Financial and Business Review edition, Jan. 2.

Indianapolis Star, 84-page Year End Review number, Dec. 31.

Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News, a Progress and Prosperity number, Dec. 31.

New Orleans Item and Morning Tribune, 32-page Annual Business Review, Jan. 1.

Providence Journal, financial review of 1924, Jan. 5, two sections, 30 pages.

Sioux Falls (S. D.) Daily Argus-Leader, annual New Year's edition, Jan. 1.

Phoenix (Ariz.) Arizona Republican, 112-page Midwinter Resource edition, in 16 sections, Dec. 28.

Salem (Ore.) Morning Statesman, 48-page Williamette Valley edition, Jan. 1.

Marshfield (Ore.) Daily Times, 72-page holiday edition.

ASSOCIATIONS

INDIANA REPUBLICAN EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION will hold its annual mid-winter meeting at Indianapolis, Jan. 22-23. Senator Frank C. Willis of Ohio will speak.

Associated Ohio Dailies and the Buckeye Press Association will meet for their winter convention in Columbus, O., Feb. 3-4-5-6. The meeting will be known as Newspaper Week.

Financial Advertisers' Association has appointed Dale Graham of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, St. Louis, as chairman of the program committee to arrange for sessions of the association to be held at the international convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Houston, Tex., next May.

Sphinx Club will hold its next dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, Jan. 13. David Sarnoff of the Radio Corporation of America will be the principal speaker.

Advertising Club of New York will hold a luncheon for Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador to the U. S., Tuesday, Jan. 13.

Seventh District Associated Advertising Clubs of the World will hold a three day session in Wichita, Kan., beginning Feb. 16. The district comprises the states of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

Oklahoma Press Association held its midwinter meeting Jan. 9 and 10 at Oklahoma City. Speakers included H. E. Dreier, advertising manager of the Oklahoma City Oklahoman and Times; Maurice Crowther, business manager of the Oklahoma News and W. D. Little, Ada News.

International Benjamin Franklin Society annual meeting will be held on Saturday, Jan. 17, at the National Arts Club, 15 Gramercy Park, New York.

Northeast Nebraska Editorial Association will hold its annual meeting at West Point, Neb., Jan. 16 and 17.

SCHOOLS

FRED LOCKLEY, of the Portland (Ore.) Journal, is the donor of two prizes to be competed for by the University of Oregon journalism students. A set of Dickens, first prize, will be awarded to the student who writes the best critical account of the work of a journalist enjoying national prestige. Second prize is $5.

Class in journalism at Holy Cross College announced recently a gift of $350 from William B. Scofield, sculptor and former city editor of the Worcester (Mass.) Gazette to cover the expenses incurred in bringing Capt. Francis McCullagh to Worcester to lecture.

Obituary

PHILIP GENGEMBRE HUBERT, 72, a member of the editorial staff of the New York Herald from 1906 to 1911, died Jan. 3, at his home in Bellport, L. I. At one time he was music critic on the New York Evening Post.

HARRY MARK MALONE, 38, editor and publisher of the Yonkers (N. Y.) Sunday Record, died at his Yonkers home Jan. 5. He began newspaper work as reporter for the Yonkers Herald. Until 1912, he was Westchester county correspondent for the New York American, New York Evening Journal, New York Telegram, and New York World. He then gave up this work and founded the Yonkers Sunday Record, with Everett Addams and W. A. Rowan.

CARL GUSTAV ZERRAHN, 69, formerly on the staff of the Boston (Mass.) Herald, died in Boston recently. Mr. Zerrahn after leaving the Herald was associated with the F. R. Niles Advertising Agency.

THOMAS H. RENSHAW, for 50 years an employe of the Detroit News, died New Year's Eve in San Diego, Cal. Mr. Renshaw helped prepare the first copy of the News which appeared Aug. 23, 1873.

FRANK P. NAGEL, 62, country circulation manager for the Buffalo Courier, died at his home in Buffalo recently.

COL. HORACE HOOD, former editor of the Montgomery (Ala.) Journal, died at his home in Montgomery, Dec. 30.

MRS. FLORA CLAIRE ELLIS, 24, until last April society editor of the Stockton (Cal.) Record, died at her home in Stockton recently.

EDWARD M. SLOBOMB, 77, founder of the United Advertising Corporation and long identified with outdoor advertising enterprises, died at his home in East Orange, N. J., last week.

HENRY W. AVERY, 75, publisher of the first newspaper in Jackson County, Minn., which was established as the Jackson Republic in 1869, died recently in Los Angeles, Cal.

JOHN B. GILHOOLY, 45, sporting editor of the Boston American, died recently at his home in Dorchester, Mass.

JAMES F. COOPER, a reporter for the Philadelphia Inquirer, died Christmas Day at his home. He began his newspaper career 30 years ago on the Boston Globe.

FRANK L. SANDERS, 54, for the past 25 years editor and publisher of the Lincoln (Cal.) News-Messenger, died suddenly at his home recently.

THOMAS J. BURGESS, veteran telegraph operator with the Associated Press, died Jan. 2, at his home in Albany after two days' illness.

C. B. HILL, 44, editor of the Whiting (Ia.) Argus, died Dec. 26, at Sioux City following an operation.

THOMAS J. KIELY, for many years a police reporter on the Worcester (Mass.) Post, died recently at his home in Worcester.

MRS. JENNIE BRONTE GARSTIN, mother of Bert N. Garstin of the New York Evening Post died recently at her residence in Cleveland, O. Mrs. Garstin was the widow of the late Charles H. N. Garstin, and a cousin of Charlotte Brontë the noted English novelist.

WILLIAM E. JOHNSON, 49, editor of the Madras (Ore.) Pioneer, died in Portland, Jan. 1.

MRS. EMMA SHIELDS NUNEMACHER CARLETON, 74, writer of the "Ginger Jar" column for the old Chicago Record, died recently at her home in Louisville, Ky.

DISCUSS ADVERTISING'S DISTRIBUTION VALUE

Its Services in Moving Merchandise to Be Considered at Washington Conference — 37 Trade Groups to Attend

Discussion of advertising and advertising mediums will play a prominent part on the program of the National Distribution Conference to be held in Washington, Jan. 14-15, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Thirty-seven trade groups, representing virtually the entire field of merchandising and distribution will be represented at the sessions.

The tentative outline of work relating to advertising includes co-ordination of research and unification of effort, methods of determining the economic aspect of advertising and the services of advertising in the efficient distribution of merchandise.

The tentative program has been drafted merely for the consideration of the conference which will devise at the opening meeting the plan of inquiry to be followed.

Arrangements are being made by the advisory committee of the Department of Domestic Distribution of the National Chamber. The chairman is Theodore Whitmarsh, Francis H. Leggett & Co., New York. The vice-chairman is Thomas E. Wilson, president Wilson & Co., Chicago. The other members are Robert R. Ellis, persident Hessig-Ellis Drug Company, Memphis; F. M. Feiker, vice-president Society for Electrical Development, New York City; A. Lincoln Filene, treasurer and general manager William Filene's Sons Company, Boston; R. E. Kennington, president R. E. Kennington Company, Jackson, Miss.; Alexander Taggart, president Taggart Baking Company, Indianapolis; Stanley Resor, president J. Walter Thompson Company, New York.

HEARST STAFF CHANGES

E. R. Mahoney, City Editor, Chicago American, Now Boston American M.E.

Edward R. Mahoney, for several years city editor of the Chicago Evening American, has been sent to the Boston American to assume the duties of managing editor, as the result of several changes in the editorial staff of the Chicago paper. W. W. Major, Mahoney's former assistant, was made acting city editor, E. H. Reticker was moved from head of the copy desk to acting assistant city editor, and Walter Sutherland was made acting chief of the copy desk. H. E. Elliston was made assistant news editor.

Leo H. Fischer, sport writer, was named editor of the magazine and feature section, while James Corcoran, formerly of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, was picked to fill Fischer's place in the sport department.

WE START THE NEW YEAR WITH 207 NEWSPAPER SUBSCRIBERS

During the year 1924 our service has been advanced by exactly 64 new subscribers—and we are truly thankful.

This increase is not the result of good salesmanship on our part—unless you mean that sincere honest effort to produce a valuable service in the interests of all subscribers is the "silent salesman" that really produces the best results.

"You can't keep a good man down"—nor can you hold back a good proposition that is earnest in its endeavor to render a real service of value.

If we were to render YOU a checking proof service that met your own ideas of practical efficiency, wouldn't YOU be willing to commend our work? So will any one of our subscribers.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26th St. NEW YORK

Norwegian Newsprint

Prompt shipments Inquiries solicited

NORWEGIAN PAPER MILLS AGENCY, INC.

33 West 42nd Street New York City

Telephone Penn. 7443

A fast growing newspaper

THE DAILY HERALD

in a fast growing community—

the Mississippi Gulf Coast

A place in which your business should grow and a newspaper that can help it.

THE DAILY HERALD

BILOXI (Mississippi) GULFPORT

See ABC—4628 net paid; Flat rate (mats) 35c inch

Announcement

of International Importance to Publishers, Advertisers and Advertising Agencies

The two outstanding trade publications in American and British advertising and publishing

EDITOR & PUBLISHER and ADVERTISING WORLD have decided to join forces and unite their respective strength and influence in editorial and advertising for the better service of future international business.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER is now the sole representative of the ADVERTISING WORLD in the United States, and the ADVERTISING WORLD has become the sole representative of EDITOR & PUBLISHER in Great Britain.

The Association implies no change in the personnel or policy of either journal. This combination of the two leading trade journals in America and Great Britain will mean that the readers of both journals will be afforded the most authoritative and accurate first hand views and news of the leaders in the publishing fields in both countries.

It also affords the national advertisers and advertising agencies a single source of service and information on both sides of the Atlantic otherwise unattained.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
1115 World Bldg. New York City
Telephones: Beekman 5814-15-16
Cable Address: EDPUB, NEW YORK

ADVERTISING WORLD
14 King St., Covent Garden, W. C. 2
Telephone: Gerrard 7615 London, Eng.
Cable Address: ECOPUBLISH, RAND, LONDON

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

DURING the week Walter Johnson, writing for the Christy Walsh Syndicate, published in various newspapers a "warning to readers," over his signature.

It read as follows: "Unfortunately I find it necessary to assure the reading public that this is my own personal story. There has been a story appearing in certain newspapers alleging to express my opinions on my life in baseball: The unauthorized story is being published without my permission, without my assistance, in spite of my protests, and contains many statements attributed to me which I never said. Disputes have always been distasteful to me, but I feel my many friends are entitled to know that this is my own story, and accurate, and the other one is not.

(Signed) "WALTER JOHNSON."

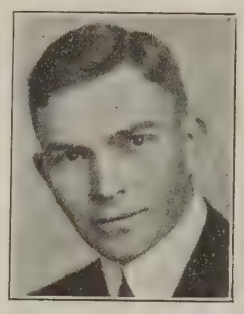
The Thompson Feature Syndicate, of New York, has for some time been running, through various newspapers, a Sunday feature, "My Twenty Years on the Mound, by Walter Johnson, as related to Lillian Barker."

There have been some variations of the credit lines in different newspapers, but the essential representation has been that Walter Johnson's baseball story was being told through the medium of Miss Barker, a well-known newspaper writer.

On Tuesday Miss Barker called at EDITOR & PUBLISHER office and declared that Walter Johnson's "warning" was an unfair repudiation of a verbal understanding she had with him to write his story for the syndicate she represents. She declared that Johnson had welcomed her and had said he would be glad to have her show her writing skill on the story he would tell.

She said: "During the World Series games I worked with Walter Johnson's wife, reporting the games in a special and novel way and paid Mrs. Johnson $500 as her share of the profits from this enterprise.

"I called at the Johnson home on several occasions and for many hours talked with Mr. Johnson. He told me his story and I took much of it down in short-hand notes. It was well understood between us that I would write the story for the Thompson Feature Syndicate, exactly as I have been doing. It was his story of his baseball career, as related by me.



"When the series began to appear in print I had a telegram from Mr. Johnson saying that he wanted my story killed, because he proposed to write the 'same thing.' It then became evident to me that he proposed to sell his story himself, and regarded mine as a competitor. He had full right to syndicate a story, but to order mine out of the way seemed very unfair, particularly as I had his full permission. He had declined to accept my proposal that he share in the proceeds of my story.

"I am greatly embarrassed by his statement that my account is inaccurate. I have a reputation to maintain on that score, for I have interviewed many prominent people and this is the first time my honesty as a reporter has been challenged. It is untrue that my story was unauthorized. It is true that Mr. Johnson protested, but too late to be effective, even if I were disposed to permit anyone to recall an interview in such circumstances."

The Christy Walsh Syndicate notified EDITOR & PUBLISHER that an attorney had been retained to defend the right of Mr. Johnson to tell his own story himself, through that syndicate, but asserted that no suit had been brought to date.

The Duffs are coming back again, the United Feature Syndicate, New York, announced this week. The old comic strip will run under its former title of "The Doings of the Duffs," which it used when, drawn by the late W. R. Allman, it was handled by NEA, Inc., Cleveland. The revival is being staged through the co-operation of Mrs. W. R. Allman, widow of the originator, and W. O. FitzGerald, artist formerly with the Detroit News.

Tom W. Gerber, formerly promotion manager of the United Press Associations, has been appointed manager of the United Feature Syndicate, succeeding Norris Huse, who resigned recently, it was announced this week.

TOM W. GERBER

Mr. Gerber joined the United Press in 1915 as manager of the Portland, Ore., bureau. From there he was promoted to western business representative.

Leaving the U. P. later, he established the Arcady Company in Portland, Ore., a printing and advertising concern. A little more than two years ago, he returned to the U. P., and became manager of the Great Lakes Division. Last year he came to New York headquarters as promotion manager.

William E. Yelverton, managing director of Current News Features, Inc., Washington, D. C., announces an arrangement concluded with the Consolidated Press Association, whereby the sales representatives of the latter will handle all features produced by Current News Features, Inc. Services of the two organizations, however, will be in no way related.

When J. Carvey Pusey was in school, he was nicknamed "Pussy." Consequently he used to draw pictures of cats to amuse himself and his classmates. This week, at 23, he made his debut as a comic strip artist in the New York Sun, which started publication of his four-column strip, without balloons, called "Cat Tales," picturing the adventures of a cat. His work is being handled by the United Feature Syndicate, New York. At one time Pusey worked for the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Ring Lardner, who writes in slang for newspapers through the Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York, is recovering from illness at the Nassau County Hospital, Mineola, L. I.

W. B. Seabrook has written a series of intimate interviews with Jack Dempsey, which, under the caption "Life of A Champion," will run in 28 daily and Sunday installments. Distribution is being handled by the King Features Syndicate, New York.

Bert Vincent last week joined the staff of NEA, Inc., Cleveland, coming from the Evansville (Ind.) Press.

Dr. Frank Crane has written a page article on Lincoln for the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, for use on Lincoln's Birthday. It is illustrated by Reyburn Van Buren.

National News Service, Washington, D. C., is now furnishing a weekly News-Feature Clip Sheet devoted to the advancement of American interests in all parts of the world, and especially to the development of an adequate air force." George M. Battey, Jr., is editor and manager.

"Cross Word Funnies" is the latest puzzle innovation offered by McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York. The puzzles, in which all definitions are humorous, are selected by Judge, comic weekly.

John T. McCutcheon, cartoonist for the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate, and Mrs. McCutcheon, left Chicago last week for San Francisco to sail on a world tour via the South Sea Islands.

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

—and No Place to Go!

We find ourselves, almost without realizing it, a nation on wheels.

We drive or ride in 16,000,000 motor vehicles.

We pack the paved highways coming in and out of town. We over-run even so-called remote regions. And we are pounding to pieces all but permanent roads.

Next year 4,000,000 new cars will be on the road. Compared to this increase, the mileage of new permanent roads will be insignificant.

We don't want to be a nation on wheels, with no place to go.

The answer is, build more, and where necessary, wider concrete roads—and start building them now.

Not in a long time have general conditions been so favorable for carrying on such public works as permanent highway building.

Your highway authorities are ready to carry on their share of this great public work. But they must have your support.

Tell them you are ready to invest in more Concrete Highways, now.

PORTLAND CEMENT ASSOCIATION

111 West Washington Street
CHICAGO

A National Organization to Improve and Extend the Uses of Concrete

OFFICES IN 29 CITIES

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

ANDREW ROSS, for the past six years general sales manager of the rmour Grain Company, became a mem- r of the George L. Dyer Company, ew York advertising agents, effective n. 1. Prior to his connection with the rmour Grain Company, Mr. Ross was les manager of the Kellogg Company, ittle Creek, Mich. He will have his adquarters in New York.

The Mumm-Romer Company, Colum- s, O., advertising agents, changed its me Jan. 1, to the Mumm-Romer-Jay- cx Company, in recognition of the serv- of C. L. Jaycox, vice-president.

Oswald F. Schuette, known for his vitings on business and politics, has ined the Conover-Mooney Company, avertising agents, Chicago, as vice-presi- nt.

Two additions to the staff of the ples Company, Chicago advertising ency, were announced this week. ey are: C. T. Frash, recently with E. W. Nichols Company, as account executive, and W. E. Kopplin, formerly in the advertising department of the Santa Fe, as service manager.

Brooke, Smith & French, Inc., advertising agency, was host in Detroit recently to 20 upper classmen and women who are studying advertising and business administration at the University of Michigan.

Conrad Lang, Jr., senior member of Institutional Advertising Service, Inc., New York, was elected president of the Homestead Civic Association of Woodhaven, L. I., this week.

F. W. Harvey, Jr., for nine years general manager of Extension Magazine, has joined the McJunkin Advertising Company, Chicago, as one of its vice-presidents.

Frances Hooper, for several years associated with the Marshall Field & Co. advertising staff, has opened her own agency with offices in the London Guarantee Building, Chicago.

WEEK'S PRESS FLASHES

ODERN fashions are not permanent, but when the North American In- n started in to bob hair it stayed bbed.—Cleveland Times.

The Chinese are taking up cross-word zzles. That is where we get even with m for sending us Mah Jong.—New rk American.

The mortgage on the home can't be ied by riding around in it.—Columbia ord.

The only Egyptian rulers that appear be perfectly satisfactory to Great tain are the mummied ones.—Tacoma ws-Tribune.

Americanisms: Scarehead, overhead, llhead.—Baltimore Sun.

udging by the number of waiters hur- ng southward there will be the usual ber of palms along the Florida coast season.—New York American.

A political fact is as stealthy as a cat. nors are the cat's whiskers.—Phila- hia Evening Public Ledger.

We sometimes wonder why the efficiency experts don't go into business for nselves and mop up. — Columbia ord.

Prosecution of the "Peanut Trust" is rmised. 'Tis lucky that the Peanut iticians' Trust is immune. Otherwise courts would be indefinitely clogged. rooklyn Eagle.

Another problem of this unsettled age whether a mother should be her daugh- guide of her pacemaker.—Little k Arkansas Gazette.

The Soviets have advised Trotzky to immediately to a resort in a warm ate. And Trotzky probably knows tly where he is being told he can go. ew York Evening World.

All this propaganda about the wave of perity that is coming on indicates the ultimate consumer is soon to get the neck.—Columbia Record.

A scientist ventures that some day we live on air. Then watch the "Free signs come down.—Detroit News.

Those who broadcast bedtime stories w little about a modern kid's bedtime. assaic News.

When the world gets through broadening the minds of the younger generation, how about doing a little something in the matter of their depth?—Detroit News.

Scientists say that family quarrels over the dinner table are bad for the digestion. But think how good they must be for the lungs.—New York Herald Tribune.

Most flivver wrecks are due to tight nuts.—Columbia Record.

PITTSBURGH DISPATCH BANS SCANDAL

New Evening Daily Launched Jan. 1 Pledges Clean News—Has 3,707 Stockholders—Using I.N.S. Service

The Pittsburgh Daily Dispatch made its initial appearance Jan. 1, as an eight-page, two-cent, independent, evening daily newspaper, as forecast in last week's EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

Officials of the new newspaper are given as George P. Grise, president-editor; Anne Core Grise, vice-president; Philip Anthes, treasurer; and A. M. Winner, secretary.

The management states the Daily Dispatch has 3,707 stockholders in Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania. It is not a member of the Publisher's Association of Pittsburgh.

"The Daily Dispatch has been founded for the purpose of publishing a daily newspaper, which is free, independent, and owes no allegiance to any group, either political or financial," a front page editorial announcement declared.

"The policy of the paper will be 100 per cent American. In short, it will be the people's paper—speaking the voice of the people to the people and for the people.

"We will try to get away from the idea that a newspaper must give the larger part of its space to scandals, divorces, murders, and the wreck and sewage that are dregs in the cup of life.

"The editors of this paper have instructions to write UP to the public, not down; to be frank and fearless in the treatment of editorial matter; to seek for the best and find it; to ferret out the worst and expose it; to sacrifice hairsplitting phases of good, old fashioned truth."

The news report of International News Service is used.

We are pleased to announce the appointment of Chalmers L. Pancoast

as Vice-President

in Charge of Merchandising

MR. PANCOAST has for 20 years been an outstanding figure in advertising and publishing circles. He entered the advertising business as a copy writer for the Burrell & Fowler Agency of Cleveland; later he was connected with McManus-Kelly of Toledo and Mumm-Romer of Columbus.

Following this agency experience, Mr. Pancoast joined the editorial department of System Magazine, and became widely known through his articles on advertising and salesmanship in that and other publications.

Later he was advertising manager of Calumet Baking Powder Company, and from that position went to the Chicago Tribune. For 12 years he ably represented that newspaper and its affiliations as Director of Merchandising Service, New England Representative, and Eastern Division Manager of National Advertising. He was later entrusted with the responsibility of laying the advertising foundation of Liberty Magazine.

It is hardly necessary to emphasize that Mr. Pancoast's wide and successful experience will be a splendid asset to this agency, and of high value to our present and future clients.

CHARLES C. GREEN ADVERTISING AGENCY

INCORPORATED

450 Fourth Avenue :-: New York City

Philadelphia Branch, Real Estate Trust Building
Havana, Cuba Montreal, Canada

DETROIT NEWS WITH 30,604,504 LINES IS 1924 ADVERTISING LEADER

LEADERSHIP in total advertising lineage for 1924 is awarded the Detroit News in an advertisement of the Los Angeles Times this week. The latter, for the three previous years at the head of the lineage column, this year dropped behind the Detroit News and Chicago Tribune, but published its annual announcement as completely and brightly as ever.

The Times' "scorecard" shows the lineage leaders of 30 large cities. As reproduced below, it credits to papers publishing both morning and evening editions the edition which carried the largest volume of business. A comparative table follows showing the leaders of 1924 and the amount of business they carried in 1923, either from the Times' table of last year or from EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S tabulation where the Times did not issue a figure:

Newspaper	1924 Lineage	1923 Lineage
Detroit News	30,604,504	29,067,696
Chicago Tribune	28,181,121	28,041,477
Los Angeles Times	27,893,726	29,520,841
New York Times	26,283,924	24,101,226
Washington Star	25,313,753	23,846,758
Baltimore Sun	24,480,276	23,530,006
Pittsburgh Press	23,469,516	24,273,004
St. Louis Post-Dispatch	23,046,800	22,516,760
Columbus Dispatch	20,827,721	21,242,341
Philadelphia Inquirer	19,590,600	19,586,400*
Cleveland Plain Dealer	18,326,812	19,211,640
Oakland Tribune	17,654,420	16,507,740
Milwaukee Journal	17,630,937	18,354,313
Indianapolis News	17,357,724	17,710,428*
Louisville Times-Courier-Journal	16,900,605	10,599,696
New Orleans Times-Picayune	16,494,736	16,341,282
Dayton News	16,099,412	15,807,232
Birmingham News	15,881,446	15,350,986
Dallas Times-Herald	14,980,954	14,257,801
Toledo Blade	14,964,915	14,330,119
Portland Oregonian	14,451,528	13,782,076
Seattle Times	14,407,806	13,037,108
Minneapolis Tribune	14,356,863	14,764,192
Boston Globe	14,328,068	13,682,102
Cincinnati Times-Star	13,941,165	13,624,373
Buffalo News	13,929,481	13,967,880
Long Beach Press-Telegram	12,291,524	14,778,456
St. Paul Dispatch	11,908,708	13,259,232
Des Moines Register-Tribune-News	11,718,252	12,627,874
Omaha World-Herald	11,700,220	11,998,904

*Figures from EDITOR & PUBLISHER tabulation, Feb. 23, 1924.

Feb. 1 Pulitzer Award Deadline

Newspaper men intending to enter the contest for the Pulitzer Prize Awards in journalism were this week advised that Feb. 1 is the deadline set for submission of stories and nominations. Awards will be announced in June. They will be made by the trustees of Columbia University on the recommendation of the Advisory Board of the School of Journalism.

To Award Harvard Ad Prizes Jan. 26

Winners of prizes for the best advertising copy in 1924, offered by Harvard University, will be announced at a dinner to be held in Boston, Jan. 26, Deane M. Mallott, assistant dean of the University, announced this week.

Gerrity Heads Newswriters Union

Edward Gerrity of the Scranton (Pa.) Times staff has been elected president of Newswriters' Union in that city. Brychan Powell, also of the Times, has been named financial secretary and treasurer while Clarence Shaw of the Times becomes recording secretary.

NEW P. O. BILL SEEMS DOOMED IN CONGRESS

(Continued from page 12)

the measure sponsored by Senator Moses was intended as a substitute.

In attacking the proposed substitute, Senator Medill McCormick, of Illinois, presented a careful analysis of the bill to the Senate Monday in which he stated "it will be observed that the net increase in the first four zones amounts to $2,385,665.91, thus making the daily and weekly newspapers bear practically all the increased rates."

Representative W. W. Griest, veteran member of the Pennsylvania delegation, and chairman of the House Postoffice Committee, was another who expressed strong condemnation of the rewritten Sterling bill, and who predicted it would "never get by the House, if it did get through the Senate."

Senator McCormick's statement to the Senate Monday follows:

"An analysis of the effects of the rates in the Bill as amended shows that increases in the amount of $3,501,477.56 would be gained by the Department from the first- second, third and fourth zones, as against decreases in these zones incident to the quarter cent reduction on reading matter of $406,248.56. The Bill as reported to the Senate provides for no increased postage beyond the fifth zone, but rather for decreases in postage on advertising as well as on reading matter beyond that zone. It can thus be seen that all of the increases are confined to the first four zones in which 99 per cent of the circulation of daily newspapers is confined.

"It is estimated that the large city dailies now send only about 10 per cent of their total circulation through the mails, whereas the smaller dailies send from 25 to 30 per cent of their circulation through the mails. The large city dailies have a wider circulation than the smaller dailies. The small papers' mail circulation is confined almost wholly to the first two zones which are 150 miles in radius from the office of publication. In New York state alone the average haul of the smaller dailies is about 35 miles. With increases in postage provided only in the first four zones, it will thus be seen that the burden will fall almost wholly on the smaller daily newspapers, with no compensating effects from the reduction in postage in the further zones.

"There is appended to this statement a table showing the total increase and decrease on reading and advertising matter under the proposed rates. This table sets forth that the net increase which would be gained from these rates would be $642,678.19. This increase is arrived at by subtracting from the gross increase of $3,501,477.56, the gross reductions incident to the decrease in the rates on advertising in the far zones and the decrease in the rate on purely news matter in all the zones.

"It is the opinion of the publishers of the smaller dailies, however, that they will not be able to stand this increase in postage in the zones where they do business, and that the net effect of the Bill will be to curtail circulation in such a manner that the users of the long hauls will benefit, whereas the users of the nearby zone hauls will be driven out, and the government will suffer a net reduction in revenue without any compensating advantage of a net reduction in expense.

It will be observed that the net increase in the first four zones amounts to $2,385,665.19, thus making the daily and weekly newspapers bear practically all the increased rates.

TOTAL INCREASES AND DECREASES ON READING AND ADVERTISING MATTER

Zone	Increase	Decrease	Net Increase	Net Increase
1-2	$2,686,960.26	$671,740.97	$2,015,220.19	.....
3	.....	240,442.26	.....	$240,442.26
4	814,517.30	203,629.32	610,887.98	.....
5	.....	165,806.30	.....	165,806.30
6	.....	395,947.08	.....	395,947.08
7	.....	189.015.33	.....	189,015.33
8	.....	992,219.01	.....	992,219.01
	$3,501,477.56	$2,858,799.37	$2,626,108.17	$1,983,429.98

Net increase $642,678.19.

HERMAN BERNSTEIN'S "CLOSE-UPS OF EUROPE"

Three Features a Week — Three Beats a Week

First Release: January 12th

"HAS THE OLD WORLD BECOME NEW?"

A Brilliant Analysis of what the People of Europe are Thinking and Doing

Second Release: January 14th

"LORD BALFOUR ON WAR AND PEACE"

An Exclusive Interview with the Master of British Diplomacy, in which He Predicts Another War

Third Release: January 16th

"RAKOVSKY AND THE NEXT WAR"

An Exclusive Interview with the Soviet Ambassador to England, in which He Discusses the Friction Between Trotzky and the Other Soviet Leaders

No Contracts — Sold on Merit

Wire and Secure the Coming Beats

FEDERAL FEATURE SYNDICATE

160 Fifth Avenue — New York City

Churches Need Cultivation

Ministers all over the country are interested in display advertising, but in many cases they are unable to sell the idea to the boards which control the church purse.

Advertising managers and publishers can cooperate with the churches by selling directly to business and professional men space which will carry helpful suggestions to all the people of the town, urging them to attend some church.

Many papers have found such assistance has stimulated the use of larger space by individual churches.

Copy for such joint advertising is desirable. One series issued by this department may be obtained from Herbert H. Smith, 723 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, Pa. Price for use is 3 cents per week per thousand circulation.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A. A. C. W.

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World

383 Madison Ave. — New York City

BEN MELLON IS NOW VANDERBILT'S AGENT

Will Act as Personal Representative of Young Publisher on Pacific Coast While Latter Supervises Florida Interests

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., publisher of Vanderbilt Newspapers Inc., this week announced the appointment of Ben Mellon of New York as his personal representative in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

BEN MELLON

Mr. Mellon will act directly for Mr. Vanderbilt in the conduct of the latter's business on the coast where he publishes the Los Angeles Daily News and the San Francisco Daily Herald, illustrated tabloid morning papers.

During the next few months young Vanderbilt will spend the greater part of his time in Florida supervising the launching of his third tabloid in Miami. Mr. Mellon left for the Pacific coast this week.

"Mr. Mellon is a thorough newspaper man of wide experience," Mr. Vanderbilt said in announcing the appointment to his staff. "It is his desire to work in hearty cooperation with the men who have helped to make the News and Herald the splendid successes they are today. It is my desire that Mr. Mellon be given the same help and confidence that you have given to me personally in the past."

Mr. Vanderbilt's new executive has had general experience in the editorial, business and circulation departments of newspapers covering a period of 23 years. He began newspaper work on the Beaver (Pa.) Star in 1903. Later he joined the Washington (Pa.) Record, and following this ran a news service in the Monongahela Valley. For a number of years he was in charge of the promotion for the Pittsburgh Press, and was at various times on the Pittsburgh Post, Pittsburgh Sun, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, and Chicago Record Herald.

In 1911 he wrote features articles for Pearson's Magazine. Entering press service work he acted as New England manager of the International News Service, and was connected with the New York office of the United Press Associations.

From 1919 to February 1924, Mr. Mellon was associate editor of EDITOR & PUBLISHER. It was while interviewing young Vanderbilt for EDITOR & PUBLISHER at the time the latter first entered newspaper work as a reporter for the New York Herald that the two became acquainted. They have been close personal friends since.

Regarding his new position Mr. Mellon stated that his appointment does not in any way affect anyone within the Vanderbilt organization.

"Mr. Vanderbilt is convinced by the success of his coast papers that he is right in his belief that the public wants clean newspapers, free of scandal," he said. "He is also convinced that the tabloid is the logical development considering the rapid disappearance of our dailies."

Mr. Mellon is a member of the New York Newspaper Club, and one of its original incorporators.

NO FRILLS ON THIS PROGRAM

"Newspaper Business—Strictly" Theme of Virginia Press Meet

"Newspaper Business—Strictly" is the label which has been attached to the program for the seventh mid-winter meeting of the Virginia Press Association, Charlottesville, Jan. 16-17.

BALTIMORE STUDENTS HEAR NEWSPAPER TALKS

BALTIMORE laws forbid any introduction of commercial interest in the schools. Baltimore newspaper men have something of educational value to talk about. Consequently, the laws were waived, and the three learned gentlemen of the press pictured above (from left to right) Henry Edward Warner, on the Baltimore Sun, and author of "Songs of the Craft" for EDITOR & PUBLISHER J. Carroll Mansfield, creator of "High Lights of History," educational comic strip; and Clarence R. Gettier, creator of "Sou to Lou" and "Girlygags," on Jan. 9, banded together for a series of rapid fire appearances before various Baltimore high school assemblies, speaking to about 8,000 pupils.

Mr. Warner took the lecture platform on the subject of "Newspaper Art" while the two comic strip artists worked on their easels on either side of him.

The subjects listed give proof this will be carried out. Addresses scheduled include: Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, University of Virginia, "Jefferson and Free Speech"; James H. Lindsay, editor and publisher, Charlottesville Progress, "Women as Linotype Operators," and Richmond Maury, Richmond Times-Dispatch, "Farm News."

Midwest Advertisers to Meet

Andrew W. Neally, of the Geyer-Dayton Advertising Agency, Dayton, O., announces the annual convention of the Fifth District, A. A. C. W. will be held in Detroit Jan. 29-30. Neally, as district chairman, has appointed Clinton F. Berry, advertising manager of the Union Trust Company, Detroit, convention chairman.

A. B. C. GROUP TO MEET

Newspaper Advisory Committee Confers in Chicago Jan. 14

First meeting of the Newspaper Division's Advisory Committee of the Audit Bureau of Circulations is scheduled to be held in Chicago, Jan. 14.

The committee was created at the 1924 annual A. B. C. convention in accordance with a resolution passed by all divisions for the purpose of bringing before the Bureau's board of directors any suggestions considered desirable for the welfare of the division or of any individual member.

E. Lansing Ray of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat is chairman of the newspaper committee. Other members are: T. R. Williams, Pittsburgh Press; Hugh O'Donnell, New York Times; Galt Burns, Washington Star, and Gardner Cowles, Des Moines (Ia.) Register and Tribune-News.

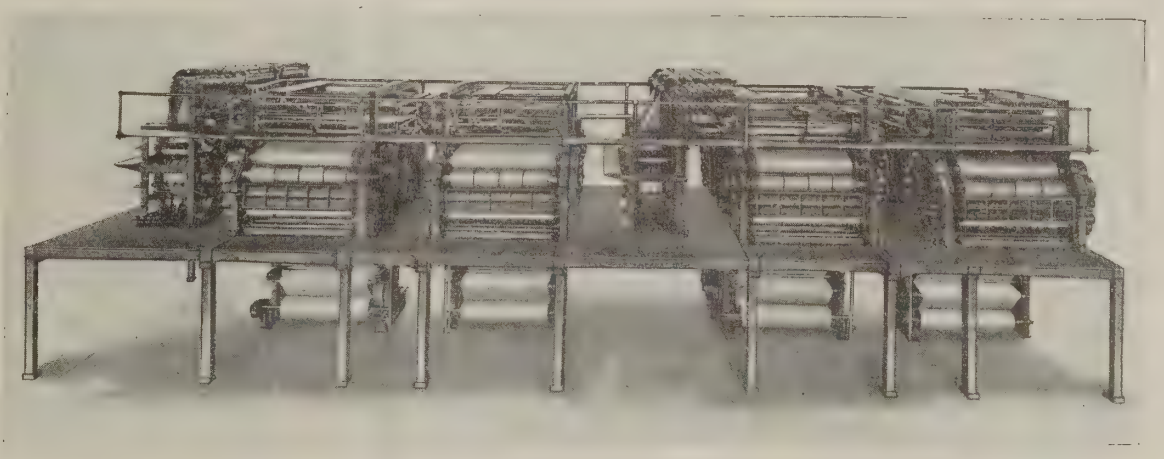
first! in OHIO

OVER 20,700,000 LINES in 1924

The Dispatch exceeded the next largest Ohio newspaper by over 2,000,000 lines and all other Columbus newspapers combined by over 3,000,000 lines.

NET PAID CIRCULATION 98,458



LARGEST IN CENTRAL OHIO

Columbus Dispatch

OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

The SCOTT

"MULTI-UNIT" DOUBLE-OCTUPLE PRESS

The Louisville Herald-Post, Louisville, Kentucky

Has just ordered one of these Scott Double Octuple Newspaper Printing Presses with Heavy Duty Folders for their new building. This press of great capacity will print and fold up to 64 page newspapers at a high rate of speed.

This is the Most Versatile Press Built capable of operating as separate Quadruples, Sextuples, or Octuples, as desired, delivering all products, inset or in as many sections, as required.

We Also Build "Straight-Unit" Newspaper Presses

SCOTT PRESSES NEVER MISS THE MAIL

WALTER SCOTT & CO.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, U. S. A.
CHICAGO 1441 Monadnock Block NEW YORK 1457 Broadway, at 42nd Street

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

News Story Correction

To Editor & Publisher: The report in your issue of Jan. 3 of my remarks before the American Association of Teachers of Journalism in Chicago on Dec. 30, attributes to me one statement which I did not make and which is apt to cause confusion.

The quoted paragraph was as follows, attributing to me this statement:

"A correspondent in France is paid $12,000 by his newspaper, considered an excellent wage in the field, to interpret the French people and the French nation to the American populace. Why is it worth more than four times that to the French Government to have him color his reports on occasion."

Your correspondent totally mistook what I said. I was referring to the fact that newspapers often fail to pay men in most responsible positions as correspondents and reporters what the importance of their jobs really calls for. I then stated that there was a certain correspondent of the highest character and unapproachable integrity in France who was paid $12,000 a year by certain American newspapers to interpret the French Government and the French people to the American people, and that if this correspondent were not of such unimpeachable character it would easily be worth the while of the French Government or French interests to pay him four or five times such a salary to color his reports in favor of the French point of view.

My thought was that a man in such a responsible position should be paid a very high salary so as to place him above all possibility of corrupt approach, precisely as men in other highly paid trusteeships are compensated, and that the newspapers ought not merely to depend upon the fidelity to duty of their correspondents, but pay them in accordance with their responsibilities.

Ivy L. Lee.

Enjoyed Williams' Cartoon

To Editor & Publisher:—When I come home each night and find the Editor & Publisher on my table, I lose not time to grab it and read it through. The first time does not satisfy as it only shows up the headlines, but the second and third time gets into the heart of the matter which brings out the more important points. It is surely an educator for every person interested in the trade.

One thing that struck me more forcibly than common was the cartoon by "Jim" Williams in your issue of Dec. 13.

When I was a boy in Boston, Mass., the city of my birth, I used to visit the Boston Museum. It was in the days of the "60's" for we left Boston in 1872 directly after the Boston fire.

As one entered the door of that famous place of amusement, where William Warren and Annie Clark were the leading characters, and where there were thousands of characters, impersonating the past, in wax and other ways on exhibition, the first thing one would notice was a man in a glass case, which represented "Gulliver in Lilliputian Land." He was bound hand and foot with ropes and hundreds of these little men were clambering all over him and shouting their victory in the capture of one who was larger than several hundred of their own kind.

This cartoon is a splendid "modern" representation of the original which I saw in my boyhood days, and as soon as I saw it I said "Gulliver," and if you never read the book I would advise you to get it and read it. The new version, however, is not like the old, for there were paragraphs in it that the people of today would think immoral, but it was then written in plain words and told the facts just as they were.

If you should see "Jim" Williams again, give him my regards.

I must say that that two-piece suit, dress-or edition, just as you might call it, of Dec. 13, was a masterpiece, and you and your force are to be highly congratulated.

Henry Allen Brainerd.
Historian, Nebraska Press Association.

An Aid to Advertising

To Editor & Publisher: I want to congratulate you upon the excellent job you did for the space buying fraternity when you issued your recent Space Buyers' Guide.

We believe this is an annual feature which will be of great value to the advertising fraternity.

Wishing you all success for your publication. Milo Whittaker.
Prudden, King & Prudden.

Correcting Tacoma Wage Award

To Editor & Publisher: Possibly not worth while but the writer doesn't like typographical errors, etc., referring to Spokane dispatch, "Tacoma Dispute ended by Arbitration," in your issue of Dec. 20.

1. Old scale day $7.40, night $7.90, not $7.

2. Demand of Union was $8.75 (not $7.50) day and night $9.75, not $9.50, and therefore per week, 42 hours, $52.50, day and $58.50 night.

3. Los Angeles 45 hours, not 40.

The wage established per hour same as old scale, $1.05 7/10 day and night, $1.12 8/10, greater by 2 cents than Los Angeles scale.

The purchasing power of the dollar figured in the solution quoting Irving Fisher. The demand was based on increased cost of living, May 1924, over May 1922. Union failed to prove the contention.

John A. Rea,
Arbitrator.

"Herewith Check"

To Editor & Publisher: Herewith check in payment of my subscription for the coming year.

I do not know of any bill that I pay with the same sense of value received—and plus—as this too small yearly subscription to indispensable Editor & Publisher. B. N. Garstin.
New York Evening Post.

Concerning "Xmas"

December 24, 1924

To Editor & Publisher: In your issue of Dec. 20 you quote Mr. M. E. Foster, editor of the Houston Chronicle, as saying that the use of "Xmas" for Christmas is "inexcusable and borders on the sacreligious," and that his newspaper "urges its advertisers to use a little more respect for the word that ought to mean so much to us."

Perhaps it may interest other publishers to know that the Christian Science Monitor does not labor with advertisers as to whether they shall or shall not use the word in question. It just doesn't print "Xmas" in its columns.

Norman S. Rose, Advertising Mgr.,
Christian Science Monitor.

Call for "Xmas" Ban Heeded

To Editor & Publisher:—Editor & Publisher for Nov. 29, 1924, carried an article by John H. A. Kelly and an editorial appealing to the newspapers to bar the contraction "Xmas" from all reading and advertising columns.

In a bulletin issued twice a month by this Bureau, containing material for the use of editors of Y. M. C. A. periodicals, reference was made to this appeal, as you will note by the attached copy.

We have since received word from a number of Y. M. C. A. editors endorsing the plan to use the word "Christmas" in full so that none of its significance shall be lost.

The editor of the monthly paper published by the Albany Central Y. M. C. A. writes, "Your bulletin arrived just i time for us to correct our proof. W certainly approve."

From the Chicago Association come this word, "We intend to follow M Kelly's suggestion here."

Detroit.—"We are heartily in favor o eliminating the contraction 'Xmas' fro the American vocabulary."

Fort Wayne, Ind.—"We certainl agree. You may be interested to kno that two years ago an editorial appeare in our 'Live Y'er' touching on this ver thought."

Scranton.—'We agree that 'Xmas' i too important to abbreviate."

Kirtalnd A. Wilson,
Bureau of Information, Y. M. C. A.

Former Wisconsin Publisher Dead

Thomas B. Reid, 81, editor and publisher of the Appleton (Wis.) Post fron 1865 to 1920 died Jan. 1, at Phoenix Ariz. Mr. Reid was United States Consul to Portugal from 1877 to 1881 and for nine years, 1898 to 1907 was United States Marshal.

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 128,703

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y. — Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

Los Angeles
EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.
Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.
IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY
REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?
Because
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.
Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

New Haven Register
is New Haven's Dominant Paper
Circulation over 42,171 Average
Bought every day by more New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.
New Haven Register
The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

The
Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest CIRCULATION IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

All Louisiana and MISSISSIPPI Listens In For RADIO NEWS in the NEW ORLEANS STATES
The state's representatives in the National Field—
THE JOHN M. BRANHAM CO.
New York — Chicago — St. Louis
Atlanta — Detroit — Kansas City
San Francisco—Los Angeles
New Orleans States

THE PASSAIC DAILY NEWS
Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities
TRADING POPULATION
167,395
NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

In New Orleans its
THE MORNING TRIBUNE
(Published week-day mornings)
THE NEW ORLEANS ITEM
(Published week-day afternoons)
THE ITEM TRIBUNE
(Published Sunday mornings)
Sold to National Advertisers at a combination rate 15c a line week-days and 18c a line Sundays.

Unexcelled as a Food Medium.
4 to 6 food pages every Thursday.
TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES
KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg. Chicago

WRITERS SHOULD AVOID TELEGRAPHER COMPLEX

Gilbert Gabriel, New York Telegram and Evening Mail, Claims "Benevolent Marble Heart" Needed by Newspaper Men

Gilbert Gabriel, dramatic critic, of the New York Telegram and Evening Mail, and novelist, this week suggested that newspaper men should avoid what might be called "the telegrapher complex," if they want to become successful writers.

GILBERT GABRIEL

"Newspaper work is the best training in the world for a novelist—yes," he said. "But the newspaper man must avoid the usual, external treatment of news, which should be the exclusive copyright of telegraphers.

"They should rather cultivate a benevolent marble heart, and, looking at the world from the outsider's lofty point of view, still be kind and human to its creatures.

"Consider the old telegrapher," he continued. "He winces not, nor does he weep. With impassive face, his casual hand clicks off the news of a suicide, a murder, an earthquake in Japan, a typhoon, a railroad or ship disaster.

"What is he but a waste basket, into which the crudities and inanities of life are poured?

"Does he care?

"Certainly not. His greatest concern is to keep his stub of a pipe lighted.

"And too often, the newspaper men who supply him with copy become afflicted with the 'telegrapher complex.'

"After all, to use William McFee's phrase, the only attitude that can thrive in this world is that of a benevolent marble heart. A decent newspaper man has or gets this attitude.

"Then, while looking at the world from a complete outsider's point of view, he will also have sympathy. He will not be content with external news, he will go in for psychology and the deeper subtleties, and will become a successful writer."

Mr. Gabriel has been in newspaper work since graduating from Williams College in 1912, being most of the time on the New York Sun, where he was reporter, music critic and book reviewer. He is author of a novel published this year called "The Brownstone Front," and also of "Jimminy" and "The Seven Branch Candle Stick."

Daily Issues Annual Book

The Frederick (Md.) News-Post has issued its annual year book containing facts about the city, county and state, as well as much miscellaneous information.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

Jan. 13—Sphinx Club Dinner, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York.

Jan. 13—Advertising Club of New York, luncheon to Sir Esme Howard.

Jan. 14-15—National Conference on Distribution, Washington, D. C.

Jan. 15—Nevada Press Assn. annual meeting, Lovelock, Nev.

Jan. 16-17—American Society of Newspaper Editors, annual meeting, Washington, D. C.

Jan. 16-17—North Dakota Press Assn., winter meeting, Valley City, N. D.

Jan. 16-17—Virginia Press Assn., mid-year meeting, Charlottesville, Va.

Jan. 16-17—Northeast Nebraska Editorial Assn., meeting, West Point, Neb.

Jan. 21—Arizona Newspaper Publishers Assn., Tucson, Ariz.

Jan. 22-23—Indiana Republican Editorial Assn., mid-year meeting, Indianapolis, Ind.

Jan. 23-24—Colorado Editorial Assn., meeting, Denver.

Jan. 24—Alabama Press Assn., southern section, mid-year meeting, Montgomery, Ala.

TWO WIRE PRINTER FIRMS MERGED

Morkrum and Kleinschmidt Companies Consolidate in Chicago Jan. 2, Ending Long Patent Litigation—New Stock Issued

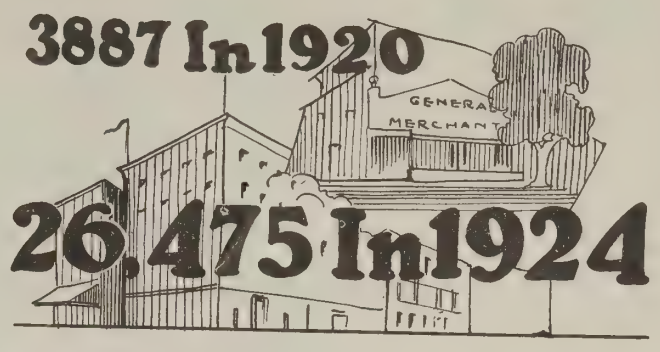
Long patent litigation between the Morkrum Company of Chicago and the Kleinschmidt Electric Company of Long Island, N. Y., manufacturers of telegraphic typewriting machines used by news services, was ended by consolidation of the companies, Jan. 2, in Chicago.

The new corporation known as the Morkrum-Kleinschmidt Company will issue $1,500,000 in preferred stock and 10,000 shares of no par value common stock. None of the stock will be offered for sale. Headquarters are now in Chicago.

The merging of the two companies is the latest development in the long progress of a romantic feature of the electrical age—the operating of typewriting machines by telegraph.

Radio typewriting has been done, but this step still is in the experimental stage.

The Long Island plant of the Kleinschmidt concern will continue operation until the Morkrum plant can be expanded. The present Morkrum plant occupies about 40,000 square feet of space and is expected to be virtually doubled by the consolidated organization.



The officers of the new corporation are Sterling Morton, president, who has been head of the Morkrum Company; Edward Kleinschmidt and Howard L. Krum, vice-presidents; Daniel Peterkin, Chicago, treasurer, and William Kleinschmidt, secretary.

Schenectady Daily to Build

The Schenectady Union Publishing Company, publishers of the Schenectady Union-Star, this week purchased a site for a new building. Construction work will start in the near future. New equipment, including a Hoe sextuple press will be installed.

Editorial Staff Dinner

Sixty members of the editorial staff of the Buffalo Evening News held a gridiron dinner Jan. 3. Guests included Edward H. Butler, proprietor, and all department heads of the newspaper.

El Dorado, Ark.

A sleepy South Arkansas hamlet in 1920—A live, fast growing city four years later. The sensational growth of El Dorado has commanded the attention of hundreds of national advertisers.

El Dorado, in 1924, launched three important projects, paving, sewers and schools. The former has been completed. Fifteen miles of interlocking concrete streets extend into the residential sections of the city.

A $500,000 sewerage system is now nearing completion.

The new El Dorado High School, which represents an investment of $337,000 in educational facilities, is now under construction.

At the close of 1924, public utilities report gains in service connections from 5 to 16 per cent over 1923.

More than $800,000 was spent during the past year in the construction of fine homes.

The banks of this city, at the close of this year, showed a gain of $2,000,000 in deposits.

El Dorado Daily News

The merchandising and service department offers full co-operation to national advertisers.

The El Dorado Daily News is published every day excepting Mondays. It carries a full leased Associated Press wire, full N. E. A. service, with numerous feature pages through the week. The News is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations. It is the only morning publication between Little Rock, Ark., and Shreveport, La., and dominates the field, carrying six times the national advertising of any other newspaper in the territory.

The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency
National Representative

PLUMBERS USING DAILIES TO COMBAT "I FORGOT MY TOOLS" JOKE

But That Effort is Only a Phase of a Large Cooperative Movement to Increase Business Through Newspaper Advertising

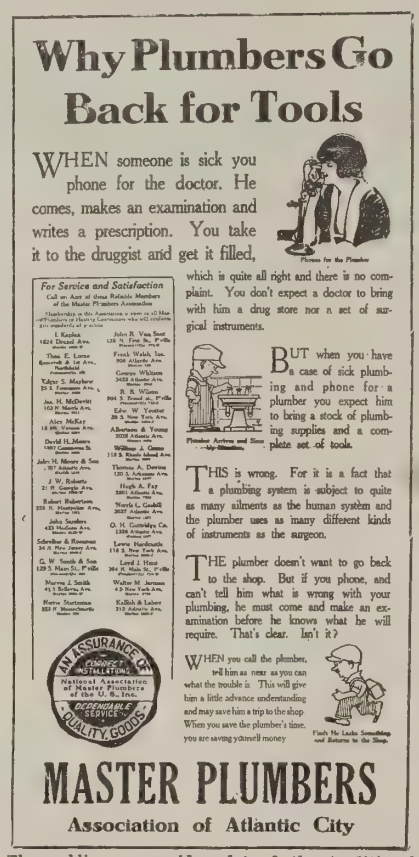
By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

THE plumbing dealer has been considered for many years a poor prospect as a steady newspaper advertiser.

The average plumber has known little or nothing about advertising in any form, and cared less. He has been too busy in other directions to give the subject much thought. When he has advertised, he has looked for too quick results and has not had particularly constructive copy to use.

Today the plumbing dealer is emerging from the dark ages of doing business and in many cities becoming a better merchandiser, which means he is much more ready to become a steady, more skillful advertiser than at any previous time, provided he can be encouraged to go ahead by the local newspaper.

Slightly over four years ago the manufacturers and wholesalers of the plumbing and heating industry sponsored and financed a co-operative non-profit organization, the National Trade Extension Bureau, located in The Mercantile Bank Building, Evansville, Ind., for the purpose of making the plumbing and heating contractor a better business man.



The bureau has extended its service greatly. It has done much to standardize catalogs, give personal help to dealers through an active field department, stimulate interest in the problem of where apprentices are coming from and their training, show dealers how to keep books and figure costs, furnish sales helps and advertising ideas, aid in store planning, provide window display material, study the statistics of the industry, and many more things besides. It issues a monthly bulletin to some 35,000 dealers. Its text books on financing, systematizing and managing the office, accounting, estimating and contracting, compiling and using a mailing list and similar matters have been of great help to new and old dealers.

Copy ideas appropriate to the season for use by local dealers are furnished monthly. Mats of the advertising may be obtained at cost or less by the newspaper or the dealer. Any reader of EDITOR & PUBLISHER may obtain details from Howard E. Jones, director of the bureau's sales help service.

The bureau has worked out a chart of fixed charges or operating costs. It estimates that for advertising and donations, the dealer should be spending money for advertising thus:

Volume of Business Per Year	Advertising and Donations
$7,500	$110
10,000	150
15,000	225
20,000	285
25,000	325
35,000	375
50,000	450
75,000	600
100,000	750
150,000	900
200,000	1,050
250,000	1,200

If all dealers in the country were investing even this modest percentage in newspaper space, the newspapers would be enriched by many hundreds of thousands of dollars a year in the aggregate and the public would have an entirely new conception of the plumbing and heating dealer, the services he renders society and his place in the community.

The public can avoid a lot of the traditional woes of plumbing repairs by its own thought and effort, declare the Atlantic City masters in paid newspaper space.

"For four years now the sales-help service of this bureau has been pounding away on the subject of newspaper advertising, and we are commencing to produce results," Mr. Jones commented. "For some unaccountable reason, we have not awakened intelligent co-operation on the part of the newspapers to the extent that our efforts, offers and purposes would justify. Out of a personal experience in the newspaper field, combined with the experience of the last four years, I am wondering somewhat if there are not too many newspaper advertising departments which value the legs of a 'copy-chaser' more than the brains of a real promotion man.

"All of this advertising we are encouraging is done on a local advertising basis. We neither seek nor desire compensation from the newspaper nor from the client in the matter."

If the monthly service does not fill a particular problem, the bureau prepares localized copy. It will get up a complete schedule if necessary, the space to be paid for by the local dealer.

Many cities have Master Plumbers' or Heating Contractors' Associations, which, with assistance in copy from the bureau, have launched year-'round co-operative newspaper advertising campaigns. Cities where co-operative campaigns were published last year included:

Birmingham, Ala.; Sacramento, Cal.; Denver, Col.; Wilmington, Del.; Savannah, Ga.; Peoria, Ill.; Quincy, Ill.; Rock Island, Ill.; Bloomington, Ind.; Evansville, Ind.; Ft. Dodge, Ia.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Lewiston, Me.; Lowell, Mass.; St. Paul, Minn.; Winona, Minn.; Lincoln, Neb.; Atlantic City, N. J.; Montclair, N. J.; North Wildwood, N. J.; Newburgh, N. Y.; Binghamton, N. Y.; Syracuse, N. Y.; Asheville, N. C.; Durham, N. C.; Greensboro, N. C.; Columbus, O.; Zanesville, O.; Portland, Ore.; Erie, Pa.; Hazleton, Pa.; Lancaster, Pa.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Reading, Pa.; Scranton, Pa., Memphis, Tenn.; Galveston, Tex.; Houston, Tex.; Richmond, Va.; Milwaukee, Wis.; El Paso, Tex., and Oklahoma City, Okla.

In cities where there is an association, action often can be obtained through the secretary of the local organization. If there is no association, the idea can be sold to the dealers by the newspaper solicitor, armed with necessary proofs.

A better opinion of these trades and the men engaged in them is one purpose of the copy. Much can be done in co-operative advertising which the individual dealer cannot afford. A permanent committee or individual to handle the advertising is suggested.

Instead of talking specific products, the copy is devoted largely to advertising the use or service of the commodities furnished by this trade. A seal and guarantee form a part of much of the copy.

The bureau is of the opinion that listing names of members financing the local campaign wastes space, and that it is better to devote the space so taken up to constructive copy. Members are expected to do some advertising of their own to supplement the co-operative campaign.

During 1925 the bureau will push the idea of "Ask 'em to buy," which has been effective in automobile accessories.

The age-old joke about the plumber who always goes back for his tools is one of the misconceptions which the plumbing and heating dealers are countering through advertising, as illustrated by the accompanying reproduction of a half-page advertisement in the Atlantic City (N. J.) Evening Union, headed "Why Plumbers Go Back For Tools."

You Know It's

The Beacon Journal

In Akron, Ohio

No one disputes that fact. But do that business is booming in Akron—that the factories are working three shifts—that every one is buying what they want, as well as what they need. Money is plentiful—business is good.

You Know

Run Your Campaign in a Live Paper, in a Live City.

LEADERSHIP

Continuous preference on the part of advertisers proves the responsiveness and explains the leadership of the

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

A Stable Market

THE Milwaukee-Wisconsin market offers your most dependable sales opportunity in 1924! The first city of diversified industries located in the world's richest dairying center—an unbeatable combination — thoroughly covered by one advertising medium—

The Milwaukee JOURNAL
FIRST - by Merit

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE

TACOMA

Population, 112,000 People

Local flour mills export over 1,500,000 barrels of flour each year; Tacoma Smelter largest in the West; 2 High Schools, 6 Intermediate Schools, 39 Grade Schools, College of Puget Sound, Annie Wright Seminary and 145 churches.

You can blanket the rich and prosperous territory of Tacoma and Southwest Washington through the columns of the News Tribune; A. B. C. Audited Circulation, 32,643.

Frank S. Baker, President. Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave., New York City. Ford, Parsons Co., 360 No. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

R. J. Bidwell & Co., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

The Plain Dealer

has the Largest Circulation of Any Cleveland Daily Newspaper

205,569

J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York. Woodward & Kelly, Security Bldg., Chicago

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.

Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

OLD TIMERS RENEW CUB DAYS AT NEWSPAPER CLUB

"OLD TIMERS' NIGHT" at the New York Newspaper Club Dec. 0 brought together many former star re-orters of early New York newspaper ays. Above are shown several of the riginal Amen Corner members (from left to right) Ben B. Odell, former Governor of New York; Lafayette Gleason, William R. Wilcox, William Leary, Harold Anderson, Willis Holley, Luther B. Little and George F. Spinney. Not included in the picture, but much in evidence at the celebration was Robert E. Livingston, of the Consolidated Gas and Electric Company, formerly of the old New York Herald, and still an associate member of the Newspaper Club, well known by New York newspaper men.

ASKS BILLBOARD TAX

Delaware Official Wants State Control and Levy of 10c. Per Square Foot

C. D. Buck, chief engineer of the Dela-ware State Highway Department, in his eport for the year 1924, recommends hat the Legislature enact a law that will nable the department to control the erec-ion of billboards along the public roads, nd also to collect a tax of 10 cents per quare foot on every board within 200 eet of a public road.

In his comment in support of the ecommendation Mr. Buck points out that t is the public road that makes the board aluable and not the private property on which it is erected, therefore, if there is o be any revenue at least part of it be-ongs to the public, which owns the roads.

He said also that if the department were given regulatory power it could pre-ent the erection of boards at points where they obstruct intersecting roads.

Central N. Y. Publishers Meeting

Stronger organization, and the need of field secretary are to be discussed at he annual convention of the Central New ork Press Association, being held at yracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y., an. 10. Hugh Parker, president, has rged all members to attend. John W. Baker, editor of the Ithaca (N. Y.) ournal-News, and president of the New ork State Press Association, will speak n the value of a paid field secretary, nd T. H. Townsend, assistant editor of he Dairymen's League News, on "Or-anization."

SERGENT PROMOTED

Becomes Business Manager of the Louisville Herald and Post

Paul O. Sergent, circulation manager of the Louisville Herald and Post has been made business manager of the two newspapers. The appointment follows a reorganization coincident with the purchase by James B. Brown of the interest in the publications held by Richard G. Knott and Mrs. R. W. Knott, announced last week.

PAUL O. SERGENT

Mr. Sergent began newspaper work on the Grand Rapids Press, becoming circulation manager. He left the newspaper business to serve in the aviation corps during the war, and after the war became circulation manager of the Baltimore News and American. He left to become circulation manager of the N. Y. Herald.

Following the sale and consolidation of the Herald with the Tribune, Mr. Sergent joined the Louisville papers.

Tennessee Would Ban Billboards

A bill, which would eliminate and prevent erection of advertising signboards on the State road system, is to be presented to the Tennessee Legislature.

America might enjoy happiness and prosperity if it could ban jingo and make the gin go.—Norfolk-Virginian-Pilot.

200% Increase In Circulation

In October, 1923, when J. D. Chamberlain, editor of the Marietta (O.) Register, bought the complete ASSOCIATED EDITORS' SERVICE, the Register had a circulation of 1500.

On December 31, 1924, when the contract was renewed, the circulation had increased to nearly 4500.

* * *

Associated Editors service consists of 15 high-grade features, released daily, semi-weekly and weekly.

Write Mr. Chamberlain for his opinion of the service. Wire or write us for samples.

ASSOCIATED EDITORS, INC.
440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely By THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

Imperial
in the
Black Diamond Region

WILKES-BARRE amidst the coal fields of Pennsylvania helps supply American industries and American homes with fuel for power and heat.

Its 73,000 citizens look to The Evening News, Wilkes-Barre Record and Sunday Independent to keep them informed on local, national and international events.

The publishers of these three dependable newspapers all saw fit to depend upon the Imperial Plus Plan for taking care of their metal. Their decision was based upon a desire to get the highest efficiency and the most years of service from their metal.

Resolve to Use the Plus Plan in 1925

Such a resolution carried out combines with it increased metal efficiency, dependability and economy as shown in added years of metal service. May we send you the plan now?

Imperial METAL
Linotype—Monotype—Intertype—
Stereotype
Elrod—Ludlow—Linograph—Thompson
Imperial Type Metal Co.
New York—Philadelphia—Cleveland—Detroit

LOUISVILLE HERALD-POST'S NEW $500,000 HOME

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

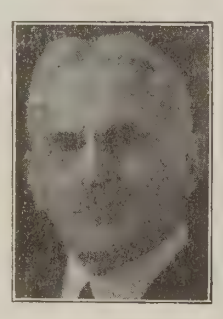
LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 6.—Plans for the new half million dollar home of the Louisville Herald-Post have been changed somewhat since first announcement of purchase of a large building on Fifth street for housing the plant. It was found that in spite of the large size of the building, it will not be possible to get all operating departments on the floor.



Another story will be added at once, work to start next week. It is planned to have the plant in operation by late spring. The basement will be used for ink and paper storage. In the rear the eight new Scott presses will be fed, although they will be operated on the first floor. The two companies now have 31 Linotype machines. These, with the stereotype equipment, etc., which will be moved into one plant. A photographing and engraving department will be just off the stereotype room, which will be adjacent to the composing room.

The business and advertising departments will be on the first floor forward of the composing rooms, while the present balcony in the building will be widened, leaving a well, and will be used by the circulation and mailing departments. At the rear a full third floor, new throughout, will be used by the editorial department, library, morgue, etc. Joseph & Joseph are the architects.

MERRIAM RE-ELECTED

Mount Vernon Publisher Again Heads Westchester County Publishers

F. A. Merriam, publisher of the Mount Vernon (N. Y.) Argus and the New Rochelle (N. Y.) Standard-Star, was unanimously re-elected president of the Westchester County Publishers Association at a meeting held this week.

F. A. MERRIAM

The association's constitution was amended to make newspaper publishers in adjoining counties eligible for membership.

Other officers re-elected were: vice president, Wallace O'Dell, of the Tarrytown News; secretary-treasurer, Thomas Blain, of the Portchester Item.

LINOGRAPH INVENTOR DIES

Hans Peterson Perfected 12-Magazine Type Setting Machine

Hans Petersen, 52, inventor of the Linograph typesetting machine, vice-president and general manager of the Linograph Company, of Davenport, Ia., died at 6:15 o'clock the morning of Dec. 25, after several months' illness in his home in Davenport. Mr. Peterson was noted in this country and abroad as an inventor, his biggest accomplishment being the development 12 years ago of the Linograph. He has finished several improvements to the finished machine and two years ago worked out a 12-magazine typesetting machine.

His inventions in this field have been the foundation of one of Davenport's most important industries. His brothers, P. O. Petersen and J. C. Petersen, were associated with him in the firm.

Mr. Petersen was born in Denmark March 4, 1872 and came to this country, when a child, with his parents. The family went to Minnesota and after a few years moved to Minneapolis, where he had resided until 12 years ago when he came to this city and launched his manufacturing company.

JACKSON'S ESTATE TO WIDOW

Son and Grandson Given $1,000 Each —Property Valued Near Million

C. S. Jackson, publisher of the Portland Oregonian Journal, who died Dec. 27, bequeathed nearly his entire estate to his widow, Mrs. Maria C. Jackson. The will, dated Dec. 29, 1920, left $1,000 to his son, Philip L. Jackson, who has been the active head of the Journal since his father's health broke down several years ago, and $1,000 to his grandson, C. J. Jackson, Jr.

Miss Julia Hobday, a niece, named with Mrs. Jackson and Philip L. Jackson, as joint executors of the estate is to receive $5,000 for her services. The entire residue of the estate goes to the widow unconditionally. The will does not place any value on the estate. The only official value is contained in an inventory and appraisement filed in Court June 13, 1923, which placed the value at $982,581.80.

The larger holdings of the estate were listed, approximately, as follows: Liberty Bonds, $80,000; United States Treasury Certificates, $27,200; Journal Building Company, $150 000; Journal Publishing Company, $531,000; the home property at 610 Salmon street, $10,000.

AMERICAN NEWS CO. MOVES

Largest Periodical Distributing Firm Occupies New Quarters

The American News Company, Inc., moved Jan. 5, from Park Place, New York, to its new home at 181 Varick street. Since its organization in 1864, the company has grown to be one of the largest periodical and book distributing agencies in the world.

More than 50,000 dealers throughout the United States, Canada, and foreign countries are served by the American News Company, which is said to do a business of between $60,000,000 and $80,000,00 annually. John Hamilton is the only one of the seven founders still alive.

THE same standards of quality are maintained by The News today that caused this paper to be recognized as one of America's best dailies long years ago.

The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

MOST NEWS
The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh
The Pittsburgh Post
MORNING AND SUNDAY
October circulation (net paid)
Daily Circulation.....137,824
Sunday Circulation.....197,347
Member A. B. C.

The Market--Kansas
The state that raised the biggest crops in 1924—154,253,000 bushels of wheat and 137,241,000 bushels of corn, plus other big grain yields.
The state where the cash gain on wheat and corn alone is $160,000,000 this year—one third of the increase on these two crops now reported for the entire United States.
The Medium --- Daily Capital
The only Kansas newspaper that covers the entire state.
It gives co-operation of the finest kind to advertisers and has heavy coverage of Topeka and the Topeka trade territory. Circulation 36,000. Member A. B. C.
Topeka Daily Capital
Topeka, Kansas
Arthur Capper, Publisher
Marco Morrow, Asst. Pub.

San Francisco Chronicle
M. H. de Young
Leading Newspaper of the Pacific Coast
"Blankets" Northern and Central California
A clientele that can and does buy everything
National Advertising Representatives
Williams, Lawrence & Cresmer Co.
225 Fifth Ave. NEW YORK
360 N. Michigan Ave. CHICAGO

first!
—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results
The Indianapolis NEWS

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"
The World.
MORNING EDITION
The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.
The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Always Reliable
The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia and GROWING!

2000 ATTEND DINNER TO JOSEPH BANNON

Hearst Pays Tribute to His New York Circulation Manager in Telegram Read at Astor Banquet, January 4

He is a worker who possesses energy, riative, and persistence, the three quali- that make success."

his was the tribute from William dolph Hearst, paid Joseph D. Ban-, president of the Newspaper and il Deliverers' Union of New York, circulaton director of the New York irst publications, when he was guest honor at a banquet at the Hotel Astor, w York, Jan. 4. More than 2,000 nds attended.

he message from Mr. Hearst, who t San Simeon, Cal., was read by Ar- Brisbane.

he toastmaster was E. T. O'Lough- rand among those who spoke, in addi- to Mr. Bannon, were Mr. Brisbane, is Wiley, business manager of the w York Times, Peter J. Brady, James Holland, Edward Bader, and Bernarr fadden, publisher of the New York ning Graphic.

thers at the guest table were H. M. erts, business manager of the New k American, Howard Davis, business ager of the New York Herald Tri-, Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey , Gene Fowler, day managing editor, William A. Thayer, night managing r of the New York American.

s a fellow gets on, if he has lived as we of the newspaper game must he realizes that when it is all said done, the finest gifts of this life are ds," Mr. Bannon said.

nong those who were unable to at- and sent messages of regret were k A. Munsey, publisher of the New Sun, New York Telegram-Mail, magazines, and Bradford Merrill, ral manager of the Hearst news- rs.

AD TIPS

liam Henry Baker, Guardian Building, and. Now handling account of The , Friedlander & Martin Company, Toledo, facturers of "Redfern-Lucile" coats and

H. Cochrance Company, 30 North Dear- street, Chicago. Sending out copy on the hin Chemical Company of Chicago.

ins-Kirk, Inc., 752 North Michigan ave- Chicago. Preparing a list of papers in James S. Kirk Company will be used.

chy Company, 9 Murray street, New Placing orders with newspapers in s sections for Allen S. Olmsted, "Al- Foot-Ease," Le Roy, N. Y.

iam F. Dobbs Agency, Danbury, Conn. secured the account of the Kerr Chemical ny, flax seed emulsion, Danbury, Conn.

.. Denne & Company, Ltd., Reford Building, Toronto, Ont., Canada. Now handling accounts of Williard's Chocolates Limited, Toronto, and E. & S. Currie, Limited, Toronto, manufacturer of men's dress accessories.

Donovan & Armstrong, 1211 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Reported to be making up list for Topkis Bros. Company, underwear, Wilmington, Del.

Gundlach Advertising Agency, Wrigley Building, 400 North Michigan avenue. Sending out a new campaign on Chase Candy Company to a group of papers in Kansas and Missouri.

William Irving Hamilton, 267 5th avenue, New York. Reported will place account of Wm. H. Bacheller Co., Inc., "C. C. A." cigar, Worcester, Mass.

Hanff-Metzger, 95 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders with some Ohio and Pennsylvania newspapers for the Cameo Record Corp. phonograph records, New York.

S. D. Hofheimer, Land Title Building, Philadelphia. Reported will shortly make up a newspaper list for the Mifflin Chemical Corp. alkohol, Philadelphia.

Charles W. Hoyt Company, 116 West 32nd street, New York. Has secured the accounts of the American Hard Rubber Company, radio panels and "Ace" combs, New York; Chas. Gulden, mustard, New York, and the Sanitas Company, Inc., Brooklyn, manufacturers of "Stim" a hair and scalp treatment and "Pineglow" shampoo.

H. W. Kastor & Sons, Lytton Building, Chicago. Renewing some newspaper contracts for the Williamson Candy Company "Oh Henry" candy, Chicago.

H. W. Kastor & Sons, Arcade Building, New York. Now handling account of the Congress Cigar Company, "La Palina" cigar, Philadelphia.

Kling Gibson Company, 220 South State street, Chicago. Placing copy to a large number of eastern papers on Edna Wallace Hopper.

H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, 440 4th avenue, New York. Making some contracts for the Guaranty Trust Company, New York.

Lord and Thomas, Wrigley Building, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing copy in Western newspapers on the California Prune and Apricot Growers.

Lord & Thomas, 247 Park avenue, New York. Reported to be placing account of Fulls & Hatch Company, Hatchway Men's undercloth- ing, Albany, N. Y.

MacManus, Inc., 82 Hancock avenue, East Detroit, Mich. Renewing newspaper contracts for the Maxwell Motor Sales Corp., Detroit.

John F. Murray Advertising Agency, 598 Madison avenue, New York. Making 5000-line contracts with newspapers in various sections for R. L. Watkins Company, mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, New York.

Harry Porter Company, 15 West 44th street, New York. Placing schedules with newspapers for Thos. Leeming & Company "Baume Bengue," New York.

Arthur Rosenberg Company, 110 West 34th street, New York. Has secured the account of the Preferred Radio Products Corp., New York.

Frank Seaman, Inc., 470 4th avenue, New York. Placing account of the Gillette Safety Razor Company, Boston.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 410 No. Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making contracts with newspapers in various sections for the Hoosier Mfg. Company, "Hoosier Kitchen Cabinets," New Castle, Ind.

Waters Advertising Agency, 37 West 39th street, New York. Now handling accounts of the Kuckro Chemical Company, Westminster Engravo Company, the Safety Transit Bus Company and Dazian's, Incorporated.

Williams & Cunnyngham, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing copy in eastern papers on the Ingersoll Redipoint Company.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Comic Cartoons

ALT MUNSON'S "TIME TO CRAB"
Appearing in Brooklyn Eagle
ature Syndicate, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y.

Editorials

IMELY TOPICS, DAILY SERVICE
Exclusive Territory
Three Days' Service and Rates
Gladly Sent
Reid Editorial Service
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

WORLD'S FAMOUS AUTHORS
lled selection, serials, novelettes, shorts. for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., New York.

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
44 Margaret St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Radio

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

FOR SMALLER PAPERS
A new and snappy weekly radio review
By CARL H. BUTMAN
Washington Radio News Service
1422 F St. Washington, D. C.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Sport Cartoon

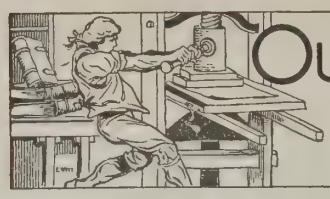
"BUDDIE SHEEL'S" DAILY COMMENT ON the Sport World. Featured by Brooklyn Times Tri Feature Syndicate, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y.

IOWA

A Factory State of World-wide Interest

Iowa is the leading agricultural commonwealth of the United States. It is so well known in this particular, that the fact that it is also a great manufacturing state is not fully realized. Manufacturing and industrial enterprises have grown by leaps and bounds.

Iowa has many factories that sell their products throughout the world. These factories are not centered in a few cities, but are scattered broadcast over the state. This type of industry proves Iowa to be a true factory state, drawing upon the whole world for raw material and converting it into merchandise for world markets.



The most important industries serve agricultural interests — meat packing, cereal preparations and dairy products.

Over three-quarter of a billion dollars' worth of products are sold annually by the 5700 Iowa factories. This means that from 80,000 to 85,000 factory workers draw wages exceeding $100,000,000 annually.

This factory and agricultural market offers an attractive field to all national advertisers.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
*Burlington Gazette .....(E)	10,164	.04
*Cedar Rapids Gazette .....(E)	21,481	.07
*Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(E)	14,564	.06
*Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(S)	17,895	.06
†Davenport Times .....(E)	24,676	.07
*Iowa City Press-Citizen.....(E)	6,387	.035
*Mason City Globe Gazette .....(E)	12,622	.04
*Muscatine Journal .....(E)	7,762	.035
*Ottumwa Courier .....(E)	12,852	.05
*Waterloo Evening Courier.....(E)	17,071	.06

* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

DURING a trip through the Shenandoah Valley last spring William F. Bigelow, editor of Good Housekeeping remarked to me after we had attended several social functions, "I wish you would keep quiet about my being editor of Good Housekeeping. The minute you mention that fact the women begin to say nice things about my magazine. What I want to get from this trip is not praise, but criticism."

Practical editors invite criticism; so do teachers of journalism. Consequently, I am inclined to believe that John W. Cunliffe, director of the Pulitzer School at Columbia, is not very much excited over "The School of Journalism—A Myth" which Frank McCabe contributes to the December issue of the Columbia Varsity —the illustrated literary magazine of Columbia University.

The editorial subhead under the title is as follows:

Mr. McCabe, a member of the staff of the New York World and a former student in the School of Journalism, has based this criticism of the "Reporter Factory" entirely upon facts and he carefully explains the faults of the weakest of Columbia's Graduate Schools.

As a former student of the Pulitzer School, Mr. McCabe has a perfect right to be as critical of the instruction as he chooses. Of his own experiences he doubtless can speak with authority. But when he attempts to set forth the opinion of an experienced newspaper man toward technical instruction in journalism one may, it seems to me, question his assertions.

The Director of the Pulitzer School at Columbia needs no assistance from me in the matter of a defense of the curriculum; but because this indictment by Mr. McCabe, while referring to the Pulitzer school in particular includes other schools in general, I want to take up several points which he raises in his article. One of his greatest indictments of the Pulitzer School of Journalism in the twelfth year of its existence is the strictness which the Director insists upon in the matter of attendance at recitations. By way of contrast the School of Law is mentioned. Before a man may be admitted to the bar examinations the School of Law at which he has been in attendance must issue by a state statute a certificate of good and regular attendance. Therefore, it is obvious that if any Law School is careless in its matter of attendance it is not being just to the state which grants the school a charter.

I am not bringing any criticism against the Columbia School of Law by this assertion for I know nothing of its attendance requirements, but I do insist that this indictment of the Pulitzer School in the matter of attendance is not well taken.

Immediately following this indictment of the Pulitzer School on the matter of attendance Mr. McCabe says:

Recently, we had a long talk with a former instructor in the school who now holds a high position on a well-known magazine. He admitted that "there was something wrong" but tried to blame it on the size of the classes.

The only former instructor in the Pulitzer School who justifies the description just given is Robert E. MacAlarney, now managing editor of the Ladies' Home Journal. Recently Mr. MacAlarney, in reviewing "The Best News Stories of 1923" in one of the magazines, called attention to the large number of news stories furnished that volume by former students of the Pulitzer School. Some of us regret that Mr. MacAlarney did not list the stories furnished by former students in other schools of journalism. But that is another story—as Kipling would say.

A little farther along in the article Mr. McCabe asserts that "the old prejudice against a school to train newspaper men still exists." Mr. McCabe has a perfect right to his own opinion, but a detailed survey recently made on this matter does not support his assertion.

To Mr. McCabe the Pulitzer School of Journalism may be "merely an academic playground" but other students, as I have found out through inquiry at the Newspaper Club hold a different opinion consequently, the matter at best is open to some debate.

In speaking of the work of one of the instructors at the Pulitzer School Mr. McCabe says:

But his course is entirely foam and is a mere dissertation on the romance of metropolitan journalism.

Other students speak very highly of this particular course—a fact which raises honest doubts as to the truthfulness of Mr. McCabe's assertion.

Another indictment of the Pulitzer School of Journalism, as Mr. McCabe sees it, may be found in the following paragraphs of his article:

The courses in modern European drama and modern European fiction and poetry are entirely out of place in a school of journalism. These are typical of the academic and non-professional air about the entire school. As courses for the enhancement of the students' interest in English literature, they supply little to what many of the students acquired in college.

They are much below the intellectual standards set by the English departments in Columbia College or in the graduate school. A short jaunt through an Encyclopedia article would cover the course.

Whether courses in modern European drama and modern European fiction are out of place in the curriculum of a school of journalism is again open to debate. A city editor of a New York paper with whom I once discussed this matter thought that the curriculum should have just such a course for the sake of a cultural background and a comparison of standards. Certainly the opinion of a city editor is not to be lightly regarded, with all due respect to Mr. McCabe.

Of the work of the Pulitzer School in general Mr. McCabe comments as follows:

The School of Journalism has never justified the great experiment of its founder. It probably would not be fair to say that the school has entirely disproved J. P.'s contentions. It certainly has supplied little to support his ideas.

But before one can reach a logical deduction about a matter of this kind, it would be worthwhile to have the opinion of Ralph Pulitzer and the other newspaper men who are on the advisory board of the Pulitzer School of Journalism.

Any comment about "The School of Journalism—A Myth" by Mr. McCabe would be most unfair if it did not frankly admit that some of this criticism is doubtless true—true not only for the Pulitzer School but for all other universities offering technical instruction in journalism. Of the sincerity of his belief there can be no question. His article will set many teachers of journalism thinking about contents of courses. His indictments, where just, will doubtless bring about reforms in methods of instruction.

The teaching of journalism is still in its cradle days. It needs, and should welcome, honest and sincere criticism, just as Mr. Bigelow wanted criticism of his magazine rather than words of praise.

But too much must not be expected of schools of journalism. Schools of medicine do not turn out doctors; their graduates have to serve an apprenticeship as internes in hospitals. Schools of law do not turn out lawyers; their graduates must have additional training on the practical side through clerkships in law offices. The same conditions obtain for schools of journalism.

TO DON C. SEITZ

(On Reading "The Life and Letters of Joseph Pulitzer")

"AM I the last survivor? To me your volume seems
A wonderland of memories, fantastical as dreams.
The old years pass before me. Again I know the truth;
That Romance ruled our council board, who quaffed the wine of youth.

Who had a vision made it real—Behold a new crusade!
The master-mind that guided us pushed forward unafraid.
A wrong that should be righted, a tyrant swept away—
Ah, those are epic tales you tell in your impressive way.

Let me, who knew the spirit of that Round Table where
The Press, in shining armor, went forth to do and dare,
Freed from its ancient shackles, chivalric, earnest, bold,
Give thanks that I have lived to read the story you have told!

—Edward S. Van Zile.

Governor Pushing State Advertising

Ralph O. Brewster, Governor o Maine and a director of the State o Maine Publicity Bureau has evolved a plan whereby towns and cities of the state assess themselves 1 per cent of their valuation, as allowed by the legislature the money to be used in advertising. The sum would total about $750,000. The Bureau is already spending $35,000 yearly

Advertising Equipment Company Form

The Rotary Advertising Company o Worcester, Mass., which will buy, sell and deal in machinery of every nature for advertising, has been incorporated by Winthrop C. Hosford and Joseph Ducker of Worcester, and Fletcher S. Brown Leicester. Mr. Hosford is president.

Our Features:

Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

foster on auction bridge

Fads come and go but bridge remains the favorite game, and R. F. FOSTER the most popular authority on it.

Mr. Foster has written a splendid new series on the fine points of auction, illustrated with actual hands. Fascinating and highly instructive.

Weekly release beginning January 25.

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New York City

WIRE NEWS
For Evening and Sunday Newspapers
International News Service
11 Spruce St., New York

YOU MUST TELL THE BUSINESS MEN OF YOUR TOWN ABOUT BUSINESS
If you don't it will
COST YOU MONEY

John T. Flynn's Daily Business Reviews deal with fundamental business conditions of vital interest to every business man. They are backed by the greatest business news collecting organization in America, The United Publishers Corporation, publishers of Iron Age, Dry Goods Economist and a score of other nationally known business publications.

Write for Particulars to
Edward F. Roberts, Editorial Director
U. P. C. NEWS SERVICE, INC.
243 W. 39th St., New York City

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service
Woodward Bldg., Washington, D.C.

1925 will be a Prosperous Year

AN immediate gain of thousands of NEW prepaid subscribers is the best possible way to start the New Year. Our campaigns offer the one SURE way to obtain this circulation increase, as is proven by over twenty years of unquestioned supremacy and the number of leading metropolitan dailies who use and endorse our services.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

WORLD CONDITIONS AND THE PRESS

"THE world, my friends, is sick; sick unto death. What the people need, if democracy is to continue, is a power to control the people, and a power which the people cannot control. The larger part of the press has done a wonderful work in constructive effort, in the holding up of ideals and advancement. But there has been also a gutter press, a yellow press at times, which gives the people what they want. Where are we to find the proper power?"—Dr. George H. Derry, Professor of Economics, Union University.

* * *

NEWSPAPERS BEST MEDIA

"MORE than 75 per cent of the advertising appropriations of The Paraffine Companies, Inc., will go into the newspapers in 1925 because newspapers have proven beyond a doubt their value in bringing about sales. Where one of our largest weekly magazines might boast a circulation of 1000 in a certain territory, a local newspaper will have a circulation of 100,000. The newspaper carries the timely appeal. The do-it-now idea prevails, and the public is accustomed to read advertisements today and buy tomorrow. The newspaper is the only media retail stores have been able to use profitably."—Emil Brisacher, in address before Sales Staff Convention, The Paraffine Companies, Inc., San Francisco.

* * *

ADVERTISING OF THE FUTURE

"THE future holds a great deal of subjective advertising as contrasted with the overwhelming majority of objective advertising of the present day. Objective advertising brings to the reader's mind everything that the man writing has to say, nothing is left to the imagination. Subjective advertising is difficult—very little used at this time. It plants a seed in the reader's mind by symbolism, and then causes the reader to draw on his imagination. Advertising of the future will be in the universal language—color. Color is a direct appeal to the emotions. Nothing can arouse the ideas that color can."—J. Horace Pickett, Advertising Director, Royal Feed & Milling Company.

* * *

CIRCULATOR HITS BASEBALL NEWS

"OUR editors and publishers devote great amounts of space and spend vast sums of money every year for baseball news because the circulation managers demand it—many circulation managers believe they would lose half of their circulation if their paper did not devote one or more pages to baseball. I believe they are wrong. I believe that a very small percentage of readers are interested in baseball or care if you publish only box scores or not. I really do not believe the space is worth the space given it. Of course there are plenty of baseball fans who never get enough baseball news, but they are very much in the minority. Every time baseball is less help in selling papers—the exceptions are the towns which have had winning teams—but in the towns that have teams which stay in third place or lower, the sales due to baseball news amount to practically nothing."—E. C. White, President, Texas Circulation Managers' Association, and Circulation Manager, Houston Chronicle.

* * *

"WASTE" IN ADVERTISING

"SOMETIMES an advertiser will raise the question of waste and will tell you that there is too much waste in newspaper circulation. Newspaper rates are so low that the advertiser does not pay for any waste. After all, what does waste amount to if it brings profitable results? Suppose I lose my watch. The first thing I naturally do is to put a lost and found ad in each local newspaper. Say I am buying with that ad 500,000 circulation. I am telling 500,000 people I have lost my watch. Yet there is only one person in the whole city I am interested in finding. That is the person who found the watch. I am perfectly willing to waste 499,000 readers if I can find one man who will bring my watch back. My advertisement has paid."—Thomas H. Moore, Associate Director, Bureau of Advertising, A. N. P. A.

N.Y. DAILY NEWS FORMS SERVICE BUREAU

Christmas Suggestion Printed in Editor & Publisher, an Inspiration for Expansion, Ida Nier, Director, Says

What its directors hope soon to develop along the lines outlined in the "Christmas Suggestion" printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Dec. 20,—a "People's Service Exchange" is now in operation on the New York Daily News as the Daily News's Reader Information Service.

The service was started in a small way last November, following a plan which has been in operation on the Chicago Tribune 10 years.

The EDITOR & PUBLISHER suggestion, however, according to Miss Ida Jane Nier, formerly of the Rockefeller Foundation, in charge, was inspiration for expansion which will eventually take care of a great deal of welfare work not contemplated before.

Although as yet unadvertised in its own paper, the Daily News Reader Information Service is now receiving an average of 20 requests for information a day, Miss Nier said.

As an example that such a bureau is needed and welcomed by the public, the following letter received by the Daily News recently speaks for itself:

"My father, who has been a citizen of the United States for 16 years died last month, leaving my mother a sick woman without any means of support. Could you tell me if there is such a thing as a 'Widow's Pension'?"

The letter was signed by the widow's schoolgirl daughter.

"The Peoples' Service Exchange", as suggested by EDITOR & PUBLISHER was outlined as follows:

"Its business is not to give opinion or even advice to anyone. Its business is to clear to established public or private institutions, or qualified individuals, all questions referred to the newspaper by the public. A woman who telephones that a dying neighbor is helpless and friendless is told to call a local visiting nurse organization or a hospital. She did not know of their existence, else she would not have called. A woman troubled in spirit, is sent to the right person for comfort and assistance. Your telephone number or your office represents to any distressed or perplexed person a dependable source of information and guidance.

"In small offices a member of the regular staff might very well function. In the largest offices a single person might be able to handle the service. The equipment would be a well-selected list of directories, local, state and national.

"A vital element, essential to the welfare of the idea, is that the confidences of the public must be held inviolate. Wonderful stories would come to the paper, but the concern of the bureau would not be to make news copy. A valuable column might be run on exchange activities."

INDIANA

IS AN EDUCATIONAL CRITERION

INDIANA, as a state, lays great stress on the education of its future citizens. These same people are yearly being converted into a thoughtful, critical, discerning, buying public—well worth winning to the merits of your product.

There are 712,772 persons between the ages of 5 and 18 years in Indiana, of whom 566,288 are enrolled in Public Schools. It costs the state, annually, $75.50 for the education of each pupil, whereas the average for the entire United States is but $47.50. This shows that not only are the Hoosiers as well educated as the people of any other state in the Union, but are far better equipped to take their places among the country's educated masses than the population of most states.

Here is a group of persons comprised of just the type whom you are seeking. They are able, not only to receive your message, but once having received it—will remember it and profit by it.

These leading daily newspapers listed here are well worthy of the high type of intelligent persons they reach and will do their utmost to co-operate with you in all respects.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
†Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,106	.025
*Evansville Courier and Journal	(M) 27,839 / (E) 11,230	39,069	.09
*Evansville Courier and Journal	(S)	32,840	.08
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	31,502	.07
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	34,520	.07
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	41,938	.09
*Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	14,196	.055
Hammond Times	(E)	15,436	.05
*Huntington Press	(M&S)	3,797	.025
*Indianapolis News	(E)	128,400	.25
*Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,605 / (E) 12,900	20,505	.06
†††La Porte Herald-Argus	(E)	6,000	.025
*Newcastle Courier	(E)	6,000	.025
*South Bend News-Times	(M) 10,138 / (E) 12,902	23,040	.06
*South Bend News-Times	(S)	21,293	.06
†South Bend Tribune	(S) 19,388 (E)	20,627	.06
*Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	22,830	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

CHRISTMAS LINEAGE TRIPLED BY IDEA

"Pages of Treasure" Campaign in Which Gift Notes Were a Part of Regular Classified in Telegram-Mail

By Gilbert N. Gunderson

Classified Advertising Manager, New York Telegram and Evening Mail

IF ever an accounting is made of the amount of money and the value of effort expended each year by newspapers for Christmas classified campaigns, the result will be an amazing total—a staggering total when it is compared with the expenditures for classified promotion work during the rest of the year.

It is this condition, experienced in varying degrees which prompted us to make this year's campaign a constructive effort, not only to get more Christmas ads, but also to carry some of our holiday advertisers over into 1925 as regular users of classified space.

How to do this was a problem; and starting early in the fall of 1924 we wrestled with it in an effort to overcome it in a satisfactory manner. Our first decision was not to run a separate Christmas Gift Suggestion List. Past experience has shown us that such a list does not bring good results to either advertisers or ourselves; and the reasons for it are not hard to find.

For one thing, a suggestion list that is headed "Gifts for Him", "Gifts for Her", and so on, automatically means that a prospective shopper has to search through columns of small ads that are perhaps listed alphabetically, but not classified in any definite manner. But probably the more serious drawback of the Christmas suggestion list is that it is purely a holiday classification, to go out of existence on Christmas Eve, and take with it all of the merchandise ads which are exclusively for holiday goods.

After much thought along this line it was decided to run the Christmas ads in the regular classifications, and to clothe the classified pages with a Christmas spirit—one of adventure and romance if possible. So the name "The Pages of Treasure" came into being, and was applied to the entire classified section.

The campaign started off on Nov. 24 with teaser ads running for three days to arouse interest in the "Pages of Treasure." Four column ads were used, as well as two small two column ads used as additional teasers during the first three days. On Nov. 28 the actual publicity started with an announcement identifying the "Pages of Treasure" as the classified pages; a small front page box was started featuring an actual classified ad: and holly bordered streamers were run across the tops of the classified pages all during the campaign. In addition several full page ads were run whenever the space for them was available in the paper.

Of course, prospective advertisers were not neglected. We have a mailing list of several thousand names which we believe is as nearly perfect as it is possible to get any list; it was made up from the current telephone book, and carefully checked against Dun's to eliminate credit risks. To these prospects—nearly all merchants—were sent three mailing pieces; one broadside, and two illustrated letters, enlarging upon the productiveness of Telegram-Mail classified ads, and upon the Christmas campaign. At the same time our salesmen, telephone solicitors and agents were given full information about the campaign, and supplied in advance with all available proofs of ads which were to be used. They knew, therefore, just what the campaign would be like, and what it was designed to accomplish, and so were in a position to solicit Christmas ads more intelligently.

In the final analysis though, the campaign's effectiveness is measured by results alone. A comparison of 1924 Christmas lineage with that of 1923 shows as increase from 10,450 lines in 1923 to 27,416 lines in 1924—a gain of 162 per cent, and proves that the ideas behind the campaign were sound. Besides, we have a nice crop of additional classified prospects to go after during 1925 for their regular business.

"NEWS TWIST" FORESEEN FOR AUTO ADVERTISING

(Continued from page 7)

worth-while expenditure of money.

Paige will get its percentage of the big schedule which also includes the Jewett—this schedule is flexible now, allowing for expansion.

Lincoln will go into magazines exclusively.

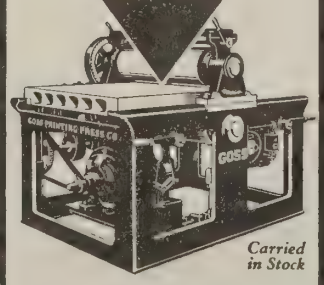
Marmon is reported to have $900,000 to spend for copy, nearly half of it in newspapers.

Auburn is coming back on a larger scale this year. Velie has decided the campaigns in 1924 merit repeating.

Wills Sainte-Claire will spend more money to tell about its new six, and the Sterling Knight is entering the new season ready to be counted as a real advertiser, if not one of the big ones.

Tire schedules last year got a bump due to uncertainty. But the companies made money on their tires, if some of the other rubber lines were not so profitable.

United States Tires have a schedule ready to start for a good period. Goodyear has another. Goodrich will be in the picture, and Akron will be represented also by Firestone and Miller more largely than in 1924. The General has been talking newspaper copy for a few years, and may get a start. Mason built up a good record for sales through its copy last season running consistently, and it will continue. Kelly-Springfield will be in the limelight, too. Michelin has set January as the time to lay out its plans for 1925.



Trucks will not be featured as in the old days, but there should be more this year than for some time past. White and Pierce Arrow were steady. Mack is expected to do something; also Autocar. The new Federal Knight; the Stewart and the Republic will be among newspaper buyers.

Accessories will turn more gradually to newspapers from now on. Some of the makers are going in for radio manufacture, feeling their way along, and while this advertising will be out of the automobile lineage, it will add to the newspaper grand total.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY

Carried in Stock

Some outstanding and exclusive features of The Goss Combination Wet and Dry Matrix Roller: Patented stretching roller produces dry mats without a wrinkle. Both ends of cylinder are set at same time. Heavy cast-iron cylinders with forged steel shafts. Extra heavy bed—no racks—large enough to run chase with columns crosswise. Rolls wet mats in 11¼ seconds; dry mats in 22½ seconds. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

MODERNIZE
your COMPOSING ROOM
with
HAMILTON EQUIPMENT
Made in both wood and steel.
Manufactured by
The Hamilton Mfg. Co.
Two Rivers, Wis.
For sale by all prominent Type Founders and Dealers everywhere.

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.
MONOMELT
SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis Minn.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.
USED BY THE Newark, O. Advocate
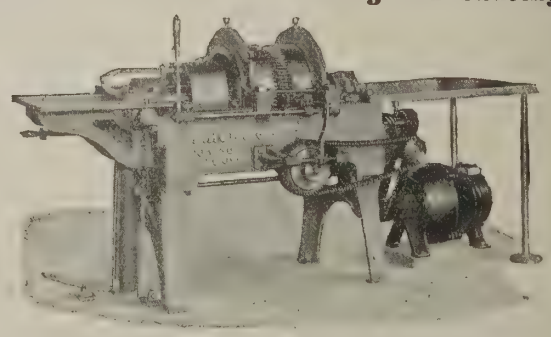
Newark, Ohio
We refer you to them for their opinion

MAIN OFFICE
Fisher Bldg.
343 S. Dearborn St.
CHICAGO



EASTERN OFFICE
Marbridge Bldg.
Broadway at 34th St.
NEW YORK

For Sale.
Goss curved stereo, casting box, for press cylinders 15 in. diameter, length of page 23 3/16 in. Good condition. Our No. 622. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth avenue, New York. (Many other machines for sale, "used, but good." Let us know your wants.)

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

We can increase your business—you want it increased.
You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.
BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

Hoe Automatic Curved Plate Trimming and Shaving Machine

A Machine that will trim, tail-cut and shave five to six Stereo Plates a minute efficiently and economically. Arranged with Motor Drive connected by a Silent Chain.

R. HOE & CO., Inc. 504-520 Grand Street, New York City
7 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.
also at DUNELLEN, N. J.
7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

10c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

5c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.

15c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Printing Equipment Engineer.
Electrical Engineer, eighteen years in the field. Experience covers electrical and mechanical supervision over steam power plants, air compressors, boilers and steam generating equipment, with eight years devoted exclusively to newspaper engineering, design, layout of plants and equipment, presses, conveying machinery and automatic control switchboards of all types at manufacture, on metropolitan newspapers. Will consider engagement as Electrical, Mechanical or Efficiency Supt. or Engineer, with responsible charge of all electrical and mechanical equipment on newspapers from 40,000 to 500,000 daily circulation. Salary must be commensurate with responsibilities and possibly location. Correspondence solicited. Address, C 97, "Engineer," care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man.
Experienced solicitor and trained copy writer now employed as Advertising Manager on small daily desires permanent position with bigger opportunity. A-No. 1 references as to character, ability, etc. Address, "Producer," Box C-612, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Display, Classified. Seventeen years in newspaper field. Recently representing papers with combined circulation of over 600,000 circulation. Energetic, progressive, with excellent record. Age 36, married. Desires connection with established newspaper or magazine. Available immediately. Confidential correspondence solicited. Box C-616, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
A man who now holds position as Advertising Manager on daily in city of 30,000 is looking for a location, although he does not have to leave his present position. A young man, married, with a newspaper training dating back of years. For personal reasons, knows that a different location would be the best thing for him. Address C-600, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Display, Classified. Over twelve years' experience in newspaper field. Local and National agency experience. Recently Classified Manager New York paper. Thoroughly versed in basic principles of selling to the public through display and Classified media. An executive and organizer; progressive, energetic, with excellent record. Desires connection with established newspaper or magazine, in city of over 50,000 population. C-611, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager
of proven ability and with a sound knowledge of the newspaper business, has an interesting proposition to submit to a publisher, who believes that the advertising revenue of his paper can be greatly increased, and who desires to place the entire responsibility for his advertising department in capable and trustworthy hands. Prefer a city of 35,000 to 60,000, with pleasant living conditions and good schools. For complete details, address C-598, Editor & Publisher.

LEARN

the value of

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

in

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

You'll find it a profitable lesson

Situations Wanted

Advertising Salesman.
Do you need a man that can build your advertising volume? That can really sell advertising, instead of just "chasing copy"? Well trained in all angles of advertising selling. Still young and energetic. Arthur Hallam, Norman, Okla.

Artist
in big city desires change to smaller place. Experienced in all art, including cartoons. C-609, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager
desires change of location. One who thoroughly knows the business. Have good position now. Capable of producing results. Will explain reasons for change to interested publisher. C-608, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
15 years' experience on morning, evening, Sunday and combination papers; thoroughly familiar with all branches of circulation work. At liberty now; go anywhere. Address Box C-602, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager,
experienced on morning, evening and Sunday papers. Up-to-date knowledge in various promotion methods A.B.C., etc. Capable of handling any size paper, will go anywhere, but would prefer midwest or western states. Box C-617, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Widely experienced; knows every angle of the newspaper game. He is primarily interested in a real opportunity, where ability and success will be rewarded. He knows how to create and build circulation. If you are in need of a hard worker with good sound judgment, answer this ad. Box C-606, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager or Assistant.
Age 29, single, twelve years' experience on one of Middle West's largest afternoon dailies. I wish to make change after January 1, 1925. Best of references. Box C-587 Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager.
Young married man, four years' successful experience as Assistant Classified Manager on large mid-western daily. Available, with reasonable notice, after January first. Satisfactory references. Address Box C-591, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager.
Twelve years' experience, with an excellent record. Since 1920 with one of New York's most successful classified mediums. Previous experience in smaller cities. Believes in building classified business conservatively but soundly only after careful analysis. Thoroughly familiar with Basil L. Smith Systems; 30 years of age. Wishes for personal and family reasons to locate permanently in some metropolitan city of over 100,000 population. Will go anywhere for any good, permanent proposition. Available after January 15. Address Box C-589, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager
available immediately. This applicant is thoroughly versed in the fundamentals of classified advertising, and can teach them to street salesmen, telephone salesladies and counter assistants. Has held present position as classified manager of The Dayton, Ohio, News for 4 years. Prior to that time was connected with his Dayton opposition, for 2 years, in a like situation. The 4-year accomplishment of publishing more individual ads and lines of classified than all his local contemporaries combined is his greatest guarantee to some publisher wishing aggressive selling tactics in his classified organization. Can give additional references to his work as indications of his ability to produce results. Address replies to Joseph H. Kelly, 1303 Riverside Drive, Dayton, Ohio.

Desk Man.
on daily. Sports, telegraph or general, or manager-editor weekly. G. E. Firstbrook, 540 Gregory street, Bridgeport, Conn.

Editor.
Young, married, wants desk in town under 100,000, afternoon. Knows make-up, heads, telegraph. Employed metropolis, available Feb. 1. Not afraid overtime. Salary? Box C-604, Editor & Publisher.

Editor.
Young lady with college training and experience, at present employed editing and making-up 35-page publication, desires similar position with chance for advancement. Must be in Chicago. C-584 Editor & Publisher.

Editorial.
Telegraph or news editor, copyreader, ten years' experience, including largest dailies, university graduate, desires position. C-556, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Assistant.
College graduate, 40, copy and proofreader, rewrite, research and translations, editorial and feature writer. 15 years' newspaper and syndicate experience. C-605, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Mechanical Superintendent.
Executive of exceptional ability and personality would consider change from present position; 45 years old; experience gained with largest newspapers in the East; $150 weekly to start. For personal interview, address C-590, care Editor & Publisher.

National Advertising Manager.
Some publisher of a good newspaper, preferably within 500 miles of New York is interested in a man with my experience. Early training with Buffalo Express, where I worked my way up to Business Manager. Ten years directing sales and advertising for H-O Company. Now in agency work. Would like to associate with paper that can produce results for advertised merchandise. Will organize or take full charge of department. References and complete details of my record in sales and advertising work on request. C. F. Alward, care of Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper and Advertising Man.
University trained, experienced reporter, feature writer and editorial assistant; linguist; expert in research, translating, investigating; some knowledge of advertising, seeks connection. References. C-601, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—Reviewer.
With intelligent grasp of drama and theatre, desires larger field. Other assignments accepted. C-599, Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

A Sunday Editor.
is wanted in an attractive Southern city. He must be a good writer, have discriminative literary sense, be able to select features wisely, handle copy, and make up a paper. No one who has not had successful experience need apply. The position requires originality, industry and character. C-603, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Man.
A young man who wants to grow with the livest suburban weekly newspaper in the New York City metropolitan district. Should be able to drive a light truck, know how to organize boys and have some constructive ideas. Salary to start $30; more if he's the right man. This is a splendid opportunity for a young man—one who isn't afraid of hard work, because for the time being he will be practically the circulation department. Address Box C-574, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Man.
Experienced, to take charge of city circulation of leading evening paper in a town west of Mississippi River, having a population of about a hundred thousand, an excellent opportunity to get a foothold. Give all details such as qualifications and salary expected, in first letter. Address C-614, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Two ambitious circulation managers; must be over thirty years of age with experience in hiring and training canvassers. Further expansion of large circulation organization opens two desirable positions with earning possibilities from $2,600 to $5,000 per year. Answer with full particulars regarding last ten years' experience, with references as to personal habits and character. Ernest A. Scholz, Circulation Director, Butterick Publishing Company, Butterick Bldg., New York.

City Editor-Reporter.
All around newspaper experience, able to get local news and write it attractively and intelligently; direct and train young reporters; handle telephone news reports and make-up on morning paper. In fact, take full charge news end. Box C-582 Editor & Publisher.

Correspondents.
Wanted throughout the country by Jewish Daily Bulletin (printed in English), 621 Broadway, Room 900, New York City.

Mechanical Superintendent, with several years' experience large morning newspaper. Address Box C-615, Editor & Publisher.

Syndicate Salesman Wanted
who will handle easy-selling features as sideline or commission only. Box C-613, Editor & Publisher.

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON

Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

BUSINESS MANAGER WANTED for Eastern daily in city of over 35,000. Successful experience in charge of office, advertising and circulation required. Must be familiar with newspaper accounting system. Starting salary around $3,500. State details fully:—age, education, positions held and results produced.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

ACCOUNTANTS

Auditors.
with many years' experience auditing metropolitan daily and evening papers, desire further connections on contract anywhere in the States or Canada. Modern newspaper accounting systems installed. Fees reasonable. C-610, Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

$12,000 Cash Buys Control.
best semi-weekly Los Angeles County. 8-10 pages issue. Will gross around $50,000 1925. Fastest growing city 10,000 Southern California. C-607, Editor & Publisher.

A New Feature Service.
That is, in interest and cost to members, the best break since the world flight of the Army Air Service. Will prove to be a circulation getter. Will fit every paper, from the County Seat, Weekly, to the Metropolitan Daily. Will last from three to five years and the interest on the last day will surpass the first. Uniform release dates; full protection for members. No cost to you until you have had service thirty days. You can terminate contract after sixty days, at your option. Service will start in Spring. Investigate now. Full particulars upon receipt of your query, on your own letterhead. Address Raiser, P. O. Box No. 75. Sta. "W" New York City.

LEGAL NOTICE

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER COMPANY

The annual meeting of the stockholders of THE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER COMPANY will be held Wednesday morning, January 15, 1925, at eleven o'clock at the general offices of the Company, Pulitzer Building, suite 1115, 63 Park Row, New York, for the purpose of election of directors and two inspectors of election and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

THE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER COMPANY,
JAMES W. BROWN, President.
FENTON DOWLING, Secretary.
New York, Dec. 26, 1924.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY.
New York, December 31, 1924.

The Board of Directors have declared a regular quarterly dividend of one and one-half per cent (1½%) on the preferred capital stock of this company, payable January 15th, 1925, to preferred stockholders of record at the close of business January 8th, 1925. Checks will be mailed. Transfer books will not close.

OWEN SHEPHERD, Treasurer.

Publishers

who place Help Wanted ads in the Classified Section of Editor & Publisher, always get competent men for their staffs. If you have a position open, send your ad in NOW and fill the vacancy quickly and economically.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

ADVERTISING managers of newspapers will find the general outline of the automobile advertising outlook for 1925 on page 7, of this issue.

Following the National Automobile Show held this week in New York, local shows will be held in all parts of the country.

Start now to plan your drive for increased space.

A FEATURE story under the heading of "The Family Tree of Our Retail Business Institutions" giving the histories of the prominent business houses in your city, and running in conjunction with it special advertisements from the old established houses, would meet with a wide appeal to the business men and also create public interest.—C. E. PELLISSIER, Boston, Mass.

What is the best way for women to keep beautiful in mid-winter, when weather conditions are so bad and there is so much soot and dirt in the air? Get interviews with local beauty parlor owners on this topic. Then with the story run the ads of beauty parlors.—FRANK H. WILLIAMS, Santa Ana, Cal.

If you have enough merchants, land agents, dry cleaners and others, you can run a co-operative page headed, "Above High Rents—Below High Prices." This will appeal to many advertisers who do not advertise much.—DONALD O. ROSS, Washington, (Ia.) Democrat.

January Sales! But did you ever hear of a January sale of FOOD? The largest grocery store in your city can cash in big on a January food sale, featuring canned goods supplies for the rest of winter, fruit and dessert suggestions, and even specially filled baskets will prove quick sellers in such a sale. Why not give this suggestion to your grocer, and go after him hard for big newspaper space?—R. JOHN GIBLER, St. Louis, Mo.

Whenever one Indiana newspaper takes a photograph of some prominent group of persons, it makes an extra print of the picture, has it neatly framed and presents it to the group, a small line on the bottom of the frame reading: "Presented by the Times." The plan appeals to the subjects who like to preserve a photograph, and at the same time, constantly advertises the newspaper to everyone who looks at the picture.—B. A. T.

The San Diego (Cal.) Sun for Dec. 31 carried a full page bearing a banner across the top, reading "1925—RESOLVE—1925," under which, boxed, were a set of good resolutions relative to automobile driving, with a plea for consideration of the safety of others. The remainder of the page was filled with advertisements of dealers handling headlights, non-skid tires, horns, stop signals, windshield wipers, bumpers, brakes, steering gear and other parts of automobiles. The page also carried a pledge by the San Diego Auto Trades Association to do all in their power to lower the appalling record of automobile deaths and injuries and to preach the doctrine that safe driving is a matter of safe equipment.—ALLEN H. WRIGHT, San Diego, Cal.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

LARGE newspapers could print an interesting running feature on the city's or state's hall of fame, short or long articles on famous men of your city or state who have won fame in the world of art, literature, low finance and industry. This would make a good Sunday feature if you publish a Sunday edition.—G. Smedal, Jr., Minneapolis.

Nearly the whole front page of the society section of a Milwaukee (Wis.) Sunday Journal was taken up with photographs of young sons of Milwaukee families, with the explanation that it was no more than fair that occasionally the boys should have the center of the stage. The departure from the usual layout of debutants, beauties and semi-beauties made an interesting feature. Try it for a change if not as an occasional stunt.—A. C. Regli, Eau Claire, Wis.

"Do You Remember When" is the title the Pittsburg (Kans.) Morning Sun has been using on a reminiscent paragraph set in a star box on the front page for several weeks. The items deal with such homely topics as Jim Smith's livery stable that 25 years ago stood where the court house now stands; who drove the first motor car in Pittsburg 20 years ago; the night the old opera house collapsed 30 years ago, etc., etc. The Old Timers like it and help out by suggesting old time events.—Alfred C. Runyan, Pittsburg, Kans.

There are many familiar corners and neighborhoods in every city. What became of the "gang" that used to spend much of their time there? How many of them have become successful citizens or even famous? The Louisville Post is running a series of articles on this subject which is proving very interesting.—L. G. S., Cleveland.

"Why publish murder stories so often? Would it not be better if you should te the good things of life?"

A woman asked the question over th telephone. We told of the phone call a story and printed the "Good Thing out of the news events of the day star ing with number one. Each day we pu lish several. We have now reache No. 58. We get many calls and lette of thanks. It's a hit.—E. W. Jorgenso Portland News.

Your average newspaper reader knov very little about the methods of gathe ing news. The most general fallacy that the duties of every reporter consi of roaming the streets in search of matt to fill the paper. Why not give him a insight into the profession by starting feature on "The Story Behind th Story?" He would be surprised to lea that the college elopment story originate in the marriage license bureau, or th the police reporter dug up the counte feiters' tale from a loose word spoken a magistrate's hearing. He probab never knew there were police reporte or routine men, "leg" men, investigator and re-write reporters. How was it po sible to have an edition announcing th murder trial verdict on the streets eig minutes after the jury's return? Th story behind the story is often as inte esting as the news itself.—H. M. Hoffor Providence, R. I.

Zip and Dash

This figure is from one of next week's daily sports cartoons by

FEG MURRAY

2 cols. Monday through Friday. 4 cols. Saturdays.

Feg Murray saves space!

And pleases readers!!

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager

150 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

Frank H. Simonds

is

Sailing for Europe

on

January 17

To Make a Survey of Political and Economic Conditions

One Sunday Article of 2,500 Words and One or Two Shorter Ones During the Week

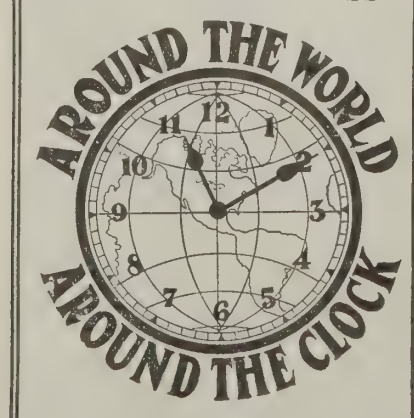
Some Territory is Still Open

WIRE

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Radio news is apt to be mechanical and lengthy. "Listening In" has the personal touch and is a perspective of all that is interesting and important.



"Listening In on the United States"

by* Robert D. Heinl

Insurance Building,

Washington, D. C.

BY UNITED PRESS

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS

World Building New York

Get the very best

DAILY CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

Not just a feature—

Not just a problem—

But the best seller on the market

TODAY!

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.

241 West 58th Street

New York City

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

4 page ready-print color comics.

Magazine Feature Pages.

Write for samples and rates

NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD. STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

Thomas W. Briggs Company

Memphis, - Tenn.

Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page

Look us up in Dun or Bradstreet's

Plan Continuous Advertising in PENNSYLVANIA NEWSPAPERS

THE only way in which to sell your product in Pennsylvania is to bring your message directly home. Generalizing through scattered circulation will not stimulate the interest necessary to create sales.

Concentration in Newspaper Space Will Bring Sure Results

Such concentration in the columns of the newspapers listed in this announcement, will place your message before the eyes of over 5,000,000 people. This represents a tremendous purchasing power worthy of your utmost efforts.

The newspapers listed below, besides furnishing you with an unparalleled advertising medium, maintain excellent service departments which are anxious to cooperate with your sales force, in the matter of bringing your distribution to its highest possible point of efficiency.

Follow your advertising campaign closely and see for yourself that it pays to advertise in Pennsylvania.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Allentown Call .....(M)	29,446	.10	.10
*Allentown Call .....(S)	19,425	.10	.10
†††Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	5,702	.025	.025
†Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,189	.029	.029
†Carbondale Leader .....(E)	5,664	.025	.025
*Chester Times .....(E)	15,507	.055	.055
†Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,529	.035	.03
*Connellsville Courier .....(E)	6,212	.02	.02
*Easton Express .....(E)	21,439	.07	.07
Easton Free Press .....(E)	12,711	.05	.05
*Erie Times .....(E)	26,258	.08	.08
*Harrisburg Telegraph .....(E)	40,487	.095	.095
*Oil City Derrick .....(M)	6,375	.035	.035
*Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(E&M)	16,284	.08	.07
*Scranton Times .....(E)	41,414	.12	.11
*Sharon Herald .....(E)	6,568	.0285	.0285
*Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	4,564	.025	.021
*Warren Times-Mirror .....(E&M)	7,579	.036	.036
†Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	17,358	.06	.06
†West Chester Local News.....(E)	10,883	.04	.04
*Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ....(E)	23,775	.08	.05
*Williamsport Sun .....(E)	19,766	.07	.07
†York Dispatch .....(E)	18,527	.05	.05
†York Gazette and Daily.....(M)	17,604	.05	.05

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

EVIDENCE OF LEADERSHIP

The Sun published 13,268,308 lines of advertising in 1924. This represents a gain of more than two and a half million lines in Total Space.

National Advertisers in 1924 preferred The Sun to any other New York Evening Newspaper, and used 3,018,102 lines—a gain of almost six hundred and fifty thousand lines over the year 1923.

In 1924 The Sun published 1,402,838 lines of Radio advertising—a far greater lineage than any other New York newspaper.

The advertising lineage in The New York Sun continues its upward swing.

The reader and advertising confidence which The Sun enjoys has made it an outstanding factor in successful advertising campaigns in the New York Market.

A very rigid censorship on advertising is maintained by The Sun.

The Sun

280 BROADWAY NEW YORK

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

THIS ISSUE—CHICAGO'S CIRCULATION SYSTEM.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Newspaper Advocate 1925

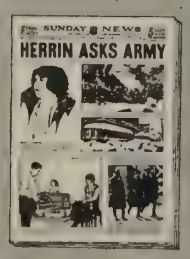
SUITE 1115 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued Every Saturday.

Vol. 57. No. 38 | NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 14, 1925 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy



WE can't keep back the good news any longer

The circulation of the SUNDAY NEWS now exceeds

1,000,000

copies net paid

THE NEWS

New York's Picture Newspaper

25 PARK PLACE, NEW YORK 7 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Increase Your Sales in New York State

It should be the aim of every National Advertiser to continually try to increase sales in New York State because

New York State is the most populous state.
New York State is the wealthiest state.

Here in New York State can be found more people than in any other like area on this continent. According to the 1925 estimate, there are at the present time, 11,105,625 people residing within the boundaries of New York State. Whereas, these people come of various races, move in different walks of life, and have incomes of great variety—they have one common trait—

New York State people read their daily newspapers

With a wealth estimated at $37,035,262,000, New York State affords a market, not only desirous of buying the merchandise you have to sell, but also able to do so. The people that read the daily newspapers that carry your advertising, will buy your product—since it bears the mark of approval of their newspaper.

The dailies listed below are the cheapest, surest and wisest way in which to get your message before the eyes of all the people of this Empire State.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
*Albany Evening News ....(E)	21,982	.08	.08
*Albany Knickerbocker Press ....(M)	33,239	.10	.10
*Albany Knickerbocker Press ....(S)	53,649	.14	.14
*Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat ....(E)	7,502	.04	.04
Auburn Citizen ....(E)	6,429	.04	.035
*Batavia Daily News ....(E)	3,737	.04	.04
*Binghamton Press ....(E)	32,006	.09	.09
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle ....(E)	67,646	.22	.22
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle ....(S)	77,339	.23	.22
*Buffalo Courier and Enquirer....(M&E)	78,058	.18	.18
*Buffalo Courier ....(S)	118,603	.25	.22
†Buffalo Evening News ....(E)	125,618	.25	.25
*Buffalo Evening Times ....(E)	99,645	.21	.21
*Buffalo Sunday Times ....(S)	105,977	.21	.21
*Buffalo Express ....(M)	51,288	.14	.12
*Buffalo Express ....(S)	53,362	.18	.14
*Corning Evening Leader ....(E)	3,613	.055	.05
*Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser....(E&M)	33,102	.11	.11
*Geneva Daily Times ....(E)	5,004	.04	.04
*Gloversville Leader Republican....(E)	6,852	.035	.035
*Ithaca Journal-News ....(E)	7,411	.04	.04
*Jamestown Morning Post....(M)	11,112	.04	.035
*Middletown Times-Press ....(E)	6,714	.03	.03
*Mount Vernon Daily Argus....(E)	9,293	.05	.05
*Newburgh Daily News ....(E)	11,591	.05	.05
*New Rochelle Standard-Star ....(E)	7,741	.04	.04
*The Sun, New York ....(E)	253,763	.60	.56
†New York Times ....(M)	352,190	.75	.735
†New York Times ....(S)	569,623	.90	.882
*New York Herald-Tribune ....(M)	270,159	.594	.576
*New York Herald-Tribune ....(S)	316,585	.6435	.624
†New York World ....(M)	378,807	.595	.58
†New York World ....(S)	558,779	.595	.58
†New York Evening World ....(E)	314,489	.595	.58
*Niagara Falls Gazette ....(E)	18,103	.06	.06
*Port Chester Item ....(E)	4,359	.03	.03
*Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise....(E)	12,110	.05	.05
*Rochester Times-Union ....(E)	64,727	.20	.18
*Syracuse Journal ....(E)	42,103	.14	.14
*Troy Record ....(M&E)	22,621	.06	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

THE BEST STORY

Another New York World Achievement

16 Noteworthy Short Stories by Famous Authors

Editors of leading American magazines were recently invited each to select the story he liked best published in his magazine during the past year.

A committee of newspaper editors from various cities supervised this new method of selection of best short stories.

Arrangements have just been made to release these stories beginning April 19th to leading American newspapers through the New York World and the Metropolitan Newspaper Service.

Read the List of Authors

Michael Arlen
F. R. Buckley
A. M. Chisholm
Irvin S. Cobb
Richard Connell
Samuel A. Derieux
Meigs O. Frost
Zona Gale
Ellen Glasgow
Inez Haynes Irwin
W. Somerset Maugham
Samuel Merwin
Honore Willsie Morrow
Elsie Singmaster
Lisa Ysaye Tarleau
Ida A. R. Wylie

$25,000 worth of the Best Recent Stories by the Best Authors made available for newspapers at reasonable prices—Supplied to one paper only in each city.

Note—Each paper using them authorized to announce this new selection as made by it, "in conjunction with the New York World."

To obtain an option on these stories in your territory wire or write at once to

F. B. KNAPP,
Manager World Syndicate
Room 1111, 63 Park Row, New York

Maximilian Elser, Jr., Manager
Metropolitan Newspaper Service
150 Nassau St., New York

The Prudent Saver is Always the Best Customer

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

LIFE INSURANCE is one of the closest guides to the general prosperity of any city. For the first eleven months of the year 1924, Philadelphia led every other city in the United States with an increase of thirteen per cent. in business written as compared with the same period in 1923.

The Bulletin goes into practically all of the 412,000 separate homes of the city and 100,000 more outside of the city limits.

Philadelphia is a huge market of nearly three million people—third largest in America—instantly available through one newspaper, at one cost.

With over half a million copies daily The Bulletin naturally dominates Philadelphia—there can be no substitute for circulation. The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in America.

The Evening Bulletin

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

518,357

Average Daily Net Circulation for Year Ending Dec. 31, 1924

(Copyright 1925—Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 14, 1925 No. 38

Advertising Which Betrays Confidence Condemned By Retail Merchants

Delegates to National Retail Dry Goods Association Urged to Support Better Business Bureaus—Waste in Distribution Traced to False Copy—Radio Advertising Declared Impracticable

"TRUTH in Advertising," with the call to merchants of the nation to upport local Better Business Bureaus an aid to better selling was empha- zed this week at the 14th annual con- ntion of the National Retail Dry Goods ssociation in New York.

From all sections of the United States d Canada, owners and executives of ore than 2,000 prosperous stores had thered.

These delegates do an annual business between two and three billion dollars.

They spend $40,000,000 a year in ad- rtising.

And to make the convention slogan, "etter Selling" a reality, speakers urged em to use better advertising in the wspapers of their different cities.

Waste in distribution, and the con- ference called recently by Secretary oover in Washington, came under dis- cision at general and departmental ses- sns.

At these discussions it was declared at waste could not be laid to the door o quantity advertising. Rather more e must be given to quality.

Prior to the convention, fifteen months d been spent in compiling a set of ndards of practice for retail advertis- t. These standards will be adopted this ek. Truthful advertising is insisted n.

Advertising and all business among n is based on only one thing—Con- nce," was the way Louis E. Kir- n of William Filene's Sons, Boston, ss., expressed the truth in advertising iment.

Any action that tends to weaken con- nce among men and between customer dealer, injures all business and creates te by increasing the cost of doing ness.

The 42 Better Business organizations ting in this country today are per- the biggest single factor we know day for the good of the retail trade. movement deserves your immediate careful investigation and your hearty ort.

You need a Better Business Commis- in your city for your own local and to provide another cog in the hine' that is doing the national work.

You need it because it will help in most important work that business to do today—that is to reduce the of distribution.

ere is my suggestion: First—to sure as far as humanly possible our advertising is worthy of belief; d—to convince people of this so they will read it, believe it and nd to it.

hat we say cuts no figure. What eader thinks and believes is all im- nt.

ith publicity expense in our larger , running from 2 per cent to 5 per and even more on every dollar's of goods sold, it is our duty as good merchants and good citizens to do what we can and do it quickly to reduce this important part in the high cost of distribution.

"The advertiser who thinks he can deceive the public, only deceives himself, and injures the prestige and interferes with the rights of every other advertiser."

Mr. Kirstein told what the Boston Better Business Bureau had accomplished.

"The commission," he said, "representing us if you please, but also representing our competitors and the public too, is telling us what we shall say in our advertising. Irksome? Not at all.

"No ruling is made by the Commission until all have been consulted. Frequent meetings are held by the manager with the advertising men of Boston stores. A merchandising board made up of local store experts advises the commission on all technical points. A similar group does the same work in the financial field. Every once in a while the leading merchants in a special field, such as furniture or jewelry are called together for a powwow on the condition in that field and consultation on new or improved rulings.

"And so now, thanks to the Boston Better Business Commission, in Boston:

"We call things by their right names. Hudson Seal is dyed muskrat.

"Flannelette is cotton, and flannel must be all wool—and so must velour and cashmere.

"Artificial silk is rayon, and linene is not confused with linen.

"Mahogany must be solid mahogany, or we call it 'mahogany veneer' or 'mahogany combined with other woods.

"Silk stockings with lisle tops must be so described, and so-called 'fashioned' hosiery must not be confused with 'Full fashioned.'

"Former prices may be quoted on reduced goods, but only when those goods have actually been sold in that store at that price, and even then any previous reductions must be mentioned also.

"Lots of merchandise cannot be grouped and referred to as 'formerly up to' a certain price, unless at least a reasonable portion of the lot once bore the specified price."

"Furthermore, the Boston Commission with the help of the stores and the newspapers, is carrying on valuable educational work. From time to time interesting and informative bulletins are issued and printed in the newspapers.

"I urge you to go home and:

"1. Form a committee from members of this organization in your city to act as a working body to give this work your moral and financial support.

"2. Assist in forming another mercantile committee not represented in this organization to give their moral and financial support to this work, thus forming a united backing of the retail dealers in your community favoring honest advertising and merchandising.

"3. The dominant policy of this united cooperation should be based on the policy of good business ethics rather than to avoid violations of the law. This is extremely important, as necessarily laws must interpret legally, and unless backed up by a policy of good business ethics, are difficult to enforce, and advertising and selling will suffer accordingly.

"And note this, in closing: These Commissioners are called BETTER Business Commissions, not POORER Business Commissions. They help you to raise the standard of your store so that your employees can respect you, the store and themselves. They make it possible for you and your employees to interpret your policies honestly to the public. They are organized to make business better by increasing the confidence the public should have in your advertising, your store and yourself."

At the conclusion of Mr. Kirstein's address, Herbert J. Tily, acting convention president, paid tribute in a short speech to the Better Business Bureau movement.

The need of better quality in department store advertising in newspaper columns, was also made the subject of an address delivered by Raymond B. Kline, merchandise councilor of R. H. Macy & Co., New York.

"A store cannot afford a large number of ineffective advertisements," he declared.

"I wish to offer the following 'Golden Text,' which I believe most merchandise men would like advertising writers to remember.

"The text is: Facts based on real knowledge of the desirable qualities of merchandise, simply and sincerely presented, result in more sales than any conceivable story based on smattering knowledge, or on casual contact for a few minutes with the article advertised.

"The merchandise manager's slant on advertising is that the job of making people want what the store has to sell, and finding the way to make them want it, is the first duty of the advertising office.

"Finding a way to make people want something that they did not know they wanted is becoming increasingly important. The ingenuity of manufacturers during the past decade has produced volume and variety of merchandise that is often far ahead of the known needs of the consumer. We must now advertise not only to supply the actual needs, but to create a consciousness of the need for the article we have to sell. In this kind of advertising intimate knowledge of both the merchandise and the habits of the prospective customers is essential.

"Advertising is not hurt by being set up in well chosen type and well proportuation, but it is not helped by it, if the facts concerning the merchandise are not presented convincingly.

"Advertising is not hurt by good language, correct grammar, and proper punctuation, but it is helped by it, if the facts concerning the merchandise are not presented convincingly.

"Advertising is not hurt by a good illustration. But what is a good illustration? The merchandise manager's slant is that a good illustration is a picture that tells part of the story that cannot be quickly told in words. Looked at from this angle, many illustrations are simply a waste of space.

"Therefore, in summing up I recommend: Present the facts that will make the customer want your merchandise, and present them simply and effectively, without any involved phrases. A very noted public speaker in advising a young man, once told him that if he always spoke in words of one syllable, even the best educated people in the room could not misunderstand him.

"Keep uppermost in the mind of every one on the advertising staff the fact that the measure of success of the advertising department is its ability to move merchandise."

In addition to the "truth in advertising

(Continued on page 30)

SACRAMENTO BEE AND STAR MERGED

McClatchy Family Buys Latter from Scripps-Howard Group Leaving Bee Alone in Afternoon Field

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 9.—Merger of the Sacramento (Cal.) Star, Scripps-Howard paper, with the Sacramento Bee, published by the James McClatchy Publishing Company, Inc., was effected last Saturday. The Bee is now the only afternoon newspaper in Sacramento.

CHAS. K. MCCLATCHY

The merger takes the Star from the field and adds to the Bee the United Press, N. E. A., and other features of the Star, room for which is to be found in the Bee enlargement in every department. The Bee will now furnish its readers with a full daily page of comics, three leased wire services, four-page colored comic on Saturday, pink sport section on Saturday, daily woman's page and feature page. Sixteen columns daily and eight pages Saturday will be the added space.

The acquisition of the Star by the McClatchy family follows by one year the purchase by the same interests of the Fresno Herald, which cleared in like manner the afternoon field in that section of California for the Fresno Bee, established in 1922 by the McClatchy family.

At the time of the merger, the Bee's circulation was 42,037. The Star subscription list was approximately 10,000.

The field covered by the Bee embraces 25 Northern California counties as well as Western Nevada and Southern Oregon.

Announcement of the merger was carried on the front page of the Bee last Saturday in a signed story by Charles K. McClatchy and a similar announcement in the Star of the same day.

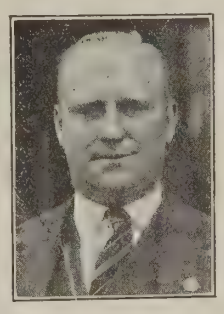
The consolidation is the result negotiations carried on between Car[l] McClatchy, representing the Bee, [and] Roy W. Howard of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers. The Bee acquired both plant and circulation in the merger and placed Star subscribers on the list of the Bee for the current month at the paid-up subscription rate of the Star. Beginning March 1, the subscription rate of the Bee will rise from 75 to 85 cents per month.

The average size of the Bee henceforth will be 24 pages daily and 48 on Saturday, and make it the only paper north of San Francisco with a three wire leased service.

The move of The James McClatchy Publishing Company, Inc., in giving Northern California a metropolitan paper and dominance in the afternoon field in Sacramento, is the outgrowth of 68 years of newspaper life for the Bee.

The Sacramento Bee was established in 1857 by James McClatchy and has been published continuously since that time by members of the McClatchy family. At present the Sacramento Bee and Fresno Bee are owned and published by Charles K. McClatchy, editor of the Sacramento Bee, Ella K. McClatchy, his wife, and Carlos K. McClatchy, his son. Carlos McClatchy is editor of the Fresno Bee.

As a follow up to the merger of the papers the Bee published a four page pink supplement on Monday introducing the new features and reciting the news services available to readers of the paper.



Since the establishment of the Fresno Bee in October, 1922, that paper has grown to a circulation of 23,453 under the editorship of Carlos McClatchy.

It is about as hard for a rich man to enter heaven as it is for a poor man to remain on earth.—News Orleans Times-Picayune.

ALBANY NEWS GETS CENTURY OLD TRADITIONS BY JOURNAL MERGER

Latter Founded in 1830 While Former Was Launched in 1922 —20 Newspapers Represented in Press Company's Consolidations

ONE of the true adventures in American journalism reached an interesting climax when the Press Company of Albany, N. Y., publishing the Knickerbocker Press (morning and Sunday), and the Albany News, established Oct. 10, 1922, purchased the Albany Evening Journal, founded by Thurlow Weed in 1830, as briefly announced in EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week.

LYNN J. ARNOLD

The Journal, with its circula-

Connors is advertising manager of all the Press Company publications, which are represented in the foreign field by the John M. Branham Company. William Barnes, former Republican leader of New York state, who has published and edited the Journal since 1889, retires from the newspaper business in Albany.

The merger was engineered by Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer, of New York.

Twenty newspapers published in Albany since the colonial period, and reaching back to the Gazette of 1771, are now represented in The Press Company's consolidated publications. Among these, the Albany Argus, established 1813, as a ranking Democratic party organ, and the Journal, are of especial political significance. The history of Albany newspaperdom, which is one of the pioneer markers in the development of American journalism, indicates as shown in The Press Company's consolidations, the passing of the political journal to make room for the independence of thought keyed by the Knickerbocker Press, parent of The Press Company's publications.

Behind the merger of the Journal with the Albany Evening News is a story of industrial and transportational expansion written in millions of dollars in the Capitol district in the last few years. The New York Central railroad, with its West Shore, mainline, and Boston and Albany systems, converging at Albany, has just completed the preparation of a terminal with 20,000 cars capacity and the building of a new bridge across the Hudson at Castleton, near Albany, at a cost of $25,000,000. The Delaware & Hudson railroad, which has its headquarters at Albany, is preparing for an expansion in connection with the establishment of the seaport projected by the federal government, to begin next year. The Boston & Maine railroad, with its New England tap lines converging to the Capitol district, also figures largely in the development, and great impetus has been given the district transporation expansion by the Van Sweringen merger of the Nickel Plate roads, affecting the seven railroads converging in the area.

Many important industries and housing projects are also under way. The Evening News has been conspicuous as a leader of progress in the industrial and commercial fields. After making a thorough inventory of the mineral resources of the Capitol district in 1922 and 1923, the Evening News last summer surveyed the hydro-electric power development situation in New [illegible] the [illegible] was graduated from Weed's political school direct to the New York Tribune, later to become a member of the famed political firm, "Seward, Weed and Greeley." During the Mason-Slidell crisis of the Civil War, Weed was Lincoln's personal representative in England.

NEW GREENSBORO RECORD HOME

North Carolina Daily Now Printing from $200,000 Plant

The Greensboro (N. C.) Daily Record last week moved into its new, modern three-story home on Greene street. Two new linotype machines were installed in addition to other new composing room equipment.

The press and mailing rooms are located on the rear of the first floor, while the business office and circulation departments occupy the front. The accounting department is on the second floor. The editorial department and the composing room are on the third floor.

The land, building and new equipment represent an outlay of more than $200,000. Edney Ridge is business manager of the paper, which recently celebrated its 33rd birthday.

Georgia Editors Plan New York Trip

Members of the Georgia Press Association are coming to New York by special boat arriving April 28, the executive committee announced this week. They will make the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel their headquarters. The New York trip will follow the association's mid-winter convention, schedued for Savannah, April 25.

GALVINS BUY TWO FLORIDA PAPERS

Ohio Publishers Take Over For Lauderdale Daily Sentinel and the Weekly Herald—Will Make Extensive Improvements

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Feb. 9—Pu[r]chase of the Fort Lauderdale Dai[ly] Sentinel from Col. George G. Mathew[s] and the Week[ly] Herald fro[m] John D. She[r]win by L. [S.] Galvin, publish[er] of the Lim[a] (O.) Daily a[nd] Sunday New[s] and W. J. Ga[l]vin, publish[er] Wilmingto[n] (O.) Dail[y] News-Journ[al] has been a[n]nounced. T[he] Galvin brothe[rs] immediate[ly] closed a deal f[or] the erection of a two-story building, a prominent downtown corner to hou[se] the plant of the two papers. An e[n]tirely new mechanical plant will be installed in the new building including a 16-page Goss press and five linotypes.

W. J. GALVIN

Mr. Sherwin remains as vice-president of the new company, but is as yet undecided whether he will enter other business. Fort Lauderdale has shown a rapid growth in the past year, virtu[ally] doubling its population, which led to [the] purchase by the Galvins. It is situ[ated] midway between Palm Beach and Mi[ami].

L. S. GALVIN

The Galvins own four newspapers [in] Ohio. W. J. Galvin the past week s[old] his considerable holdings in the L[ima] Morning Star. They are sons of W. Galvin, who for 54 years edited Jamestown (O.) Greene County Jour[nal] his death occurring last September. [The] started on their father's paper as b[oys] later rounding out their experience [on] numerous metropolitan dailies. W. Galvin was for several years publi[sher] of The Horse Journal, turf publicati[on].

Plans for the improvement of the [Sen]tinel are extensive, Associated P[ress] leased wire having been applied for. [The] editorial, business and mechanical [de]partments are being strengthened. Barry, formerly of the Miami He[rald] has been named managing editor. F. Mizner, former assistant advertising m[an]ager, Lima News, becomes business [and] advertising manager.

Providence Journal Company Ele[cts]

The Providence (R. I.) Jou[rnal] Company, at its annual mee[ting] Feb. 4, elected the following d[i]tors: Stephen O. Metcalf, Henry Sharpe, Harry P. Cross, G. Pierce calf, William L. Hodgeman, Richa[rd] Aldrich, and Eugene A. Kingman. directors then elected the following cers: President, Stephen O. Met[calf] vice-president, Henry D. Sharpe; s[ec]tary-treasurer, Robert W. Warren; eral manager, Allison Stone.

New Arizona Daily

George W. Lynn, who for the past has been running a weekly newspa[per] Yuma, Ariz., has changed his pap[er] an afternoon daily, the Yuma Ev[ening] Herald. Lynn is a former Texas paper man, having worked on Houston Post, El Paso Herald, and the Douglas (Ariz.) International.

N. Y. PRESS HITS CENSORSHIP AND POSTAL RISE

Three Groups Hold Annual Meetings in Syracuse — Publishers Will Name Executive Secretary — Work of Printing School Approved—Abbot and Seitz Discuss Sensationalism in Newspapers

By ARTHUR T. ROBB

ACCOMPLISHMENTS of the three New York publishers' meetings at yracuse last week—the Associated Dailies, the New York State Publishers Association, and the New York State Press Association—can be summarized thus:

Frank E. Gannett

Associated Dailies

Passage of a resolution declaring unnecessary pending state legislation looking toward censorship of books d other publications.

Discussion in executive session of individual administration practices. (Reorted in Editor & Publisher Feb. 7.)

Election of Henri M. Hall, Jamestown ournal, as president, with the probability at the next meeting will be held in July Jamestown.

New York State Publishers Association

Decision to employ an executive secrery to assist members in negotiation of bor wage scales, and in other matters.

Approval of the operation of the Emre State School of Printing.

Disapproval of the pending censorship gislation, and of a bill purporting to cognize as daily newspapers eligible for blication of legal advertising, law journls of small circulation in various cities.

Approval of the publication of an inligent digest of the laws passed at is legislative ssion.

H. M. Hall

Authorizing te president to c-operate with t: postal comrttee of the merican Newsper Publishers ssociation to tain equitable stal legislation.

Approving formulation of plans f campaign to vertise New rk State.

Re-election of ank E. Gannett, Rochester Times-Union, for his fifth successive term as sident, and of all other officers.

Entertainment at the best-attended anual banquet in the association's history brilliant addresses of Willis J. Abbot, Christian Science Monitor, and Don C. Stz, New York World.

New York State Press Association

Appropriation of funds to employ a ld and executive secretary on a full-tie basis.

Declaring unalterable opposition to the nciple of censorship.

Re-election of John W. Baker, Ithaca (N. Y.) Journal-News, as president.

Labor was the topic of most general nrest at the full-day session of the New York State Publishers Association on Friday. This group, which met about if strong, includes the business and edtorial chiefs of the larger up-state city lies, as distinguished from the country lies and weeklies, which form the te Press Association. The Associated lies, limited to one newspaper in each it stresses the confidential discussion fshop problems, with frank statements ired by the absence of competitors m the meeting-room.

The mantle of executive session was drawn when the question of labor scales arose. Advice on the New York City situation and general counsel on proper procedure in negotiations with union representatives was given by Lester L. Jones, executive representative of the Publishers Association of New York City. J. B. Pinkham, who has been assisting the publishers of several up-state cities in such negotiations, outlined in detail the difficulties faced and the manner of their meeting. Several publishers argued the need of common knowledge and interchange of information between New York State cities in wage scale matters and after a lengthy discussion, the president was empowered to appoint a committee of two to act with him in employment of a permanent representative to assist members in labor affairs and in other matter as his help is required. It is expected that funds will be available from the assessment for the Empire State School of Printing to defray the expenses of the new office. No incumbent has yet been selected.

Don C. Seitz

Willis J. Abbot

The report on the school of printing, rendered by Director Ross W. Kellogg, indicated that the Ithaca institution has balanced its budget and now has a surplus. This happy state came about largely through contributions of $4,040 from the American Newspaper Publishers Association and $3,220 from the Publishers Association of New York City.

Statement of the school's finances for the ten months ending Jan. 1, 1925, showed that the operation of the school cost $21,278.17, of which students paid in tuition and earned in commercial printing $7,194.96, assessments on association members making up the operating deficit of $14,093.11.

Eighty-one graduates have been sent forth in the past three years, Mr. Kellogg reported, and 14 men have left after a short course, making a total "alumni" list of 95. Thirty-four men were graduated during 1924. Of the 24 who have been out of the school two years or more, seven are members of the typographical union. Practically all are employed at the trade, despite the depression in the job printing industry.

"The school continues to run at a little more than half capacity," Mr. Kellogg reported. "We are prepared to train 60 young men and women annually. During 1924 we graduated 34. Positions for our graduates have been increasingly difficult to find during the year. When I made my annual report in July, I said that I cannot conscientiously recommend our course to a young man if I do not feel certain that he can secure a position when he is prepared. The $600 which the course costs the student is a large sum to him and he often has to borrow the amount. I am convinced that the easy condition of the labor market during 1924 is but temporary, due to a great extent to depression in the commercial printing industry. There is a steadily decreasing supply of labor, due to the fact that the apprenticeship system is almost a thing of the past. The school training plan is the only substitute."

Mr. Kellogg's report was approved and the association's thanks were tendered to him, the A. N. P. A., and the New York City publishers for their assistance.

Jerome D. Barnum, Syracuse Post-Standard, as chairman of the A. N. P. A. postal committee, informed the association on the efforts at Washington to obtain postal legislation at Washington which will enable newspapers to continue using the mails. His argument, which has been published fully in the Washington reports of the past sixty days in this paper, was that newspapers should not be charged in any cost-finding report, with the expenses of post office activities authorized by Congress as service to the general public, that newspapers performed for themselves most of the services for which they were charged in the discredited cost report presented to Congress in December, and that the experience of the past seven years in postal rate legislation had demonstrated that the public would not pay the bill.

Mr. Barnum's request that the association authorize its president to render necessary co-operation to the A. N. P. A. committee was granted.

Radio received brief attention. President Gannett reported that the station conducted joinly by the Times-Union and the Democrat & Chronicle in Rochester had proven to be a great expense and a producer of no benefit, tangible or otherwise, in his opinion. W. O. Dapping, Auburn Citizen and Advertiser-Journal, a radio enthusiast, saw little chance of profitably linking radio and the press. He believed that the radio could serve the farmer with news of markets, crop, stock, and commodity, which broke too late for evening editions.

E. H. O'Hara, publisher of the Syracuse Herald, related how the Herald had been cited by the Associated Press for broadcasting news. The newspaper was cleared of all blame and the Associated Press directors had a new problem, when it was found that the broadcasting had not been done by the Herald or with its knowledge, but by some unknown reader, who read several columns before a microphone from a copy bought on the street.

E. C. Van Loan, Hudson Star, sounded the only note of menace, when he stated that his own experience and conversation with publishers of similar newspapers, led him to believe that the Victor Talking Machine Company had decided to reduce its advertising in small-city dailies in order to pay the expense of its fortnightly broadcasting program from New York City. Publishers from larger cities declared that they had not heard of the new Victor policy.

Wallace Odell, Tarrytown News, suggested that the publishers might consider selling their space through one representative in the national advertising field, placing the representative on a compensation basis which would save them considerable money. He quoted statistics to show that members of the association were receiving well over $3,500,000 in national advertising annually, and paying out commissions to special representatives well in excess of $500,000.

The suggestion evoked little response, but it did arouse discussion of a campaign to advertise New York State to its own citizens and to the rest of the country, with the latter receiving first choice. No program was adopted.

Over his vehement protest, President Gannett was continued in office by unanimous adoption of the nominating committee's report. The Association, now five years old, has never had any other leader, and the committee wished to honor the incumbent by giving him five full terms. Other officers, all re-elected, are: Vice-presidents, E. H. Butler, Buffalo News; Lynn J. Arnold, Albany Knickerbocker Press and Evening News; Charles H. Congdon, Watertown Times, secretary; and Gardiner Kline, Amsterdam Recorder & Democrat, treasurer.

J. W. Baker

The annual dinner Friday evening was held under the auspices of all three associations, with Mr. Gannett as toastmaster. The tables in the low-ceiled tearoom of the Hotel Syracuse were surrounded by 103 members and guests when Willis J. Abbot and Don C. Seitz were introduced as the speakers. Mr. Abbot with the ease that comes from long practice made his oft-repeated plea that the press cease to stress the news of crime and unhappiness and to emphasize constructive news. Business considerations will eventually force such a change if it is not made voluntarily, he declared.

Mr. Seitz "agreed with Mr. Abbot almost wholly as to facts, not at all as to conclusions" and for the next hour painted an unflattering picture of the present-day newspaper. The audience, possibly feeling that his confession was good for their souls, called for more when Mr. Seitz offered to desist at the half-hour and applauded him vigorously at the conclusion.

"I am trying to protest against the present practice of capitalizing evil," Mr. Abbot said. "Newspapers now make a systematic effort to gather and exploit the abnormal, rather than the cheerful and good things. The paper which I edit headlines cheerfulness, and we have to gather our own news, because the correspondents of other daily newspapers never think to pick up the news of the finer side of life."

J. W. Shaw

Characterizing Finley Peter Dunne as "one of the finest newspaper men I ever knew," Mr. Abbot quoted his Mr. Dooley and Mr. Hennessy on the newspapers. Distress filled the paper that Mr. Dooley was reading to Hennessy and Dooley complained. "Well," said Mr. Hennessy, "the papers have to print what happens."

"No," rejoined Dooley, "They have to print what's different."

"When the coast-to-coast air mail was instituted," Mr. Abbot went on, "the New York World with characteristic enterprise, had sent to it a San Francisco newspaper—the first paper to be sent across the continent and read 3,000 miles away from its publication point within 48 hours. The World reproduced the front page, and the headlines that the resources of the air mail gave to New York readers concerned bandits holding up a store, a posse seeking a murderer in the hills, showgirls seeking redress from a swindler, and assault and battery in a prominent family.

"Newspapers must more and more try to develop constructive news and to do away with extreme sensationalism. I foresee the passing of the streamer headline and the reform of typography as well as editorial treatment.

"The advertising columns of the newspapers, which a few years ago could not have been read aloud before decent people, were cleaned up by the advertisers rather than by the publishers or the editorial rooms. Advertisers objected to having their copy cheek by jowl with loathsome advertisements of medicines. American newspapers in the character and typography of their advertising columns now challenge comparison with any in the world, but we have not allowed the news columns to share in the typographical reform.

"Any head less than three columns wide is now modest. Sensationalism has become like the taste for alcohol or drugs. It grows by what it feeds on, and the time is coming when the sensationalism of newspapers will not fill the demands of readers taught to expect it."

Mr. Abbot said that the Christian Science Monitor was the most expensively edited newspaper in the world. It has its own staff in offices of important foreign capitals, with 30 people in London. It is debarred from syndication of its news or from buying syndicated news, because it has been found impossible to operate successfully a paper of the Monitor's appeal even in a local field so large as Boston. It has to seek national circulation and its news and editorial content must be original and not to be found elsewhere.

"But there is pleasure," he said, "in thinking that what you give people to read helps, not hurts them."

He referred to the statement of Senator Copeland, then Health Commissioner of New York City, that the newspapers' treatment of the 1918 influenza epidemic had been responsible for more cases of illness than any of the other conditions that physicians had to combat. He also illustrated his point—that news of crime foments crime—by citing the report of the commission which invesigated a crime wave in Cleveland some years ago. This held that the crime wave disappeared when the baseball season opened and the newspapers' attention was taken away from law-breakers and their deeds, Mr. Abbot said.

"Christian Science embraces many intelligent and well-to-do people," Mr. Seitz remarked, after disagreeing with Mr. Abbot's findings, "and that Mr. Abbot avoided the common is a tribute to his journalism rather than his faith. In their eagerness to reach the common herd, the press has become more common than the herd. The newspaper is no longer an institution. It is a commercialized convenience.

"The pioneers established newspapers not to make money, but because they had something to say and they were always opposed by the great phalanx which regards intelligence as a crime.

"And, while we are on pioneers, I want to say a word for the quacks that Mr. Abbot dismissed so contemptuously—the pill man, the beautifier, the clairvoyant. These quacks alone supported for many years the effort on the part of men to be heard, and they didn't make us destroy a million acres of forests a year to print double trucks for department stores.

"I see no reaction coming. We are no longer regarded as combatants, we are not Don Quixotes. We're just in the newspaper business, and as I see all you people in front of me, I'm convinced that prosperity has even overcome the abolition of passes on the New York Central Railroad.

"We are shutting out from any advancement in journalism the young men in every town, by wholesale purchase of syndicated matter that appeals to the rudimentary.

"We bar out the lotteries—another act of virtue—but we print the stock quotations and we don't get 50 cents for them.

"We invent nothing to satisfy our readers, we hunt nothing, and in our desire to catch a few readers in Woodchuck Hollow, we go to press before anything happens. We aren't printing crime, we aren't printing anything but guesses and Mutt and Jeff, interlarded with press agent stuff made by men getting 10 times the salary of the average reporter.

"Some time ago, I counted in the daily calendar, 53 events taking place in New York that evening. Ten years ago a city editor would have been fired for neglecting any of them. The next morning I looked through two papers and found not a line concerning any of the happenings.

"Whether the audience will stand for facts or not, I don't know. They're listening to radio now, paid for at $10 a minute. The newspapers print the daily radio programs for nothing, with the names of the people who are paying to be included in the broadcasting, but I don't believe that the people are paying any attention to what they hear by the radio. All the radio nuts I know twist the dials and say 'that's Chicago,' or 'now we're getting the Coast' but none of them can tell you what they are hearing.

"We've given the bicycle and the automobile pages of puffs for the advertising they bought at low rates and now we are putting the radio business over for the trust without a cent of compensation. We print columns of radio stuff that nine readers out of ten won't read and can't understand if they would. We print radio sections for a few radio lunatics and hound the little storekeepers for radio advertising.

"Think what you want about the voluntary censorship that the press underwent during the war. I hold that it was most disastrous. The newspapers have not yet recovered from their 'ami-imbecility' of taking what was handed to them and asking no questions."

Following is the list of those attending the Syracuse meetings:

Frank E. Gannett, Rochester Times-Union; Don C. Seitz, New York World; Willis S. Abbott, Christian Science Monitor (Boston); John W. Baker, Ithaca Journal-News; Lester L. Jones, New York City Publishers' Association; J. B. Pinkham, Syracuse, N. Y.; Ross Kellogg, Ithaca, N. Y.; J. D. Barnum, Post-Standard; Gardiner Kline, Amsterdam Recorder; J. E. Willoughby, Amsterdam Recorder; Thomas J. Blain, Port Chester Daily Item; F. C. Bickers, Fredonia Censer; E. M. Perkins, Leroy Gazette-News; W. B. Sanders, Nunda News; Wallace Odell, Tarrytown News; P. B. Ingraham, Ingraham-Powers, Inc.; R. M. Van Wagenen, Niagara Falls Gazette; N. F. Maddever, Niagara Falls Gazette; F. E. Brundage, Union Sun & Journal, Lockport; Emory C. Van Loan, Hudson Daily Star; Floyd J. Rich, Carthage Republican-Tribune; P. L. Bajus, Syracuse Telegram; R. W. Disque, Post-Standard; T. A. MacEluee, Intertype Corporation; W. H. Coleman, Intertype Corporation; B. R. Lipe, Intertype Corporation; T. P. Hanse, Interlaken Review; W. E. Bassler, Middleburgh News; F. E. Blezarde, Revenna News-Herald; Elmer E. Conrath, Cuba Patriot; R. E. Peirson, Belmont Dispatch; F. A. Crumb, Alfred Sun; J. H. Backus, Andover News; E. M. Waterbury, Oswego Times; W. O. Dapping, Auburn Citizen; Lithgow Osborne, Auburn Citizen; E. Thales Emmons, Geneva Times; P. H. Wertz, Watertown Standard; A. W. Howland, Howland & Howland; A. B. Parker, Watertown Standard; James Clapham, Comptroller's Office; A. W. Hoffman, Kingston Freeman; E. S. White, Walton Reporter; William T. Powell, Cooperstown Farmer Journal; Walter C. Stone, Camden Advance Journal; Byron G. Seamans, Pulaski Democrat; Harry G. Stutz, Ithaca Journal-News; Frank A. Taber, Jr., Syracuse Herald; David S. Cock, New York State College of Agriculture, Ithaca; Fay C. Parsons, Cortland Democrat; Fred P. Hall, Jr., Jamestown Journal; Henri M. Hall, Jamestown Journal; Frank L. Rogers, Gloversville Leader-Republican; Edw. H. Mills, Gloversville Leader-Republican; Edward L. Allen, Jamestown Morning Post; B. C. Barnard, Rome Sentinel; A. R. Kessinger, Rome Sentinel; P. L. Clark, Norwich Sun; E. H. Clark, Cortland Standard; J. W. Shaw, New York Press Association, Elmira; M. V. Atwood, Utica Observer-Dispatch; Prentiss Bailey, Utica Observer-Dispatch; Frederick P. Hall, Jamestown Journal; G. S. Griswold, Batavia News; Fred D. Salmon, Port Jervis Union-Gazette; Horace P. Bull, Post Standard; Rudolph W. Chamberlain, Auburn Advertiser-Journal; Victor J. Callanan, Auburn Advertiser-Journal; G. B. Williams, Geneva Times; C. R. Bailey, New York City; Louis D. Burrill, Syracuse Journal; M. J. Picou, Syracuse Journal; Willard C. Wheeler, Tully Times; Charles H. Betts and Thomas L. Betts, Lyon Republican; Arthur D. Hecox, Knickerbocker Press and Albany Evening News; David B. Plum, Troy Record; Edward H. O'Hara, Syracuse Herald; Mary E. Jenkins, Syracuse Herald; Thomas H. Power, Syracuse Herald; William J. Cobey, Alexandria Bay Thousand Islands Sun; L. C. Sutton, Massena Observer; Daniel D. Frisbie, Schoharie Republican; Oliver G. Buisch, Hornell Tribune-Times; Garry A. Willard, Boonville Herald; Elias Vair, Waterloo News; P. A. Blossom, Brockport Republic; W. P. Small, Herkimer Telegram; M. O. Menaige, Ludlow Typograph Company; D. F. Wilber, Oneonta Star; H. W. See, Oneonta Star; C. H. Bowdish, Oneonta Star; F. M. H. Jackson, Oneonta Star; A. W. Bademann, Western Newspaper Union, Buffalo; S. M. C. Browne, Western Newspaper Union, Pittsburgh; Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Editor & Publisher; William V. Jones, Utica Daily Press; C. F. McCohill, Rochester Journal American; M. M. Lord, Syracuse Telegram American; C. M. Kendall, Watertown Daily Times; John O. Simmons, Department of Journalism, Syracuse University; Burrows Matthews, Buffalo Express.

The New York Members of the Associated Press met following the joint banquet Friday night to discuss up-State news service and further perfection of the wire service generally. Superintendent Edward McKernon, of the Eastern Division of the Associated Press, addressed the members. The same arrangement with regard to policy in connection with daylight saving time will hold this summer the same as last summer.

Officers of the association were re-elected as follows: president, Gardner Kline, Amsterdam Recorder; secretary, Russel Hathaway, A. P. Albany Correspondent.

W. W. CHAPIN REENTERS FIELD

Former Coast Publisher Buys Sacramento Union

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

Sacramento, Feb. 12.—The Sacramento (Cal.) Union has been purchased by W. W. Chapin, former part owner of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. The purchase took place last Saturday and was announced in the Sunday morning edition of the Union. Those making the sale were James D. Meredith, publisher, and B. E. Bradley, editor. Bradley will remain as managing editor.

Although Mr. Chapin is best known to newspaper men through his connection with the Post-Intelligencer, he has also owned and published the San Francisco Call, and the Oakland (Cal.) Enquirer. At one time he owned a part interest in the Chicago Record-Herald.

In January, 1916, he attracted attention by purchasing the Newark (N. J.) Morning Eagle and Evening Star at an auction sale, and almost immediately re-selling them to N. C. Wright and H. S. Thalheimer, then publishers of the Toledo (O.) Blade, and H. G. Halsted, vice-president of Paul Block, Inc. A year later he purchased the Oakland Enquirer, which he published until the merger of the Enquirer with the Oakland Post in 1922.

Mr. Chapin is about 48 years old, and lived originally in Philadelphia.

Transcript Building Hit by Fire

The building occupied by the Boston (Mass.) Transcript was damaged to the extent of $100,000 by fire last Sunday evening. The damage to the Transcript itself was not serious enough to cripple the paper and Monday editions were printed as usual.

Daily Sponsors Women's Athletics

Five thousand girls and women participated in an indoor athletic meet, held under the auspices of the Baltimore Evening Sun, in the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore, last Saturday.

COST FINDING CHIEF INLAND PRESS TOPIC

Report of Special Committee to Be Heard at Annual Meeting Feb. 17-18 in Chicago—Many Prominent Speakers

Cost finding and account keeping o daily newspapers will be the most impor tant topic to come before the Inland Daily Press Association at its annual meetin Tuesday and Wednesday of next week a the Morrison Hotel, Chicago.

The entire session Wednesday morning will be devoted to the consideration o the cost-finding system as devised by th Association. The report of a specia committee on the subject, of which E. H Harris, of Richmond, Ind., is chairman will be read. There will also be ad dresses by accountants and members o the Inland Press, who have given specia attention to the subject. A survey an summary of the business of the Inlan newspapers covering 1924 is in prepara tion and will be presented in connectio with the cost-finding report.

The meeting will be called to orde Tuesday morning by President George D Lindsay, of the Marion (Ind.) Chronicle The first business will be election of nev members, after which Wil V. Tufford, o Clinton, Ia., secretary, will present hi report. Chester W. Adams, of the Vin cennes (Ind.) Commercial, will speak o composing-room equipment, followed b Lucile Brian Gilmore, Chicago repre sentative of Editor & Publisher, wh will talk on "Some Observations o Newspaper Publishers' Associations."

At the noon luncheon Monday, Dr Ernest D. Burton, president of the Uni versity of Chicago, will speak on "Th Relation of the Press to Education."

In relation to cost finding C. F. Kar staedt of the Beloit (Wis.) News wi speak on "What Real Accounting Mean to a Publisher"; H. W. Henry, Chicag staff manager, Ernst & Ernst, Accoun tants, on "Uniform Accounting Method and Comparatives," and F. H. Bird, d rector of department of research, Unite Typothetæ, on "Research Work on Co Finding."

The Wednesday luncheon will be ad dressed by Robert C. Crowe, State's A torney, Chicago. His subject is "News paper Attitude Toward Crime."

In the afternoon reports of special com mittees and election of officers will follo two talks on "Newspaper Ethics" ar "Free Publicity," by William Souther Jr., of the Independence Examiner ar C. E. Broughton of the Sheboygan Pres respectively.

The meeting will close with a roun table discussion of "The Good of th Order."

STATE PRESS ASSOCIATION INCREASES FIELD SECRETARY'S BUDGET

MEMBERS of the New York State Press Association at their annual meeting in Syracuse, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 6 and 7, considered the office of field secretary has been functioning satisfactorily for the two year period that it has been tried, except that Jay Shaw, who holds the position, has been hampered by lack of funds to carry on the office efficiently.

A much more extensive program was outlined for 1925, which carries with it a budget of $7,100. When it was found that only about one-third of this sum had been pledged, the members present came to the rescue and brought the pledges up to $5,725. Practically every member followed the exhortation and example of Fay Parsons of the Cortland Democrat in paying 50 per cent in addition to the assessed amount already levied, with the result that it was voted to carry on the full activities of the association through the office of the field secretary.

The office of the field secretary in Albany reported a vast amount of constructive work accomplished during the past two years. But it was brought out th the field secretary himself had gone considerable sacrifice to carry on the wor with insufficient funds. Now the office expected to function with greater ea and without the secretary himself havin to spend time trying to raise pledges support the office.

It was voted the remainder of th money needed was to be raised in any wa the executive committee sees fit. It expected that more members will join th association because of the more expansiv program outlined, and that those wh have not paid their pledges will do so, order that emergency pledges may not found necessary.

One of the first projects is to have th newspaper interests adequately repre sented at the hearing on the clean boo bill at Albany, February 17.

Officers elected were: president, Jo W. Baker; vice president, Elmer E. Co rath, Cuba Patriot; secretary, J. Shaw; treasurer, Elias Vair, Waterl News.

"MERE AUTOMAT PAPERS DOOMED"—MURDOCK

Mammoth "News Factories" Turning Out "Canned" Products Must Yield to Dailies Which Put Performance Before Profit and Service Above Self-Seeking, Kansas Publisher Declares

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

A NEWSPAPER Darwin this week defined his idea of the "only fit daily" and offered proof its kind alone would survive the evolution towards big consolidations, which, he said, seem destined to follow the present wordy deluge of reading matter.

Marcellus M. Murdock, publisher of the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle, was the man the writer chose to play this Darwinian role.

Mr. Murdock publishes a daily newspaper which has made Kansas history, as well as profit. Founded in 1872 by Mr. Murdock's father, M. M. Murdock, the Eagle has survived countless evolutionary hardships to reach its present prosperity. It started with high ideals and never wavered.

"The only fit newspaper, to my mind," Mr. Murdock declared, "is one which puts—"Performance above profits.

"Service above self-seeking.

"Ultimate good of the morrow above the expediency of today."

Native of the state where golden wheat lies with the splendor of sunset on the prairies, Mr. Murdock has become, as who would not, a contemplative philosopher of idealism, as well as a practical business man. His conversation sparkles with the gold of dream stuff. And, at the same time, he has proof at hand to show that idealism pays.

"There are too many mere automat newspapers. The trade is becoming cluttered up with them," he began, warning those in the craft that there must be a "reawakening of ideals" if they would survive this day of "mammoth news factories."

"Too many fail to remember that a newspaper is not just a vending machine, distributing news, advertising circulars, and canned editorials, wrapped in a package.

"Whatever amount of money it is possible to make, a newspaper is not justified in being a sort of automat, serving ham and egg newsprint sandwiches.

"The 'almighty dollar' has blinded many newspaper publishers from the real object of their profession.

"It is resulting in the deluge of cheap reading matter this age is producing. And the great mammoth news factories are crushing out the automat type of newspaper, which is too small to wage war against them.

"The newspaper, however, which is operated on the principle that it is not just a collar button factory, but a live, breathing organism, founded in character, actuated by a soul, that will build for the future—such a newspaper will find itself preserved against any amount of aggregate wealth."

I asked Mr. Murdock frankly for some instances where the Eagle had put such ideals to work.

"The very foundation of the Eagle by my father was his all-absorbing ambition to build a city," he replied. "Contiguous to the city that was to be was a promising rich and productive territory, a trade area, of a hundred miles and more in every direction.

"The Eagle has never lost sight of its obligation to this district. It has year after year multiplied its circulation as population has filled in the interstices and today is serving daily 58,000 families and on Sunday 70,000. That is performance.

"If immediate profits had been the governing factor, a newspaper published in a city of 100,000 population would have never have allowed to develop such a huge circulation. Because this means an overload considering the merchandise revenues and available advertising income produced by a city of that size, only partly offset by the fact that the Eagle's subscription price is $7.50 a year and its national advertising patronage runs into the millions of lines annually. Had today's profits rather than service and ultimate returns dictated the policy, the Eagle today would be a newspaper with its 20,000 circulation within the city of Wichita and not more than twenty or twenty-five thousand on the outside, a total of forty or forty-five thousand circulation.

Marcellus M. Murdock

"An example of less pretentious proportions is found in the paper's attitude when it comes to the choice between loss of advertising lineage and the welfare of its citizens. Some time ago, the Eagle came to the conclusion that Wichita was not receiving adequate transportation facilities from the local street railway company.

"The publisher of the Eagle took the matter up personally with the representatives of the street railway company and urged improvement in the service and equipment. There was no desire to make of the situation just one of those specious newspaper campaigns. Promises were made, but no substantial relief given.

"The Eagle then started a campaign with the sole motive of the public good, and for more than a year hammered away at the proposition. It promoted buses and gave its support to the first embryonic jitney lines. It tried by gentle suggestions and by rough philippics to get the street railway company to see that new methods of transportation would be the thing of tomorrow. But the profits of today were controlling the policy of the street railway company.

"However, the campaign has had definite results.

"Of course, our campaign is not solely responsible, but this and other factors, including a change of ownership in the street railway company, has resulted in that company improving its rail service, establishing several bus lines and taking over and operating others already existing.

"Here is the moral of the story. The street railway company was an old and steady advertising patron of the paper. When the Eagle started its campaign, the street railway company withdrew its advertising and the paper lost thousands of inches of advertising.

"The Eagle certainly in this campaign was putting service above self-seeking, performance before profit.

"There have been similar instances to this in cases of the water company, the gas company and other business advertising patrons. There have been money sacrifices, but results have not always been so definite and measurable.

"Editorially the policy has been made manifest year after year. The Eagle has stood unwaveringly for progressive measures, locally and nationally.

"When it has found an ulcer in its local body politic, it has gone after it and kept after it until it was cleaned up, despite the protests of any part of the citizenship and charges that the fair name of the city was being besmirched and the city unfavorably advertised.

"The ultimate good was certainly paramount to the evil of the day, mistaken for temporary benefit.

"Nationally it has stood for those measures, even unto constitutional amendments, which it believed to be for the good of the nation's whole citizenship. Whatever sacrifice was involved on being on the losing side at times, if there is any loss, that even of prestige, it bore without flinching. It always counted the ultimate good more to be desired and sought than the expedient profit of the present."

Mr. Murdock started newspaper work actively in 1902, when he was 22 years of age. Previously he had been given a peep at the business at the age of 14 years. Then he was turned loose and told to write up a local skating party.

He came back to the office, and included in the story he produced the highly entertaining information that the "skaters were warned not to skate over the wholes." It was printed as written, and Mr. Murdock has been spending the rest of his life living down this first attempt.

His older brother, Victor Murdock, took charge of the editorial side of the paper, while Marcellus entered the business office.

At first, Mr. Murdock recalls, his most important task was taking the Eagle's cash to the bank daily.

"But I surrounded myself with good men," he said, "and have learned a great deal more since, I hope."

Today Mr. Murdock is not completely satisfied with his newspaper's success. He has an ideal towards which he has been constantly aiming in his 22 years of newspaper work.

"I believe," he said, "that a newspaper should make sufficient revenue to do the following things in this order:

"1. Perpetuate itself, and keep itself in the lead in its community and trade territory.

"2. To generously compensate the real brain and muscles of the institution—its employes.

"3. To turn a fair rate of interest for the capital used—say, six or eight per cent."

NEWS FROM GENEVA SLIGHTED

Large Volume Available But Not Used Is Complaint

Many newspapers are not using news from Geneva, is the complaint of the current League of Nations Herald, although, the publication adds, there is at present a much larger volume of League news than at any previous time, and the interest is steadily growing.

"The news is increasingly thin and inadequate as distance from the Atlantic seaboard increases, the mountain states being least adequately supplied," the publication states.

"From material now at hand, any daily paper can remedy this situation. Whether or not it will do so depends largely on its readers. The press on the whole gives the people what it believes they want.

"In the early days of the League neither American news agencies nor American newspapers considered it worth while to keep representatives at the seat of the League.

"About two years ago, however, the Associated Press and the United Press established permanent offices there. The New York Times and New York World have lately sent permanent representatives. Several correspondents are there reporting for individual papers or groups of papers."

New York Publisher Marries

Judge Edwin Stewart Underhill, Sr., and Miss Mary A. Allen of Bath, N. Y., were married in that city on Feb. 4, leaving at once for New Orleans and California. Judge Underhill is publisher of the Corning (N. Y.) Evening Ledger and is associate publisher of the Bath (N. Y.) Steuben Advocate. He is a former president of the New York State Editorial Association. Mrs. Underhill formerly was a member of the editorial staff of the Advocate.

Milwaukee Journal Broadcasting

The Milwaukee Journal has joined with Marquette University, Milwaukee, in erecting a 500-watt radio station, known as WHAD, "Marquette-Milwaukee Journal Station." The Rev. Father John B. Kremer, S. J., head of the department of physics, Marquette University, is director of the new station, and Herbert F. Wareing, chief operator.

Toledo Blade Runs Big Section

The Toledo Blade printed a 32-page "Willys-Overland Automobile Section" Feb. 2. Copy was assembled under direction of W. Edward Myers, advertising manager. The Blade of Jan. 31 carried a 28-page section devoted to the automotive interests.

Six Papers Install Ludlow Equipment

Six newspapers, the Philadelphia Gazette, Ottawa Free Traders Journal, Bridgeton (N. J.) Evening News, Sheboygan (Wis.) Press, Woodland (Cal.) Democrat, and Cottage Grove (Ore.) Sentinel, recently installed Ludlow Typograph equipment, the Ludlow firm announced this week.

"EDITORS SHOULD SEARCH FOR DECENT AND BEAUTIFUL"—JOE CHAPPLE

Famous Feature Writer and Editor Believes Journalist's Privilege Is to Seek the Noble in Man—People and Travel His Hobbies

THE reputation of hobnobbing with kings and queens, princes and premiers, of being "the pet of statesmen and politicians," of having made many successful authors, and of having himself reached a high place as a successful author and editor, is enough to turn almost any man's head. But Joe Mitchell Chapple, Boston newspaper man and magazine editor, who might rightfully boast of such renown, is fortunately praise-proof.

"Joe," as he is known to thousands throughout the world, might have accumulated a fortune during his lifetime of literary activity, but he has always preferred friendship to fortune. His habits have not changed since the days when, still a lad, he set up a weekly newspaper in the Middle West and published the gossip of the village on an old hand press that printed so badly that his subscribers would often come to the office and make him read the blurred items.

When he is at his "attic" in Boston he sits at the same old pine table that he used many years ago when, together with his brothers, he began the publishing of the National Magazine, with which he has been connected ever since as editor. Surrounded by the same plain walls that witnessed his early struggles to put the periodical on firm footing he dictates and writes, reads and corrects more copy, probably, than any other single person. Here, also, he meets the constant stream of friends who come to see him when they know he is in town.

Nor have any of those whose early days he helped to make more pleasant sledding forgotten him. His home-made table which serves in lieu of the magazine editor's customary mahogany desk is always covered with letters of gratitude from famous authors, editors, statesmen, and other lights of the professions. Joe cherishes them as "leaves of gratitude in a book of friendship and good will."

Since his early years, Joe Chapple has been an exponent of the new journalism. As "the boy editor" he determined that mere muckraking was not the province of the newspaper man and that the editor has no prerogative to set himself up as a supreme judge of mankind. There is enough of the good in this sordid world, he believes, to make even a printer and publisher optimistic in old age.

"It is the province and privilege of the reporter, the editor, and the author to search, as I have been searching since my first experience as a writer, for the decent and beautiful—for all that is good and noble in man," he declares.

Joe has never forgotten his early days as editor of The National. He often reminds his old friends of the time in which he and his brother Will alternated in the use of the single pair of reversible cuffs they owned between them. George Barr McCutcheon still reminds the editor of the fact that the latter bought his first story. Although the author received but ten dollars for it, to McCutcheon it was a Godsend, and to Joe Chapple it meant another week of starvation rations. Zona Gale and Ellis Parker Butler and Rex Beach are on the list of those who received encouragement for their first literary endeavors from Chapple. Jack London, also, had some of his first works accepted by the editor of The National.

Joe Chapple's hobbies are people and travel. He never rests. Just back from a world tour during which he did much traveling in Bagdad, Iraq, Syria and the Holy Land, and in the midst of the preparation of a series of 14 articles on his trip for the New York World and the Boston Globe, he recently left his work to embark upon a lecture tour of the country on behalf of the Near East Relief.

When, about a month ago, Joe Chapple broadcast on behalf of the drive from the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, his plain pine table, during the next week, was buried under an avalanche of letters from his audience. So stirring was his speech because of its characteristic earnestness that many mothers living on farms wrote him letters in which they enclosed contributions of one dollar. One declared she could afford no more, as her husband was very poor, and she herself had not had a new dress for several years. But she wanted to do her bit and pinned the dollar, to save which had probably required weeks of skimping, to her letter which she sent on to the editor. And Joe Chapple, with his usual kindliness, accepted her contribution, and presented her with a year's subscription to the National Magazine.

JOE MITCHELL CHAPPLE

The extent of his friendship with thousands who have never seen him can be realized from the fact that nearly one-half of the letters he received as a result of his first broadcasting experience were written by men and women who knew him through his "Heart Throbs" and "Heart Songs," two books of his, over a million copies of which are now in circulation and which continue best sellers after 20 years upon the market.

How Joe Chapple manages to do the many things in which he is engaged is a marvel to newspaper men. Besides editing and writing a large part of the contents of The National Magazine, he also writes a daily column, a continuing and up-to-the-minute biographic encyclopedia of the famous folk of the day which is a feature of a large number of daily newspapers. He has already published more than a dozen books, of which "The Life and Times of Warren Harding" is the latest. He has lately inaugurated a biographic cross-word puzzle service.

On the wing, as he is most of the time, Joe Chapple is as elusive as the proverbial will-o'-the-wisp. He maintains offices which are known to everybody who knows him as "Attics," in Boston at his printing and publishing plant, and in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Leith With Hollands Magazine

S. E. Leith, for many years Eastern manager of the Associated Farm Papers, has resigned to take the special representation in the East of Holland's Magazine of Dallas, Tex.

CROSS WORDS CAPTURE BRITAIN

Virtually All Dailies Printing Them—Premier Baldwin Comments

By Herbert C. Ridout
(London Editor, Editor & Publisher)

Cross word puzzles are repeating in England the craze they reached in the United States. There is no newspaper that does not print one or more each day. Prizes are rarely given for solutions, but everybody is talking of or working on cross word puzzles.

At the Press Club recently, where the Prime Minister, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, was principal guest, the cross word puzzle came under review in humorous fashion.

Mr. Baldwin referred to the fact that journalists had many points in common with himself; neither of them had any regular hours for meals, neither were subject to the eight hours law, and both could be fired out and put on the street at a moment's notice without compensation and without pension.

"There is another great Lord," he continued. "I as Prime Minister, and you as journalists, are engaged in the common work of trying to elevate the people of this country, and you are doing it today through that marvelous medium, the cross-word puzzle. There is now hardly a man, woman or child in this country who is not familiar with the name of Eli. The fact that Asa was King of Judah can be concealed now from none. I should think 90 per cent of the people believe that there was but one Roman Emperor and that his name was Nero. They have learned that there is one mysterious bird in a far country of three letters, and one snake of three letters."

MARITIME SERVICE RESUMED

Canadian Press Wires Reopened With Publishers Paying Entire Cost

Resumption of the leased wire service of the Canadian Press was effected by the daily newspapers of the maritime provinces, Feb. 8. This service was discontinued about a year ago, following the cancellation of the Canadian Government subsidy.

The dailies at that time decided that without the subsidy the cost of the service was too great, owing to the long and unremunerative distance from Montreal.

However, it has been decided that limited service has been unsatisfactory, hence the renewal of the leased wire service, with the dailies bearing the entire financial burden.

The final meeting of representatives of the maritime provinces dailies to discuss the problem was held at Moncton, N. B. In attendance were: G. Fred Pearson, managing director of the Halifax Chronicle and Evening Echo; A. W. Robb, secretary-treasurer, Halifax Herald and Evening Mail; A. R. Coffin, editor, Truro News; E. L. Coleman, business manager, Sydney Record; H. P. Duchemin, manager, Sydney Post; H. P. Robinson, a director, and A. J. West, managing editor, St. John Telegraph-Journal and Evening Times-Star.

The Canadian Press was represented by J. F. B. Livesay of Toronto, general manager, and A. D. Merkel, of Halifax, maritime provinces superintendent.

Southwest Sports Writers Organize

Sport writers of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana have organized the Sport Writers' Association of the Southwest, and have elected the following officers: Jere R. Hayes, Dallas Times-Herald, president; Spike Cooper, Beaumont Enterprise, vice-president; Horace S. McCoy, Dallas Journal, secretary; George W. White, Dallas Dispatch, treasurer. Ned Record of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and S. E. Davis, Fort Worth Press, were named as a committee on by-laws. There were 28 charter members.

CLEVELAND PUBLISHERS BAN RADIOCASTING

Times, Press, Plain Dealer and News Decide to Cease Broadcasting Efforts and Leave Field to Professional Entertainers

Newspaper publishers of Cleveland, on Saturday, Feb. 7, entered into an agreement to cease broadcasting any programs in their respective fields and attend strictly to the business of publishing newspapers hereafter, leaving the radio entertainment field to those more properly fitted to take care of it.

This means that the Cleveland publishers have taken up the broadcasting problem and have settled it in their own way definitely and finally, and that while they will continue to publish in detail radio programs and news and lend every assistance to their readers in obtaining high grade entertainment they will not sponsor further programs from the three powerful stations located in Cleveland—WTAM, WEAR and WHK.

Dearth of good local talent is one reason the publishers will no longer send out programs. With the advent of the Victor company into the broadcasting field in New York, sending out really high class programs from the world's greatest artists, the Cleveland publishers agreed that it was time for them to step aside and leave the business of entertaining the public on the radio to professional entertainers.

Another thing taken into consideration, they said, was the fact that too much broadcasting by promiscuous companies, concerns and individuals is having a tendency to commercialize programs to too great an extent.

For years the Cleveland papers have used the radio for broadcasting purposes. The Cleveland Plain Dealer has been sending out regular programs over Station WTAM. The Cleveland Press has sought high and low for talent to furnish its regular entertainment programs of Station WHK, and the Cleveland News has gone to great lengths to get suitable entertainment for its programs broadcast over old Station WJAX, recently renamed Station WEAR when the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company took it over.

For the last year or more, the Cleveland Times has been supplying every week day a news service to WEAR and others.

The Cleveland publishers considered carefully the fact that big Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh and other newspapers are, if anything, amplifying their radio efforts. In the end it was decided that the Cleveland situation was purely local, and that they would take the necessary steps to retire definitely from the broadcasting business.

Iowa Daily in New Home

The Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Evening Gazette, after 35 years in its building at the east end of the First avenue bridge, is now installed in its new three-story $80,000 home on Third avenue and Fifth street. The business office occupies the first floor. Private offices of the paper's executives are there also. The mailing room is in the rear. News and editorial departments are on the second floor with the composing room in the rear. Automatic tube systems connect all department. A new Duplex press and new stereotyping equipment was installed. A New Home edition is to be published soon.

New Legal Rate Bill Drawn

A revised legal publication rate bill perfected by the Texas Press Association and Daily Newspapers, is ready for introduction in the Texas Legislature. The measure provides for a flat rate in all publications of 10,000 circulation and less of two cents per word for the first and one cent per word for subsequent insertions; and for more than 10,000 circulation, the commercial rate for all official advertising.

EDITOR WOULD CUT CRIME NEWS TO MINIMUM

Saginaw News Courier Chief Says Most Crimes and Divorces Have Same News Value as a Dull Speech By a Fourth-Rate Authority—Wants No Maudlin Heroics

By A. R. TREANOR
EDITOR AND MANAGER, SAGINAW NEWS COURIER

VERY recently at the annual meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, an inspiring and purposeful exposition of contrasting views regarding crime news was contributed by two leading journalists. Willis J. Abbott of the Christian Science Monitor detailed a policy of no crime news and Herbert Bayard Swope of the New York World vigorously justified the policy of that leading metropolitan journal in stressing criminal affairs.

One speaker intimated crime news should be suppressed because it is news of crime; the other argued that it should be printed because it was "crime" news. With the one, the fact that an incident or event centered in the performance of a crime rendered it unfit for publication; by the second speaker it was this fact that made it outstanding news.

Some editors and publishers believe both speakers presented extreme views; that both schools of thought and decision err because of a lack of editorial and mental flexibility, and further, that they do not only misread the elements of news because of preconceived notions but commit public offenses against good taste and private offenses against good journalistic ethics because they fail to apply a standard of news values to criminal events.

As long as there are humans there will be crime, and as long as newspapers exist, crime news will be published. Possibly "crime news" needs a brief definition. It is, when strictly applied, a large term but in the sense provocative of so much earnest and endless discussion narrows to homicides and sex cases. In so far as crime news touches upon misfeasance or malfeasance in public office, in industrial affairs, community upheavals or labor differences the issue of unnecessary and unjustified publicity is but seldom raised. But when column after column of conjecture, gossip and insidious suggestion is printed about the murder of a Broadway butterfly or an unknown ward-healer or an equal lineage is used to detail to the "nth" degree, the questionable love affairs of a police court intimate or fourth-rate actress the question of the determination of news values arises even before that of propriety, justice or good policy.

Every newspaper man is familiar with the argument that the press is a mirror of humanity, that it reports what individuals do, and that so long as human frailties break out in the commission of hideous murders and bankrupt the marital ties there is nothing to do but print them. It is well to remember that human nature does much else than to err; that unusual acts of kindness may be discovered daily by any intelligent reporter who will bother to look into the affairs of his own neighborhood. But there seems to be no great metropolitan advocate of a policy to search for and find this type of news.

The press must print news and hence there is some merit in the argument that crime news cannot and should not be ignored. But this does not warrant a policy of printing crime news by the wholesale and other news in small retail quantities.

There is a newspaper yardstick that should be applied to crime news in a degree similar to that to which it is used on all other news. A crime involving unimportant people is in no sense unlike a dull speech delivered by a near-authority. There is some news in the fact of the speech and the presence of the speaker, but if his message is ordinary the newspaper columns give him little mention. Likewise, a divorce proceeding coming from a stunted environment where respect and recognition of common morals and human rights are little understood, has none of the news value of a family difference involving citizens of established place in the community and of recognition in their profession or personal walks of life. Yet many large papers carry divorce news regularly on their first page regardless of the personnel of the affairs.

Crime news will always be published.

* * *

Should be written in briefest form, true to best news standards.

* * *

Eliminate disgusting, spicy, sordid details.

* * *

Suggestive innuendo is barred.

* * *

The news of the first crime in history was well told in 29 words.

—A. R. TREANOR.

That the best of precedents may be cited in support of a suggested policy of viewing crime news from the point of minimum rather than maximum publicity can be illustrated by one reference. The first and best known chronicles of all time, a document that in our present methods and standards would probably have been issued under the name of the Eden News, carries in fifty chapters the Story of the Creation. In it is given the report of the first murder, a story of unparalleled importance, and it is fully covered in twenty-nine words. The report is brief and complete and shuns the collateral facts and attending detail. It simply tells the story, almost in one line, certainly in one paragraph, and in one brief story.

Here is found the policy of crime news reduced to a minimum and yet so completely covered that there never has been room for doubt as to its accuracy.

Most crimes are similar in character. Most divorces have similar premises. It would almost be possible to keep standing a news story, subject to corrections only as to names, dates and places, on the average divorce story which gets a lead position and a glaring headline. With murders a distinct likeness is found, as witness the latest epidemic of killings of the veneered slum of New York's indecent and affluent society of apartment house mistresses. More words of telegraph were carried about the details of these two unfortunate women of doubtful if not negligible moral fiber than were given to any single news event in a like period.

The taste of the average reader of the average daily does not demand these sensational and detailed stories, although it does become used to them. This taste in time becomes perverted but it may be saved for better and more valued news information if this is given them.

What then is the duty of the newspaper? Is it to report crime news simply because it is "crime" news or is it to suppress this news because it is news of "crime"? Many newspaper editors are agreed that there is a safe middle-ground policy which neither ignores facts nor exaggerates conditions of daily life. To them the ethical attitude is one of judgment and accurate appraisal. Give to items of crime a seasoned search for actual news worth. Take into consideration the character of the crime, the personality of it, the environment, influence and its influences. Disregard mock heroics or a tendency to the sensational. Above all, do not accept the fallacy that because it is crime news it is big news.

To establish such a policy, crime news must be rated at a minimum news value. To grow to a lead story it should possess these other elements briefly alluded to and by ranking highly by this standard of measurement it is removed from the general classification.

Admitting the divorce court is an equally vulnerable source of news sensationalism, can the fact be overlooked that the lengthy stories about divorces find their incentive in some easily established and quite unworthy facts? Often divorce news is the "easiest" news to get. It requires no skilled reporting or intelligent understanding of the problems of the day. The "dirty linen" is brought to court and there waved before the motley and morbid throng. It is further agitated by lawyers of questionable ideals and of ethics far beyond either question or doubt and out of the slightest incident an ugly yarn for the curious minded is easily manufactured. And because the parties so easily and sensationally discussed by the flamboyant press are already in court quarreling over their own affairs, there seems to be no legal or private right guarding, controlling or limiting the nature of the stories printed. It is so easy and so safe to impute to the parties concerned acts, deeds and thoughts which even in their most inane moments of domestic infelicity were undoubtedly beyond their scope.

Newspapers generally, and especially outside of the metropolitan districts, seem to agree that there is something wrong with the existing method of sensing, evaluating and establishing news of crime and divorce.

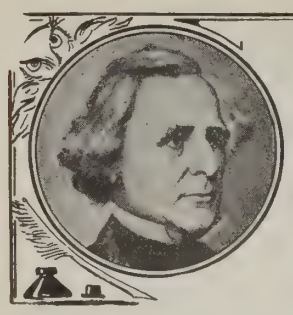
What policy then should prevail if this error is to be corrected? I am sure this summary of constructive suggestions is one to which a large share of the press in a majority of the cities of America will and can agree to and that with many it is already an established code of their editorial ethics. To summarize:

Crime news should be reported at a minimum. Only when new and unusual circumstances surround the crimes in which important people are either the victims or intimately concerned or involved should this policy be laid aside. Then only the facts, free from inference, innuendo, gossip, trash, inspired sensational and uncorroborated detail should be printed. In all cases under this policy crime news rates in the paper of the day in just such proportion as the facts warrant. There is no pandering to public debauchery or maudlin heroics about the misdeeds of the worthless few.

Divorces, like crime, are so common that they are no longer news per se. Their frequency is probably greater than any other social offense civilly regulated that can be mentioned. Likewise, the circumstances generally attending their settlement are so tainted by personal shame and injury that the element of news most aroused is always the same.

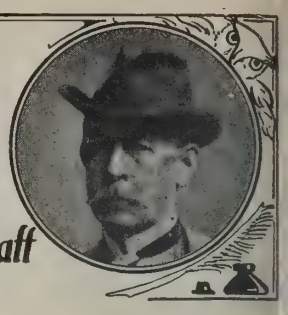
Consequently, in the treatment of divorce news a standard can easily be applied. Primarily, public interest is satisfied by the briefest recital of the facts of the decree. Unless the parties involved mean more than a dizzy, blond adventuress or a high-powered, loose-moraled broker type, brevity should at all times be the rule, and personally I am willing to believe that in the great average of divorce cases of this character there is so little news value that other items of greater importance might easily displace them in the assortment of the day's doings. When the unusual exists and the divorce courts sit in hearings of men and women of repute farther than their own block or the neighborhood gossiping circles, it might be well then to use the much-discussed editorial yardstick for actual news value.

But the starting point on all news of this character should be what is termed the minimum, which in the briefest possible space tells the essential and actual facts. With this foundation no additional stories should be added unless there is an overpowering reason based on the importance of the correlated facts, and even then the rule should be brevity and simplicity, with disgusting sensational details and spicy, sordid, suggestive innuendo absolutely barred from the story.



This view makes no direct reference to the great questions of public policy, public welfare and public gain for the reason that we believe all of these are faithfully served if the policy outlined is adopted.

Tourist Ads Paid in Minnesota



Splendid results were obtained by the Ten Thousand Lakes Association of Minnesota, in a campaign to increase tourist trade by newspaper advertising in 1924, H. C. Hotaling, secretary, announced in his annual report made public this week. Mr. Hotaling is also secretary of the National Editorial Association. Tourist business in 1924 exceeded $40,000,000, the report showed. Minnesota editors co-operated in the drive.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

Feb. 16-17-18—Seventh District, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, meeting, Wichita, Kan.
Feb. 16—New Jersey Press Assn., mid-winter meeting, Stacy-Trent Hotel, Trenton, N. J.
Feb. 17-21—Inland Daily Press Assn., annual convention, Chicago, Ill.
Feb. 17-21—Journalism Week, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb.
Feb. 18-21—Nebraska Press Assn., annual meeting, Lincoln, Neb.
Feb. 20-21—Minnesota Editorial Assn., convention, St. Paul.
Feb. 20—New York Business Publishers Assn., editorial conference, Hotel Astor, New York.
Feb. 21—Advertising Club of New York, annual carnival and ball, Hotel Biltmore, New York.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

In 1868, the Ku Klux Klan's activities in the South became so great, that Mr. Bennett decided to secretly send a man down to investigate it and Meighan was chosen. He traveled through the Southern States for months, as a "salesman" for a wholesale drug house in the West, and his revelations as to outrages and terrorism were startling. Finally two ex-Confederate officers who had discovered his real occupation, and sympathizing with his purpose, enabled him to get the interview with the famous General N. B. Forrest, in Nashville, Tenn., on the Ku Klux Klan, that made a great hit both North and South. Meighan was next enabled to interview Parson Brownlow, the fiery Governor of Tennessee. This story too was a hit and was reprinted all over the United States.

Another feature of his lengthy correspondence was the exposure of the "carpetbaggers" from the North, who under the Freedmen's Bureau's protection were irritating the Southern whites.

In 1877, Mr. Meighan was promoted to be City Editor, and outside of his regular routine work, he took up the correction of public abuses. One of his first crusades put a stop to the dumping of garbage and refuse in the lower bay at night, when it should have been conveyed far out to sea. Mr. Bennett hired several tugs, and Mr. Meighan judiciously placed them under the direction of Jim Creelman, who as the "Admiral" of his fleet, furtively "dogged" the garbage dumpers and caught them in their illegal acts. Their exposure in a big city story followed, and the scow owners and contractors were prosecuted and punished.

The Irish Famine Fund

In January, 1880, an appeal came from Ireland to Mr. Bennett asking for aid.

"For God's sake send us bread or money; we are starving," was the message.

On Feb. 4, he started the famous Irish Famine Fund with a gift of $100,000! The announcement was as follows:

"The Herald opens today a subscription for Irish relief, heading it with the sum of $100,000. It solicits other people to give in proportion to their willingness and their means. It will receive subscriptions for any amount down to twenty-five cents, carefully publishing the name and residence of every subscriber. * * * The Herald will be exact and minute in accounting for the expenditure of the fund. It will pay over all sums to an efficient committee for immediate distribution. It engages to see that every dollar goes to the relief of actual want. * * *

"The Herald deems it important to state that the amount of its subscription will be ready at once."

The public generously responded, and a total of $334,666.90 was raised within a few weeks, and the U. S. Ship "Constellation" took over a cargo of flour, corn meal, oatmeal, seed potatoes, etc. The late William R. Grace gave one-quarter of it.

Mr. Bennett, who was traveling in Tunis at the time, appointed the Rev. Dr. George H. Hepworth as almoner-in-chief, the other members of the Relief Committee being E. R. King-Harman, M. P., W. Shaw, M. P., and Prof. Baldwin.

Dr. Hepworth cabled long accounts of the work of relief, which saved tens of thousands from starvation.

John Kelly's Savage Conflict With Mr. Bennett

As far back as the 1875 electoral campaign, John Kelly had denounced the New York press as a "disgrace to civilization," especially attacking the Herald, for having said:

"The country has long seen that Democracy in New York, as represented by Tammany Hall, is not a healthy indication of its general system, but is a purulent and running sore!"

The warfare continued, intermittently, until in 1879 the Herald courageously renewed its editorial denunciation of Tammany Hall as a corrupt and demoralizing influence in the community, and charged that John Kelly, as "Boss," was trying to gain control of the City Administration from selfish motives.

Kelly was just as vigorous a fighter as Mr. Bennett, and struck back vigorously at him, through his two organs, the old Star and the Express. The Star was a struggling morning paper, barely kept alive by the patronage of the City Administration, while the Express was a weak and tottering relic of the bygone days of reckless journalism. Its editor and principal proprietor was Erastus Brooks, who had never forgiven the elder Bennett for his wanton attacks on his late brother, held up to ridicule as "Booby," and later as "Biddy" Brooks, so that when Kelly, metaphorically bleeding from the rhetorical wounds inflicted by the junior Bennett's trenchent pen, called on the Express to enter the fight, Mr. Brooks readily consented and assigned his reporters to investigate and write-up the private life of the junior Bennett.

In October, 1880, the Express began its attack—one of the most scandalous character—probably never equalled in the history of journalism—on Mr. Bennett's reputation, as follows:

"LIFE OF JAMES GORDON BENNETT

"James Gordon Bennett has been abroad most of the time for several years—in fact ever since the duel he did or did not fight with Mr. May, who whipped him in front of the Union Club house. Many New Yorkers have doubtless forgotten some of the most interesting incidents in Mr. Bennett's checkered career, and would be pleased to know what sort of a man owns and runs the New York Herald and Telegram for his own interest and profit, dictating to the people of this city as though he were their sovereign, and issuing orders and instructions to all parties, as though he were the American Czar. It may interest them and the public to know that we have in press and nearly ready for publication a life of James Gordon Bennett from authentic sources.

"We can assure our readers that the biography will be more entertaining than a novel; more sensational than anything that ever appeared in the Police Gazette, and almost as moral as Zola's 'L'Assommoir,' but it will be an excellent temperance tract."

Mr. Bennett, in a furious frame of mind, promptly reproduced this notice, repeating in five different columns of the editorial page of the Herald on Sunday, Oct. 24, under the heading of:

"IS THIS BLACKMAIL—OR WHAT IS IT—GO AHEAD OLD MAN."

In a violent leader on the same page, headed "Misther Kelly," and in which Mr. Bennett admitted that he had "lost his reputation long before," he said:

"What is the matter with this poor, idiotic Kelly, screaming in his wild Irish rage, frothy vituperations against the proprietor of the Herald?

"Why, the proprietor of the Herald lost his reputation long before Misther Kelly came into power, and while yet Misther Kelly's foine Oirish newspaper was a rampant, roaring Know Nothing organ. Imagine the Express, the organ of all the Know Nothings, falling under the will of a coarse, splenetic, loud mouthed Irishman, who fancies that this city is Ireland, and that he can use the same organ to howl down American opinion, when it objects to the introduction of the Catholic religion as an element of local politics.

"But this Kelly will find that American opinion is not to be put down in that way. * * * And since this champion of Irish and Catholic dictation wants it understood that his way must be supreme, and that whoever objects shall be overwhelmed, if possible, by a deluge of vile names ranked from the cesspools of his imagination, or the yet fouler recesses of his memory—he can have the issue made just as distinctly and clearly as the case may require."

The Express also recklessly attacked the reputation of the wife of a wealthy man named Helmbold, linking her name with that of Mr. Bennett.

To this the Herald replied:

"The Herald assures the public that there is not a word of truth in the infamous tale concerning Mr. Bennett and a lady whose good name the Express yesterday wantonly attacked and besmirched.

"Mr. Bennett does not know Mrs. Helmbold; never in his life spoke a word to her or she to him; never had any relations with her of any kind whatever; and the whole filthy story of Mr. Kelly and his organ and property, the Express, is from first to last an infamous and cowardly invention.

"Through his organ, the Express, he basely struck at the proprietor of the Herald, by mendaciously impeaching the virtue of a woman. For that dastardly lie we denounce Mr. John Kelly as a vile coward, who deserves the contempt of every honest person—and we recommend him to the notice of the Grand Jury of this County."

The Express was roundly condemned by the press generally for its disgraceful attack, and especially for its insinuations against the reputation of Mrs. Helmbold. Under the head of "A Public Outrage," Harper's Weekly said in November, 1880, "the indecent assaults of the Express on Mr. Bennett were worthy only of the poorest kind of 'Eatonswill Gazette.' The Herald opposed the nomination made by Kelly for the Mayoralty, and the reply was a fusillade of personal vituperation, unredeemed by a solitary gleam of humor or cleverness—a broadside of dull calumny, and finally as the Herald said: 'of the most outrageous and filthy falsehood.'"

Said the Evening Post: "The foul publications by the Express in regard to Bennett are as stupid and inconclusive in their dull malignity as they are indecent. Everybody knows, who cares to know, that these assaults are made by Kelly. The clumsy pen which writes the flat and filthy stories may not be his, but it is guided by him."

(To be continued next week)

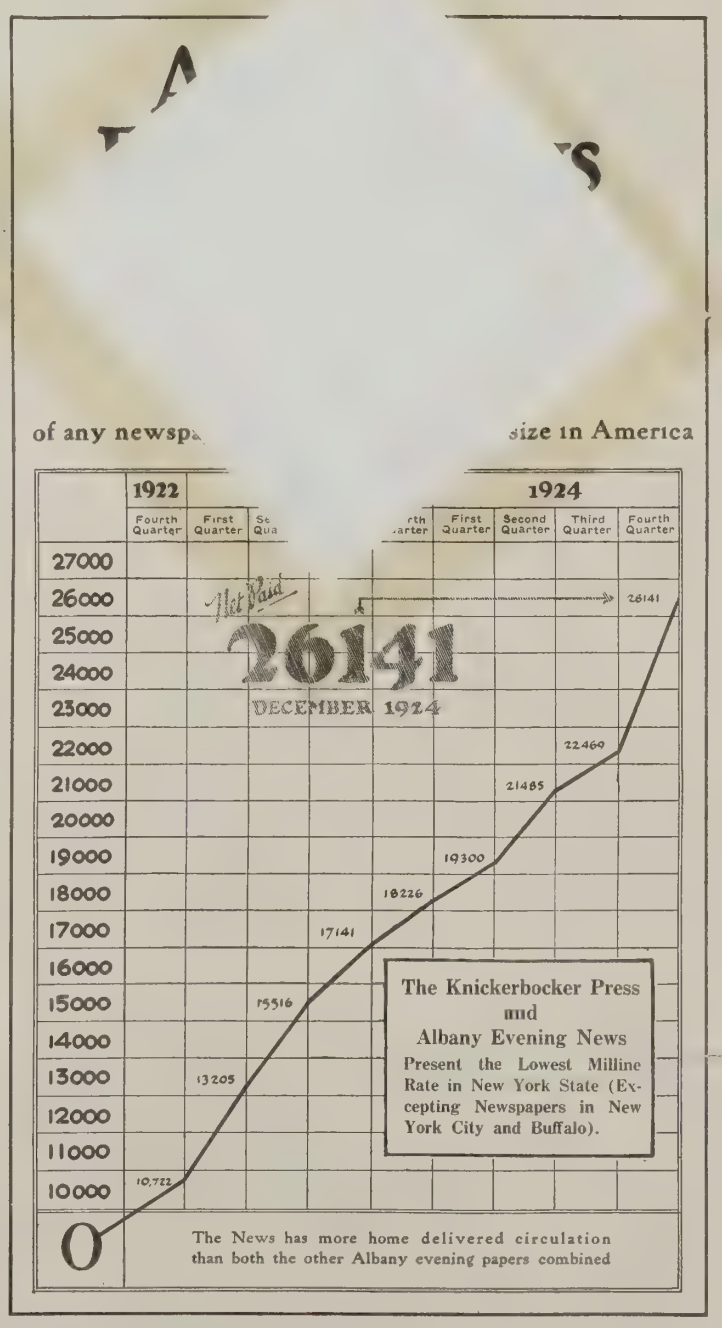
Albany, N. Y., February 6, 1925

An Important Consolidation!

Albany Evening News

has absorbed the

Albany Evening Journal



Founded March 22, 1830, by Thurlow Weed

THE heritage of the best traditions in American journalism will be a valued background for the acknowledged enterprise that has made the Albany Evening News "the fastest growing newspaper in America."

LYNN JOHN ARNOLD
Publisher

The Knickerbocker Press
and
Albany Evening News

The News now leads the evening field in Albany!

TELLS HOW 14,000,000 NEWSPAPERS ARE CIRCULATED WEEKLY IN CHICAGO

John N. Eisenlord Gives the Story for Editor & Publisher Readers—Heavy Load Carried by City Circulator—Control of Street Stands and Delivery Perfected

By JOHN N. EISENLORD

Circulation Manager, Chicago Evening American

(Written by request for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

THE circulation of Chicago daily newspapers centers about the delivery department. While an outsider perhaps thinks of the delivery department as a gang of truckers and wagon men who do the delivering and hauling, to the man in the know, the department is the City Circulator with 50 to 100 assistants, and it ranks very high with other departments of the papers in accomplishments.

J. N. EISENLORD

Before the advent of the Hearst papers in Chicago—24 years ago—the delivery was handled by contractors—some carrying two and more different newspapers on their wagons. To the Hearst papers, with their own equipment, horses, wagons, and drivers, the value of the delivery man became more and more apparent. Gradually the [illegible] system gave way to the new and p[illegible] plan and the daily newspapers [illegible] cago have their own trucks, [illegible] horses and wagons, and t[illegible] each paper come unde[illegible] supervision of their [illegible] culators, with the exc[illegible] ning papers which h[illegible] delivery system handl[illegible]

These delivery men [illegible] a union and work on a p[illegible] has recently been advanced [illegible] per man per week, so that [illegible] time, most men will receive fro[illegible] to $60.00 a week. These men ar[illegible] from the time they leave the barn [illegible] garage until the time of their return.

Each route has from 50 to 100 stores on it; a like number of cornermen at corner newsstands. There are around 2,000 newsstands on the street corners of Chicago. Twelve years ago the City Council passed an ordinance permitting the maintenance on corners of newsstands of certain dimensions, when proper application had been made to the Chief of Police for such a permit. This plan requires that an applicant for a corner, on which there is no stand, must demonstrate for a few days that he can sell enough papers to warrant a permit being given him. Then he must go to the Secretary of the Publishers' Association for an application blank. The signatures of the six Circulation Managers are required and when the blank is properly filled in and returned the Chief of Police issues the permit.

Following are the circulation managers of Chicago and the newspaper circulations they handle:

Max Annenberg for the Tribune—daily 608,130—Sunday 920,638.

James L. Ragen for the Herald-Examiner—daily 348,005—Sunday 1,018,917.

J. N. Eisenlord for the Evening American—458,376.

G. H. Baker for the Daily News—392,731.

B. Anderson for the Journal—123,026.

F. A. Reinhardt for the Evening Post—43,411.

The Journal does not belong to the Audit Bureau of Circulations and the figure is from the Government statement.

In the event that one circulator doesn't want a man to have a specified corner, for any reason, it cannot be obtained. The same procedure is followed when the holder of a permit sells his corner. The new applicant has to be accepted by the Circulation Managers before a transfer of permits is made. It is seldom that a permit has been revoked. Such corner locations sell from small amounts up to $10,000.

Chicago has, from time immemorial, had a group of men known as "Official Carriers," meaning that they have been granted a certain territory by all the newspapers for the delivery of papers and that all the orders coming to the different newspaper offices for home delivery are sent to the owners of the respective territories.

While many cities make a home delivery for a lesser price than the cost of the publication on the street, in Chicago it has always been otherwise. When papers were 1 cent a copy, Official Carriers had the sanction of the publishers to charge for the daily order 30 cents; when they were 2 cents, to charge 60 or 65 cents; when they were 3 cents to charge 90 cents or $1.00 per month—the reason for this, perhaps being the small home delivery circulation. The bulk of all Chicago newspapers is sold on street corners and in stores. Most of these Carriers having considerable [illegible]d, maintaining an office with card [illegible] special collectors to collect [illegible]er boys make the delivery. [illegible] the Evening American, [illegible]kly rate of 20 cents [illegible]d more customers [illegible] charged by the [illegible]ted its own [illegible]g up in the [illegible]ranches with [illegible]rge of each, and [illegible] nome delivery sub- [illegible]he same branch plan [illegible]e Indianapolis News, by [illegible]apers, and others.

[illegible]ly all cases, papers taken out [illegible]vers of the different newspapers charged direct to the driver who, in [illegible]rn, settles with the office and the majority of the papers are collected for a week in advance. In the case of carriers and stores, practically the entire order is collected a week in advance. The wholesale price of the 3 cent papers is $2.20 (with a special price of $2.00 to official carriers); on the 2 cent papers, the wholesale price is $1.40 (with a special price of $1.20 to official carriers). The Evening American collects from its carriers the full price of $2.20. On Saturday, the Evening American has a 5 cent paper, the wholesale price of which is $4.00 per 100. The Examiner on Sunday sells at 10 cents, the wholesale price being 8 cents; The Tribune on Sunday sells for 7 cents, the wholesale price being 5¾ cents.

Of course, the Sunday papers are delivered in Chicago, as in other places, in two parts, the comic section, magazine section and so forth, in one part, while the main news section comes along in another part and the two are stuffed together by the dealers and newsboys—a system in vogue in most towns. Therefore, when the Evening American brought out a comic and magazine section in colors to sell with its Saturday paper, it necessitated the delivery in two parts, and the newsboys and stores, stuffed them the same as in the case of the Sunday papers. Later on, the Daily News brought out on Saturday a photogravure section which is delivered and stuffed in the same manner.

From the success of this venture, the American conceived the possibility of printing a larger paper than 40 pages on days of heavy advertising—40 being the extent of their present press capacity. Therefore, on heavy days for the past year and a half, once or twice a week, a 12-page—or larger—section is printed at night—called the third section. Then, during the day, the regular paper running up to 40 pages in two sections is printed and delivered and the dealers stuff the third section. This apparently is an innovation, to a certain extent, and should interest newspapers which have had the call to issue more than their present press capacity at times.

Wimmer Leaves Warren Tribune

E. J. Wimmer has resigned as manager of the Warren (Pa.) Tribune, and has returned to his home in Buffalo.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER—$4 a year.

BILL BARS COURT REPORTING

Nebraska Measure Prohibits Printing Testimony During a Trial

State Senator L. H. Laughlin has submitted a bill to the Nebraska senate intended to put the clamps on newspapers as far as court trials are concerned. The proposed bill forbids the publication of any part of the testimony or other detailed information concerning the pending case until the trial has been concluded and a decision made by the court.

The bill, which is now in the hands of a senate committee, permits a published announcement that a case is on trial, but specifies that nothing further than the names of the parties involved and the nature of the action may be printed. The penalty attached to Senator Laughlin's bill would imprison offenders for a year, fine up to $5,000, or both.

New Instructor for Pulitzer School

Mrs. Ben Franklin, wife of Ben Franklin, New York World reporter, was last week appointed to the teaching staff of the Pulitzer School of Journalism, Columbia University. While a student in Columbia she was awarded the Pulitzer Traveling Fellowship.

Celebrate Lincoln's Birthday

The Jackson Heights Press Club, composed of active press workers of New York residing in the Long Island section known as Jackson Heights, held its regular annual Lincoln Dinner on Thursday evening, the speakers being Cosmo Hamilton and Quinn Martin.

FOR the calendar year 1924, the Baltimore Sun (morning, evening and Sunday issues) carried

32,786,478

agate lines of paid advertising, a gain of 694,180 agate lines over the year 1923.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

Sweet Words from Sauer Kraut

"The Cincinnati Enquirer's Sunday issue outdraws any metropolitan Sunday newspaper in the United States."

—WILLIAM CLENDENIN

Advertising Director, The National Kraut Packers' Association

This statement was made by Mr. Clendenin before the annual meeting of the National Kraut Packers' Association, Hotel Gibson, Cincinnati, January 29, in discussing the 1925 schedule in the advertising campaign that is lifting the erstwhile humble kraut to a place of eminence on the American dinner table. Further, Mr. Clendenin said:—

"The Cincinnati Enquirer heads the list of metropolitan newspapers on the preferred schedule for the new national campaign for the advertising of the National Kraut Packers' Association."

That Mr. Clendenin's opinion of the Enquirer's pulling power is shared by others is evidenced by the consistent use of Enquirer space by such national advertisers of food products as:—Calumet Baking Powder, Swift & Company, National Biscuit Company, Domino Sugar, Shredded Wheat, and a host of others.

Before you make up your next newspaper schedule, just turn these facts over in your mind.

The CINCINNATI ENQUIRER

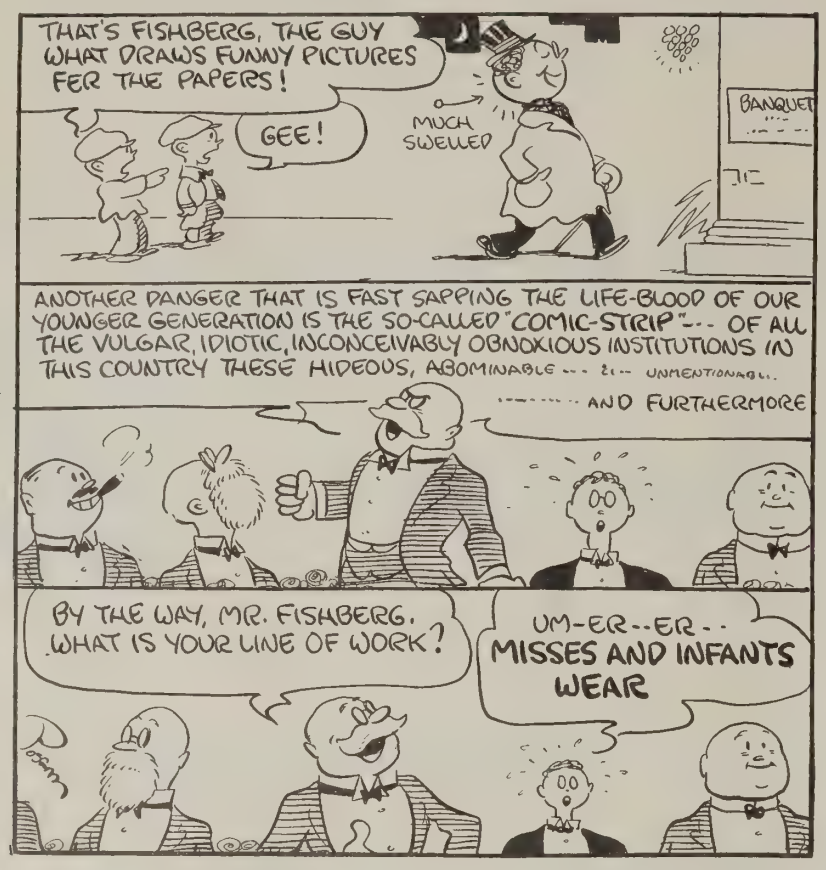
"Goes to the home—stays IN the home"

I. A. KLEIN
Chicago
New York

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
San Francisco
Los Angeles

Largest Patronage in the Industry

—we wish to thank our customers



POWERS PHOTO ENGRAVING COMPANY
154 Nassau St., New York City. Beekman 4200

POWERS COLORITYPE COMPANY
229 W. 28th St., New York City. Pennsylvania 7760

POWERS REPRODUCTION CORPORATION
205 W. 39th St., New York City. Pennsylvania 0600

POWERS FOURTH ENGRAVING COMPANY
Broadway and 50th St., New York City. Circle 1300

THAT INSIGNIFICANT FEELING

AL POSEN, contributor of the cartoon which appears above and creator of the comic strip "Them Days Are Gone Forever," was born in New York not quite 30 years ago.

After trying out his hand as law-clerk, typist, bookkeeper, advertising solicitor, professional musician, printing salesman, commercial artist, publicity manager, and moving-picture distributor, he enlisted in the army, and two days after his discharge joined a group of mining engineers bound for Siam in company with Wolcott B. Pitkin, former Adviser in Foreign Affairs to the King of Siam.

After traveling in Europe and Africa the party finally reached the Land of the White Elephant, where five months were spent looking for tin and negotiating with the Siamese Government.

The party then split up, and Posen, with 19 diamond-drillers, went on a prospecting expedition across Burma and into Yunnan, one of the most inaccessible and least-known provinces of China. Seven months were spent in exploration and prospecting in the mountains of Yunnan, after which Posen was given the job of conducting the drillers back to the States. The return trip by way of the Pacific took four months.

Shortly after his return Posen conceived his musical strip, "Them Days Are Gone Forever," and is now in the cartooning business for good.

RADIO TREASURE HUNTS AGAIN IN VOGUE AS MERCURY CLIMBS

THE radio-conducted treasure hunt is back in Philadelphia after having been put out of business temporarily by Jack Frost and his zero salutations.

But since its return it has assumed a new phase: Those who do not wish to join the mad throng dashing about in search of clues remain quietly by the loud speaker and, with the aid of invited guests, figure out just where the hunt will lead. It is said that it is almost as much fun to stay indoors and try to map out the track of the hunt as it is to go along.

The hunt of last week was conducted by the Ivans Baking Company and the clues were broadcast by a local station, allowing one and a half hours to reach the starting point, which was the site of the bakery, and where the first clue was put on the changing ad sign appearing in the air every minute while the crowd assembled. The clues were as follows:

1—Go in the direction of the tall corn, until you come to a mail box, police box and fire box on the same corner, in a straight line.

2—Look between the fire and police boxes and go toward the highest building you can see.

3—When you have almost reached this building turn at the end of the brick wall in the direction of a restaurant which has a sign in front of it suggestive of a foreign country.

4—Go in the direction of a window with the reflection of the letters H. E. L. showing.

5—See two objects resembling peppermint sticks of large size, count 15 steps from one of these, which should take you to the curb line at the corner. Turn directly about and go in the opposite direction.

6—Seek fireplug with mail box directly behind it. Follow direction pointed by the spout of the plug, until you see two Ivans' bakers who will give you the next clue card if you will say "Ivans' Pound Cake."

7—Follow clue card.

8—Follow direction of red arrow on building until you reach a street named after where rivers begin.

9—Turn either left or right at the corner into this street and you will see two sailor boys. Say to them, "Who are the bakers of good biscuits since 1846?" They will hand you a card declaring you the winner, provided you have with you the other two clue car

The winner of the prize made trip in 35 minutes and received $100 gold. The next man and woman ceived $30 each, the next $25, and next prize, $15 in gold, had two ap cants, so each was given $15. Conso tion prizes were awarded to 87 perso who received boxes of Ivans' Sun C and cannisters of their cookies.

Lederer Joins G. Logan Payne Co.

John H. Lederer has joined the st of the G. Logan Payne Company, pu lishers' representative, Chicago. Lederer has done newspaper work the past 25 years in St. Louis, Indian olis and Milwaukee. Before his pres connection he was publisher of the M waukee Wisconsin News.

New Yorkers Sign Up for Houston

More than 100 advertising men ha signed up for passage on the New Yo special train, arranged for by the Adv tising Club of New York, for the Hou ton convention of the Associated Adv tising Clubs of the World, May 9 to The train will leave New York, May

New N. Y. Post Statistical Chief

William J. Punch succeeded Frederi A. Phillpott as manager of the Statistic Department of the New York Evenin Post.

Sphinx Club Dinner Cancelled

The Sphinx Club dinner scheduled f Feb. 11 at the Waldorf-Astoria Hot New York, was cancelled.

Hazel Deyo Batchelor's New Love Problem Serial

"DAUGHTERS OF TODAY"

treating the problem of the modern mother's responsibility for the jazz era.

LEDGER SYNDICATE

Philadelphia

After all, the one question at issue is, "Does the Standard Union sell the goods in Brooklyn?"

We have yet to hear from a dissatisfied advertiser.

R. J. R. Stevenson
President

LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY BROOKLYN NEWSPAPER

PUBLISHER IN COURT FOR PRINTING RUMOR

ıdge Charges Flushing Journal With Contempt for Publishing Rumor Settlement in Damage Case—Decision Reserved

Publication by newspapers of rumors f settlements having been offered in :tions on trial to secure damages for juries were declared to be contempt of ›urt by Justice James C. Van Siclen n the Queens Supreme Court, New ork, recently. He also added that such ıblications would have to cease.

The statement was made at a hearing ven John H. Ridenour, owner and pub- sher of the Flushing (N. Y.) Evening ›urnal, and his city editor, I. George uint, summoned before the court on an ·der obtained by William G. Shields, at- ›rney for the Interborough Rapid Tran- t Company, in an action for damages ·ought against that company by Mrs. Mary Quinn, widow of John Quinn, Jr., city fireman who was fatally injured in ı accident at the Rawson street elevated ıation in Long Island City on April 1, 924. She sued for $100,000 damages and ıe jury returned a verdict for $27,500.

As soon as the verdict was announced ttorney Shields stated to the court that ıe Flushing Journal had published an em that an offer of $20,000 settlement of ıe case had been made by the Inter- ›rough representatives. He asked that ıe jury be polled to learn if any of the ırors had seen it. One juror admitted that he had read the item, but that it had not influenced him in arriving at his verdict and also that he had not spoken to any other juror about it. Attorney Shields then asked that the responsible parties at the Flushing Journal in connection with the publication of the item be brought into court. The order was granted.

When Ridenour was examined he stated that he was ill at home at the time of the publication, and that his city editor had handled the entire matter. When Quint was placed on the stand he stated that he had received the information about the alleged settlement from James F. Conroy, secretary to District Attorney Richard S. Newcombe, and that after receiving it he had attempted to verify it before publication by calling the office of Hicks & Hicks, attorneys for the plaintiff, but had not been able to get verification.

"Don't you know that publication of rumors of this character is contempt of court?" asked Justice Van Siclen.

Quint said that he did not, and he had been influenced in this case by publications regarding rumors in other cases.

"There has been altogether too much of this kind of publication," said Justice Van Siclen. "It will have to stop, and there is no better time to stop it than now."

Secretary Conroy when questioned said that he had obtained his information from John Hicks, an investigator for the attorney for the plaintiff. Hicks was then called, and in answer to questions from Shields said:

"I told Conroy and others about the court house about the offer of this settlement. You, yourself were the man who made the offer. You offered me $20,000, and I told you anything less than $35,000 would not be accepted, and you went around among firemen friends of Mrs. Quinn and suggested to them that they use their influence with Mrs. Quinn to have her accept $20,000, as she would not get any more, and probably would get nothing."

"I offered $20,000?" asked Attorney Shields of Hicks.

"Yes," replied Hicks. "And you know that you did."

Turning to Justice Van Siclen Hicks said, "Mr. Shields knew of these rumors going about the court house and also of this publication during the progress of the trial, and he never called them to the attention of the court until after the verdict was brought in."

Vincent Galligan, a reporter representing the Flushing Journal at the court house, testified that he had heard the rumors of the proposed settlement, but that being unable to verify them he had not sent the information to that paper.

After several postponements decision on the case was reserved on Tuesday of this week.

Quoting E. & P. Feature

To Editor & Publisher: We wish to express our special appreciation of the "What They Are Saying" items you have been printing in recent issues as extracts from observations of authorities on the value of advertising. We are using these extracts in our columns each day and believe that they are beneficial in stimulating advertising.—The Sherman (Tex.) Democrat.

Phila. Sunday Transcript to Celebrate

A dinner to celebrate the Diamond Jubilee of the Philadelphia Sunday Transcript, the silver anniversary of Clement H. Congdon's connection with the publication, and the termination of his 35th year in active journalism will be given at the Bellevue-Stratford on Feb. 18.

Missouri Press Group to Meet

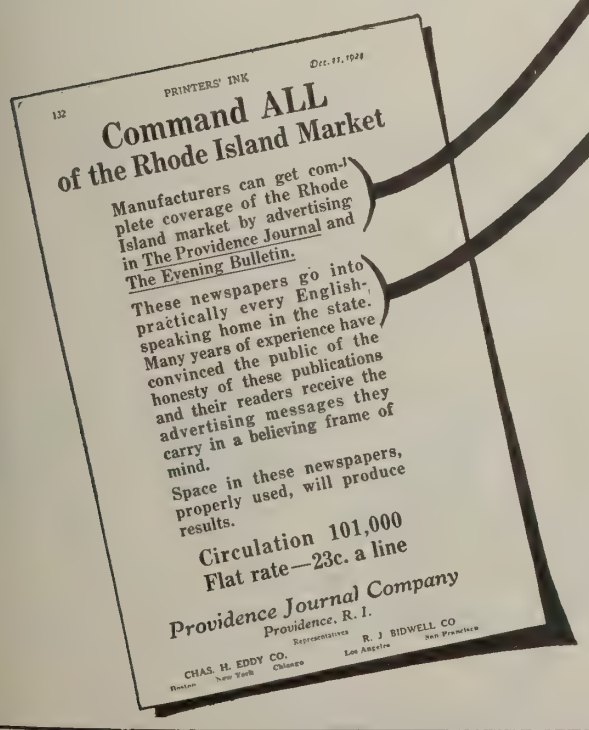
The mid-winter meeting of the Northeast Missouri Press Association is to be held at the Travelers' Hotel, Kirksville, Mo., Feb. 20.

Tetley's Tea

is another of the nationally famous accounts which has recognized the fact that the Washington, D. C., territory cannot be adequately covered without

The Washington Times

The futility of the "one paper buy" argument is nowhere better illustrated than in the experiences of its national advertisers.



PAYNE, BURNS & SMITH
New York City—Boston
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.
Chicago - Detroit - St. Louis - Los Angeles

FICTION

The advertisement, reproduced below, has appeared in trade papers recently.

It is misleading as proven by the figures of the Audit Bureau of Circulations on the opposite page.

Get the facts first—then advertise.

132 PRINTERS' INK Dec. 11, 1924

Command ALL of the Rhode Island Market

Manufacturers can get complete coverage of the Rhode Island market by advertising in The Providence Journal and The Evening Bulletin.

These newspapers go into practically every English-speaking home in the state. Many years of experience have convinced the public of the honesty of these publications and their readers receive the advertising messages they carry in a believing frame of mind.

Space in these newspapers, properly used, will produce results.

Circulation 101,000
Flat rate—23c. a line

Providence Journal Company
Providence, R. I.
Representatives
CHAS. H. EDDY CO. Boston New York Chicago
R. J. BIDWELL CO Los Angeles San Francisco

FACTS

The Truth is stronger than Fiction, when applied to newspaper coverage in the thickly populated territory of

NORTHERN RHODE ISLAND
(North of Providence)

The following figures were compiled from the latest Auditor's Reports of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

PAWTUCKET

	Number Families (U. S. Census)	Pawtucket Times (evening)	Providence Bulletin (evening)	Providence Journal (morning)
Cities of Pawtucket and Central Falls..	19,793	18,585	822	4,462
Lincoln	2,057	1,767	127	267
Cumberland	2,204	1,084	53	231
Total for above....	24,054	21,436	1,002	4,960

Total Net Paid Circulation of The Pawtucket Times.....24,599

WOONSOCKET

	Number Families (U. S. Census)	Woonsocket Call (evening)	Providence Bulletin (evening)	Providence Journal (morning)
City of Woonsocket..	9,080	8,252	187	1,057
Burrillville	1,888	1,204	345	128
North Smithfield	686	283	....	....
Total for above....	11,654	9,739	532	1,185

Total Net Paid Circulation of The Woonsocket Call.....13,624

There is only one way to blanket northern Rhode Island and that is with

The PAWTUCKET TIMES
and
The WOONSOCKET CALL

Gilman, Nicoll & Ruthman National Representatives
New York Boston Chicago San Francisco

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

By Henry Edward Warner

THE MOP

There's a fellow on the job I call The Mop;
He's a handy guy to have around the shop.
He can write and he can edit,
Make a paper up with credit,
And he keeps a-going till its time to stop.
Anything and everything,
He seems mounted on a spring
From the way he jumps to grab another's flop;
He is Do-It-Now's first cousin,
Worth ten times the average dozen;
He's a Goer and a Getter,
Flushing chances like a setter;
He's the kind of gink that speeds you,
He just lures you when he needs you,
Picks you up and, unresistant,
You become his first assistant
Just because you catch the swing
That he puts in everything!
Pushing, pulling, shoving, carrying,
Never loafing, never tarrying,
Always looking, when he's through,
For some other job to do! . . .
Nothing ever seems to tire him
And you envy and admire him
For the sureness of his hunches,
For the kick that's in his punches,
For the way he grabs some chore
That nobody pays him for! . . .
Just jumps in and grabs whatever
Seems to need attention, never
Stopping for a single minute
For a thought of what is in it! . . .
Doing things because it's fun
Just to go and get 'em done!
Mopping up—that's what I call it;
Nothing ever is so small it
Isn't worth his best endeavor—
And he'll keep that pace forever;
And I doubt, I really doubt,
If he ever will wear out!

And I write these lines to glorify
That Dynamo of the Shop;
He's a darned humdinging cyclone,
Is the Mop!

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

"First Class"

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Congratulations on a first class piece of reportorial and editorial work in your issue of Jan. 24. The American Society of Newspaper Editors is to be congratulated on the publication of such a comprehensive account of its proceedings. Your interest in our work and our purposes has been most helpful from the beginning and I believe the other members of the Society appreciate that help as warmly as I do.

CASPER S. YOST,
President, A. S. N. E.

A.S.N.E. Story Well Handled

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I am delighted with the handling of the story of the American Society of Newspaper Editors in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Jan. 24. My compliments and—as my French friends would say—"the assurance of my most distinguished consideration."

WALTER WILLIAMS,
Dean, University of Missouri School of Journalism.

Prompt Service Appreciated

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Thank you for your very courteous and prompt response to our request for copies of the special editions. It is service of this kind that makes EDITOR & PUBLISHER so valuable to newspaper men throughout the country, and I want to especially thank you for your interest and good wishes in this particular matter.

FRANK P. GOSS, Long Beach (Cal.)
Press-Telegram.

Medical "Preventives"

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER:

In referring to a recent resolution sent out by the Executive Committee of the Association of National Advertisers you give the impression that only "medical cures" for tuberculosis and cancer are scored.

I call attention to the important fact that the resolution covered also "medical preparations offered as preventives of" such diseases as tuberculosis and cancer "which are at present regarded by the best minds of the medical profession as incurable so far as treatment with drugs is concerned."

It has lately been stated by those with undoubted authority to speak that the exact cause or germ of cancer is unknown. Until that is known how can a preventive be devised?

The incipient stage of the tuberculosis case is the critical time. If the patient follows wise counsel at that time he has a fighting chance for life. If he refuses to believe that his lungs are in danger, if he looks for some quick or sure preventive, if he fails to have a proper examination and does not take good medical advice, he is doomed.

Having seen three relatives pass out in the grip of the Great White Plague during the last 15 years, I know something of what I am talking about. I grieve to relate that one of these promising young men, despite the pleas of relatives, clung for some months to a "patent" that guaranteed certain relief. When the dreaded truth was forced home on him, he went to Colorado with both lungs affected. He lived six months.

The Nobel prize awaits the great man who discovers or has discovered the medical preventive that annihilates tuberculosis in the incipient stage. Discerning publishers will give him double-leaded editorials. Pulpit and platform will acclaim his great contribution to the human race. For his product would in a short time wipe one of the greatest of scourges from the face of the earth.

Do you gentlemen in the office of a magazine that reaches many publishers believe that the preparation now advertised very generally it seems as something that "kills the germs that lead to consumption" is the great discovery or one of them? I am told by several discriminating publishers that they are requiring such advertisers to omit all claims about prevention of consumption.

Whether you believe such claims or not, I hope you will allow the Association of National Advertisers to express its full disapproval of this kind of advertising.

S. ROLAND HALL.

NOVEL RADIO FEATURE

Boston Herald Prints Pictures Illustrating Radio Adventure Talk

A novel departure in newspaper features was made last Sunday by the Boston Sunday Herald in the first of a series of illustrated radio broadcasts which will be presented every Sunday by the newspaper in conjunction with its own radio station, the Herald-Traveler-Westinghouse studio, station WBZ, Boston.

In the rotogravure section of the Sunday Herald there appeared the first "Paths of Adventure" photos, covering a full page, which illustrated a tale of adventure given over the radio Sunday evening. The story of "The Fall of Vilna" was given by Capt. Hilton H. Railey, of Boston, soldier, author, lecturer and musician, who served in the Polish army following service in the American army during the World War. Besides the talk, Capt. Railey also played several organ selections.

It is planned to continue this feature every Sunday for some time.

Read EDITOR & PUBLISHER for news of the newspaper field—$4.00 a year.

The
Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

Mrs. Harding's Estate $345,000

Mrs. Warren G. Harding, wife of the late President, and for many years associated with him in the publication of the Marion (O.) Star, left an estate valued at $345,000. Her grandchildren receive the bulk of her estate.

Edwards to San Diego

Paul C. Edwards, editorial chief for the California group of the Scripps-Howard papers, has gone to San Diego to take over the editorial management of the San Diego Sun, succeeding Roy Pinkerton.

Newsdealers Cannot

return unsold copies of The New York Times. Consequently the public is asked to cooperate with them by ordering in advance both daily and Sunday editions to insure an adequate supply and avoid loss and disappointment.

The New York Times
Strictly a News Paper

The
INDIANAPOLIS
NEWS

THERE is only one reason and one explanation for the fact that The News has the largest circulation in Indiana, and that it has more home-delivered circulation in Indianapolis than both other Indianapolis papers combined:

The News is a great *news*paper. It excels in service to the reader. It has done so for fifty-five years.

FRANK T CARROLL
Advertising Manager

New York Office
Dan A. Carroll
110 E. 42nd St.

Chicago Office
J. E. Lutz
The Tower Bldg.

NEWSPAPER CONTESTS FEATURE ITHACA MEET

Dailies, Weeklies, Win Ribbons for Best Front Page, Editorial Page, etc., at Two Day Session at Agricultural School

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 10.—Newspaper editors from various parts of the state closed a two-day conference on community newspaper problems here today in connection with Farmers' Week at the New York State College of Agriculture.

The feature of today's sessions was the announcement by Professor Bristow Adams of the award of the ribbons to prize contest winning newspapers of the state.

Weekly newspaper awards were as follows: Local news: first, Patchogue Advance; second, Walton Review; third, Cortland Democrat.

Editorial page: first, Rhinebeck Gazette; second, Webster Herald; third, Oneida Democratic Union.

Front page: first, Suffolk Bulletin; second, Walton Reporter; third, Cortland Democrat.

Daily newspaper awards were: Local news: first, Rochester Democrat-Chronicle; second, Batavia News; third, Tarrytown News.

Editorials: first, Rochester Democrat-Chronicle; second, Ithaca Journal-News; third, Beacon Independent.

Front page: first. Rochester Democrat-Chronicle; second, Ithaca Journal-News; third, Utica Observer-Dispatch.

Farm page: first, Geneva Times; second, Rochester Democrat-Chronicle.

The conference resulted in a request that the college originate a course of instruction to country correspondents on how to gather news, which will be issued in printed form later.

This was the result of an address at the session Monday by Russell Lord, of Farm and Fireside.

Professor Adams outlined "What the Public Wants"; L. B. Sheffington, of the Rochester Democrat-Chronicle, told of "The Place and Purpose of the Farm Page"; M. V. Atwood, managing editor of the Utica Observer-Dispatch, discussed "More Local News."

At the banquet, Monday evening, President Livingston Farrand, of Cornell, welcomed the newspaper men. Other speakers were: John W. Baker, editor, Ithaca Journal-News; M. V. Atwood, and Professor O. C. Guerlac, who discussed French newspapers.

At Tuesday's session the speakers were: J. D. Luckett, and D. S. Cook, on "Sources of Agricultural Information"; Gertrude Lynahan, on "What the Editor Should Tell the Reporter"; Professor J. O. Simmons, of the Department of Journalism, Syracuse University, on "Reference and Source Books and Publications for Journalists, with Examples"; Harry G. Stutz, Ithaca Journal-News, "Use of Agricultural Material in a Daily Newspaper."

A question box closed the conference.

WEEK'S FLASHES

ON any subject, there is always more ignorance than intelligence.—Columbia Record.

Hats off to the Sioux Falls Argus Leader which declares that the flapper should be called the bungalow girl, as she is shingled on top, has paint on the sides and nothing in the attic.—Louisville Times.

Ethics are things a man uses until he gets into a tight place.—New York Telegram-Mail.

Turkey has started a radio broadcasting station, which may become the latest Turkish atrocity.—Columbia Record.

Most of the speed demons would be at a loss for an answer if they were quizzed as to their destination and the cause of the rush.—Des Moines Register.

Isn't it great that this country is not run on the European plan?—Newcastle Courier.

A parking space is where you leave your car to have the tail light knocked off.—Memphis News-Scimitar.

People of the United States would own 87 per cent of the world's autos if they were paid for.—Columbia Record.

A Western politician, was informed that he was the father of triplets. He demanded a recount.—New York American.

Bootleggers are using counterfeit $100 bills to purchase liquor, on the principle that the coin is as genuine as the liquor.—St. Paul Dispatch.

A bachelor is a man who has no one to throw his worn-out neckties away for him.—Columbia Record.

At twenty few men have definitely decided on anything except a toothpaste.—Baltimore Sun.

Missing jewels are no longer important for the actress or public performer. It is the style now for the individual herself to disappear.—Elmira Star-Gazette.

There seems to be one law for the rich and one for the poor and about 2,000,000 for the middle class.—Memphis News-Scimitar.

Many people are so busy telling the world what is wrong with it they haven't time to improve it.—Toledo Blade.

It would be a godsend if somebody would corner all the static and keep it isolated.—Detroit Free Press.

Ohio Weekly Becomes Daily

The Ravenna (O.) Republican has changed from the weekly to the daily field. A. D. Robinson is publisher. The new daily has been enrolled as an Associated Press member.

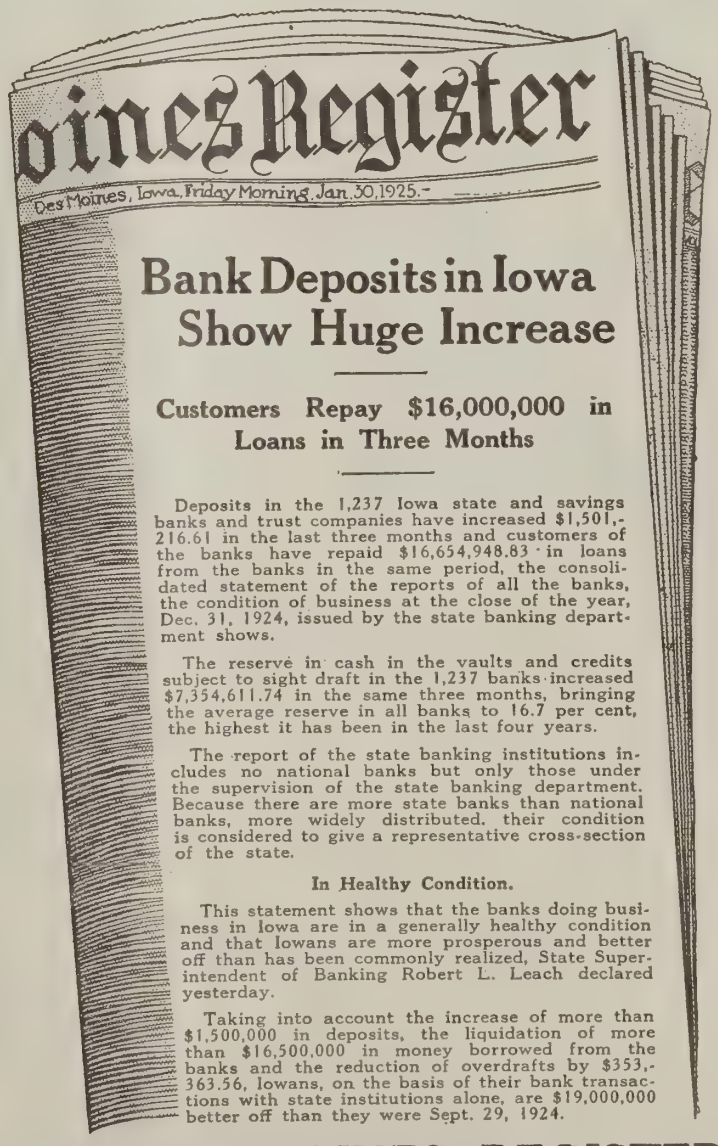
Crosby Joins James F. Newcomb & Co.

Francis D. Crosby, formerly with the Ronald Press Company, New York, has joined the staff of James F. Newcomb & Co., Inc., special representatives.

Jamestown Managing Editor Dies

James A. Clary, managing editor of the Jamestown (N. Y.) Journal, died suddenly Feb. 9 in his home. Mr. Clary had been with the Journal for 41 years, first as compositor, and moving up through the ranks until he became city editor in 1904, and later managing editor.

Editor's Son Strychnine Victim



Charles H. Huls, son of A. E. Huls, editor of the Logan (O.) Republican, was one of the two boys killed by strychnine poisoning at Ohio State University last week. Young Huls was a student in the college of journalism and was to have graduated this year.

World Man Back to Berlin Post

Samuel Spewack, Berlin correspondent of the New York World, returned to Germany on the Berengaria this week, following two weeks' visit in this country.

Seeking Pardon for Tresca

A pardon is being sought for Carlo Tresca, sentenced to a year and a day at Atlanta penitentiary for publishing a birth control advertisement in his paper, the New York Il Martello.

oines Register

Des Moines, Iowa, Friday Morning, Jan. 30, 1925.

Bank Deposits in Iowa Show Huge Increase

Customers Repay $16,000,000 in Loans in Three Months

Deposits in the 1,237 Iowa state and savings banks and trust companies have increased $1,501,216.61 in the last three months and customers of the banks have repaid $16,654,948.83 in loans from the banks in the same period, the consolidated statement of the reports of all the banks, the condition of business at the close of the year, Dec. 31, 1924, issued by the state banking department shows.

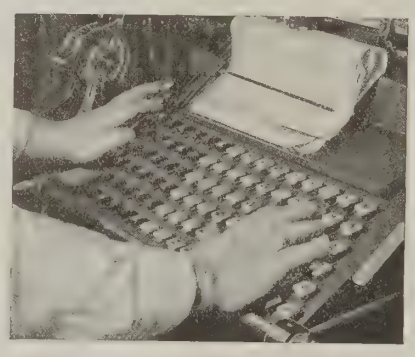
The reserve in cash in the vaults and credits subject to sight draft in the 1,237 banks increased $7,354,611.74 in the same three months, bringing the average reserve in all banks to 16.7 per cent, the highest it has been in the last four years.

The report of the state banking institutions includes no national banks but only those under the supervision of the state banking department. Because there are more state banks than national banks, more widely distributed, their condition is considered to give a representative cross-section of the state.

In Healthy Condition.

This statement shows that the banks doing business in Iowa are in a generally healthy condition and that Iowans are more prosperous and better off than has been commonly realized, State Superintendent of Banking Robert L. Leach declared yesterday.

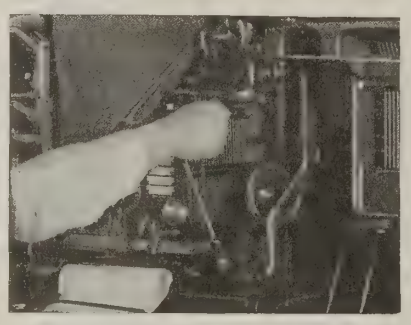
Taking into account the increase of more than $1,500,000 in deposits, the liquidation of more than $16,500,000 in money borrowed from the banks and the reduction of overdrafts by $353,363.56, Iowans, on the basis of their bank transactions with state institutions alone, are $19,000,000 better off than they were Sept. 29, 1924.



THE DES MOINES REGISTER AND TRIBUNE-NEWS

Is the Backbone of Practically Every Successful Advertising Campaign in Iowa

January Circulation, 163,484 Daily; 137,368 Sunday (Net Paid)



THIS PAGE IS A PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION OF WHAT CAN BE DONE ON THE MODEL 26 LINOTYPE

This 30 point Bodoni Condensed caps and lower case will run in the two auxiliary magazines

TOUCH A BUTTON and the keyboard action shifts from the auxiliary to the main magazines. The operator can immediately start setting from one of these magazines carrying, for example, 12 point Bodoni Bold with Italic.

If he wants to set another head in the 30 point or a correction-line, he has only to touch the keybutton to shift back to the auxiliary and he is ready to set the desired line at once. While the Model 26 is as fast as any machine on straight matter, it is particularly adapted to composition in which many faces are employed such as catalogues, job work, newspaper headings and ads.

LIFT A LEVER and the other main magazine is ready for use. Not an instant's delay. No wait for matrices to distribute. Every matrix will go back to its proper magazine without further thought or attention. In this case the lower magazine carries 12 point Bodoni Book with Italic and Small Caps.

If more faces are needed, any of the magazines can be changed in a few seconds. The main magazines are interchangeable with each other and with those of any Linotype using the standard Model 5 magazine. The auxiliary magazines are interchangeable with those of the Single Keyboard Models 14 and 22.

MIXED FACES CONTINUOUSLY COMPOSED. All the faces in the Model 26, in the auxiliary as well as both main magazines, can be combined in the same line if desired. The operator sets from all magazines continuously, bringing any magazine into position by a touch of the keybutton or the magazine shift lever.

CONTINUOUSLY DISTRIBUTED. After use the matrices are all automatically returned to their proper magazines. The words "Mixed Faces" in 30 point in the paragraph above, were set in the same line with the roman and bold face which follow it and the matrices composing this line distributed to the two main magazines and the two auxiliaries while the operator was setting succeeding lines.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

AGENCIES IN THE PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

Faces from ALL MAGAZINES continuously composed in the same line

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

B30.24.11F2

ith one Model 26 equipment

EDITORIAL

RADIO ADVERTISING

THE ordinary mortal rejects camouflaged advertising. The reason is simple: no one enjoys being 'taken in." There is an element of insult in it. Radio advertising cannot be direct, without violation of the principles of broadcasting, so indirect means are employed, at from $10 to $20 per minute.

In the midst of an interesting speech on the literature of Charles Dickens a radio announcer cuts in a silly song written to advertise an automobile accessory. The listener is suddenly switched from a legitimate performance to some sly advertising scheme. It is perhaps for this reason that a great number of radio fans spend their evenings trying to tune in distant stations, instead of listening to programs.

It is increasingly evident that the commercial broadcasters propose to make this absurd "advertising" carry the cost. They are not content with the stupendous profits that have been accummulated by radio interests since a boy pointed out that every home in the land would maintain a radio outfit, or desire one, if programs were arranged to make these outfits interesting and useful. Dead as Tut is the radio outfit when nothing is on the air. Just how long people will continue to buy radio outfits if they are to be used merely as a means of exploiting listeners is a live question.

It is a question for the Government to decide how far covert advertising by radio broadcast can go. We hear that agency commissions are now being paid on some of this stuff. But it is for newspaper publishers to decide how many times they will permit the names of radio advertisers to appear in their columns concealed in newspaper radio programs. Here, surely, is an editing job!

What could be more ridiculous than the free publication, in radio programs, of the appearances of the "Happiness Boys," "Mr. Joseph Knecht and his Waldorf-Astoria Hotel Orchestra" (between the hours of 6 and 7 P. M.) and the same distinguished gentleman and "his Silvertown Cord Orchestra" (between 10 and 11 P. M.), the "Gold Dust Twins," the "Eveready Troup," "B. Fisher's Astor House Coffee orchestra"—(followed by a lecture on the use of Astor House Rice), and all the other and sundry masqueraders?

Just why, pray, are so many newspapers printing these advertising "programs" as if they were legitimate news?

The manager of a leading daily refused advertising to a certain doctor on the ground that he was a "quack," and that evening heard the same gentleman giving a "health talk" on the radio.

NOT WASTED

PERCY HAMMOND, writing in New York Herald Tribune, asked what excuse managing editors had for "printing acres and acres of description concerning the dull idiot of East Patchogue who has been gibbering about the end of the world." He questioned the conduct of newspapers that sent their most vivid correspondents to record the ravings of "wormy lunatics" and deplored the waste of forests cut for newsprint, tons of ink spilled, priceless time expenditure of typesetters, proofreaders, stereotypers, photographers, news writers and editors.

For our own part, we enjoyed the stories. The news made the Long Island "mere believer" look pretty cheap compared with the astronomer who, through hard work of the old brain, told us two weeks ago where and when the shadow of the sun's eclipse would fall on Manhattan Island. Newsprint, ink and the time of men could be put to no higher use than in making a clear-cut demonstration of the futility of various unreasoning beliefs held by vast numbers of our people.

The best circulation "getter," for the average newspaper, is the good boy who delivers regularly, sees the paper into human hands, collects on time and is known over his route for a whistle and a smile.

Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.—Ephesians; VI, 11-12.

WHY FIND FAULT?

"THERE is a changed spirit among newspaper men of my vicinity during the past six or eight years," said a veteran Eastern editor, this week. "We used to think that seven o'clock in the morning was the time to start the wheels of the editorial department of an evening paper, and the chaps who covered the show and the occasional evening assignments used to come to the office, write their pieces and hang them on the copy hook before they went to bed. This stuff was cut up for a machine start at just seven a. m.

"We wrote 'grape vine' and left-overs for an hour and then, sharp at eight, the reporters were on the street, meeting the business office and circulation crew as they came in for their day's work.

"The problem was to find space for the good local stories, and at the same time do justice to telegraph and feature material.

"As I say, there is a new spirit here. The review of last night's show usually gets to the machines at one p. m., before press time, and sometimes is crowded out. There is a rule about the editorial staff getting in before nine, but not many of 'em make it. We have a time clock for all departments, except the editorial, where it probably would only rust from disuse.

"We do not have many complaints on what we print, nor very much praise or comment of any kind. We do no campaigning and there is no fight in us. There is not half so much 'kick' in the work, but I must say we do more business, sell more papers than ever before, with less than half the effort. Why should we complain? That I find fault merely indicates that I belong to another day."

Two more important newspaper mergers, clearing big fields for the stronger action of single units, reaffirming the modern science.

February 14, 1925 Volume 57, No. 38

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Bldg.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London: The Advertising World represents EDITOR & PUBLISHER for the British Isles, 14 King Street, Covent Garden, London, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34 rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craich, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50.

CALL TO INVENTORS

WE are now promised a leased wire picture service, as a result of successful experimentation by the enterprising Chicago Tribune-New York Daily News organization. A score or more of the biggest newspapers in the country, it is said, are to be linked up for a daily ration of news pictures by wire, following press association precedent.

This is going ahead. The dream is coming true. Our newspapers have never failed to support any venture, no matter how elaborate, if it really contributed to the information values of the printed page.

It is encouraging to learn that this development is of and by and for real newspaper people, without the presence of a set of scheming stock promoters, bent upon exploiting the newspapers.

Big advances are due in newspaper service, in keeping with the remarkable developments in the communications art during and following the war. Radio has gone through the blood and welter of stock promotion. It has been a promotion plaything. Essentially simple and inexpensive to operate, it has been used to make fortunes for a few manipulators rather than achieve broad public service. Radio will take its ultimate place as a newspaper auxiliary, after the promotion boll weevil has been driven from the stem.

Inventors, bring to the newspaper field your valuable contributions! A hearty welcome awaits any useful service. The best newspapers in the cities of the United States stand ready to absorb your devices and adequately compensate for sound achievement.

If you are compelled to readjust your subscription rates to meet an increased postal cost, be sure to tell, in some conspicuous manner, just who is responsible.

PRIZE "CRITICISM"

PRIZES for art criticisms! This is the latest means of getting publicity for an art show. The Allied Artists of America offer $100 as a prize to the "author of the best published constructive criticism of the Twelfth Annual Exhibition." As originally stated this prize offer specified that the criticism must be at least "1,000 words in length" but some sophisticated person advised that this was "going it pretty strong," and now the society will consider criticisms of any length.

While we have full sympathy with the struggle of art for recognition in this age, nevertheless we must state that this method of obtaining published notice is indefensible, from any point of view. The best "criticism" will of course be the one most pleasing and profitable to the doners of the prizes. Newspaper criticisms, whether of art or of any other subject, are for the benefit of the readers of the newspaper and are not for sale, directly or indirectly.

Have you decided what you will do with local income tax returns in the event that pending litigation favors their publication?

GOOD BUSINESS

THAT the four prerequisites of national prosperity—increasing industrial production, fair prosperity, increasing exports and easy money conditions—are all present in today's business picture, is the statement of Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, of Cleveland, who has gained international fame as a statistician and banker. He believes that, in all probability, the quartet of favorable conditions will remain with us during this year, assuming that by mid-summer we know that the 1925 crop situation is all right.

Except for clouds on the newsprint horizon, which may only be a mirage as there is no substantial basis for a Canadian embargo, and the danger of excessive postal rates, the newspaper situation appears to be in line with general prosperity. Advertising linage records show up well, and EDITOR & PUBLISHER circulation reports are uniformly favorable. It should be an excellent business year.

PERSONALS

WILLIAM E. SCRIPPS, one of the owners of the Detroit News, is ɔending the winter in Florida with his ımily.

Carr V. Van Anda, managing editor : the New York Times, visited San An-ıio last week while en route to the ıcific coast on a vacation trip.

E. P. Adler, publisher of the Daven-ort (Ia.) Times and head of the Lee yndicate, has been elected president of ;e Tri-City Jewish Charities Board.

John H. Finley, editorial writer for the .ew York Times, has been invited to ɔeak Feb. 12, at the annual Lincoln entennial Association of Springfield, Ill., the room in which Lincoln delivered s famous "House divided against itself" ɔech in the circuit court.

Charles H. Taylor, publisher of the ɔston Globe, visited John Stewart ryan, publisher of the Richmond News-.ader in Richmond this week.

A. G. Angier, publisher of the China .xpress and Telegraph of London, with .rs. Angier, sailed from New York, Feb. ' on the Empress of Scotland for a editerranean cruise.

Walter S. Ball, editor of the Provi-ınce Sunday Journal, has been chosen ;esident of the Amherst Alumni Asso-ıation of Rhode Island.

Fred G. Bonfils, publisher of the Den-r Post, this week is chaperoning a ırty of Denver golfers in San Antonio ır the annual Texas Open Golf Tour-ıment.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

I. X. GARINGER, classified advertis-ing manager of the Johnson City ('enn.) Chronicle and Staff-News, has tcen the classified managership of the ristol (Va.) Bulletin in addition to his ɔhnson City papers.

Jack O'Neil, of the advertising staff c the Providence (R. I.) Journal, has ɛen transferred from the black and ıite section to the Artgravure section.

Lewis J. Anderson, formerly a public ccountant, is now cashier of the Lansing (Mich.) State Journal, succeeding Vin-cit R. DeBarry, resigned.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

BERNARD McEVOY, editorial writer on the Vancouver (B. C.) Province, is spending the winter in San Diego, Cl.

George A. Wilcock, formerly sports etor of the Athens (O.) Messenger, is nw city and telegraph editor of the Middletown (O.) Journal.

Russel C. Barnes, Fred W. Henshaw ad Palmer H. Hutchinson are repre-s:ting the Detroit News at Lansing d·ing the session of the Michigan Legis-lature.

C. E. Herwig, for the past six months nnaging editor of the Lansing (Mich.) Cpital News, has returned to his old pce on the night state desk of the De-trit News.

William S. Rathbun of the editorial stff of the Holyoke (Mass.) Telegram, rently passed the Massachusetts Bar Eamination.

John Nye has left the copy desk of the Providence Evening Bulletin.

Irvin D. Borders of Kansas City has ıied the copy desk of the Houston (ex.) Press.

Vincent Berni, cartoonist on the Providence (R. I.) Journal is doing a sees of comic strips for the L. A. M. Mtor News, published in Providence.

Miss Amy McGuffin, society editor St. Pul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, has been appointed a member of the County Plan-nig Board.

Jan Taylor, sporting editor of the Cleland Times, has returned from a wek's vacation spent in the east.

Walter A. Averill of the Tacoma (Wash.) Daily Ledger has been named edor of the Pacific Builder and Engi-ne, an industrial weekly published at Seattle.

Maurice Baker, former University of Wisconsin student, is now state editor of the Lansing (Mich.) Capital News.

Winfield Brooks, formerly rewrite man, has become assistant city editor of the Boston American, succeeding Herbert W. Caryl.

H. Bond Bliss of the editorial staff of the Lansing (Mich.) State Journal has just returned from a three weeks' trip to Florida.

Harry Keck, several years ago sporting editor of the Pittsburgh Gazette Times and until recently sporting editor of the Baltimore American, has returned as a member of the Gazette Times' sports staff.

William Mason, veteran reporter of the Providence Evening Bulletin, is ill at his home.

Leo Hagerty of the Buffalo Evening Post has resigned to become assistant district attorney for Erie County. He having been admitted to the bar in 1924.

P. D. Fahnestock of the Buffalo Evening News has resigned to head the new publicity bureau of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce.

E. Will Greene has resigned as editor of the Middleport (N. Y.) Niagara Herald to become editor of the Albion (N. Y.) Orleans Republican.

David March, Boston (Mass.) American reporter, has been transferred to the Cambridge office.

Phil McLeary has been made head of the San Antonio Light copy desk, succeeding Jim Leach, resigned.

Richard Kerley of the Toledo Blade news staff has resigned.

Paul A. Martin. managing editor of the Battle Creek (Mich.) Empire News, underwent an operation recently at the University of Michigan Hospital, Ann Arbor.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

Frank Ford, from reportorial staff, Columbus Ohio State Journal, to staff Columbus Citizen.

Norman Ulbricht, from staff Tokio Japan Advertiser, to staff Shanghai North China Daily News and Far East Review.

George Diestel, from staff photographer, Buffalo Times to Buffalo Evening Star.

WITH THE ADVERTISERS

P. C. GUNION, for six years advertising manager of the Hyatt Roller Bearing Company, has been appointed to a place on the Sales Board. Mr. Gunion will also head up the market research activities in addition to his advertising work.

J. L. Scrymgeour has joined the advertising department of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company.

Lester B. Smith with the Brooklyn Subway system in charge of car advertising, has joined the American Bankers' Association Journal in charge of eastern advertising.

MARRIED

EDWIN STEWART UNDERHILL, owner and editor of the Corning (N. Y.) Leader, to Miss Mary Amelia Allen, Wednesday, Feb. 4, at Bath, N. Y.

Davis Merwin, assistant manager of the Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph, to Miss Josephine C. Underwood, in Evanston, Ill.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

EARL WAUGH, recently on the editorial staff, Imperial (Cal.) Enterprise, has purchased a half interest in the paper and job printing plant, his partner being L. H. Thompson, who has been sole owner and editor.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

ERIE (Pa.) Times will erect a garage for its fleet of trucks, 185 by 162 feet, with additional space for stores and offices.

Decatur (Ill.) Herald has taken a nine year lease on the Decatur Model Laundry building and will move at once.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

WILLIAM G. SPENCE, 39 years old, newly appointed treasurer and general manager of the Lowell (Mass.) Courier - Citizen and Evening Leader, is reputed to be one of the youngest newspaper executives in New England. He succeeds the late Harry R. Rice, who died Jan. 10.

WILLIAM G. SPENCE

For the past 11 years, he has been associated with the Courier-Citizen, first as cashier and later as assistant treasurer and business manager. Both the newspaper and the job printing department have prospered under his management.

A testimonial of his ability is the new Courier-Citizen building, opened last August, the arrangements of the mechanical and business departments of which were planned by Mr. Spence.

Prior to joining the Courier-Citizen, Mr. Spence was connected with the J. C. Ayer Company in the advertising department.

SCHOOLS

TWO courses in journalism are being offered in the evening school of the University of Buffalo, beginning with the second semester of this year. Marc A. Rose, managing editor of the Buffalo Evening News, is conducting a course in editorial writing and Fred McClennan, city editor of the Buffalo Express, is conducting a course in reporting.

Major E. E. Hadley, formerly connected with the Des Moines (Ia.) Register, Kansas City Star, New Orleans Times-Picayune and the Associated Press, is now publicity director and head of the department of journalism of the Oklahoma A. and M. College at Stillwater.

ASSOCIATIONS

CAROLINA ASSOCIATED PRESS CLUB met at Columbia, S. C., last week. U. L. McCall, of Atlanta, southern division superintendent, made a brief talk. Representatives of all Associated Press papers in the state attended.

Philadelphia Club of Advertising Women entertained more than 700 members and guests at its ninth annual dinner dance at the Bellevue-Stratford, Friday, Feb. 6.

Advertising Club of Hastings, Neb., formed recently, has become affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. H. E. Riggert is president and Ray Johnston, secretary.

New York League of Advertising Women has arranged a dinner program for Feb. 17, with Bates Compton, of the H. K. McCann Company, Miss Katherine A. Fisher, of Good Housekeeping Institute and Miss Margaret Sawyer, of Post Products Company, as speakers.

Advertising Club of New York will open a course on space buying for members March 2, under the direction of Bernard Lichtenberg of the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

LINCOLN QUARBERG has been appointed manager of the Los Angeles bureau of the United Press Associations, succeeding Harold Swisher, who has been transferred to San Francisco as manager in charge of the U. P. Coast Division. Swisher replaces M. D. Tracy, who is being transferred to an eastern post.

J. H. Jenkins, Associated Press correspondent at Charlotte, N. C., will be transferred effective Feb. 15, to Little Rock, Ark., H. C. Renegar succeeding him at Charlotte.

Thomas Horgan has resigned as head of the Boston bureau of the International News Service to join the rewrite staff of the Boston American. Herbert W. Caryl, recently assistant city editor of the Boston American, has succeeded Horgan.

Obituary

FRANK BENNETT, 60, prominent member of the Detroit Free Press editorial staff during the early 90's, died at his home in Detroit after an illness of a week.

DANIEL LOGAN, veteran reporter and editor, and for many years the dean of Hawaii newspaper men, died recently at Alberni, Vancouver Island, B. C.

W. C. GIBSON, 65, Boston (Mass.) Globe agent at Concord, N. H., died recently.

E. SWIFT BEST, 82, veteran Chicago newspaper man, died recently at Superior, Wis.

WALTER W. COLTON, 46, an advertising solicitor for the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer died last Friday after a sudden heart attack. For 25 years Mr. Colton was advertising manager of the Union (S. C.) Progress coming to Charlotte last summer.

CANADIAN PAPERS

Real Estate Editors — Advertising Managers

AT LAST!

You can get HOUSE PLANS this spring designed for building in Canada; costs, specifications, estimates, based on Canadian conditions.

Blue Print Service Included

FIFTY ORIGINAL DESIGNS

for Canadian homes of moderate price

Entire Series or Single Plans

MATS OR STEREOS — WRITE FOR PRICES

SERIAL SERVICE DEPARTMENT

The Musson Book Company, Ltd.

263 ADELAIDE ST. W — TORONTO, CANADA

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

21 Outdoor Agencies Combine—Several Changes in St. Louis—Green Company Issues Promotion Booklet

THE General Outdoor Advertising Company, Inc., has been incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, marking completion of the consolidation of 21 important outdoor advertising concerns.

H. K. Fulton, president of the Poster Advertising Company and of the O. J. Gude Company, has been named president, and George L. Johnson of the Thomas Cusack Company, chairman of the board of directors. Mr. Fulton announced he estimated the consolidated company would handle $30,000,000 advertising this year.

The new company will have an authorized capital of $3,066,500 preferred stock, 300,000 shares of Class A stock and 1,000,000 shares of no par value common. It will take over all of the capital stock or the properties and good-will of the following concerns:

Thomas Cusack Company, O. J. Gude Company, Poster Advertising Co., Inc., Jamaica Poster Advertising Company, Atlantic City Poster Advertising Company, Long Island Poster Advertising Company, Binghamton Poster Advertising Company, Mohawk Valley Poster Advertising Company, Briel Poster Advertising Company, Old Colony Advertising Company, Brooklyn Poster Advertising Company, Pittsburgh Poster Advertising Company, Burton System, Quaker City Poster Advertising Company, Capital City Poster Advertising Company, Ripley Poster Company, Dixie Poster Advertising Company, St. Louis Poster Advertising Company, East St. Louis Poster Company, Standard Poster Advertising Company and Van Buren & New York Billposting Company.

The Henry B. Flarsheim Company, Cincinnati agency, has moved to larger offices at 324-325-326 Temple Bar Building, Cincinnati.

J. J. Connery, Jr., has resigned from the Graham Paper Company, St. Louis, to organize the Connery Advertising Company, an agency, with offices in the Arcade Building.

Roland E. Sturhahn, formerly with H. W. Kastor & Sons, Advertising Company, has opened a service advertising agency in St. Louis.

Edward Beecher, vice-president of the D'Arcy Advertising Company, St. Louis, has resigned as mayor of Kirkwood, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis county.

Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, Inc., New York, has issued a promotion booklet entitled "Follow the Green Line of Advertising Accomplishment." It lists the agency's important clients.

C. A. Swanlund, advertising manager of the Huttig Sash & Door Company, St. Louis, has joined the Simpson Advertising Service Company, St. Louis, as account executive.

Aaron C. Moore, for several years on the sales staff of Walker & Co., outdoor advertisers, Detroit, has joined the Michigan Street Car Advertising Company, Detroit.

Jack Williams, formerly with the Campbell-Trump Company, has been appointed to the creative and plan department of the Brooke, Smith & French Advertising Agency, Detroit.

Cleveland A. Chandler of the C. A. Chandler Advertising Agency, Boston, Mass., has been elected a director of the Roosevelt Club of Massachusetts.

Ralph W. Hobbs, manager of the Pierce Advertising Agency of Fargo, N. D., has joined the advertising staff of the Northern Pacific Railway.

The advertising agency founded by the late DeForest Porter, at Buffalo, will be continued by his widow, and Morse I. Flagler, it is announced. Present offices in the Root building will be continued.

WEEK'S AD TIPS

Advertisers Individual Service, 9 South Clinton street, Chicago. A general list of newspapers receiving copy on the U. S. Chlorine Laboratories, Chicago.

Barrows & Richardson, 19 W. 44th street, New York. Reported planning a campaign in rotogravure sections of newspapers for the Gorham Company, Silverware, Providence, R. I.

Barton, Durstine & Osborn, 333 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders with New York, N. Y., and New Jersey newspapers for F. H. Roberts Company, "Apollo Chocolate," Boston.

Geo. Batten Company, 383 Madison avenue, New York. Making up a newspaper list for the Armstrong Cork Company, "Armstrong Linoleum," Lancaster, Pa.

Benson, Gamble & Crowell, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Several newspapers in the middle west territory are receiving copy on Blue Jay Corn Plasters, Bauer & Black, Chicago.

Biow Company, 9 E. 40th street, New York. Making 1,000-line contracts with newspapers generally for S. Glemby's Sons Company, Hair Nets, 12 E. 22d street, New York.

Blackett—Sample—McFarland, Inc., 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Handling the account of the S. O. S. Manufacturing Company, Chicago.

Burnett—Kuhn Advertising Company, 605 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Schedules are being issued on the Chicago Tribune.

Calkins & Holden, 247 Park avenue, New York. Making contracts with newspapers in various sections for H. J. Heinz Company, Food Products, Pittsburgh.

Critchfield & Co., Brooks Building, Chicago. Obtained account of Beckwith Company, Dowagiac, Mich., manufacturers of Round Oak stoves, ranges and heating systems.

Geo. S. DeRouville, 452 Broadway, Albany N. Y. Making 500-line contracts with some New York, N. Y., and Vermont newspapers for W. W. Lee & Co., "Lee's Save the Baby," Troy, N. Y.

Dorland Advertising Agency, 244 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers that have rotogravure sections for Boyishform Brassiere Co., 334 Fifth avenue New York, N. Y., and handling the advertising of the Ramstone Corp., "Ramstone" Radio, 119 W. 24th St., New York.

Dorrance, Sullivan & Co., New York. Handling advertising of the Smartsilk Hosiery Mills, Inc., Newark, N. J.

Erwin, Wasey & Co., 844 Rush street, Chicago. Contracts are being sent out for page copy on Quaker Macaroni, Chicago. Renewals are also being issued on the Marquette Cement Company, Chicago.

Federal Advertising Agency, 6 E. 39th street, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for Fred Butterfield & Co., Voiles, Cotton Goods, etc., 361 Broadway, New York and planning a campaign in rotogravure sections of newspapers for Cohen, Goldman & Co., "Knit Tex" Men's Clothing, New York.

Foote & Morgan, Inc., 247 Park avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in New York, N. Y., and vicinity for Schickering Products Corp., Radio Tubes, 401 Mulberry street, Newark, N. J., and now handling the advertising of Warner Chemical Company, Tromite, Water Softener, 52 Vanderbilt avenue, New York.

Fox & Mackenzie, 1214 Locust street, Philadelphia. Will shortly place orders with newspapers for Atlas Portland Cement Company, 25 Broadway, New York.

Charles Daniel Frey Company, 30 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. A list of newspapers, Sunday papers preferred, in branch towns is being prepraed on the advertising of Premier heaters, a product of the Crane Company, Chicago.

Percival K. Frowert Company, 151 W. 42d street, New York. Making contracts with newspapers using black and white for Coty, Inc., Perfume, 714 Fifth Ave., New York.

Charles H. Fuller Company, 629 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Some copy is being distributed to a few Metropolitan cities on Larson's Spearmint Gum, L. P. Larson, Jr. Company, Chicago. Page copy contracts are being sent out to a general list of newspapers on the Brooks Rupture Appliance, and the E. R. Page Company, both of Marshall, Mich., and also on Dr. Coffee.

Green, Fulton, Cunningham Company, 28 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Some advertising in Chicago and Detroit papers is being contemplated by the Modart Corset Company, Saginaw, Mich.

Harvey Advertising Agency, 538 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Contracts are being distributed to a general list of newspapers on the Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga.

Hoops Advertising Agency, 9 East Huron street, Chicago. A general list of newspapers receiving orders on the Paige-Detroit Company.

Kling—Gibson Company, 220 South State street, Chicago. Contracts are being distributed to a general list of newspapers on the Williams Oil-O-Matic Company, Bloomington, Ill.

Lord & Thomas, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Schedules on the Pepsodent Company, Chicago, are being sent out. Schedules on the Palmolive Company, Chicago, to start with page copy, with Sunday papers preferred, are also being distributed. A general list of newspapers receiving schedules on the Cellucotton Products Company, Chicago. Los Angeles office placing orders with some Pacific Coast newspapers for Union Oil Company, California.

Lyke Medicine Company, Kansas City, Mo. Advertising formerly handled by H. W. Kastor & Sons Company, is now being placed direct.

H. K. McCann Company, McCann Building, San Francisco. Handling account of California White and Sugar Pine Manufacturers' Association, Call Building, San Francisco, manufacturers of lumber and millwork. Lists being made up this month.

McJunkin Advertising Company, 5 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Salesmen are working the southern territory for distribution in preparation for the advertising of Fyrac Company, Rockford, Ill. Sunday papers will be preferred.

McLain-Simpers Organization, 210 W. Washington Square, Philadelphia. List of trade papers is being made up for advertising of Cortright Metal Roofing Company, 50 N. 23d street, Philadelphia, manufacturers of metal shingles.

Miller Agency Co., 2144 Madison avenue, Toledo. Making 3,000-line contracts with newspapers in various sections for Rex Company, Insecticides, Kansas City, Mo.

Mitchell—Faust Company, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Copy is being distributed to a general list of newspapers on the Armour Company, Chicago.

Morse International Agency, 449 Fourth avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

Nelson, Chesman & Co., Goddard Bldg., Chicago. Placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for Superior Peanut Company, "Elephant" Salted Peanuts, Cleveland. North Carolina papers are receiving orders on the Herb Juice Company, Jackson, Tenn.

Newell-Emmett Company, 120 W. 32d street, New York. Will place orders with newspapers in selected sections for T. A. Snider Preserve Company, Tomato Products, Chicago.

J. H. Newmark, Inc., Fisk Building, New York. Placing advertising of Welte-Mignon Studios, Inc., New York, manufacturers of pianos, reproducing pianos and organs.

O'Connell-Ingalls Advertising Agency, 100 Boylston street, Boston. Obtained account of Cambridge Rubber Company, 748 Main street, Cambridge, Mass., manufacturers of rubber clothing and footwear.

Powers-House Company, 1105 Chester avenue, Cleveland. Placing account of Jeffrey Company, Columbus, manufacturers of material handling and mining machinery. List will be made up this month.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Editorials

TIMELY TOPICS, DAILY SERVICE
Exclusive Territory
Three Days' Service and Rates
Gladly Sent
Reid Editorial Service
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

LET US BUILD YOUR CIRCULATION
Famous stories by famous authors.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., New York.

"S T O R I E S"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.,
2044 Margaret St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Radio

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

FOR LARGE AND SMALL PAPERS
A non-technical, weekly radio review
By CARL H. BUTMAN
Washington Radio News Service
1422 F St. Washington, D. C.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

First Again

In Department Store Lineage in 1924 in Des Moines

CAPITAL (Evening Only)	1,650,492
Next Competitor (Evening Only)	1,496,880
Second Competitor (Morning Only)	82,793

The CAPITAL has published the most Department Store advertising for more than 25 years!

The CAPITAL'S City Carrier circulation is now the largest in the history of the paper. Total circulation almost 60,000 daily.

Capital Readers Have Buying Power

No duplication - - No forced circulation

The Des Moines Capital
Lafayette Young, Publisher

OMARA & ORMSBEE, INC., Special Representatives

THREE PENNSYLVANIA PRESS GROUPS VOTE TO COMBINE

Editorial Association, Associated Dailies and Weekly Association, Merged at Harrisburg as Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association—Stewart President

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 10.—Three Pennsylvania press associations, the Pennsylvania Editorial Association, Pennsylvania Associated Dailies, and the Pennsylvania Weekly Association at a joint meeting held in Harrisburg, Monday and Tuesday of this week, voted to merge into one organization to be called the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association.

JOHN L. STEWART

John L. Stewart, of the Washington Observer and Reporter, was elected president; Charles B. Spatz, of the Boyertown Democrat, was named vice-president; and Howard Reynolds, of the Quarryville Sun, secretary and treasurer.

The new organization plans to maintain permanent headquarters and a paid secretary. Location of headquarters and the name of the secretary will be announced later, the new officers stated.

The action buried the identities of the three old associations of which the Pennsylvania Editorial Association was the parent. Out of the merger is expected to grow a cohesive organization that will not only discuss the problems of the newspaper office but attempt to sell the Pennsylvania newspapers to the national advertisers.

The decision to merge was made at the last session of the two day meeting. The Editorial Association and the Associated Dailies on Monday passed resolutions adopting the plan of merger and the Weekly Association adopted it Tuesday morning.

Round table discussions featured Tuesday's sessions. George J. Campbell, chairman of the legislative committee of the Associated Dailies, conducted a round table on legislation, while John J. Mead, of the Erie Times, and W. L. McLean, of the Philadelphia Bulletin, read papers on the "Advantages of Space and Cheerful Surroundings in a Printshop," and "Classified Advertising," respectively.

E. J. Stackpole, of the Harrisburg Telegraph, led a discussion on "Newspapers and the Forestry Problems."

Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Pinchot were the guests of honor at the dinner of the three organizations Monday night. The Governor delivered a short address in which he praised the makers of newspapers.

"You pick us up, turn us over, examine us carefully and tell the world what we are," he said. "And what you tell the world we are, we are, to the best of the public's knowledge."

He concluded by urging that all newspapermen "have plenty of good enemies, plenty of good friends, and always something worth fighting for."

The feature of the program, however, was an address from Lieutenant Leslie A. Arnold, one of the American "round-the-world" flyers. He described the trip vividly, branching off occasionally to tell the humorous incidents connected with it.

One of the touches had to do with the landing in French Indo-China where three times Lieutenant Arnold had to climb down to push away a boat which threatened to wreck the pontoon of his plane. It was only after climbing down for the third time, he said, that he discovered that the occupant was the French Consul delivering an address of welcome to the flyers.

At the conclusion Lieutenant Arnold's talk, moving pictures illustrating their trip were shown. Lieutenant Leigh Wade, another of the flyers, described the pictures.

After the short addresses of Mr. Stackpole, the toastmaster, and Governor Pinchot, Mayor George A. Hoverter, of Harrisburg welcomed the visiting newspaper men.

He was followed by Strickland Gillilan, columnist of the Baltimore Sun, who kept the audience in an uproar. Other speakers on the program were: Jay E. House, of the Philadelphia Public Ledger who talked on "Looking Back to Yesterday"; Joe Mitchell Chapple, of the National Magazine of Boston, and Frederic A. Godcharles of the Milton Miltonian.

Herbert Bayard Swope, executive editor of the New York World, one of the scheduled speakers, was unexpectedly detained in New York.

The afternoon session furnished a large number of papers and discussions. After an address by Mr. Stewart, Harry L. Johnston of the Altoona Mirror, handled the question of "What Kind and Class of News Best Serves a Local Community"; Ernest G. Smith, of the Wilkes-Barre Times Leader "Selling Pennsylvania to National Advertisers"; Paul R. Eyerly of the Bloomsburg Morning Press, "The Newspaper and Community Service" and George A. Fahey, of the Franklin News Herald, "Some of the Problems Which Affect the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers and How They May Be Worked Out by Co-operation."

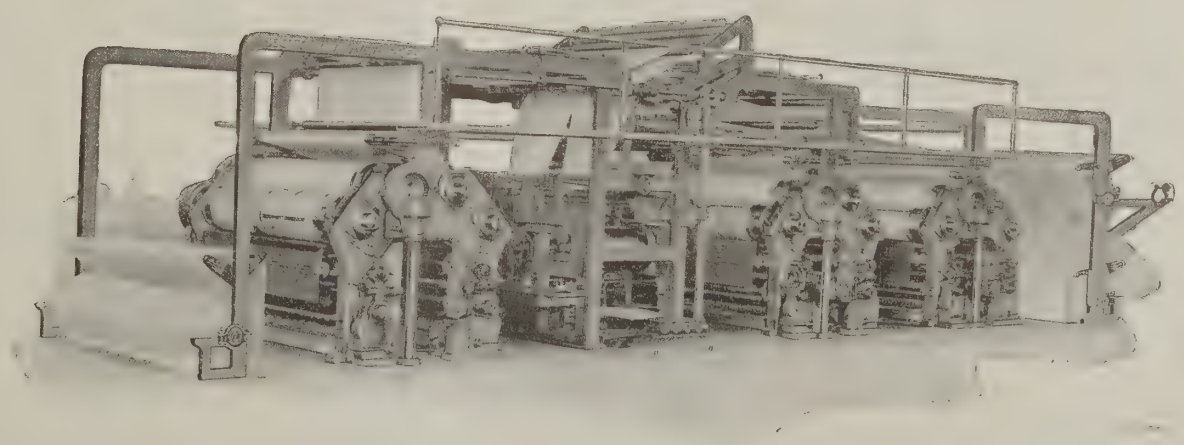
The morning session was devoted to business. Reports were read by Wilmer Crow, of Harrisburg, W. L. Binder, of the Pottstown News, and C. N. Andrews of the Easton Free Press, secretary, treasurer and chairman of the executive committee respectively, of the Pennsylvania Associated Dailies.

Publishers and editors attending the convention, besides those mentioned, were: C. J. Smith, Allentown Call; Charles R. Long, Chester Times; Hawley Quier, Robert M. Zeller, William Althouse, and Abe Hurwitz, Reading Eagle; E. Arthur Sweeney, Greensburg Tribune Review; Henry Walser, Hazleton Standard Sentinel; Walter Grebs, Johnstown Tribune; J. H. Steinman, and H. C. Carpenter, Lancaster News Journal Intelligencer; Rowe Stewart, Philadelphia Record; T. R. Williams, Pittsburgh Press; J. H. Zerbey, Jr., Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper; Herbert D. Brauff, Reading Tribune; E. J. Lynett, Scranton Times; Colley S. Baker, and N. A. Frantz, Stroudsburg Record and Times Democrat; E. H. Schuyler, Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin; W. L. Taylor and E. R. Williamson, York Dispatch.

MORE CONSTRUCTIVE NEWS, LESS "JAZZ," URGED BY JOHN L. STEWART

MORE attention to clean, constructive journalism, and less to "jazz" news and features, was urged upon newspaper publishers by President John L. Stewart, of the Pennsylvania Associated Dailies, in an address before the annual meeting of that organization at Harrisburg, Pa., Monday and Tuesday of this week. In the course of his remarks Mr. Stewart, who is publisher of the Washington Observer and Reporter, touched on the changes which have occurred in newspaper publishing in the past 20 years, radio and the press, crime news, and newspaper reform from within.

His address, in part, follows:



"I am sure that the problems which face us as publishers today are very much different from what they were when we first met together. So many problems affecting our material interests have been solved. Most of our communities are today either without competing papers or with only that number which the field will legitimately support. We are not obliged to face the probability or even possibility that our fields will be again overcrowded. Perhaps it has been the results of the law of the survival of the fittest. At any rate, a great change has come about in the publishing of newspapers. Twenty years ago I went into the business—newspapers were either Republican or Democratic—they were largely party organs or the organs of some political factions within a party. Today they are largely in the hands of newspaper men who are running them on a business basis, as well as with the idea of public service. Today it is most difficult for many public officials, in the distribution of legal advertising to know which are the majority and which the minority newspapers. They are so in fiction rather than in fact, and it will not be long until the publishers will demand a change in the distribution of such advertisements as are necessary, from a legal standpoint, as to eliminate the political complexion of the newspapers—for they have no such complexion.

"We will insist that we get the business on the basis of our circulation and service, and not on the basis of how we think from year to year politically. That is only one of the changes that has come about through consolidations and the placing of the profession on a higher

BUILT LIKE A BATTLESHIP

The SCOTT

"Straight Unit" Sextuple Press

Four of these staunch machines are running every day in the week at the plant of New Jersey's leading newspaper

THE NEWARK EVENING NEWS

Presses start up at 11.40 a. m., 1.30, 2.20 and 3.25 p. m. Go any day that suits your convenience.

NEWARK IS ONLY 20 MINUTES FROM BROADWAY

SCOTT PRESSES NEVER FAIL YOU

WALTER SCOTT & CO.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, U. S. A.
CHICAGO 1441 Monadnock Block NEW YORK 1457 Broadway, at 42nd Street

plane. While there are still before us, as I have already intimated, vast opportunities for increasing our revenues in advertising, this will largely be brought about through co-operative efforts rather than by individual solicitation. The newspaper today has become the recognized medium for the promotion and building up of every form of enterprise. Publishing a good newspaper, with a watchful eye on distribution, a publisher is not likely to go into bankruptcy if he never solicits an advertisement. This is another radical change from the situation even less than ten years ago.

"No longer in any serious danger from any rivals distributing the printed word. Some believe that we may find in the radio—the distribution of news by broadcasting—competition which will take away much of the prestige and influence of the papers and materially reduce their revenues. While it is true that some large advertising accounts have been withdrawn from the newspapers because of the radio publicity, my own conviction is that the printed word will ever be the best medium of exchange and certainly will for the distribution of news and publicity in our local communities. The cross-word puzzle is only one example of what the printed pages can do which radio can never hope to accomplish. If we accept the premise that after all the making of a newspaper is the thing—that circulation and advertising will largely take care of themselves—and I for one am ready to accept it largely—then it seems to be the problem of publishers and associations in determining how to make better newspapers.

"I believe that we all recognize the fact that publishers today face greater obligations and responsibilities than ever before. They are also being more carefully scrutinized and subjected to greater criticism. A newspaper today cannot plead the first amendment to the Federal Constitution, on the freedom of the press, to excuse its responsibility for the publication of news which affects moral and social conditions. The newspaper is said to be the mirror of every-day life. There may be times when people would be better off by not looking into the mirror.

"We recognize the changing social, industrial conditions of later years. We hear much about both the observance and enforcement of laws. We are struck by the statistics which show an increasing number of juvenile crimes. All taking place at a time when the newspapers are going into more homes and coming into closer contact with a wider circle of readers. We may say that the 'movies' and other forms of entertainment and education, the literature of the day, magazines and books are counteracting our influence, but if that be true, may it not be suggested to us that perhaps we are losing ours or at least not growing to the extent that we should in order to counteract the others.

"By reason of these other influences on the lives of the people is not the responsibility the greater on the newspapers of today to examine their columns more carefully, to consider whether or not we may be holding the mirror up when it is unnecessary, and whether or not criticism of some judges and lawyers, not to speak of numerous uplifters, that we are exploiting crime more than we should is not partly true.

"Finding so many destructive things to publish we have not room left in our columns to print the constructive and less incentive to go out and search for them. Are we so eager to get every new 'feature,' the last comic, the newest form of cross-word puzzles, the latest fashion page, and the most modern letter to the love lorn in our papers that we are passing up the things in our own communities which are the real news—missing the things we originally established our papers to give to the people?

"We are trying, some of us, to be competitors with the movies and the jazz bands. So far adrift have some of us gone that we no longer even think of our editorial pages or of the building up of the worth-while things in our communities. I venture to say that nine-tenths of the successful newspaper publishers in my hearing made their papers because they were fighting publishers, exposing wrong and fraud and corruption. We got to our place today not by treading the primrose path, but by cutting away the brambles alongside the road. Better conditions and better times make for easier living. When a man has to fight for what he gets in dollars and cents, he is more likely to also fight for the higher things of life. When he has no fight for the dollar, he grows callous to responsibilities and ideals. We have fewer fighting newspapers than we once had—newspapers which not only strike out boldly at the wrongs in our social and political life, but which are doing a constructive work in getting at the source of many of our evils.

"The point I want to make is this—that there was never before a greater opportunity for the newspapers to take the lead in constructive journalism—never a time when we as publishers have been held to a higher accountability. Our future problem is one of the making of a newspaper from within. We will discuss advertising and circulation, rates and postage, print paper and shop less, and the making of the newspaper itself, the material which goes into it day in and day out more."

EDITORS GOING TO HAWAII

Invitations Issued by Navy Department for Pacific Cruise

The Secretary of the Navy has issued invitations to a list of editors and publishers for a trip with the United States fleet from San Francisco to Honolulu, leaving April 15. The object is to continue last year's experiment of thus acquainting publicists with Navy problems that the public may be better informed.

In a memorandum the Secretary makes it clear that it will not be possible for the Navy to return its guests from Hawaii to the West Coast, but arrangements for reservations have been made with commercial steamship lines.

On the trip out the cost, it is stated, would merely be the regular officers' subsistance mess charges.

Defunct Paper's Equipment Sold

The equipment and good will of the St. Louis Amerika, German language newspaper, were sold Feb. 9 at the receiver's bankruptcy sale to the Westliche Post, also a German language newspaper. The price paid was $10,250.

Adds Merchandising Service

The London Daily Express has announced the establishment of a Research Bureau, which will offer merchandising service to advertisers in connection with any area or territory.

A. A. C. W. Issues Booklet

"Can you Control the Ups and Downs of Your Business?" is the title of a booklet issued this week by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

first! in OHIO

1,586,936 Lines

IN JANUARY, 1925

The Dispatch published in January nearly 250,000 more lines of paid advertising than all other Columbus newspapers combined. In 1924 it exceeded the next largest Ohio newspaper by 2,500,909 lines.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

City 52,891
Suburban 23,639
Country 21,928

Grand Total 98,458

LARGEST IN CENTRAL OHIO

Columbus Dispatch

OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

MICHIGAN PRESS VOTES FIELD SECRETARY

Full-Time Executive Provided for at Recent Lansing Meeting — Free Distribution Paper Excluded from Membership

(Special to Editor & Publisher)

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 9.—Resolution to employ a full-time field secretary for the organization and refusal of membership to the publisher of a free-distribution weekly were outstanding features of the annual convention of the Michigan Press Association held at Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, last week. The Association, which is nearly half a century old, embraces practically all weekly and semi-weekly editors and publishers of the state.

It was agreed that many benefits would accrue to the membership from the establishment of a permanent headquarters, with a full-time secretary who could handle organization matters, recruit new members, compile rate lists, solicit foreign advertising, and keep the members apprised of legislation affecting their business. About $3,000 was pledged toward the scheme and prospects are that an office will be opened and a secretary hired within a few months.

The principle that only newspapers which have a paid circulation can be accurately classed as newspapers and not "glorified hand-bills" was adhered to in refusing to permit a Wyandotte publisher of a "free" newspaper to become a member of the Association. In some sections around and within the metropolitan district of Detroit, these free distribution papers have become serious rivals of regular weeklies, it was brought out, sufficient advertising being obtained on the basis of a guaranteed large distributi to pay the publisher a profit without c lection of subscriptions.

The convention was the largest ev held by the Association, more than 1 members being in attendance. The to membership is approximately 125.

Among the speakers to appear befo the sessions were Ole Buck, secretary the Nebraska Press Association, and W. Anderson, "miracle merchant," Cozard, Neb., who has built up a $325,0 annual business in a town of 1,200 pop lation, largely through weekly newspap advertising.

Officers elected for the year wer David E. Hubbell, Croswell Jeffersoni president; Schuyler Marshall, Clint County Republican-News, vice-presider Herbert A. Wood, Bangor Advan treasurer; Len W. Feighner, Nashv News, field director.

Incorporation Articles Filed

Articles of incorporation of Hoopeston (Ill.) Evening Times P lishing Company, publisher of the E ning Times, established a few mon ago, were filed this week, showing it be a $25,000 concern. J. H. Harris a J. M. Fenwick of Hoopeston and Bert Nicoson, residing near there, are organizers.

Daily Launches Radio Tabloid

The Lansing (Mich.) State Jour has begun the publication of a mont tabloid radio magazine.

Reverts to Weekly

The St. Paul Farmers' Dispatch, p lished from 1869 to 1912 as a weekly then changed to a twice-a-week (Tues and Friday), reverted to a weekly, iss every Thursday, Feb. 5. No person changes were made.

"Ship Complete Duplicate Ludlow Equipment" wires Vanderbilt

WHEN the first edition of the Miami (Fla.) Daily Illustrated Tab was issued on January 12, it was the third instance in which Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. has sucessfully launched an entirely new newspaper without the use of type.

From their very first issues, Mr. Vanderbilt's Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News and San Francisco Illustrated Daily Herald have been produced the all-slug way with the display heads, feature heads and display for all advertisements cast clear and sharp in attractive Ludlow faces.

The size range, all the way up to full width 60 point, in a wide selection of attractive faces, includes bolds and extendeds, and beautiful Ludlow italics with full kerning effects, but with no kerns to break off. A casual examination of any of these tabloid papers reveals the attractiveness of Ludlow set display.

"I am firmly convinced that the Ludlow is the most efficient and flexible display typesetting system yet devised," wrote one of Mr. Vanderbilt's superintendents. The latest indorsement of the Ludlow System by the Vanderbilt Papers, Inc., reached us recently in the form of a telegram from Miami ordering a complete Ludlow equipment identical with the substantial Ludlow equipment sent one year ago to the San Francisco Illustrated Daily Herald.

New and attractive features are being added to the Ludlow System constantly.

Ludlow Typograph Co.

2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

San Francisco, Hearst Bldg. New York, World Bldg.
Atlanta, Ga., 41 Marietta St. Boston, Mass., 261 Franklin St.

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

JANUARY LINEAGE SHOWS SLIGHT DECREASE IN NEW YORK

TEN New York newspapers showed a losses, according to totals compiled by lineage gain in January, 1925, over statistical department of New York Evening Post. Complete tabulation follows:

Pages 1925	Pages 1924		Percentage of Total Space	1925	1924	Gain	Loss
1,422	1,338	American	8.4	1,176,958	1,250,766	.....	73,808
....	1,088	Herald	...	.....	§982,140	.....	.....
1,290	1,040	Herald Tribune	9.3	1,304,634	905,316	399,318	.....
1,730	1,604	Times	16.2	2,270,346	2,138,912	131,424	.....
1,266	1,160	World	10.0	1,405,354	1,355,080	50,274	.....
824	....	*Mirror (Tabloid)	2.2	315,396	‖.....	.....	.....
1,140	1,052	News (Tabloid)	3.7	514,062	452,966	61,096	.....
426	....	Evening Bulletin	1.0	140,508	**.....	.....	.....
840	....	*Evening Graphic	0.7	98,518	‡‡.....	.....	.....
1,226	1,206	*Evening Journal	9.3	1,307,314	1,248,352	58,962	.....
....	558	*Evening Mail	...	.....	¶612,782	.....	.....
822	690	*Evening Post	3.3	470,232	399,278	70,954	.....
778	670	*Evening World	5.3	750,896	677,414	73,482	.....
968	814	*Sun	8.9	1,246,704	1,113,152	133,552	.....
636	650	*Telegram-Mail	4.5	638,330	††698,654	.....	60,324
1,162	1,126	Brooklyn Eagle	9.6	1,349,864	1,292,608	57,256	.....
578	576	Brooklyn Times	3.2	446,202	399,796	46,406	.....
644	604	Standard Union	4.4	623,172	634,104	.....	10,932
752	14,176	Totals		14,058,490	14,161,320	.....	102,830 Net Loss

*No Sunday edition.
¶Telegram and Mail combined January 28, 1924. Sunday issue discontinued March 16, 1924.
††Evening Telegram carried 79,120 lines in the 4 Sunday issues of January, 1924; this neage is included.
§Herald and Tribune combined March 19, 1924.
Evening Bulletin first issue June 19, 1924; first Sunday issue, December 7, 1924.
‖Mirror (Tabloid) first issue June 24, 1924.
‡‡Evening Graphic first issue September 15, 1924.

COMPARATIVE LINEAGE, 1925-1919

	1925	1924	1923	1922	1921	1920	1919
nerican	1,176,958	1,250,766	982,190	924,126	906,002	1,066,118	673,632
rald	.....	982,140	1,067,368	1,114,138	1,112,868	806,064	614,200
rald Tribune	1,304,634	905,316	839,996	893,498	868,706	855,712	415,226
mes	2,270,346	2,138,912	2,086,882	2,023,642	1,811,694	2,040,620	1,200,845
orld	1,405,354	1,355,080	1,510,056	1,305,064	1,222,604	1,632,073	1,155,578
irror (Tabloid)	315,396	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
ws (Tabloid)	514,062	452,966	311,006	265,384	149,820	.....	.....
ening Bulletin	140,508	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
ening Graphic	98,518	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
ening Journal	1,307,314	1,248,352	1,126,730	971,620	847,340	865,610	693,131
ening Mail	.....	612,782	539,800	566,972	589,016	561,530	328,240
ening Post	470,232	399,278	334,230	413,542	604,842	456,202	317,578
ening World	750,896	677,414	792,082	779,408	794,294	801,198	484,710
obe	.....	.....	710,604	675,312	651,552	755,722	554,038
n	1,246,704	1,113,152	873,094	768,406	729,232	922,822	539,520
legram & Mail	638,330	698,654	530,460	524,604	523,088	740,614	663,184
ooklyn Eagle	1,349,864	1,292,608	1,197,284	1,161,450	988,302	1,009,856	705,290
ooklyn Times	446,202	399,796	291,646	300,576	255,156	†.....	†.....
ndard Union	623,172	634,104	624,640	593,242	654,624	695,880	457,900
Totals	14,058,490	14,161,320	13,818,068	13,280,984	12,709,140	13,210,021	8,803,072

†Figures not recorded.
‡Sun and Globe combined June 4, 1923; name changed to Sun March 10, 1924.

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

McCutcheon, Chicago Cartoonist, Feted in Hawaii—New Stunt in X-Word Puzzles—Fannie Hurst Writes on Russia—Joe Chapple Speaks

JOHN T. McCUTCHEON, cartoonist for the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate, arrived in Honolulu recently on the first lap of a trip around the world. He was extensively entertained while on the Islands. The Honolulu Advertising Club gave a luncheon in his honor. He was accompanied by Mrs. McCutcheon.

The world tour he is taking will include the Fiji Islands, Australia, the Philippines, Japan, and Northern China. By way of the Trans-Siberian Railway, he will visit in Siberia and Russia.

During the tour, he will contribute articles to the syndicate.

The tricky words which peep out from the cross word puzzle squares have been traced to their original lairs and stripped of their mystery by Science Service, Inc., Washington, D. C.

"Curious Crosswords" a daily feature it provides a 15-line story giving the origin, history, and definition of one of the vitalizing words which puzzle fans enter, such as: erst, eland, magi, ai, gnu, and bode.

Fannie Hurst, who recently made a trip through Russia, has written five half-page articles on her impressions and experiences, for the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York.

Joe Mitchell Chapple, who conducts a newspaper syndicate under his own name from New York and Boston, is to be principal speaker at a special luncheon at the Advertising Club of New York on Feb. 18.

U. V. Wilcox, manager of the Affiliated Press Service, Takoma Park, Washington, D. C., informs this department his syndicate was omitted from the list of syndicates published in EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S International Year Book, Jan. 31.

Arthur Murphy is a new member of the art staff of the Central Press Association in Cleveland. Central Press' art staff is now composed of Jess Cargill, editorial cartoonist; John Sords, sport cartoonist; T. Crawford Hill, Al Buescher and Art Murphy.

Arthur Krenz has left the art staff of the Central Press Association to join NEA Service, Inc., at its Cleveland office.

Coffeyville Dawn Suspends

As the result of an incendiary bomb explosion which virtually wrecked its plant Dec. 8, the Coffeyville (Kan.) Daily Dawn has suspended publication, transferring its property to the Coffeyville Morning News. C. C. Drake, managing editor of the Dawn, has joined the News staff.

There is no Fluctuation of West Virginia's MARKET

West Virginia derives the greater part of her income from the most steady and certain of all sources—her mines. No outside conditions or elements can influence the productiveness of these since the material wealth is already there. It merely remains for it to be gathered in and be converted into buying power.

The market here remains constant and reliable — and therefore worthy of your most intensive cultivation.

Of the 69,501 income tax returns filed, 1,563 showed incomes of over $10,000 and 3,239 were from $5,000 to $10,000. Here is a small state, filing returns whose number and amounts exceed those of many of her larger and more pretentious neighbors.

Where and how the people of West Virginia spend these steady incomes is largely a matter of who influences them in favor of his goods. Your chance lies solely in the opportunities offered by the dailies listed below.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Bluefield
*Telegraph	(M)	11,605	.06
*Telegraph	(S)	15,752	.06
Charleston
*Gazette	(M)	19,619	.07
*Gazette	(S)	23,493	.08
Clarksburg
Telegram	(E)	9,479	.04
Telegram	(S)	11,797	.045
Huntington
Advertiser	(E)	11,176	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(M)	14,803	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(S)	14,482	.04
Martinsburg
*Journal	(E)	4,830	.03
Morgantown
†Post	(E)	5,005	.025
Parkersburg
*News	(M)	7,261	.03
*News	(S)	8,840	.03
*Sentinel	(E)	7,751	.03

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

PARIS WELL COVERED SAYS A. P. MAN

Elmer Roberts Tells How Recent Allied Reparations Conference Was Reported—Has Had Long and Varied Newspaper Career

Interesting details of how the recent Paris Conference was reported by American newspapermen were told this week by Elmer Roberts, chief of the Associated Press Paris bureau, who is visiting in this country until Feb. 21.

ELMER ROBERTS

The inter-allied reparations agreement was signed the day Mr. Roberts left France for the United States.

"The Paris Conference was as easy to report as the Washington Disarmament Conference three years ago," Mr. Roberts said in an interview with EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

"There was no attempt at secret diplomacy with the exception of one day, when efforts to suppress the news were easily overcome by the veteran American reporters in the French capital.

"As a rule, delegations from the different nations attending were quite willing to make public their points of view. Each day a communiqué was issued from the conference chamber, which, although rather wooden and routine, was satisfactorily supplemented by interviews with various delegates.

If international accord is assisted by free interchange of news and opinions, this country is certainly doing its share towards peace, and the faults of misunderstanding lie not with the United States but with European countries, Mr. Roberts said. While European news is well reported by newspaper of this country, very little American news is given to readers abroad.

Paris is particularly well covered, according to Mr. Roberts. The quantity of news at present being cabled from France is enormous, he said. Forty American correspondents, just twice as many as before the war, now make Paris their headquarters.

These correspondents serve the Associated Press, Consolidated Press, United Press, United News, International News Service, Universal Service, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago Daily News, Philadelphia Public Ledger, New York Times, New York Herald Tribune, New York World, and Wall Street Journal.

"The social temperament of the French makes reporting in Paris very easy," Mr. Roberts continued. "It is a pleasure for a Frenchman to communicate news and views.

"Then the majority of statesmen in France have, before entering politics, written books themselves or written for newspapers. In fact every prime minister in France in the last 20 years, if not a former newspaper man, has at least been a man who wrote freely.

"It is quite easy to see French cabinet members, but it is not easy to see them on the instant, some formality being required. If the question one seeks answered is of immediate importance, the head of the information bureau of the foreign office obtains a reply for the newspaper men."

Mr. Roberts has represented the A. P. in France for the past 14 years. Prior to that he was Berlin correspondent for nine years.

During the war, he reported many engagements from the front. In 1915, when the French and Germans were struggling for possession of Hartmans Weilerkopf in Alsace, with both armies claiming possession, Mr. Roberts was appointed by the French foreign office as a neutral to settle the claims. He awarded the ridge to the French.

Mr. Roberts started newspaper work on the Terre Haute (Ind.) Express when he was 22. Before joining the A. P. he was connected respectively with the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Gazette, Chicago Daily News, the old Chicago Times, the New York Herald, New York World, and New York Times.

WISCONSIN EDITORS HIT POSTAL COSTS

Ask Congress to Appropriate Fund to Cover Government and Congressional Mail at Madison Meet —Officers Re-elected

Dissection of the problems confronting the rural editor, re-election of the officers of the past year, and the passage of three resolutions relating to postal rates, advertising costs, and state publicity were the principal accomplishments of the Wisconsin Press Association at its three day mid-winter conference at the Loraine hotel and College of Agriculture in Madison, Feb. 5-7. It was voted the most successful gathering in the history of the organization.

John A. Kuypers, De Pere Journal-Democrat, was re-elected president; Louis H. Zimmerman, Burlington News-Democrat, secretary; and Merlin Hull, Black River Falls, treasurer.

A resolution was passed asking Congress to obviate an increase in the burdens of publishers by appropriating through taxes, $55,000,000 as a fund against which shall be charged the cost of all government and congressional mail.

A second resolution, passed after a heated criticism of the justice of a flat rate for space when the amount of composition varies greatly, called for a rate schedule based upon a space price for ordinary straight composition with a time charge added for extra work involved in close or intricate composition.

A third provided for the preparation of short items on Wisconsin prosperity to be published simultaneously at regular periods in all the member newspapers of the association.

Among the principal speakers were: George W. Marble, president of the National Editorial Association, publisher of the Fort Scott (Kan.) Tribune; John L. Meyer, editor of the National Printer-Journalist; G. L. Caswell, secretary of the Iowa Press Association; O. D. Brandenburg, veteran Wisconsin editor, and W. G. Bleyer, dean of the University of Wisconsin School of Journalism.

Prof. W. A. Sumner, college of agriculture, and P. D. Pearsall, Evansville Antes Press, pleaded for a greater creativeness in printing and explained to the editors the potential field for the development of printing among the farmers of their individual communities. W. H. Bridgman, Stanley Republican, outlined "A Bookkeeping System for the Country Newspaper Office."

EDITOR & PUBLISHER—$4 a year.

WISCONSIN PRESS ADOPTS PROF. BLEYER'S CREED AS A CODE OF ETHICS

THE following creed for editors and publishers of weekly newspapers by Willard Grosvenor Bleyer, Director of the Course in Journalism, University of Wisconsin, was unanimously adopted as a code of ethics by the Wisconsin Press Association, Feb. 6:

We believe that journalism is an honorable profession, essential to the welfare of society.

We believe that the success of democratic government depends upon sound public opinion, and that the newspaper should aid in creating and maintaining sound public opinion by publishing significant news and editorial interpretation of news.

We believe that newspaper writers and editors should be adequately prepared for the great responsibilities placed upon them.

We believe that a newspaper should publish the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth concerning all matters of importance to readers as citizens of the community, the state, and the nation.

We believe that a newspaper that goes into the home should publish nothing that cannot be read aloud in the family circle.

We believe that news of crime, scandal, and vice should be presented in such a manner as to deter readers from attempting to imitate the criminal and the vicious.

We believe that all persons and all organizations are entitled to fair play in the columns of the newspaper.

We believe in the right of privacy of individuals in all matters not of public concern.

We believe that no propaganda or publicity matter should be published unless it contains information to which readers are entitled, and that whenever such material is printed, its source s be plainly indicated.

We believe that editorials should sent the truth as the writer sees i colored by bias, prejudice, or partisa

We believe that neither the bu interests of a newspaper nor any o influence should interfere with the cation of the truth in news or edit

We believe that the purpose of paper advertising is to create a d for commodities or services, to i readers, not to mislead or defraud

We believe that advertisements be as clean and wholesome as new editorials.

We believe that rates for subscri and advertisements should be suffic insure the publisher a fair profit.

We believe that all statements culation should give the actual num bona fide subscribers.

We believe that only such news as maintain the highest standards o honesty, and decency in news, edi and advertisements deserve the supp the community.

Associated Clubs Appoint Gre

Edward L. Greene, manager Boston Better Business Commissio join the headquarters staff of the ciated Advertising Clubs of the March 1, as special representativ successor to the Boston post ha named.

Lack of Music Critics Deplo

Ernest Newman, music critic New York Evening Post, deplor lack of music critics on newspape dressing students of the Pulitzer of Journalism, Columbia Universit York, Feb. 10.

Trade Mark FLEXIDEAL Reg. U S Pat. Off.

THE IMPORTED DRY MAT OF SUPERIOR QUALITY

Write for Free Samples

FLEXIDEAL COMPANY, Inc.

15 WILLIAM STREET NEW YORK CITY

You Know It's

The Beacon Journal

In Akron, Ohio

No one disputes that fact. But do that business is booming in Akron—that the factories are working three shifts—that every one is buying what they want, as well as what they need. Money is plentiful—business is good.

You Know

Run Your Campaign in a Live Paper, in a Live City.

The Business Men

of your community will value the authentic statements of

ROGER W. BABSON

on the business and financial situation, above any other single piece of news that you can print.

Supplied weekly through the Babson News Service Publisher's Financial Bureau, Babson Park, Mass.

SPECIMEN RELEASES AND RATES ON REQUEST

OSTAL RATE INCREASE BILL PASSES HOUSE

aly Two "Noes" Heard as Viva Voce Vote Is Called—Publishers Again Protest—Goes to Senate

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 10.—Without a roll-call the postal pay and rate increase bill was passed by the House and sent to the Senate this afternoon for further action. Less than two hours' debate preceded the viva voce vote and more than half this time was consumed in discussing whether a special rule limiting arguments should be adopted. At the end of an hour's talk, the rule was approved by 245 to 97. Then the viva voce vote came. Two "noes" were heard from the floor of the hall.

Representative Pou of North Carolina, ranking Democrat on the Rules Committee, opposed the rule, asserting that the House was being asked to sanction a new tax of $61,000,000 without opportunity for amendment or sufficient debate. He said that while 75 per cent of the House members favored the bill vetoed last year by President Coolidge, he did not believe 10 per cent endorsed the present bill.

In behalf of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association Elisha Hanson, its Washington representative, issued a statement following passage of the bill in which he declared there is "no sound reason" for present users of the mails to be called upon to pay the increased postage rates provided in the Postal Pay bill which passed the House today "unless it be the intention of the Administration" to make the Post Office Department "pay a profit" on its services to the public.

Mr. Hanson stated that reports of the department on the business handled during the seven months of the current financial year which have elapsed since July 1 would indicate that there will be for this year a net increase in revenue of more than $35,000,000 over the previous year's business.

"As the department had a deficit of more than $15,000,000 last year," said Mr. Hanson, "these reports indicate a profit on this year's operations of more than $20,000,000.

"Surely this enormous sum should be taken into consideration by the Senate when it takes up the rates suggested by the House. The department estimates that the salary increases will total $68,000,000. It also estimates that the rate increase will produce $61,000,000 additional revenue.

"Add to this latter figure the almost certain profit of $20,000,000 which the department will make on present rates and we find that the Government will net $13,000,000 above all expenses on its postal service if the Senate approves the House bill providing for both salary and rate increases.

"Thus, the Senate should not call upon the ful-paying users of the mails to meet the cost of handling free matter for Congress and the various Government departments at an expenditure of more than $12,000,000 a year.

"The full-paying users of the mails should not be called upon to pay the expense of the department in handling religious, agricultural, scientific and fraternal publications when the loss incident to their handling is due to Congressional policy.

"The full-paying users of the mails should not be called upon to reimburse the department for any of the other purely public services of the department costing upward of $140,000,000 a year, as contrasted to its purely postal business functions. Last year the Government made more than $125,000,000 profit on the business transactions of the Post Office Department and paid all but $15,000,000 of the cost of the department's purely policy services from this profit. On the basis of this year's operations to date the users of the mails not only will pay in full for the service rendered to them, but also will pay the full cost of the policy services of the department, with a surplus of more than $20,000,000 above that cost.

"Surely, in the light of these facts, Congress should not enact rates at this time which will cripple business when far lower charges will enable the department to take care of its business and pay the salary increases as well."

S. C. Daily Sold and Suspended

The Abbeville (S. C.) Evening Medium has been purchased by F. West, owner of the Press and Banner. The daily will be discontinued and the Press and Banner will continue to be issued as a tri-weekly.

City and Sunday Editors Swap Jobs

John A. Olive, for years city editor of the San Antonio Light, has been made Sunday editor, while P. M. Barrett, former Sunday editor, has become city editor.

Seventh District A.A.C.W. convention is scheduled for Wichita, Kan., Feb. 16.

WASHINGTON EDITORS MEET IN SEATTLE

Set Program Discarded for Round Table Discussions at Thirteenth Annual U. of Washington Newspaper Institute

WITH more newspaper owners present than ever before the thirteenth annual Washington Newspaper Institute, Feb. 5, 6, 7, at the University of Washington School of Journalism, Seattle, was marked by practical round-table discussion rather than by the ordinary set program.

O. H. Woody

Editors of 56 Washington weekly newspapers, 14 dailies, 11 trade journals, 4 British Columbia weeklies, one Oregon weekly, one Oregon daily, and 13 former newspaper men were among those attending the conference.

Plans for a Pacific slope newspaper conference to be held at Portland, Ore., in the summer of 1926 were discussed at the semi-annual executive meeting of the Washington Press Association held in conjunction with the Newspaper Institute Feb. 6.

President O. H. Woody presided.

From the Washington group to the Portland meeting special emphasis was laid upon the importance of the publicity cards adopted at the summer meeting of the Washington Press Association. By use of these cards it is hoped to curb the activities of professional publicity men and to turn publicity stories into paid advertising. Whenever a publicity story without general news value is received by an editor it is to be returned with one of the publicity cards and the statement of space rates for advertising. A $5,000 budget was adopted.

Special service features of the Institute were a discussion of the State of Washington libel laws by Ernest L. Skeel, attorney for the Association, with a general discussion and question box following, and a talk on the care of the linotype by Ross Draper, special representative of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company of San Francisco.

Speakers at the sessions included Hal E. Hoss, president of the Oregon State Editorial Association, and managing editor of the Oregon City Morning Enterprise; Hugh Savage, president, and Ben Hughes, secretary-treasurer of the British Columbia and Yukon Press Association; Ray W. Felton, managing editor of the Seattle Star; Henry Suzzallo, president of the University of Washington; Capt. F. K. Gudmundsun, Arctic explorer; R. W. Jones, University of Washington School of Journalism staff.

POWER—

without duplication, reaching 45 out of every 100 people who buy any New York evening newspaper.

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

In New Orleans its

THE MORNING TRIBUNE
(Published week-day mornings)

THE NEW ORLEANS ITEM
(Published week-day afternoons)

THE ITEM TRIBUNE
(Published Sunday mornings)

Sold to National Advertisers at a combination rate 15c a line week-days and 18c a line Sundays.

RADIO

A regular feature each Saturday. Two or three pages of live news and advertising.

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg. Chicago

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?
Because
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.
Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

National Advertising

The remarkable ability of The New York Sun to create and to increase "consumer demand" is readily recognized by New York retailers, and is an effective aid to National Advertisers seeking retail distribution and dealer co-operation.

New York dealers willingly stock and feature goods advertised in The Sun, because they know that advertising in The Sun sells merchandise.

The Sun
280 Broadway New York

Peoria
The Try-Out City
THE PEORIA
JOURNAL
Transcript
Puts Tryouts Over!
CHAS. H. EDDY CO.
New York - Chicago - Boston

San Francisco Chronicle
M. H. de Young
Leading Newspaper of the Pacific Coast
"Blankets" Northern and Central California
A clientele that can and does buy everything
National Advertising Representatives
Williams, Lawrence & Cresmer Co.
225 Fifth Ave. NEW YORK — 360 N. Michigan Ave. CHICAGO

The Plain Dealer
has the Largest Circulation
of Any
Cleveland Daily Newspaper
205,569
J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York — Woodward & Kelly, Security Bldg., Chicago

Los Angeles Times
The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.
World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

STORY OF A CLASSIFIED HOUSE ORGAN DESIGNED TO LEAD SALES FORCE

Gundersen Tells of Successful Operations of Telegram-Mail Department Paper—Ninety Per Cent of Large Organs Perish in First Half Year

By GILBERT N. GUNDERSEN

Manager, Classified Advertising, New York Telegram-Mail

A CAREFUL check was made several years ago by an advertising association upon the average life of house organs, with rather startling results. Over 90 per cent, it was found, expired during the first six months. Less than one out of every ten survived, and that one survivor generally proved to be sufficiently healthy to continue it indefinitely.

When New York Telegram-Mail started to publish The Classified Salesman last year we determined that our house organ should not be consigned to a final resting place within the first trying six months. At the very outset we realized that the best way to insure its healthy existence would be to plan the objects which it should accomplish, to decide our editorial policies to conform to that plan, and to gather and prepare enough material to keep it going during the first six months at least.

Our sales organization is pretty large, including as it does about seven hundred agents, a street, telephone and branch office sales staff, not to mention clerical help. Naturally the tendency of an organization of this size is to be unwieldy and loose-knit, with only indifferent cooperation between its members and parts. So we did not have to hunt for the objects we wanted to accomplish, for they presented themselves to us as the unifying of our organization, increasing the cooperation of our agents, and the welding of our entire classified department into a unified whole.

This policy has been adhered to closely ever since then. Every article written or selected for The Classified Salesman, so far as it has been within our power, has furthered the cause of Telegram-Mail classified advertising by giving helpful suggestions to the members of our organization, by showing how they might overcome any weak points in their selling, and by trying to foster a spirit of friendliness within our organization.

Every issue has been well balanced in its contents. The outside pages (it consists of four pages all told) are devoted exclusively to articles of a serious nature which we believe are likely to be of interest to anybody. The inside spread is devoted to editorials, a column for our branch offices, one for our agents, and a humorous one for our inside force. Fillers of a humorous nature are used on this inside spread also.

The printing of our February, 1925, edition marks the first anniversary of The Classified Salesman, and for several reasons we are proud of it. For one thing, by surviving the first six months, it proved that it is made of sterner stuff than most house organs. For another, to the best of our knowledge, it is the only house organ in the country published with regularity exclusively for a classified organization.

That it has justified its existence has been manifested, we believe, in no mistakable manner. Many of our agents have voluntarily informed us that they receive pleasure and benefit from reading it. That alone is gratifying; but it is also an indication of the increased good will which Telegram-Mail Classified ads now enjoy within our organization. During 1924, when business was not as good as was hoped it would be, our lineage increased for the first time in four years. What part, if any, of this increase can be attributed to The Classified Salesman it is impossible to say; but we know that it was brought about by the greater efforts of an organization which was high in morale during the whole year, a condition which our house organ helped to foster.

Now each issue appears to be anticipated by every one of our mailing list. Occasionally an agent has missed his monthly copy and has written to request it; and others have asked for complete sets of all the back numbers. We consider it as one of the most important features of our promotion work—a tie that binds us into a group of sympathetic coworkers who have learned to know each other pretty well, to understand and to co-operate with our efforts to make classified advertising bigger and better for the Telegram-Mail.

A. P. Committee to Meet Feb. 25

Notice of the next meeting of the Associated Press executive committee to be held Feb. 25, in New York, was announced this week.

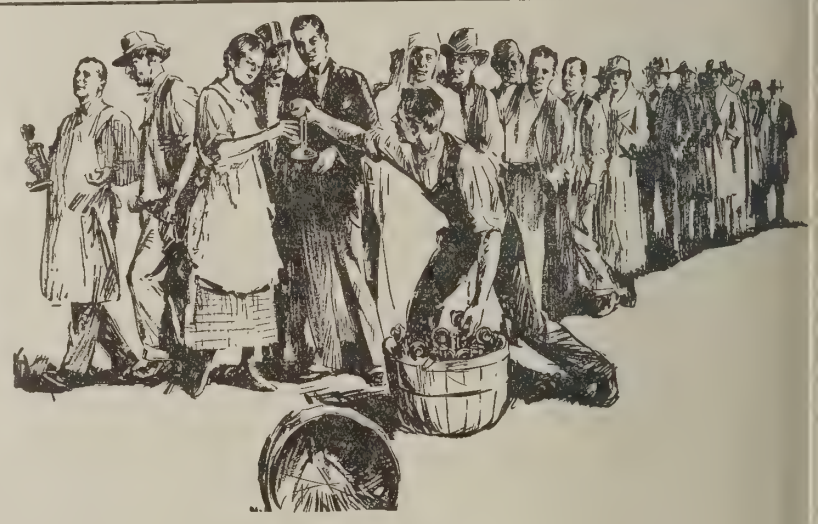
CROSS WORD PUZZLES FAIL TO PULL CIRCULATION, EDITORS CONCLUDE

THE worth of the cross word puzzle and the full page display of pictures were chief among the topics which brought forth considerable discussion at the meeting of the Editorial Department of the New York State Publishers' Association at Hotel Syracuse, Friday, Feb. 6. This department, composed mainly of managing editors, was founded a year ago for representatives of the editorial departments of newspapers.

The consensus of opinion about the cross word puzzle seemed to be that it is a splendid service to the reading public and therefore essential; yet it was believed it was not so much of a circulation getter.

Somewhat the same opinion was given of the full page mat service picture. A number were of the opinion that local pictures on the page, along with the others, created much more reader interest.

The questionnaire included a reference to salaries adequate for desk men, reporters, etc. The editors thought this a subject for the publishers to discuss, though it was agreed there was a wide divergence and that individual efficiency and local conditions were factors to [illegible] considered.



Officers elected were: President, [illegible] F. Maddever, Niagara Falls Gazett vice-president, John C. Calkins, Elmi Star-Gazette; secretary-treasurer, Bu rows Mathews, Buffalo Express. Execu tive committee: the officers and E. Allen, Jamestown Post; and Roy Kates, Rochester Times-Union.

New Pittsburgh M. E.

Reed Byron, city editor, has be promoted to managing editor of t Pittsburgh Gazette Times, succeeding C. Carson. Robert Woods, assistant c editor, was made city editor.

De Weese to Address Publishers

Truman A. De Weese, vice-preside in charge of publicity of the Shredd Wheat Company, will address the New paper Publishers' division of the Adv tising Club of New York on Feb. Edwin S. Friendly, business manager the New York Sun, is division chairma

Give us Telephones

Following the war, when business and social life surged again into normal channels, there came the cry from homes, hospitals, schools, mills, offices—"Give us telephones." No one in the telephone company will ever forget those days.

Doctors, nurses and those who were sick had to be given telephones first. New buildings, delayed by war emergency, had to be constructed, switchboards built and installed, cables made and laid, lines run and telephones attached.

The telephone shortage is never far away. If for a few years the telephone company was unable to build ahead, if it neglected to push into the markets for capital and materials for the future's need, there would be a recurrence of the dearth of telephones. No one could dread that eventuality so much as the 350,000 telephone workers.

Bell System engineers measure and forecast the growth of communities; cables, conduits, switchboards and buildings are planned and developed years ahead of the need, that facilities may be provided in advance of telephone want. Population or business requirement added to a community must find the telephone ready, waiting.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES
BELL SYSTEM
One Policy, One System, Universal Service

1893 SERVICE 1925
as visualized by
BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

NEWSPAPER REPresentation as we practice it consists of intelligent, honest selling of markets and media; serving advertisers in every possible way; billing and collecting for advertising and sending a publisher a check for all business sent him.

It is a time saving and money saving system for publishers.

Always willing to talk representation to the right kind of newspapers.

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.
Advertising Representatives of Newspapers
2 W. 45th St. New York — 900 Mallers Bldg. Chicago
401 Van Nuys Bldg. Los Angeles

CAMPAIGN LAUNCHED TO ELIMINATE HAMMER FROM ADVERTISING

National Vigilance Committee Seeks to Convince Business of Dollar-and-Cents Loss Entailed in Use of Disparaging Copy

By BYRON L. SHINN

Special Investigator, National Vigilance Committee

THE National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World has taken another step in its constructive service to advertising.

Essentially, the vigilance movement is more than a movement for Truth-in-Advertising. It is a movement to protect the advertiser's investment in advertising. Promoting truthful advertising, the Committee believes, is one way to protect that investment.

But truthful advertising is only one way. Another, equally important—is to protect the good name of advertising.

Disparaging copy—the use of the hammer in advertising—often does more than actually deceptive copy to jeopardize public confidence in advertising. Deceptive and exaggerated copy undermines public confidence gradually. The effects of disparaging copy are more immediate.

The maker of pancake flour, for example, who brands the floor of a competitor as indigestible and unwholesome, reflects upon all pancake flour. He creates doubt as to his own product.

Pancakes are luscious things, but by no means are they necessary to human welfare. If the public is informed that pancake flour is indigestible, will they not, rather than run the risk of eating indigestible food, try to do without them entirely?

Are there not a thousand and one other products which the public is able to do without if disparaging copy breaks through and tears down confidence such articles have heretofore enjoyed.

The National Vigilance Committee took the initiative against disparaging copy because action was urgent. Before launching its campaign, however, to be sure that its plan reflected the attitude of organized advertising, it sought the opinion of a number of advertisers and advertising agencies.

These individuals and concerns are unanimous in their approval. They recognize that, in the face of growing competition in many lines, there is a real need for action against the use of disparaging copy, and they recognize too, that the National Vigilance Committee and Better Business Bureaus are the organizations best equipped to handle it.

An analysis of the effect of disparaging copy on the investment of American business in advertising was the first step taken by the Committee in this movement. This analysis is now being sent to individual advertisers, agencies, publishers, Chambers of Commerce and Better Business Bureaus throughout the country.

Before discussing it, however, it may be of interest to point out why the campaign was necessary.

In the first place, it will be noted that disparaging copy has shown a tendency to increase as competition has increased. During the '90's, for example, disparaging copy was perhaps more prevalent than at any other period in our commercial history. And this, you may remember, was the period when competition was keener than it had been for many years. Almost entirely it was a buyer's market. To get buyers for their products, some advertisers swung the advertising hammer indiscriminately. They fought each other tooth and nail. Sometimes they did not fight each other only in their copy.

And this disparaging practice was more than a result of the period of depression which existed at that time, it was also a contributing cause.

Contrast the conditions of this period with those which prevailed in America during the World War. Here was a seller's market. Demand leaped far ahead of supply, prices soared. There was little disparaging copy then.

We are now at the time, however, when the buyer's market is coming back. Competition is again becoming keener. The National Vigilance Committee has notice too that disparaging advertising is again becoming prevalent.

Will it become prevalent? Will the confidence of the public in business daily be diminished at the time when advertisers should unite to see that it be increased?

Or shall we not profit by the lessons of thirty years ago and prevent the use of disparaging copy endangering the confidence which advertising for so many years has consistently built up in American business?

That is the question the National Vigilance Committee is asking the American advertiser. Upon its answer will depend to a great extent the development of advertising in America.

Here is the way the Committee, in its analysis, describes disparaging advertising and the remedy for it:

"Every 'knock' is an invitation to competitors to strike back. One advertiser or his agent forgets that the way to sell more merchandise is to talk about his own goods and not about others.

"His statement is not wholly untrue, it is usually only exaggerated. But a competitor is provoked. He edits copy just a little bit stronger. Then competitor No. 3 takes a hand in the game and he, being a man of plain speech, uses regular fighting language. . . .

"The fundamental purpose of advertising is forgotten and its effect is lost. The situation has degenerated into a petty, personal squabble. . . . The public is led to believe that no product in the entire industry deserves its consideration.

"A graphic illustration occurred recently in a certain western city. A local dealer, in an attempt to increase the demand for gas stoves, began featuring in his advertising every oil stove accident reported to him by his clipping bureau. Once embarked on this policy, his copy soon read like this:

> 'DANGER—Two fires yesterday originated from oil stoves. Burn gas—play safe.'
>
> * * *
>
> 'Four fires originated from oil stoves during the past 72 hours. Overwhelmingly convincing evidence of the tremendous hazard the oil stove is in our community.'

"Suppose the local hardware dealer, with a big stock of oil stoves, had happened to be hot-headed, that he began looking up statistics, gathering notes from the Health Department and other sources, and that, about the second week after the gas stove advertising appeared, his counter campaign opened with the headlines:

> 'Whole family asphyxiated by gas.
> Play safe—use oil.'

"And later:

> 'Explosion of gas stove kills mother and injures infant. Use oil stoves and avoid the danger of death and disfigurement.'

"How would it all end? And who in the end would be most injured by it?

"The practice, however, is not confined to small communities nor to retail merchants. Some of the most harmful exhibits have been supplied by large national advertisers.

"Three manufacturers of a popular food product which was originated in Europe got on each other's nerves. Just why is not understandable for the market available to this particular item is still a long way from saturation.

"The first of these advertisers makes his product partly by hand processes and the other two entirely by machine processes. The former used his costly advertising space to tell the public that this product is not genuine unless made by the process which he employs.

"The second retaliated by using his still more costly copy to reflect upon the alleged unsanitary conditions under which any handmade product is prepared.

"The third warned the public against supposedly inferior materials used by others, naming coal-dust as one of the common impurities found in competitive goods.

"None prospered while the feud went on. All handicapped the wiser advertisers in the same industry who were employing their advertising space to point out to Americans the dietetic and economic advantages of this European food staple.

"Following the advent of the vacuum cleaner, the housewife was told by some advertisers that machines employing the brush feature destroyed her carpets and rugs, that their action was too harsh, and that the mechanism was too intricate to be successfully operated in the home.

"Coincidentally, the advertising of certain brush cleaners informed her that, without the brush, no machine could get the dirt, that all vacuum cleaners, because of their draught, broke the carpet fibres, and that only the brush machines would withstand wear and tear. . . .

"For years, baking powder advertisers have waged a bitter war concerning the wholesomeness of certain ingredients."

These examples do not by any means give the entire extent of disparaging advertising. Foodstuffs, building materials, radio and electrical appliances, farm implements and materials, beverages, automobiles and schools are among other fields which have been affected.

One could give literally scores of examples in each of these fields, but all of them together could not even hint at the loss in confidence and in sales which has been caused by such practices.

In America we have a word which has come to describe an ideal. It is "sportsmanship. Even if the dollars-and-cents investment of these advertisers and of every advertiser in public confidence were not jeopardized by this practice, it would still be opposed by every virile American organization because it is poor sportsmanship. It is "doing the baby act" in public print.

We speak of competition in business, and, in a sense, there is competition, but there is also a very great need for unity.

How long, do you suppose, could a business concern prosper, if its members spent all their time, not in expanding the company's sales and building up the company's good will, but in "knocking" each other?

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED

SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK.

Standard Gravure Corporation

LOUISVILLE, KY.

PROGRESS DEPENDS UPON THE MEN WHO BUILD WITH THAT END IN VIEW

Our COMPLETE checking service handles the entire detail work of supplying "checking proofs" to every agency and advertiser promptly—and —efficiently.

WE DO IT ALL

from a few complete copies.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26 St., NEW YORK

THE PASSAIC DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities

TRADING POPULATION 167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

MOST NEWS

The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Post

MORNING AND SUNDAY

October circulation (net paid)
Daily Circulation.....137,824
Sunday Circulation.....197,347

Member A. B. C.

"Prosperity Zone" is the name that has been given to the Dallas market-territory (of which The News is the accepted paper) because many authorities and most statistics agree in designating it as the most consistently prosperous single market in America today.

Write to The News for facts and data

THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS

Supreme in Texas

RETAILERS CONDEMN FALSE ADVERTISING

(Continued from page 3)

discussions," described as attempts to increase reader-confidence in newspapers, several other subjects of interest to newspaper publishers and advertising solicitors came up before the retail delegates.

Sheldon R. Coons, director of sales and advertising of Gimbel Brothers, New York, for instance, advised store owners not to establish radio broadcasting stations. Gimbel Brothers operate two stations, one in New York and another in Philadelphia.

"If newspaper publishers feel that radio is any competition as far as advertising is concerned, they are very much mistaken," he said.

"Take my advice, and do not establish a broadcasting station. You would probably let yourself in for a lot of disappointment.

"There are today some 87 large broadcasting stations and only 57 channels in the ether. If people don't stop asking for licenses, no one will be able to get on the air at all.

"We look upon broadcasting as a service; not as a means of exploitation. The direct benefits we receive are negligible.

"We decided that this new invention belongs in the hands of large public institutions, such as the newspapers and the department stores. That is why we established our stations.

"Radio does, we feel sure, build good will, but I don't know whether or not it sells more goods."

Advertising agencies were called upon for advice in the making of retail advertisements, and R. H. Powell of Barton, Durstine & Osborn, New York, suggested that department stores use what he termed a "journalistic presentation" in their advertising copy.

"Key your newspaper advertising layouts to the newspaper make-ups in which they are to appear," he told them.

Mr. Powell is the writer of the Macy editorial advertisements, which were recently awarded the Harvard prize for the best example of retail advertisements appearing in 1924.

He told of an interesting and recent change in Macy's advertising policy. It had long been the custom of this New York store to slug all its newspaper copy with the full name R. H. Macy & Co., Inc.

Then Arthur Brisbane one day asked the question:

"Why not call yourself what the people call you?"

Since that time the store's copy has simply been slugged "Macy's."

F. McL. Radford, merchandise manager of the Bon Marche, Seattle, Wash., deplored the over-stressing of out-of-season sales.

"Why not," he suggested, "to cut out waste, use more space in the newspapers when people want to buy goods such as overcoats and furs, instead of holding out of season sales?"

Hearst Account in 300 Dailies

Boswell-Frankel Advertising Service, 49 West 45th street, New York, announce they are now compiling a list to include more than 300 newspapers in which they will release advertising totalling more than $90,000 on the consolidation of the Hearst's International and Cosmopolitan magazines, which merge with the issue of March, 1925.

U. S. Advises on Milk Advertising

"Hints on Milk Advertising" can be obtained from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Ad Managers to Meet Feb. 23

The advertising managers of the New York State Dailies will hold a meeting at Geneva, N. Y., Feb. 23 and 24. P. B. Oakley of the Geneva Times is in charge of the meeting. Many interesting subjects are to be discussed.

NEWS OF PETTY CRIMES BARRED BY DAILY

It's "Small Town Stuff" and Injures Offender Out of Proportion to the Crime, Springfield Union Declares

News of petty crimes will be omitted from the columns of the Springfield (Mass.) Union hereafter, according to an editorial announcement appearing in that newspaper Feb. 5.

In deciding upon this policy, the Union declared it was actuated by a desire to prevent injury to the transgressors through publicity disproportionate to the offense.

The complete editorial announcement of the Union's decision follows:

"In pursuance to its policy to publish a newspaper that meets the requirements of discriminating readers, the Union hereafter will omit from its columns accounts of petty crimes and misdemeanors.

"In deciding on this course, the Union is actuated by a desire to prevent, so far as possible, injury being done to transgressors through publicity that may be disproportionate to the nature of their offenses.

"Such news is of so little consequence as to be hardly worth the space it occupies. It directly and adversely affects the person or persons involved and his or their family connections, but is neither of special interest nor of value to the great mass of readers. It appeals primarily to a morbid curiosity that this newspaper feels under no obligation to gratify. It is small town stuff. Springfield has grown beyond it.

"Circumstances alter cases, and it is quite impossible to lay down a hard and fast rule; but arrests for causes that do not particularly concern the public will not hereafter be deemed printable news by the Union. So also with Police Court cases: Only such will be reported as seem from a full knowledge of the facts to justify publicity.

"To deal charitably with human frailties, to keep out of print those peccadillos of no real moment to anybody, will not make the Union a less interesting newspaper, and certainly will not lessen its value to the community.

"This is not to be interpreted as meaning that news of crime will disappear from our columns. To adopt that policy would be to give an entirely wrong picture of life as it is. The kind of journalism that suppresses all deplorable happenings is as unsound as that which magnifies them. Crime is news; it reflects the state of society; it concerns law-making and legal procedure; it suggests sociological remedies; it furnishes clergymen a theme for the expounding of spiritual truths. To tell about it, but not to glorify it, is both necessary and desirable. If to some persons it may seem that there is too much news of crime in the press, it is because there is too much crime in our everyday life.

"But the recital of constantly occurring minor misdeeds, which conveys no lesson and which may cause much needless anguish to the innocent, falls in a different category entirely. For some time the Union has been devoting less and less attention to such happenings. So it is, perhaps, no radical departure to cut them out entirely.

"The established policy of this newspaper not to bring into criminal cases the family connections of the offender has been, we think, a policy favorably regarded by the great mass of our readers. The extension of this policy in the manner here outlined seems to us a logical development.

"Those who have a fondness for the sensational and the salacious, and who find mental pabulum in the ordinary run of police news, will have to look elsewhere than to the Union to satisfy their cravings."

Completion of the cable between Italy and America was announced in Rome, Feb. 10.

REPORTER-HERO OF SAND CAVE TRAGEDY

WILLIAM BURKE MILLER, 21-year-old reporter for the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, is here shown in the outfit in which he descended into San Cave to succor Floyd Collins, trapped i a narrow passage by a huge boulder. Mi ler made several trips into the tortuou passageway, 80 feet underground, bring ing food to the imprisoned man, and ol taining an exclusive interview. Mill was graduated from high school in 192 and joined the Courier-Journal sta shortly after.

ANONYMOUS CRITICS SAFE

Wisconsin Bill Fining Anonymous Newspaper Letter Writers Withdrawn

Anonymous contributors to the Wi consin press may continue to hide the identities behind pen names in cons quence of the withdrawal of a bill b Senator M. F. White in the Wiscons state senate.

The bill would have made it an o fense, punishable by $50 fine, for ar newspaper to publish a communicatio not signed by the full name of the writ which should criticize a person in publ office.

Miami Herald Men Promoted

N. S. Noble, who has been with t Miami (Fla.) Herald for five years, h been made Sunday editor. John Ferris, formerly of the Muncie (Ind Star, is at the head of the copy des It was recently incorrectly reported EDITOR & PUBLISHER that Noble a Ferris had joined the Miami Illustrat Daily Tab.

Competition to Church Attendance

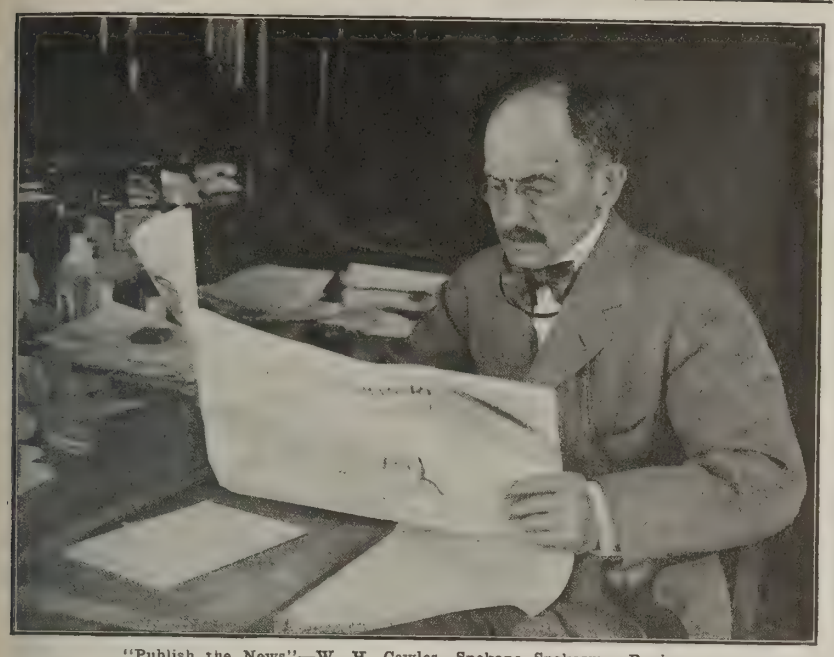
Indifference is probably the greatest competitor to church attendance. Sunday golf and automobiles enter as factors in the situation.

Indifference can be banished by proper newspaper advertising as has been proved in connection with indifference toward hundreds of other helpful things in life.

If the community can unite on advertising campaigns on behalf of all the churches in town the best results are usually obtained. Deal with business and professional men interested in church activities rather than with church themselves. Copy for such a campaign should be carefully prepared so as to sell the idea of church going, and at the same time carry to readers some message of Christianity.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A. A. C. W.



Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World

383 Madison Ave. New York City

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

"Publish the News"—W. H. Cowles, Spokane Spokesman-Review.

NOT so very many years ago, three young Chicago newspaper men went out to a little far northwestern town of 17,000 and started a daily newspaper.

I talked to one of the trio this week.—William H. Cowles, publisher of the Spokane Spokesman-Review. The town has grown to a city of 120,000; the newspaper to a circulation of 47,000, in just about two score years.

"And the story . . . . ," I began.

"It can be briefly epitomized," he interrupted. "I was only 25, when I decided to make the venture. My two Chicago friends had gone out west before me and had started the Spokane Spokesman.

"I had graduated from Yale Law School and had spent two years as reporter on the Chicago Tribune.

"Somehow, I was wise enough to seek advice, and fortunate enough to be able to call upon Joseph Medill, then the Tribune's head.

" 'The best and only advice I can give you,' he said, 'is—publish the news.' "

The same three words sum up most successful newspaper histories. But there is drama in between.

The two newspaper men who had gone to Spokane ahead of Mr. Cowles to establish the Spokesman were the late Joseph French Johnson, who at the time of his death a short time ago was president of the Alexander Hamilton Institute, and J. Howard Watson, who had been on the Chicago Daily News. Before Mr. Johnson had decided upon becoming a publisher, he had been assistant to Frank Vanderlip, who, in those days, was financial editor of the Chicago Tribune.

Hardly had the Spokesman been started, when the three young publishers were forced to go through the nightmare panic of 1893, when a dollar loomed as big as a house. Mr. Cowles had put all his money into the newspaper and lost it all. The daily was losing money all the time. But Mr. Cowles had established credit, he bought out his two partners and in 1894 purchased the Spokane Review. Where two struggling newspapers seemed hopeless failures, the consolidated paper left red for black and has paid its way successfully since.

"Joe Medill's advice, I think," said Mr. Cowles, "was largely responsible. There is no better method of promoting a newspaper than to make it valuable to its subscribers. By publishing the news, and by campaigning actively and continuously for some worth-while and genuine object, a publisher retains the confidence of his readers, and keeps their respect for what he prints.

"There is, I am sorry to admit, a tendency among publishers to fail to realize the value of real ability in the news department. Many seem to have no measuring stick for the news men, while they throw up their hands in awe and pay big money to the go-getters who bring in business.

"One should, however, pay for the best ability on the news side, quite as willingly as on the business side. Wide-awake, news intelligence is the backbone of a newspaper."

Mr. Cowles does not believe with some publishers that a newspaper's sole function is to chronicle the news. The Spokesman-Review has been in some active campaign every year of its existence.

"By becoming a newspaper publisher," he said, "a man doesn't lose his obligations as a citizen. The greater his influence, the greater his obligations become."

Sometimes we get mad and think all we get for our taxes are the receipts.—Columbia Record.

Daily Sponsors Oratorical Contest

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is sponsoring its second "National Oratorical Contest on the Constitution." Winners are to meet other newspaper representatives in the Mid-West zone for the privilege of representing the Middle West in the final contest in Washington, D. C., May 8.

Journalist Sees Hope for Russia

"What we are witnessing in this country is not the death of a nation, but the birth throes of a great nation," F. A. Mackenzie, of the Chicago Daily News, said of Russia in an address before the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents in New York last week.

Former Times Man Starts Weekly

The Bronxville (N. Y.) Press, weekly, will appear Feb. 20, with Capt. C. E. Lovejoy, recently publicity director of the Plattsburg training camp, as publisher. Before entering the army, Capt. Lovejoy spent five years on the editorial staff of the New York Times.

Newspapers Boost Des Moines

To "demonstrate that Des Moines is one of the important railroad, agricultural, and business centers of the Middle West," the Des Moines Register and Tribune-News, this week entertained 150 railroad executives as their guests.

Macloon Returns from Bermuda

Charles R. Macloon, circulation promotion manager of the New York American, with Mrs. Macloon, returned this week from a two weeks' vacation in Bermuda, taken, he says, "to escape cross word puzzles."

Adds Magazine Section

The Hoboken (N. J.) Jersey Observer last week added a magazine section of eight regular-size pages and a 4-page colored comic section to its Saturday issue.

Chinese Student Wins Prize

Thoma M. H. Chao, Chinese student in the School of Journalism of the Universtiy of Missouri, has won the annual prize of $50 offered for 1925 by J. B. Powell, publisher of the Far East Review of Shanghai, China, for the best editorial on an assigned topic, "America's Policy Toward China Now."

Advertisers Plan Chicago Meet

Discussion of distribution costs will feature the next scheduled meeting of the Association of National Advertisers, tentatively set for May 6, 7, 8, in Chicago, R. K. Leavitt, executive secretary, announced this week. Nine new applications for membership were received by the association during January, he said.

Reverts to Weekly Publication

On Feb. 1 the Marion (Ill.) Leader was changed from a semi-weekly to a weekly. It is the weekly edition of the Marion Daily Republican.

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.
Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.
IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY
REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely By
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

The most successful of all newspaper consolidations.
THE NEW YORK HERALD
New York Tribune

A Security Market
with complete newspaper financial service.
Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.
The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.
A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1924, *124,468 total net paid.
Cover the Buffalo Market with the
BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
*Present average circulation 126,763
Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"
The World.
MORNING EDITION
The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.
The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Always Reliable
The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia
and GROWING!

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

SUNDAY specials this week have been filled with stories about Lincoln. None of these stories, however, will have the same interest for newspaper men as that found in the pamphlet "Lincoln and the Newspapers," by Charles T. White, political editor of the New York Herald Tribune.

On the theory that everything is news until it is printed it will be news to many editors that Lincoln wrote political editorials for the Sangamon Journal. In his own local law office he received regularly the New York Tribune, Louisville Journal, Garrison's Liberator, the Chicago Press, Chicago Tribune, and the National Era of Washington. On the other political side, so Mr. White says, Lincoln took the Charleston Mercury and the Richmond Enquirer. Certainly there can be no question that Lincoln was a great newspaper reader when he was first breaking into the political game.

The pamphlet contains numerous quotations to show the bitter press partisanship of the period. For example the Chicago Times printed this item:

> Lincoln went yesterday to Monticello in Douglas' train. Poor, desperate creature, he wants an audience. Poor, unhappy mortal, the people won't turn out to hear him, and he must do something, even if that something is mean, sneaking and disreputable.

Another illustration in the same newspaper is the following:

> Mr. Lincoln then gradually lengthened out his long, lank proportions until he stood upon his feet, and with a desperate attempt at looking pleasant said that he would not take advantage of Judge Douglas' crowd, but would address "sich" as liked to hear him in the evening at the Court House. Having made this announcement in a tone and with an air of a perfect Uriah Heep, pleading his humility, and asking for forgiveness of Heaven for his enemies, he stood washing his hands with invisible soap in imperceptible water, until his friends, seeing that his mind was wandering, took him in charge and bundled him off the grounds.

Of the latter quotation Mr. White remarks that it was a caricature not without artistic merit.

Positive proof is given that Lincoln wanted to see that he was quoted correctly in the press. His famous Cooper Institute address was given on Saturday evening: William Cullen Bryant, then editor of the New York Evening Post, presided. What happened later is thus described by Mr. White:

> On Sunday night he went to the New York Tribune office, just across City Hall Park from the Astor House, with the manuscript of his speech. He waited in the composing room, chatting with the employes, for the proof slips, and after he had finished reading the proofs the original manuscript was dropped into the waste paper basket.

If Amos J. Cummings, then foreman of the composing room of the New York Tribune and later managing editor of the New York Evening Sun, had only saved that manuscript he could have sold it before he died for at least $25,000.

Of the attitude of the British press Mr. White gives several illustrations. I have space only for these words from the London Morning Herald of Nov. 23, 1864:

> Abraham Lincoln, the mouther of stump speeches, the buffoon of the battlefield, the swindler of the American constituencies and the Judas of his country.

But let us turn from that picric picture of Lincoln given in a London newspaper to the concluding words of Mr. White:

> Lincoln is known to all enlightened people. His biography is available in many foreign languages. His portrait adorns the walls of the palace, the cottage of the manual laborer, and even the humble dwelling of the Russian peasant. The greatest Russian wrote that he was the incarnation of Jesus. Statues and granite are dedicated to his enduring fame. Best of all, he lives in the heart of humanity.

* * *

COMPETITION for this department—for this week at least—will be found in The Nation for Feb. 11. In that issue its editor, Oswald Garrison Villard, under the caption "The State of Journalism" reviews the following books: "The Newspaper and Authority" by Lucy Maynard Salmon (Oxford University Press), "The Ethics of Journalism" by Nelson Antrim Crawford (Alfred A. Knopf), "Memoirs of an Editor" by Edward P. Mitchell (Charles Scribner's Sons), "Forty Years in Newspaperdom" by Milton A. McRae (Brentano's), "Joseph Pulitzer: His Life and Letters" by Don C. Seitz (Simon and Schuster), "The Yiddish Press: an Americanizing Agency" by Mordecai Soltes (Columbia University: Teachers College), "Getting the News" by William S. Maulsby (Harcourt, Brace & Co.), and "Some Magazines and Magazine Makers" by John E. Drewry (The Stratford Company, Boston).

A sample of Mr. Villard's style will be found in his review of the volume mentioned last in the list:

> We shall be for a law for the suppression of all schools of journalism if more books like Professor Drewry's discussion of magazines and their editors come out of them. He belongs to the University of Georgia's school and he has produced pure trash of no value to anybody. An intending student of journalism who could not turn out a more worth-while book ought to be debarred from further instruction.

Yet Mr. Villard has some very nice things to say about "The Ethics of Journalism" by Professor Crawford, who heads the Department of Journalism at Kansas State Agricultural College. Part of this volume, by the way, originally appeared in The Nation.

All of these volumes, unless I am greatly mistaken, have been reviewed in "Our Own World of Letters."

* * *

ALL who have anything to do with the classified advertising department of a newspaper will appreciate the practical tips given in "How to Write Want Ads for Results" by Ralph Waldo Elden and Charles Owen Chatterton (300 Oregonian Building, Portland, Ore.). This booklet has the advantage of being written, not from the newspaper point of view, but from that of the advertiser seeking results from the classified columns.

Some of the pages of this booklet are as interesting as fiction. Pages 29-30 will do by way of illustration. These pages tell how two farms were sold by a collie dog. The psychology involved is that the owner, willing to leave his dog, is probably leaving everything else that goes with the farm.

Throughout the booklet picturesque phrasing is emphasized. The authors, for example, ask the reader to imagine the following line written into the classified ad of a house for sale, "A live oak 100 years old stands by the front gate."

The theme that is dramatized again and again is that announcements are not advertisements.

* * *

THE official publication of The Oregon State Editorial Association, Oregon Exchanges, prints in its current issue a directory of Oregon press: dailies, weeklies and other periodicals.

* * *

PROFESSOR HENRY FAIRFIELD OSBORN, president of the American Museum of Natural History, has this to say about the American press in his article "Evolution in Daily Living" in The Forum for February:

> It may interest my readers to know that I invariably study the daily press from the standpoint of human evolution; the daily press and the movies are by far the most potent influence upon conduct in America at the present time. The editorial influence of the press is almost uniformly good,—in fact, it could not be better. The news column influence of the press is partly good and partly bad; publicity tends on the whole to elevate morals. The advertising pages of the press are divided in their influence; health advertisements are to the good; feminine fashion advertisements are mostly to the bad. The sum of press influence is morally good but intellectually bad, because it creates what I call the jazz mind and a disproportionate sense of relative values.

In connection with this paragraph Prof. Osborn prints a quantity survey of the amount of space devoted by the New York World, the New York Times, and the New York American during the month of February, 1924, to the following subjects:

> Fashion, athletics, political misconduct, politics, national and local (i. e. government), stage and movies, private misconduct (crime etc.), foreign politics, education, food and health, religion.

Professor Osborn concludes his comment about the newspapers with the following:

> It is a question whether the fine influence of the conduct of the editorial writer is not more than offset by the man who arranges the news and advertising columns.

* * *

STUART P. SHERMAN, literary editor of the New York Herald Tribune, is the author of "Points of View" (Charles Scribner's Sons). Briefly, this volume is a collection of essays discussing the standards, literary and social, found today in American life. One of the best essays in the volume is that entitled "American Life."

With apologies to the preacher, the first I say to which I would like to invite special attention is the one entitled "In Apology for Essayists of the Present." What these press essayists accomplish is well set forth by Mr. Sherman in the concluding paragraph:

> They tend to make the stranger at home in the world, and the lonely and insignificant person in town or country, who talks with no one morning, noon or night, feel yet, as he opens his paper, that he is not the only one of his kind, but that he is neighbored on all sides by his kindred and that in farmhouse and in mansion and White House there are millions of other strangers, essentially as lonely and insignificant as he. This is, perhaps, as near a homelike feeling as a man can expect to get in this world.

Explosion Injures 8 in Chicago

The engraving plant of the Chicago Evening American and the Chicago Herald and Examiner was crippled temporarily Feb. 12, and eight employes slightly injured when a can of chemicals in the engraving room on the fourth floor of the Hearst Building exploded. Fire followed the explosion, but was confined to the engraving room and quickly extinguished by the fire department. Eight but one of the injured were able to resume work.

Our Features:

Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

The only way a tree can grow is from the ground up

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

IRVING FISHER NOTED ECONOMIST

has written a 2,000 word article on "How the Unstable Dollar Hurts the Laboring Man." This article will be used by such papers as Chicago News, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Detroit News and Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Wire for price

Associated Editors, Inc.
440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

1925 will be a Prosperous Year

AN immediate gain of thousands of NEW prepaid subscribers is the best possible way to start the New Year. Our campaigns offer the one SURE way to obtain this circulation increase, as is proven by over twenty years of unquestioned supremacy and the number of leading metropolitan dailies who use and endorse our services.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.

Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

SHUN BLIND PARTISANSHIP

"BE partisan—but not a bigot. Your party, or the men you boost into office, may make mistakes or worse. Don't try to defend the indefensible. The righteous wrath of the press is the safeguard of the people."—Alvah Eastman, Editor St. Cloud (Minn.) Journal-Press.

* * *

TIMBER BANKRUPTCY THREATENS

"TIMBER bankruptcy threatens the United States within 40 years at the present rate of forest destruction. In the train of a lumber famine would follow serious agricultural and industrial disasters. Trees are more than mere lumber. They are the guardians of the nation's prosperity. They conserve the soil. They protect the public health. They preserve the water supply of great cities. When the forests go, the desert rushes in."—Congressman Martin L. Davey of Ohio, Before Ohio Society of New York.

* * *

PUBLICITY AND PUBLIC RELATIONS

'BEWARE the 'publicity specialist' in public relations work. Shun all that savors of press-agenting, propaganda, or seeking free space puffery nstead of honestly paid-for advertising. That sort of thing serves no purpose n our business except to get 'easy money' for the 'publicity specialist.' "—B. J. Mullaney, Vice-president Peoples Gas Light & Coke Company, Chicago, at American Gas Association Conference, San Francisco.

* * *

"TO BUILD A PERMANENT BUSINESS—ADVERTISE"

'ONE of the first policies we adopted when we opened our doors was that of consistent advertising. We have been advertising in the local papers hree times a week, rain or shine, winter or summer. We find that it brings esults. Second to our own advertising we find that tying up with national dvertising pays. Advertise your store and keep in line with national advertising campaigns, if you really wish to build a permanent business."—Joseph R. Sutter, head of the Sutter-Waldhoff drug stores chain, Burlington, Ia., before owa Pharmaceutical Association.

* * *

COMMUNITY ADVERTISING INCREASING

'PEOPLE are becoming community-wise, and are thinking in terms of local-self-pride. Advertising men cannot overlook this fact. Last year more han $3,000,000 was spent for community advertising, publicity and convention work. Fully $500,000 of this sum came from cities and states that are now uthorizing such appropriations by law. Florida, alone, spent nearly $400,000 or 1924 through the mill tax plan which has been adopted in that state."—Charles F. Hatfield, Community Advertising Department, A. A. C. W.

* * *

PATENT MEDICINE ADVERTISING

'AN interesting disclosure relative to the character of patent medicine advertising was made in a publisher's trial in New York the other day. Among the exhibits was a full page advertisement containing a 'testimonial' rom Jack Dempsey telling how the product advertised had helped him lick Willard. It was brought out in the testimony, however, that Dempsey hadn't sed the tonic and had been paid $10,000 for the use of his name. It is for ie purpose of protecting its readers from being taken in by fake claims of this haracter that the World-Herald bars patent medicine advertising from its olumns."—Editorial, Omaha World-Herald.

* * *

THE WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

'THE weekly newspaper, unlike the metropolitan daily, has a peculiar place in the home. It becomes a part of the family, because its news stories oncern the activities of the home town folks, and what deeper interest could e developed than among those with whom we live and move. The community the ante-chamber of the home, and the weekly newspaper the avenue that ads from one to the other. My message is this: Give to your newspaper -operation. Results will come back to you in a community asset—a wide-wake, forceful and influential newspaper, and a power in influence for good your community."—T. C. Stone, Editor, Sun Prairie (Wis.) Countryman, Radio Speech, Station WHA, University of Wisconsin.

* * *

ADVERTISING AS A PROFESSION

'ADVERTISING is often spoken of as a profession. I take issue with this. A prominent advertising man once asked if it had become a disace to be a good business man. Before advertising can become a profession here would have to be a sorting out of its principles and laws, specific etermination of its efficient application and certainly a narrowing down of the ocations allied with it. But there can be no denying that it can be professional i its practice. Indeed, it is rapidly becoming professional, and possibly more han any other unprofessional group of vocations its relationships require prossional and intimate treatment."—Don E. Gilman, San Francisco Manager, Christian Science Monitor.

ILLINOIS

A STATE OF QUALITY and QUANTITY

Illinois has always held an enviable position well near the top in the various industries in which she has been engaged. Although the number of her farms might mark her as an agricultural state her industrial interests far exceed the agricultural ones.

Among all states Illinois ranks as follows:

SECOND, in Livestock Products
THIRD, in Manufacturing Products
THIRD, in Farm Crop Values
THIRD, in Population
THIRD, in Wealth
FIFTH, in Mineral Products

A state so richly endowed in quantity of products represents corresponding quantity of purchasing power. Here is found an invincible alliance of people, money, transportation facilities, merchandising centers and advertising media—in short, all the requisites of a satisfactory and productive advertising campaign.

The quality of Illinois newspapers is recognized not only throughout the state, but throughout all states. Here efficient journalism is so closely linked with effective advertising that these truthful and influential newspapers have become a fixture in every home.

		Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
*Aurora Beacon-News	(E)	17,408	.06	.06
*Chicago Herald & Examiner	(M)	348,005	.55	.55
*Chicago Herald & Examiner	(S)	1,018,917	1.10	1.10
Chicago Daily Journal	(E)	120,449	.26	.24
*La Salle Tribune	(E)	3,230	.025	.025
*Moline Dispatch	(E)	10,680	.045	.045
*Monmouth Daily Review Atlas	(E)	5,314	.035	.035
*Peoria Star	(E) 29,197..(S)	22,236	.075	.06
*Rock Island Argus	(E)	10,605	.045	.045
*Sterling Gazette	(E)	5,734	.04	.04

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

PUBLISHERS URGED TO FORM BUREAU FOR MECHANICAL RESEARCH

Charles F. Hart, New York Times Superintendent, Deplores Lack of Standardization in Mechanical Departments, With Resulting Money Loss and Inefficiency

ORGANIZATION by American publishers of a centralized bureau for the "formulation of mechanical standards and research" was suggested late last week by Charles F. Hart, mechanical superintendent of the New York Times, addressing the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in New York on "Printing a Newspaper."

CHARLES F. HART

Mr. Hart has been connected with the Times since 1914. Prior to that date he was in charge of the mechanical work of the Northcliffe newspapers in England for seven years.

"In spite of the magnitude and growth of the newspaper industry throughout the United States in the past 25 years, there is today no centralized point for the formulation of mechanical standards and research for the various materials used in the printing business," Mr. Hart declared.

"The publishers are firmly organized on all business essentials of the paper and also have a well defined policy of dealing collectively with organized labor, but apparently they seem to have overlooked the mechanical departments.

"These departments, however, represent, in most cases, more than half of their total expenses every year. Yet no serious thought has ever been given to establishment of a department of engineering and research."

"In most cases, consequently," he continued, "the printing press builders are compelled to build presses to order, often to fit in impossible corners in a basement.

"The manufacturers are forced to carry very many spare parts for such nondescript press machinery, and publishers often suffer serious delay because these parts are not always quickly available. Then frequently considerable difficulty is experienced making them fit, when they do arrive.

"In recent years, the press builders have started a real effort to manufacture presses instead of building them. No standards, however, are now used for metals, rollers, press blankets and many other accessories necessary in the printing industry.

"The newspapers, on their side, continue to be neglectful from a true engineering standpoint. Each newspaper sets its own standards and in many cases several standards will be found in one plant. Of necessity, this is inefficient.

"By establishing a Bureau of Research and Standardization, the publishers could develop a system whereby a great saving of time and money could be effected. Such an organization, conducted by a qualified engineer, would, I am sure, account for a decided improvement."

Mr. Hart also contrasted the difference between magazine and newspaper printing.

"In the magazine field," he said, "sufficient time is given to make the plates ready and, when the press produces satisfactorily, they are started. This procedure may consume eight, ten or fifteen hours, after the last plate is received.

"Of course such care is not practical in newspaper printing. Ninety-five per cent of the real newspaper printing must be done before the plate leaves the stereotype room. The pressmens' opportunity to improve the printing is limited to the setting of the impression, rollers, and ink supply, and naturally a necessary amount of cleanliness. Regardless of how skillful a pressman might be the newspaper printing press does not lend itself to make-ready, and many a press-room has been damned for bad printing, when the real fault lay far back in the cycle of manufacture. By the same token, the stereotypers are sometimes damned for bad plates, when the material furnished him was not of sufficient accuracy and quality to enable a good plate to be made."

Next Mr. Hart discussed the organization of newspaper mechanical departments, declaring them to be the "most sensitive" of any industry.

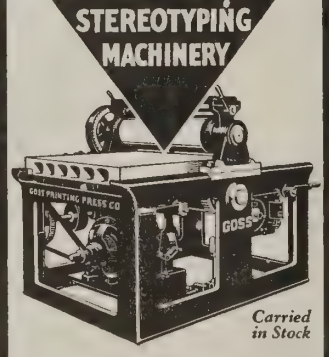
"To keep a large mechanical department working to a high point of efficiency," he said, "it is most necessary to keep all the departments thoroughly believing in each other. Harmony indeed is an absolute essential.

"It is not possible for the mechanical head of a large newspaper organization to know all the intricate details of the various departments; but at least should try to learn more about the tails of all the departments than other man in the organization."

Mr. Hart told the engineers that mechanical departments of the New Y Times had 1,372 employes. The t yearly payroll of this one newspa division, he said, was more t $2,500,000. Paper costs $6,500,000 year; ink $187,000; and the replacem value of the machinery more t $3,500,000. A saving of one per c in paper waste meant $62,433 a year, declared.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

We can increase your business—you want it increased.



You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE

145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City

Established a Quarter of a Century

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY

Carried in Stock

Some outstanding and exclusive features of The Goss Combination Wet and Dry Matrix Roller: Patented stretching roller produces dry mats without a wrinkle. Both ends of cylinder are set at same time. Heavy cast-iron cylinders with forged steel shafts. Extra heavy bed—no racks—large enough to run chase with columns crosswise. Rolls wet mats in 11¼ seconds; dry mats in 22½ seconds. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

DUPLEX PRESSES

"OUR CUSTOMERS WRITE OUR ADS"

DUPLEX TUBULAR

"In daily service the Duplex Tubular has met the prime elements, economy, quality, flexibility, production and dependability, in a degree impossible with any other design of rotary newspaper press."

Chicago Journal of Commerce
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

Printers' Outfitters

Printing Plants and business bought and American Typefounders' products, print and bookbinders' machinery of every desc tion. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beek St., New York City.

N. Y. DAILY NEWS

HALF-TONES

Best in the World

Made by

POWERS

NEW PROCESS

MODERNIZE

your

COMPOSING ROOM

with

HAMILTON EQUIPMENT

Made in both wood and steel.

Manufactured by

The Hamilton Mfg. Co.

Two Rivers, Wis.

For sale by all prominent Type Founders and Dealers everywhere.

Don't "Pig" Metal It Wastes Money

Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace

Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis Minn.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.

USED BY THE

St. Louis Globe-Democrat
St. Louis, Mo.

We refer you to them for their opinion

CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO CHICAGO — QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

MAIN OFFICE Fisher Bldg. 343 S. Dearborn St. CHICAGO

EASTERN OFFICE Marbridge Bldg. Broadway at 34th St NEW YORK

Hoe Pedestal Saw Table

A compact, convenient and efficient Saw Table with a world-famous Hoe Saw that has the requisite number of Teeth properly set for cutting Wood or Metal. The Table is adjustable as to height to vary the protrusion of the saw while the Side Gauge can be set quickly through a Hand Wheel and a Lock Nut.

IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST

R. HOE & CO., INC. 504-520 Grand Street, New York Ci

7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

also at DUNELLEN, N. J.

7 Water Stree BOSTON, MAS

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

.8c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

5c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.

36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

dvertising Man.
ow employed. College man with 2 years' xperience with Pub. Rep. and well known rade Paper. Selling ability. Familiar all hases of advertising. Desire position offer- g excellent future to young married man. Vill consider position in any part of world. -730, Editor & Publisher.

dvertising Manager.
rganizer, producer; dependable references; ggressive and resourceful; make new friends, evelop old accounts; know that planned copy, mely ideas and honest selling will build per- anent lineage in any city; enthusiasm and sion strong asset; good address, forceful per- nality; reliable, will increase business, de- rable accounts. Make your proposition if ou need better manager and more business. entral West or East; city 75,000 or more. an be ready about March 1, strict confidence. -678, Editor & Publisher.

dvertising Solicitor.
ne that can build desirable display anywhere. xperienced, resourceful. Reliable, strong per- nality. Give me the hard accounts to de- lop. I will discover new accounts and make w friends for your paper. Have good eyes d nose for business. Gain favor through py and service. Want to change for the ly logical reason you could use for em- oying me. Salary or commission. Permanent hen I deliver the business. City 100,000 up. entral West or East preferred. Dependable ferences. Healthy, energtic. Would like to ar from you. Address C-679, Editor & Pub- her.

rtist
esires change; experienced in all art including rtoons. Address C-702, care Editor & Pub- her.

usiness, Advertising Manager.
aving sold paper publisher wants offer as siness, advertising manager. High class an. Excellent recommendations C-727, ditor & Publisher.

usiness, Advertising Manager.
ree times one paper wired: "Come back." hy? Because I produced. Another, in three ars, advanced my salary 5 times, unsolicited. hy? Because I produced. 10,000 circulation per paid me as advertising manager more an papers of 200,000 pay like position. Why? ecause I produced. Then I bought a paper. ow I've sold it. Publisher needing high ade business or advertising manager. Sal- y or salary and commission on increased siness. C-728, Editor & Publisher.

rtoonist.
xperienced, desires position. Three years' perience in chalk-plate reproduction, the onomical and quick process for daily car- ons and line drawings. Formerly with Ports- outh Daily Times. George Schmidt, 414 nton. Portsmouth, Ohio.

shier or Auditor.
oung married man thoroughly familiar with wspaper accounting and business office utine desires position with live organization ere opportunity for advancement is offered. ill furinsh reference from present and past ployers. Address Box C-707, Editor & blisher.

The men with the Best Positions to offer, read the CLASSIFIED
SECTION of
Editor & Publisher
in search of the Best Men for the positions

Situations Wanted

Circulation Manager
of wide experience on metropolitan and small dailies. Economical builder, familiar with promotion work, records and all detail. Prefer city under one hundred thousand. A-1 references. Address Box C-713, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager
Now employed, wishes to make a change. Young man (33) with 19 years' experience in circulation department of present employers, would like to connect with a New England daily. Address Box C-725, care Editor & Publisher.

Desk or Reporting.
Energetic couple available immediately for one or two jobs. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Tisdel, Box 1884, Denver, Colorado.

Editor or Managing Editor.
College man with ten years' experience in getting out papers in Eastern cities would like to get back into daily newspaper work in East or Middle West. Now connected with national magazine. Fine record all the way through. Circulation builder, chock full of ideas. Writes editorials, can run column. Address Box C-726, Editor & Publisher.

A-1 Mechanical Superintendent.
Young, thoroughly practical man in all mechanical departments, with vision and planning in advance for any emergency in order to play safe always. Want connection where everyone else failed thus far to produce results. Will organize to get maximum production and also get organized labor to cooperate. Confidential treatment. Prefer corporation with several plants. Will consider interest. Address C-708, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent.
Executive of exceptional ability and personality would consider change from present position; 45 years old; experience gained with largest newspapers in the East; $150 weekly to start. For personal interview, address C-648, care Editor & Publisher.

News Executive.
Managing or city editor seeks permanent location small city evening daily, preferably in East or South. Ten years' experience all around editorial work, reporter to managing editor. Age 31, college education, good personality, hard worker, clean, honest, energetic, reliable. Thoroly acquainted with all problems of small daily. Proved ability, no bluff. Able organizer, executive, result-getter. Builder of good-will and real newspaper quality. C-729, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Advertising Salesman.
I have had twelve years' selling experience here in New York, three of the twelve with a large special representative concern. Now desire to capitalize my knowledge and experience and wide acquaintance with advertising and agency people in some one of the smaller centers of population of the nation. Best of references. Remuneration and contract can be arranged after I have proven my capacity and ability in a fair and reasonable "try out" effort. Address Box C-731, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaperman.
Six years' experience on New York and small city dailies as reporter and on desk. At present city editor. Age 27 and single. Box C-710, Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

Advertising Manager Wanted.
Grandest chance for permanent growing connection with large printer handling weeklies, magazines. College man, clean habits, initiativeness, with $5,000 considered; communications confidential. C-732, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Experienced on news stands and carrier promotion. Must know A. B. C. books. Evening daily, city 150,000. Circulation now 17,000; rapidly growing. Apply at once, stating full particulars, including salary to start. Staten Island (N. Y.) Advance.

Classified Manager Wanted
By Raleigh, N. C. Times. Salary to start $35. Must have plenty energy and some experience. Ample opportunity for advancement. State all particulars in letter and send photo to John A. Park, Publisher.

Newspaper Advertising Manager for Ohio Daily Newspaper in a town of 10,000. Must be able to sell. Address L. H. Burke, 1026 S. Walnut Street, Bucyrus, Ohio.

Night Desk Editor.
Evening newspaper, hours 2 P. M. to 11 P. M., must know how to handle afternoon and night local copy, telegraph, feature and general run of news desk. Salary $30.00 a week. The Bridgeport Times, Bridgeport, Conn.

Publicity Woman.
Religious organization desires sensible, experienced newspaper or publicity woman to assist busy publicity director; give full, detailed particulars in confidence, including salary. Address Box C-701, care Editor & Publisher.

FEATURES

A New Feature Service.
That is, in interest and cost to members, the best break since the world flight of the Army Air Service. Will prove to be a circulation getter. Will fit every paper, from the County Seat Weekly, to the Metropolitan Daily. Will last from three to five years and the interest on the last day will surpass the first. Uniform release dates; full protection for members. No cost to you until you have had service thirty days. You can terminate contract after sixty days, at your option. Service will start in Spring. Investigate now. Full particulars upon receipt of your query, on your own letterhead. Address Raiser, P. O. Box No. 75, Sta. "W" New York City.

ACCOUNTANTS

Auditors.
with many years' experience auditing metropolitan daily and evening papers, desire further connections on contract anywhere in the States or Canada. Modern newspaper accounting systems installed. Fees reasonable. C-610, Editor & Publisher.

Barrerre Heads Buckeye Press

G. W. Barrerre of Hillsboro, O., was elected president of the Buckeye Press Association, at the annual meeting held in Columbus last week simultaneously with the meeting of the Associated Ohio Dailies. Other officers elected were: vice-president—E. J. Beckman, Putman County Sentinel; H. C. Parsons, Geauga County Republican; Henry Carleton, Pomeroy Democrat; W. R. Conway, Cardington Independent; J. H. Townsley, Lebanon Western Star; secretary—E. Ben Yale, Waynesfield Chronicle; recording secretary—Karlh Bull, Cedarville Herald; treasurer—O. P. Gayman, Canal Winchester Times.

Red Tape Slashed in Miami

La Verne Collier, managing editor of the Miami Illustrated Daily Tab, was forced to slash railroad red tape recently, to obtain rotogravure materials for the Feb. 1 edition, when, through mistake, instead of arriving by steamer from New York, they were taken from the ship at Jacksonville and transferred to a freight train. When the consignment failed to arrive by boat, Collier, with several assistants, by an all night automobile trip, met the freight, which was 60 hours late, located the shipment, obtained its release, and in less than 20 hours had it back in Miami ready for the presses.

Fined for Misleading Advertising

Charles Fox, manager of the I. J. Fox Fur Company, 406 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, was fined $100 and costs last week in municipal court after being found guilty of having violated the advertising law. Fox was arrested on complaint of the Better Business Bureau of Cleveland. Dale Brown, bureau secretary, was the complainant.

Southern Publishers to Advertise

Newspapers from 14 Southern States are banding together, under the direction of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, in a concerted campaign to advertise the resources and industries of the South, the association announced.

Professor Scores "Yellow" Papers

Professor Hugh Grant, head of the department of journalism at Auburn, scored "yellow journalism" in an address at Opelika, Ala., Feb. 1, as responsible for much of the crime perpetrated in the United States.

New Dailies on A. P. Roster

Two newspapers were this week announced as new members of the Associated Press. They are: the Mexico City (Mexico) El Globo and the Raton (N. M.) Daily Republican.

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

ADVERTISING SERVICE DEPARTMENT MANAGER. Five years' service work and space selling, large newspapers; seven years assistant advertising manager, big publisher; successful record as advertising manager, two Middle Western dailies. Now advertising service manager, daily of over 100,000 circulation. His copy, designs and layouts used by well known syndicate. Age 35. Married. College. No. 2775-B.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

CANDY ADVERTISING PAYS IN BRITAIN

Mackintosh's Toffee Copy Established New Popularity for Old Form of Candy—Advertising Praised in Report

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT,
(London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

A generation or two ago before the present form of elaborate chocolate and other candies were invented, Great Britain's sweet tooth was satisfied with slab toffee, mostly home made or purchasable loose in very cheap form.

A few years ago one of the oldest manufacturers of this type of sweet conceived the idea of wrapping small squares of this old fashioned toffee, improving its standard, and marketing it for sale by weight and in tins. It was widely advertised and became an instantaneous success.

The late John Mackintosh, the founder, became an advertising enthusiast and successfully implanted the same ideas in his son, now Sir Harold Mackintosh.

The dimensions to which the business has grown are illustrated by the fact that in the year just ended the net profits of John Mackintosh & Sons, Ltd., were no less than $6,745,000, and that in what has been an admittedly difficult year.

It is interesting to note that a special tribute is paid to advertising in the company's report, Sir Harold Mackintosh stating that "Advertising, now an integral part of our business, has been well maintained, and, following our usual practice, advertising expenses for the year had been written off before arriving at the year's profits."

St. Louis Star Broadcasting

The St. Louis Star began broadcasting a regular series of radio programs recently from station WIL, located on the eighth floor of the Star Building. The station is being operated by the Star in conjunction with the Benson Radio Company. Broadcasting will be on a wavelength of 273 meters. Programs will be given on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays from 10 p. m. to midnight.

Would Prohibit Cigarette Advertising

Senator Shafer has introduced in the Ohio General Assembly a bill to prevent the manufacture, sale and advertising of cigarettes or cigarette paper.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER—$4 a year.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

BRING the new merchant, or the hesitating brother, into contact with experienced advertisers. A frequently used method of educating such a one is to organize a dinner to hear some successful advertiser speak on benefits gained from newspaper space. Tried by a Northwestern daily the other day, splendid results were achieved.

The man who proposes to do business in this day must not stand on ceremony or shrink from social responsibility.

* * *

THE Wenatchee (Wash.) Daily World recently concluded a unique circulation and promotion stunt in the form of a contest, offering boys and girls of grammar school age 25 cents for every name and address of the head of a family who was a non-subscriber or non-reader. The contest, well advertised in full page copy, lasted two weeks. At the end of that time, the World was able to announce with a big spread that there were "only 26 families in Wenatchee, a city of 10,000 population, who do not read the Wenatchee Daily World, according to the census contest just completed."—K. P. SEXTON, Wenatchee.

The San Diego (Cal.) Sun, as a supplement to its issue of Jan. 31, carried a "Cook Book," tabloid size, which contained recipes of all kinds, family menus, time tables for cooking meats, directions for setting the table, etc. Each page of the 12-page supplement had advertisements from coffee stores, ice cream and dairy product dealers, bakers, stove and appliance dealers, fish, poultry and fruit markets, etc.—ALLEN H. WRIGHT, San Diego, Cal.

Why not offer a special classified rate to local advertisers who will use a minimum amount of classified daily in addition to their display. Such a plan proved profitable for an Indiana newspaper which backed the idea with telephone solicitation.—B. A. T.

Solicit reliable automobile repair shops to contribute toward a page advertisement educating automobile owners to patronize them because they are responsible, expert, and thoroughly equipped, instead of the smaller, inefficient and unreliable shops or self-styled experts who work in an alley or under a shade tree.—H. H. HUDSON, Cleveland Press.

A newspaper man recently estimated that one picture was worth three columns of news. Columns are printed on motor fatalities, but why not try to reduce the increasing number by printing a diagram showing the points in your city and State where automobiles caused the most fatalities? A map indicating the most dangerous spots would be studied by your readers owning or operating motor cars and incidentally might help materially in reducing the number of deaths and crippled persons.—Herbert M. Hofford, Providence.

The Indianapolis News has a "Local Business News" column in which establishment of new businesses, sales of and removals of existing businesses, etc. are briefly recorded, the items being from 12 to 25 words in length as a rule. This solves the problem of holding this type of news down to meet space requirements and still give the real "news" value to the item.—A. N.

Many newspapers are interesting local merchants in boosting the Boy Scout movement by purchasing space in their advertising columns.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

SUGGESTIONS for Using Left-Overs," is a good woman's page feature now in the Dayton Herald. Small weekly prizes are offered for the best suggestions, recipes being judged by their wholesomeness, economy in ingredients, and by their completeness.—G. F. H., Dayton.

With "Ma" Ferguson in the headlines, some newspapers are working up entertaining features around the Bible text from Timothy 2:12: "But I suffer not a woman to teach or usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence." Local clergy may have something to say on this subject.—G. D. F., New York.

Vassar girls say they need smoking rooms. How about your local flappers? Or will they say?—S. N., Peoria.

Have you neglected your local prodigy lately? Every so often there's a new one. Who is the youngest pupil in the local high school? Find out. Interview and picture.—B. R., Omaha, Neb.

"To tip or not to tip?" was the subject of an interesting interview a Baltimore Sun reporter wrote recently with an unnamed hotel manager and hotel patron. He found out where the tips went, effect of Volstead act on custom, discussed the "service charge" plan, etc.—OSWALD PAYNE, Chicago, Ill.

A Louisville Courier-Journal reporter got a good story recently by getting the opinions of four representative members of the police force picked by the chief on what is the basic cause of automobile accidents in the city. The traffic officers called left hand turns the cause of accidents.—P. V., New York.

The Houston (Tex.) Chronicle is running a "Spelling Bee" in its columns daily, in the following manner: At the head of the column, the ten hardest words of each letter of the alphabet are printed, words that are frequently misspelled. At the foot of the column 20 words appear daily, some of which are spelled correctly and some incorrectly. Instructions are to "see how many members of your family get the entire list right." Readers are then asked to let the Spelling Bee Editor know about it.—N. S.

One of the best daily summary features we know of, is that of the Oklahoma Times, which is headed "The Tiny Times." It is not merely an index to the newspaper, but a complete paper in itself, starting with a "Sentence Sermon," an editorial to news, through all departments.—B. G., Omaha, Neb.

A feature story of unusual interest can be developed by making an inventory of your city and the value of its municipal possessions if they were put on the market. Few readers have ever stopped to consider what a city would bring if it was put up at auction. Description of its property with estimated value give it length for a Sunday page.—JAMES H. GUILFOYLE, Worcester Telegram.

A "Best Buy" contest is being conducted by our local paper which is proving extraordinarily successful from a standpoint of gaining favor, popularity and advertisement for the paper. In this contest any person who wishes may send in a letter relating the best buy that she or he has ever made at some local store. A prize of one dollar is offered to each person who succeeds in getting a letter printed. You will, of course, be flooded with letters, but only select the best ones to print.—H. C. W., Logansport (Ind.) Pharos-Tribune.

KESSLER'S

Comic Cartoons Carry a Kick

You may have 2-col. mats daily instead of the regular 3-col. size, if you prefer.

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.

150 Nassau Street, New York City

Get the very best DAILY CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

Not just a feature—

Not just a problem—

But the best seller on the market

TODAY!

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.

241 West 58th Street New York City

Thomas W. Briggs Company Memphis, - Tenn.

Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page

Look us up in Dun or Bradstreets

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service

21 Spruce St., New York

"Going into Russia"

by

FANNIE HURST

Five half-page illustrated articles Released March 8

Vivid—First-Hand Impressions of Life Under Leninism told with Fannie Hurst's Color-Drama-Feeling

ASK FOR SAMPLES

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

4 page ready-print color comics.

Magazine Feature Pages.

Write for samples and rates

NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD. STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

BY UNITED PRESS

AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS

World Building New York

A GROWING MARKET—
THE SOUTH

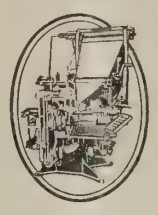
Many manufacturers are not familiar with the South's growth of the last twenty years.

This growth, particularly in Southern cities, has been remarkable in recent years, due to a combination of influences. The principal factors in this expansion are industrial. Industrial forces have been of varied kinds in separate localities. Low cost water transportation on rivers make it obvious that the South would play an important part in the development of manufacturing.

The values of Southern land are increasing rapidly. Formerly cheap lands in this section are now overtaking the higher values of other states. This is a good sign that the South is rapidly coming into its own.

The South has turned to diversified agriculture and is no longer dependent upon any one farm crop. The turn to diversified farming alone has opened a market of greater buying power in proportion to population than perhaps in any other section of the country.

Bank deposits have increased nearly ten times during the past twenty years until now they have reached the stupendous amount of more than $6,000,000,000.



The South is a growing market. Now is the time for American manufacturers to establish themselves in the trading centers, merchandising channels and the most influential advertising media — Southern daily newspapers.

These Newspapers reach the responsive people of the prosperous South

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA
Birmingham News	(E)	76,312	.18	.18
Birmingham News	(S)	86,135	.18	.18
Mobile News-Item	(E)	11,722	.05	.05
Mobile Register	(M)	20,824	.07	.07
Mobile Register	(S)	33,130	.085	.086
FLORIDA
Daytona Daily News	(ES)	2,648	.03	.03
Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville	(M&S)	37,564	.10(S.12)	.10(S.12)
Miami Herald	(M)	18,300	.06	.06
Miami Herald	(S)	21,681	.07	.07
Orlando Sentinel	(M&S)	4,473	.035	.035
†St. Petersburg Independent	(E)	6,007	.04	.04
Tampa Times	(E)	15,176	.05	.05
Tampa Tribune	(M&S)	30,444	.08(.09S)	.07(.08S)
GEORGIA
Augusta Herald	(E)	15,095	.05	.05
Augusta Herald	(S)	15,554	.05	.05
Macon Telegraph	(M)	26,822	.07	.07
Macon Telegraph	(S)	27,376	.07	.07
Savannah Morning News (M), 21,372.	(S)	22,671	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
Lexington Leader	(E)	19,395	.06	.06
Lexington Leader	(S)	19,368	.05	.05
Paducah Sun	(E)	8,616	.04	.04
NORTH CAROLINA
†Asheville Citizen	(M)	14,066	.055	.055
†Asheville Citizen	(S)	14,540	.055	.055
Greensboro Daily News	(M)	24,423	.07	.06
Greensboro Daily News	(S)	31,592	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer	(M)	29,921	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer	(S)	33,403	.07	.07
Winston-Salem Sentinel	(E)	14,855	.06	.06
SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia Record	(E)	16,107	.05	.05
Columbia Record	(S)	15,907	.05	.05
Columbia State	(M)	24,246	.07	.07
Columbia State	(S)	24,442	.07	.07
Greenville News	(M)	20,190	.065	.06
Spartanburg Journal	(E)	3,940	.05	.05
Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,726	(S)	9,357
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga Times	(M)	24,189	.08	.08
Chattanooga Times	(S)	24,726	.08	.08
†Nashville Banner	(E)	54,189	.11	.11
†Nashville Banner	(S)	53,069	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
Danville Register and Bee	(M&E)	12,128	.05	.05
Danville Register (Sunday)		7,184	.05	.05
Newport News Times-Herald	(E)	7,326	.05	.05
Newport News Daily Press	(S&M)	5,622
Roanoke Times & World-News	(M&E)	24,993	.07	.07
Roanoke Times	(S)	16,894	.06	.06
Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader	(E)	6,424	.035	.035

 A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

NO STANDARDIZED INTERTYPE HAS EVER BECOME OBSOLETE

TO THOSE INTERESTED IN "MIXER" MACHINES

We take pleasure in advising you that in the near future the Intertype Corporation will exhibit a

SIMPLIFIED AND STANDARDIZED INTERTYPE MIXER

Further announcement will be made later.

INTERTYPE CORPORATION
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Standardized
INTERTYPE
TRADE MARK

BROOKLYN CHICAGO MEMPHIS SAN FRANCISCO BOSTON LOS ANGELES LONDON

"How Much" ---And "HOW"

¶ If you're judging solely on the basis of "how much" circulation, the Sunpapers are the "buy" in Baltimore.

¶ But we've always felt that "how" you get it is almost as important as "how much" you get.

¶ Sunpaper circulation isn't the result of artificial stimulus. It wasn't born overnight to wither the next day. It isn't forced by hothouse methods nor bolstered by "contests."

¶ Sunpaper circulation is the result of normal, healthy growth—growing with the community with which The Sunpapers are so inseparably linked.

¶ Sunpaper circulation is permanent. The figures prove that—those which show how large a percentage of the Sunpapers are delivered directly to the homes of Baltimore by the Sun Carrier Service.

¶ The Sunpapers' answer to "how?" is as satisfactory as their answer to "how much?"—and you can't ask any more than that!

Average Net Paid Circulation for January, 1925

Daily (M. & E.) . . .	244,760
Sunday	180,933

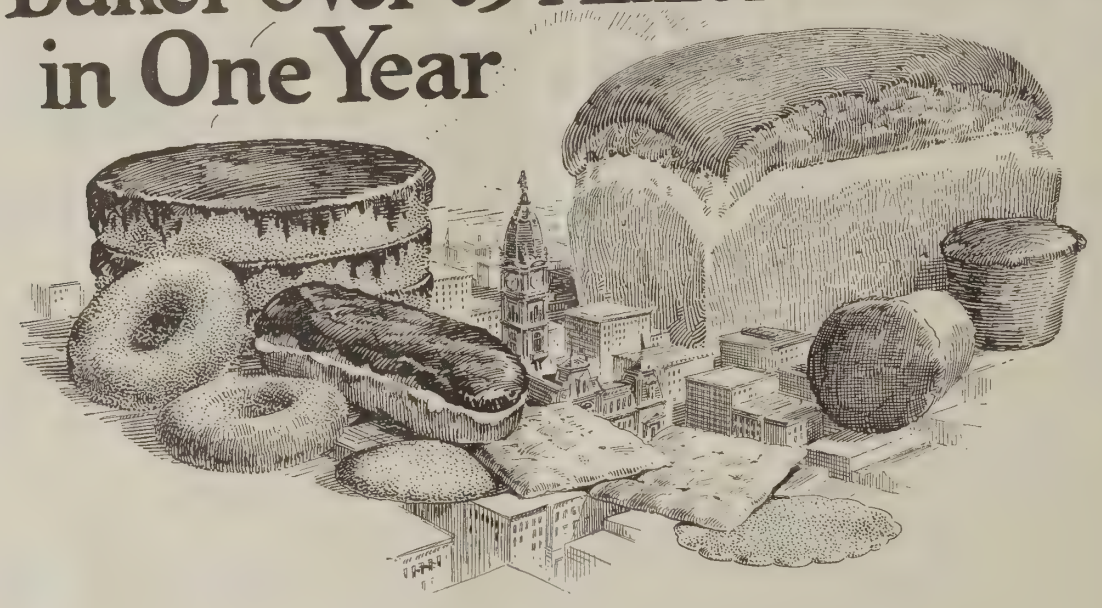
A Gain of 1,931 Daily and 5,529 Sunday over January, 1924

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago



Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"; They Say "SUNpaper"

The Bulletin Reader Paid the Baker Over 65 Million Dollars in One Year

Out of a total of 414 bakeries in the Philadelphia district, 66% of the value produced in 1923 was manufactured by 31 leading Philadelphia bakers. These 31 bakers produced 383,954,729 loaves of bread valued at $24,957,057.40, and the value of their other bakery products was $18,221,242.40 according to incomplete returns made to the Pennsylvania State Department of Internal Affairs. The remaining $22,243,366.56 worth of business enjoyed by the other 383 bakers cannot be analyzed because production statistics were not given when returns were made.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

PHILADELPHIA'S bakers collected that vast sum from Bulletin readers in 1923.

The Bulletin goes into practically all of the 412,000 separate homes of the city and more than 100,000 outside the city limits.

Philadelphia is a huge market of nearly three million people—third largest in America—instantly available through one newspaper, at one cost.

With over half a million copies daily The Bulletin naturally dominates Philadelphia—there can be no substitute for circulation. The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in America.

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

518,357

Average Daily Net Circulation for Year Ending Dec. 31, 1924

(Copyright 1925—Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by
The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 | NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 21, 1925 | No. 39

Candy Firm Puts Newspapers to Test in 1925 Advertising Drive

Life Savers Inc. Made Scientific Study to Reach Conclusion Dailies Were Best Media for $500,000 Selling Campaign—Four Months' Experiment To Decide Proportion of Advertising Expenditure to Sales, Is Plan

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

NEWSPAPERS this year are being put under microscopic investigation in he advertising laboratory of an important ational advertiser.

Life Savers, Inc., of Port Chester, N. Y., turning out 10,000,000 candy mints day, has decided to rely exclusively on he daily press of the nation in its 1925 earch for consumers.

The decision, which culminated in what nay lead to more than a half million dollar newspaper appropriation for advertising out of a total appropriation of one million dollars, was reached after long nd exhaustive study of media and markets by Life Savers, Inc.

Merle B. Bates the company's advertising manager, is convinced that in theory newspapers are best. Now practical proof s sought.

A three-year successful test of New England newspapers has strengthened that belief.

Within four months the firm expects dollars and cents justification for its swing to the daily press in covering the entire United States. This time the firm considers as ample for a fair test to indicate a satisfactory trend towards economical use of newspaper advertising.

In an interview with "EDITOR & PUBLISHER," Mr. Bates gave a theoretical justification.

The newspapers which are being relied upon for practical reply, have a combined circulation of 16,000,000 copies daily.

The drive, which started Feb. 1, will use 319 newspapers in 293 cities divided among one magazine section, 52 rotogravure sections, 62 morning papers, 168 evening papers and 36 combination a. m. and p. m. papers. Copy is to measure 420 lines for each insertion in rotogravure, with similar size copy and extra one column "attention caller" copy for the dailies.

According to the company's computations, this selection, on the basis of frequency of insertion, will provide more than 50,000,000 separate impressions a month scattered strategically throughout the country.

When Mr. Bates explained why newspapers were selected, it was evident that no "hit or miss" policy was followed. Advertising at best is an inexact science, but Life Savers had approximated scientific precision to an amazing degree in reaching its advertising decision.

The story of how Life Savers reached the conclusion that it could with utmost safety intrust a half million dollars to the newspaper columns with the expectation, as Mr. Bates pointed out, of obtaining adequate return in increased sales is best told in the advertising manager's own words.

"We have been a consistent and successful advertiser since 1916," Mr. Bates began the interview. "Like the majority of big national advertisers we used practically all kinds of media. Most of them have been steadily employed throughout this period and most of them will be continued during 1925, according to the plan.

"Among the kinds of advertising we are to use this year to help sell Life Savers, there can be listed huge advertising automobiles with bodies built like our well known packages, the distribution of millions of samples and vast quantities of store display material and street car advertising.

"By study we had divided the nation into a combination of many local units, instead of just a conglomerate mass. What we wanted, of course, was contact with people. But we wanted, moreover, to reach as many people as we possibly could in each unit. The newspapers, therefore, appeared to be the obvious and natural selection."—Merle B. Bates, advertising manager, Life Savers, Inc., Port Chester, N. Y.

"The addition of newspaper advertising on a national scale is a distinct innovation. It will be relied upon for increased sales during 1925 to the exclusion of other meritorious national advertising media, not excluding of course, the kinds of special advertising referred to, which to us at present, are fundamentally essential.

"Newspapers were selected to carry our selling copy in contra-distinction to REMINDER copy for many reasons.

"Life Savers, we argued, while being a high class product, have no special class appeal. Therefore, no special selection of population groups needed consideration in our choice of media, any person who could read was a legitimate prospect.

"For ten years through sales and advertising pressure we built up an enormous consumer recognition, and a particularly fine distribution in retail stores throughout the nation.

"How best to exploit this advantageous relationship to our business was our problem.

"Certainly the distribution of and the consumer interest in and acceptance of Life Savers is a purely local matter, we obviously reasoned, so we set about to analyze and dissect all kinds of advertising that promised local coverage.

"To serve our purpose best we temporarily set aside all regard for the United States as a single unit in which 110,000,000 people lived.

"Instead, we thought of the United States as a group of local population units, each particular unit deserving its separate attention from a sales and advertising standpoint.

"In the middle of last year we started an exhaustive analysis of the company's business history. We sought to place a comparative value on the market possibilities of each State for our product. The market possibilities of each State as determined by us were designated with an asset value reduced for comparative purposes to an index percentage figure.

"The assets of any State were computed by compiling data as to the number of boxes of Life Savers sold in that State, the number of known retail and jobbing outlets for our product, the population and its literate element and a number of other factors.

"Another index percentage figure for each State was set up to indicate the advertising and sales effort that had been expended in building each State's assets. This 'effort-index' figure was evolved by computing sales and advertising expenses that had been incurred in each State. All expenses were reduced to a cost and percentage figure related to the population.

"By comparing asset values with effort values for each State it became relatively simple to observe how effort and result were out of line in many States.

"Some states were not getting the sales and advertising effort their assets recommended for them, while others were getting more than their proper share of effort.

"This state allocation of our advertising and sales budget became more sensible and practical upon the completion of this analysis.

"By the study, you see, we had divided the nation into a combination of many local units instead of just a conglomerate mass. What we wanted, of course, was contact with people. But we wanted, moreover, to reach as many people as we possibly could in each separate unit; and the newspapers appeared to be the obvious and natural selection.

"A supporting argument for the use of newspapers was that during the past three years, we had been spending increasing amounts in all New England states in newspaper campaigns. Our sales in New England have been constantly increasing. Our expenditures in the eastern dailies has been thoroughly justified.

"When we decided to extend the newspaper drive from New England to the entire nation, the question of cost came up. Would it be reasonable?

"On paper we figured out just how much money it would take to conduct a 10,000 line campaign using one newspaper with the largest circulation in every city of 25,000 population or over in the U. S.

"We found there were 287 cities of over 25,000 population. In order to get coverage in every state, we had to add to the list 76 cities of under 25,000, making the total 363.

"The cost of this hypothetical newspaper campaign we found would be approximately $300,000, or in exact figures $296,170. We decided, consequently, that the price of a newspaper drive was entirely reasonable."

Mr. Bates next proceeded to explain in more detail, how in the drive which started this month, the newspapers were to be definitely tested as advertising media.

"Within four months' time," he said, "we expect justification for our new advertising policy.

"During these four months, an arbitrary amount of money has been allotted. It is not one-twelfth of the expected 1925 newspaper expenditure. It is, in fact, below the average amount that would be spent if the total $500,000 was divided evenly over 12 months.

"The relation of the expenditure for newspaper advertising to sales during these four months will be closely watched. We want to test how near to the speed of consumption our advertising expenditure actually is.

"Perhaps it will be very much out of line,—either too much, or not enough.

"At the end of the four months we will thoroughly scrutinize the sales situation and revise the schedule, if necessary.

"Should the sales increase more rapidly than the relation the newspaper expenditure bears to it, the newspaper appropriation will be increased. From then on,

(Continued on page 24)

H. T. CLAUS NEW BOSTON TRANSCRIPT EDITOR

Succeeds James T. Williams Jr., Who Resigned Effective Feb. 18—New Editor Twenty Years With Paper

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

Boston, Feb. 18.—Henry T. Claus today became editor of the Boston Evening Transcript, succeeding James T. Williams, Jr., who resigned after holding that position for the past 13 years. Mr. Claus has been a member of the Transcript editorial staff for the past 20 years, having joined it following his graduation from Tufts College in 1905. He has been in charge of the school and college department of that newspaper for the past ten years or more. For the past three months he has been assistant to Mr. Williams and is thoroughly familiar with his new duties. Mr. Claus is married and a member of numerous clubs, including the Boston Newspaper Club, University Club, Boston City Club, and the Bellevue Golf Club.

Jas. T. Williams, Jr.

Mr. Williams, previous to his departure two weeks ago for South Carolina, where his father is seriously ill, tendered his resignation, accepted with keen regret. Previous to becoming editor of the Transcript, 13 years ago, he was connected with the Transcript's Washington Bureau.

The editorial page of the Transcript today carries announcement of Williams' resignation.

"We announce with regret the decision of James T. Williams, Jr., a delightful companion and efficient editor, to resign from that post. Henry T. Claus will succeed him. Mr. Claus, long a member of the Transcript family, already has been fulfilling the duties of his new position for some time. His appointment assures a continuation of the Transcript's policies and traditions."

Mr. Williams has not announced his plans.

TEXAS PUBLISHERS ELECT

F. G. Huntress, San Antonio Express and Evening News, Named President

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 17.—Closing a two days' session at Medina Lake, where members were guests of the San Antonio Express, the Texas Newspaper Publishers' Association elected F. G. Huntress, publisher of the San Antonio Express and Evening News, as president for next year.

W. C. Mayborn, Fort Worth Press, was elected vice-president; A. E. Clarkson, Houston Post-Dispatch, secretary-treasurer, and G. J. Palmer, Houston Chronicle, re-elected commissioner.

The Texas publishers adopted resolutions endorsing the work of the Postal Committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association on postal legislation.

Louis C. Elbert, Galveston News; Harry Cohen, Galveston Tribune; G. J. Palmer, Houston Chronicle; J. H. Payne and Charles J. Lilly, Houston Press; J. L. Mapes, Beaumont Enterprise; W. P. Hobby, Houston Post-Dispatch; Walter E. Dealey and John L. Lubben, Dallas News; A. L. Shuman, Ft. Worth Star-Telegram; J. L. Greer, Denison Herald and W. M. McIntosh, San Antonio Light, attended the sessions.

World Editor on Mediterranean Cruise

William Johnston, suggestion editor of the New York World, and Mrs. Johnston, are spending two months on a Mediterranean cruise.

CANADIAN GROUP FLATLY OPPOSES PROPOSED PULPWOOD EMBARGO

Angus McLean, President Canadian Pulpwood Association Urges Campaign Against Export Tax—Says Question Should Be Settled by Commission

If an embargo or export tax is placed on pulpwood in Canada, it will not be until after the strongest possible efforts are made to prevent such action. This was made quite clear by Angus McLean, president, and Ralph W. Bell, secretary, of the Canadian Pulpwood Association, at a dinner tendered by them in Toronto on Feb. 14, to a gathering of newspapermen and others interested in the subject. The case against an embargo was set forth clearly and concisely and those present were invited, if the justice of the argument appealed to them, to use their influence in opposing the embargo agitation.

Mr. McLean, who is head of a company at Bathurst, N. B., manufacturing lumber, pulp and paper, said that he was not directly interested in the question because he was not an exporter of pulpwood, and in fact was doing all he could to retain the pulpwood cut in the neighborhood of his mill in Canada. However, he was absolutely opposed to an embargo because he believed that it would have such a prejudicial effect in the United States that the great and growing market there for Canadian pulp, paper and lumber would be endangered. It was his belief that Canada should do nothing to disturb her export markets because on them the prosperity of the country depended, and this was particularly true of pulp and paper. The United States, being the larger and stronger country, had it in its power to do great damage to Canadian industry and it would be folly, for the sake of the relatively small amount of pulpwood involved, to incur this danger. Besides, he felt that it was only a question of time until, with the expansion of the Canadian industry, there would be such a demand for pulpwood that exports would naturally dry up. As it was, Canadian consumption was growing rapidly, while the volume exported remained about the same from year to year.

Both Mr. McLean and Mr. Bell made it clear that the question at issue was a domestic one and should be settled by Canadians. There would be an inclination on the part of the public to resent interference from outside. They were convinced that, if the people of Canada only understood the facts and were not misled by the representations of the advocates of the embargo, they would never consent to the adoption of such a dangerous policy.

It was charged by the speakers that the real reason for their advocacy of an embargo was being concealed by the interests who were supporting it. The conservation plea was one that appealed strongly to the public and it was being pushed to the front. As a matter of fact, the saving in this direction was infintesimal compared to the loss from fire, insects, fungi, wind and other causes. Were the embargo advocates sincere in their reasoning, they would deal with the major sources of loss rather than press for the risky expedient of an embargo. Another aspect of the situation that was being overlooked was that fully 90 per cent of the pulpwood resources of the Dominion were on crown lands, from which exports were prohibited, and on lands in the possession of paper manufacturers. This left a very small portion that might be exported.

A popular plea was that the embargo would force the users of Canadian pulpwood in the United States to move their plants into Canada and give Canadians the benefit of enlarged employment. Apart altogether from the consideration that such a development, if undertaken, would explode the conservative idea, it was felt that this outcome was doubtful. Some mills might come to Canada, but it would be more likely that American mills would fall back upon their own resources or import pulp from Europe. There was always the possibility that the United States might place a duty on pulp, which would be a serious matter for Canadian pulp mills.

What the pulpwood exporters regard as the real object of the embargo advocates is the control of the pulpwood market in Canada and the domination thereby of the United States paper market. Much of the wood exported at present comes from settlers' lots and is a source of needed income to these pioneers. With the United States outlet closed, these producers would be largely at the mercy of Canadian mills and would be forced to sell at a low price. Further, much of the wood exported is poplar and for that, at present, there is no market in Canada. Another point in this connection made by the Pulpwood Association is that the embargoing of pulpwood would be a violation of the spirit, if not of the letter, of the agreements under which United States buyers hold various properties, particularly in the Province of Quebec. This feature was emphasized by Hon. J. H. Kelly, representative of Gaspe, in the Legislative Council of Quebec, one of the speakers at the dinner. In the predicament of the small holder or settler, were he forced to market his wood in Canada, the opponents of the embargo seem to have found their strongest argument.

The question has various angles and these were touched upon by different speakers. It was suggested, for instance, that if it was to Canada's advantage to ship pulp instead of pulpwood, it would be even more to her advantage to ship paper instead of pulp. There was therefore as sound a reason for advocating an embargo on pulp as on pulpwood and yet this had not been suggested and would obviously be a most disastrous policy. Another consideration brought forward was that, even with an embargo in force, there would be nothing to hinder the exporter of pulpwood from shipping it in the form of lumber, which shows the practical difficulty of enforcing such a measure.

It is understood that the Canadian Pulpwood Association intends to put on an advertising campaign in order to bring its side of the question before the people. In Mr. Bell it has a clever and aggressive young executive, who may be relied upon to put up a strong fight against any restriction on pulpwood export.

CHANGES IN ROCHESTER

A. C. Ross Now Democrat & Chronicle Editor; Sanford Takes Managing Editorship

Allan C. Ross, for the past four years managing editor of the Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat & Chronicle, has been made editor, succeeding the late O. S. Adams, who died last spring. Harold W. Sanford was promoted from news editor to managing editor, H. C. Harris from city editor to night editor, and J. R. Cominsky from assistant city editor to city editor.

Mr. Ross has been connected with the Democrat & Chronicle for 22 years, filling various positions, including those of editorial writer and associate editor, previous to becoming managing editor.

Mr. Sanford joined the paper immediately after being graduated from the University of Rochester in 1912, and had served as reporter, assistant city editor, city editor, editorial writer before becoming news editor. Mr. Harris had served as reporter and Sunday editor previous to going on the city desk, and Mr. Cominsky as reporter and copy-reader.

BRIGGS IS NEW EDITO LOS ANGELES RECORI

Former Editor of Cleveland Pr Leaves the East to Join Pacific Coa Scripps Group—In Association With Canfield and Sanders

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 16.—H. B. Briggs has joined the Scripps group Pacific Coast newspapers, operated by H. Canfield and LeRoy Sanders.

Mr. Briggs arrived this week fr Cleveland to become editor of the Angeles Record.

In the past two years, during his

H. B. R. BRIGGS

itorship of the Cleveland Press, th newspaper added 20,000 circulation. M Briggs brought together a strong editor and news gathering staff and in the e ecution of the Scripps-Howard LaFolle policy, the Press gave a signal demo stration of its editorial strength wh Cleveland, alone among the great citi gave Senator LaFollette a large plurali

Prior to his activities in Cleveland M Briggs was publisher of the Denver E press, editor of the Newspaper Enterpri Association and for several years edit of St. Paul Daily News, one of the Cl verleaf group.

His activities in both the Cloverle and Scripps-Howard organizations cluded the direction of efficient mecha ical production as well as direct editor work.

The Scripps Pacific Coast newspape with which Mr. Briggs is now allied cor prise Los Angeles Record, the Seat Star, the Spokane Press, the Taco Times and the Portland News.

OREGON DAILY SOLD

Dennis Disposes of La Grande Observ to His Business Manager

The La Grande (Ore.) Evening O server was sold Feb. 14, by Bruce Denn publisher, to Frank B. Appleby, form Iowa publisher, and since Oct. 1, last year business manager of the new paper.

Harvey F. Matthews, formerly of Nev ton, Ia., will succeed Appleby as busine manager and will have an interest in th firm, it was stated. There will be r other changes in personnel.

Mr. Dennis' plans are indefinite but h expects to devote a large part of his tim to his sheep ranch in the immedia future. Mr. Dennis published the Ob server for 15 years.

Newman to Return to London Tim

Ernest Newman, guest music critic fo the New York Evening Post, will leav New York early in March to resume h duties on the London Times. No succes sor on the Post has yet been named.

INLAND PRESS PROTESTS POSTAL INCREASE

Attacks Validity of Cost Ascertainment Report at Chicago Meeting—George D. Lindsay and Wil V. Tufford Re-elected President and Secretary—Cost Finding Committee Reports

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—George D. Lindsay of the Marion (Ind.) Chronicle was re-elected president of the Inland Daily Press Association at its annual convention at the Morrison Hotel here, Feb. 17 and 18. Wil V. Tufford, of Clinton, Ia., was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

GEORGE D. LINDSAY

The convention was one of the most largely attended ever held by the Inland and was declared by veteran members to be one of the most interesting and profitable.

The following vice-presidents were elected: H. B. Burgoyne, St. Catharines (Can.) Standard; C. C. Marquis, Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph; Chester W. Adams, Vincennes (Ind.) Commercial; F. W. Woodward, Dubuque (Ia.) Telegraph-Herald; G. W. Marble, Fort Scott (Kan.) Tribune-Monitor; J. L. Roth, Paducah (Ky.) Sun; J. E. Campbell, Owosso (Mich.) Argus-Press; Fred Schilplin, St. Cloud (Minn.) Times; W. Southern, Jr., Independence (Mo.) Examiner; E. M. Marvin, Beatrice (Neb.) Sun; E. A. Tostevin, Mandan (N. D.) Daily Pioneer; Mrs. Zell Hart Deming, Warren (O.) Tribune; W. R. Ronald, Mitchell (S. D.) Republican; H. L. Davis, Appleton (Wis.) Post-Crescent.

S. G. Goldthwaite, Boone (Ia.) News-Republican; E. H. Harris, Richmond (Ind.) Palladium; and F. H. Burgess, La Crosse (Wis.) Tribune, were elected for three-year terms as directors.

The nominating committee consisted of E. J. Ottoway, Port Huron (Mich.) Times-Herald; A. W. Barnes, Monmouth (Ill.) Review-Atlas; and Linwood I. Noyes, Ironwood (Mich.) Globe.

The association adopted a resolution protesting vigorously against any increase in rates on second-class mail unless there is found convincing evidence that such advances are warranted.

The resolution in part follows:

"Whereas, The publishing business in its present use of the second-class mailing privilege is now paying the fourth successive advance in rates assessed against it in connection with special war taxes, all of which other special war taxes enacted at that time, excepting those laid upon the publishing business, having been repealed;

"And Whereas, No other class of mail is paying an advance in rates;

"And Whereas, The government has no ascertainment of postal costs which in our opinion represents a scientific and conclusive presentation of facts;

"Be It Reselved, That the Inland Daily Press Association protest against any further advance in second-class mail rates, particularly unless and until a cost survey of convincing accuracy shows such advance to be necessary and warranted;

"And Be It Further Resolved, That the Inland Daily Press Association protests as unsound and unfair the theory that an adjustment in salaries paid in the postal service must be assessed upon those who use the service, since no such practice is followed in reference to any other major government service.

"Be It Resolved, That we express our willingness to accept equitable obligations in this or any other relation to government needs, but we oppose an advance in costs which are already burdensome and in many cases destructive to the publishing industry. In the absence of convincing evidence that such advances are warranted.

"Resolved, That the Inland Daily Press Association pledges and invites a continuance of co-operative action in behalf of justice to the publishing interests, and that it particularly urges a closer co-operation between newspaper organizations and groups in order that such organizations, groups, and their individual members may work more effectively in the common cause.

"Resolved, That the officers and committees of this organization be instructed to such action as will advance the purpose and intent of these resolutions."

The old problem of the excess profits tax arose again. Attorney Arnold L. Guesmer, of Minneapolis, a member of the association's Income Tax Committee, submitted a report proposing that Congress be urged to amend section 281 of the law by adding at the end of subdivision (C) the following:

"In case of any proposed additional assessment for any of the taxable years 1917 to 1921, if the fact is that the taxpayer's invested capital has never been fully ascertained by either the government or the taxpayer, the taxpayer shall have the right to show his correct invested capital for all of the taxable years 1917 to 1921, and to have his taxes for said years corrected, and resultant underpayments and overpayments for said years shall be offset against each other, any net underpayment shall be paid to the government, and any net overpayment shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer."

Mr. Guesmer's report pointed out that "the right given by this amendment is limited to cases wherein the government proposes to make assessments additional to what has already been paid. The right will, therefore, expire coincidentally with the government's right to make additional assessments for 1921, the last of the excess profits tax years."

He added that if the amendment is not made, the "government will do the work necessary to ascertain the overpayments, but will not hand them back."

The only question, then, he said, is "whether or not the government wants to keep money that belongs to the taxpayer."

Following the opening of the convention Tuesday morning by President Lindsay, Chester W. Adams, of the Vincennes (Ind.) Commercial, spoke on "Composing Room Equipment."

Mr. Adams was followed on the program by Lucile Brian Gilmore, Chicago representative of EDITOR & PUBLISHER who spoke on "Some Observations on Newspaper Publishers' Associations."

After reviewing the activities of publishers' associations, Mrs. Gilmore raised the question of whether newspaper publishers are "sold" on their markets, and added:

"It is strange how little discussion has been devoted to the subject. Many larger dailies do national advertising; there are certain groups of the smaller ones that do national advertising; but I have been interested in observing how little discussion has ever been held on how much individual papers are spending for their own advertising."

President Ernest Dewitt Burton, of the University of Chicago, guest of honor at Tuesday luncheon, spoke on "Newspapers and Universities".

Speaking on "Golden Butter and Golden Dollars," Charles F. Collisson, agricultural editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, answered at the Tuesday afternoon session the reports that the farmers of the Northwestern states are experiencing hard times. He spoke particularly of the profits of dairying in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana. Mr. Collisson declared that the War Finance Corporation had loaned in these four states about $60,000,000, and cited the fact that $32,500,000 already had been repaid as proof that the farmers are prospering and paying their debts.

H. L. Williamson, of Springfield, secretary of the Illinois Press Association, speaking Tuesday afternoon, outlined the work of his association, which he declared to be the largest and most active association of newspaper men in the United States, with a membership of approximately 800. He declared that one of the most important functions of a press association is the attention to legislative matters affecing its members and declared that this activity could not be properly conducted unless the members took an active interest.

"Newspapers and Community Advertising" was the subject of Don E. Mowry, general manager of the Madison (Wis.) Chamber of Commerce and author of a recently published book, "Community Advertising."

Closing the Tuesday afternoon program was a review by J. L. Doolittle, of the Port Huron (Mich.) Times-Herald, of the experience of his paper with delivery trucks in building and maintaining circulation. Mr. Doolittle declared that the circulation of the Times-Herald had increased from 12,000 subscribers immediately after the war to more than 18,000. He also pointed out the lack of adequate railway service for delivering the paper to nearby points. He said the cost of operating six trucks last year totaled $21,021.18, or 7.27 cents a mile. This cost has been more than offset, he declared, by the revenue derived from the added subscriptions.

Most of Wednesday morning was devoted to reports of the committees on the Audit Bureau of Circulations, income tax, postal matters, labor, paper, and cost finding.

The cost-finding report was followed by a talk by C. F. Karstaedt, of the Beloit (Wis.) News, on "What Real Accounting Means to a Publisher." Others on the Wednesday morning program were H. W. Henry, of Chicago, staff manager of Ernst & Ernst, Audits and Systems, Cincinnati, who discussed "Uniform Accounting Methods and Comparatives"; and F. H. Bird, director of research of the United Typothetæ, who spoke on "Research Work in Cost Finding."

Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney of Cook County, spoke at the Wednesday luncheon on "The Newspaper's Attitude Toward Crime."

C. E. Broughton, of the Sheboygan (Wis.) Press, opened the Wednesday afternoon meeting, with a discussion of "Free Publicity." He urged the publishers to let all seekers of free publicity know that their staffs of reporters would obtain and write the news of their communities; that the newspaper's advertising columns were open to concerns having material to present to the public, and that their papers would not use free publicity matter. He attacked the policy of the government in sending free publicity matter to newspapers.

WIL V. TUFFORD

"If you will analyze these so-called news items that come to your desk, you will find that they are sent out by concerns who use magazines almost exclusively." Mr. Broughton declared. "Not a single magazine that I know of will print their propaganda, and they have been brought to realize this, and as a result the magazine is on a higher plane today than the newspaper."

The convention concluded with the reports of special committees, the election of officers and round-table discussion.

In diana publishers attending the Inland convention organized Tuesday night the Indiana Daily Press Club, with George D. Lindsay as president. The executive committee is composed of Thomas McCullough, Anderson (Ind) Bulletin; C. W. Adams, Vincennes (Ind.) Commercial, chairman; D. H. Swain, Bluffton (Ind.) News; Tom H. Keene, Elkhart (Ind.) Truth; Eugene Pulliam, Lebanon (Ind.) Reporter. Prof. T. H. Pearsy, of the School of Journalism, Indiana University, was elected secretary of the club.

The Inland Association voted to hold its May meeting at West Baden, Ind. That meeting will be the first the association has ever held away from Chicago.

Meeting at West Baden at the same time will be held by the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, the Indiana Daily Press Club and the Indiana Republican Press Association. It is planned to hold several joint sessions of all of the associations.

President Lindsay was called away from the Inland convention, after the Tuesday sessions, because of the sudden death of his father.

Papers joining the association at this convention were the Nebraska City News, the Anderson (Ind.) Bulletin, and the Fremont (Neb.) Tribune.

On the invitation of Lucile Brian Gilmore, Chicago representative of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, the association voted to make Mrs. Gilmore's office at room 714, 30 North Dearborn street, its Chicago headquarters.

COMMUNITY ADVERTISING A FIELD WORTH DEEPEST STUDY

The following address on "Community Advertising," quoted in part, was delivered before the Inland Press Association at Chicago this week by Don E. Mowry, general secretary Madison (Wis.) Association of Commerce, and chairman Extension Committee, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

THE time is rapidly approaching when all forms of advertising will require a knowledge and understanding of what constitutes community advertising.

This is a broad statement to make, but in the light of an experience covering the eight years since the Community Advertising Department of the Associated Advertising Clubs was formed, it seems inevitable that the time is rapidly approaching when the underlying principles governing community advertising cannot be disregarded in any advertising program without lessening that program's effectiveness.

For years we have built a campaign of advertising around a product or an article. Many of us have failed to realize that cities, communities, states and districts are applying advertising methods to sell their communities in one way or another. If we have successfully marketed articles and products through truthful advertising, why can we not market the assets of communities through the same or similar methods, applying new colors and new designs where others have faded or have become obsolete?

Now what is community advertising? This type of advertising does not simply mean the advertising which is done by a community, through its commercial organization, or through a specially created committee of citizens to advertise the assets of a community. Community advertising implies the application of all of the agencies, in a given community on the problems and the aims of that community. The object of all community advertising, whether done by the centralized committee or by the many agencies in the community applying a portion of their copy to the community, is to bring in to the community more and profitable, permanent patrons for the community which may be a city, a number of cities, a county, a state, a district, or a combination of one or more of these units. Every angle to the problem which confronts communities in their constant endeavor to "sell" themselves to themselves as well as to the outside world, should be the main consideration by enterprises and organizations that come in close touch with community affairs.

People are becoming community-wise and are thinking in terms of local-self-pride. Advertising men cannot overlook this fact. Last year more than $3,000,000 was spent for community advertising, publicity and convention work. Fully $500,000 of this sum came from cities and states that are now authorizing such appropriations by law. Florida, alone, spent nearly $400,000 for 1924 through the mill tax plan which may be adopted by cities and counties of that state. Last week I received a letter from George T. Armitage, executive secretary of the Hawaii Tourist Bureau in which he stated that they boast of a budget of $115,000 for advertising and for information on Hawaii this year and are petitioning the legislature at the forthcoming session for $150,000.

The mediums for community advertising should be those which are employed to obtain results for commercial advertising. That is why the newspapers of the country are considered one of the most logical methods to employ. A campaign is designed to reach the average person and to arouse interest, on his part, in our community advertising. The newspapers are read daily, regularly. One community leader relates that it took him a long time to come to the conclusion that the newspaper is the chief medium through which to advertise a community. The next campaign fund of $50,000 which he administers will be spent 80 per cent in purchased newspaper space.

If the average community advertiser believes that the rates for newspaper space are high, he must remember that the cost includes printing plus the cost of circulation and distribution. The message goes to at least one member of an American family who is so anxious to see that newspaper that he is willing to pay for it. It is more difficult to judge what booklets and magazine space should cost than it is to estimate what newspaper space should cost. The average well-established American newspaper is giving one about the right consideration if its minimum rate is somewhere about one-eight of a cent per line, per thousand of A. B. C. circulation. This is all the more true if the newspapers are willing to accept community advertising on the same basis as commercial advertising, which many of them are now doing.

When it comes to selling the community to itself, the newspapers, the local newspapers, are the most effective and practical mediums to employ. In planning a campaign at home, if some paid space is taken there will follow a great deal of publicity for the undertaking. Editors, I believe, always welcome the opportunity to assist in the development of the community they are serving.

